[22nd June, 1906]

WHEREAS a Commission has been issued by His Majesty whereby the Right Honourable Alfred Lyttelton, K.C., Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esquire, M.P., Rufus Daniel Isaacs, Esquire, K.C., M.P., David Brynmor Jones, Esquire, K.C., M.P., and Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esquire (herein-after referred to as "the Commissioners"), have been authorised and directed to inquire into and report upon the duties of the Metropolitan Police in dealing with cases of drunkenness, disorder, and solicitation in the streets, and the manner in which those duties are discharged with power to make recommendations thereon:

And whereas it is desirable to make provision for the more effective conduct by the Commissioners of any inquiry which they may be authorised to make:

Be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:—

Powers of Commissioners.

1.—(1) The Commissioners shall have all such powers, rights, and privileges as are vested in the High Court, or in any judge thereof, on the occasion of any action, in respect of the following matters:—

(i) The enforcing the attendance of witnesses and examining them on oath, affirmation, or otherwise; and

(ii) The compelling the production of documents; and

(2) A warrant of committal to prison issued for the purpose of enforcing the powers conferred by this section shall be signed by one or more of the Commissioners, and shall specify the prison to which the offender is to be committed, but shall not authorise the imprisonment of an offender for a period exceeding three months.

A.D. 1906.

(3) If any criminal proceeding is at any time thereafter instituted against any such witness in respect of any matter touching which he has been so examined, the court having cognizance of the case shall, on his application, and on proof of the certificate, stay the proceeding.

(4) Nothing in this section shall apply to the case of proceedings for having given false evidence before the Commissioners, or of having procured, or attempted or conspired to procure, the giving of such evidence.

THIRTY-SECOND DAY.

Thursday, 31*st January* 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
Rufus Daniel Isaacs, Esq., K.C., M.P.
Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).
J. F. Waley, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Assistant Secretary).

Alfred Francis Platt, recalled.

A. F. Platt.
31 Jan. 1907.

31290. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You handed in a list of names to the Commissioners upon the 18th October, and that is referred to at page 180, question 7263. Would you look at that list. (List handed to witness.) In the G Division you mentioned three names. Leach —is that right?—Quite right.

31291. Laing?—Quite true.

31292. And what is the third name?—Cass.

31293. Who was Cass?—A plain clothes uniform man.

31294. What had you to do with him?—I only knew that my agents gave him money.

31295. Often?—Yes, often.

31296. Does his name appear in any of the books that you have produced?—I do not think so.

31297. Did you ever see Cass yourself?—I have seen him at a distance.

31298. So as to be able to pick him out?—I daresay I should be able to tell him.

31299. Do you see him in Court?—I could tell him better if I saw him on the move.

31300. We cannot march the whole of the Police Force about. You must try and shoot him sitting?—I could call him to mind better if I saw him on the move.

31301. Could you tell him sitting?—I would not be so positive as I should be if I saw him on the move.

31302. Try a sitting shot first?—I would not be positive seeing him sitting.

31303. You would not know him well enough?—No.

(Chairman.) It is not easy you know.

31304. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I am not saying it is easy or difficult, Sir. (To the witness.) You cannot pick him out?—No.

(Chairman.) I meant by saying it is not easy, that the Court is not very light, and it is not easy to see from the witness box.

(Witness.) I do not know I should be so positive from the features, but if I saw him on the move as I saw him I should be perhaps more sure of him.

31305-6. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Would you like to walk round the Court and try to identify him?—I have had a fairly good look. I would not try to pick him out by his features.

31307. How often did you see him on the move?—Four or five times, I might say.

31308. Was he one of the officers employed to detect street bookmakers?—I believe so.

31309. A very active officer indeed?—That I could not say.

31310. He arrested an enormous number of street bookmakers, and had them convicted?—I could not say.

31311. More than any other officer in the Division?—I could not say.

31312. But according to you he was bribed?—Yes.

31313. What was the amount of Cass's bribe?—(After considering.) I would not be positive as to the amounts that he had.

31314. Try and tell us. You have told us about Leach and Laing. Tell us about Cass?—I could not say, because his was not so very often. I think he was only given it when he was out on that particular duty.

31315. But what was the amount given to him at a time. That is what I want to know?—I could not be positive.

31316. Do you know anything at all about it?—I only know that he received it from my agent.

31317. And your agent would charge you with it, no doubt?—Yes, no doubt.

31318. And charging you with it it would be entered in your book?—Not always. It has not always been necessary to have it entered in the book.

31319. How would it be recorded in the accounts that you and your partner had to make up between you?—It is quite possible he was seen at a distance, and someone went after him.

31320. That is no sort of answer to my question at all. How would the payments to Cass be recorded in your accounts?—It is quite possible I was close by at the time. There was a payment made—perhaps in the next street or anything of that.

31321. Supposing it was so, you made accounts of those things?—Yes, but not in any book. I should not have a book on me at the time.

31322. You have told us that with regard to Leach a recorded entry of 10s. was one that you were close by and saw paid yourself?—Yes.

31323. And that was recorded in a book, although you were close by and saw it yourself?

31324. How would the payments to Cass be recorded in your books?—It may have been worked out on a list of expenses that would be torn up.

31325. In your books?—There is no other item that has been put down in the books that the agents have paid away. It has only been at odd times when I have not been there that such entries have been made.

31326. You have told us, and I have reminded you, that at a time when you were there and the 10s. was paid to Leach, according to you it was recorded?—It was not entered at that moment; it was entered that day.

31327. It does not matter when it was entered, how were the payments to Cass entered in your accounts?—I do not know that any were entered at all—from recollection.

31328. Do you suggest that under any account at all in those books that you have produced any mention of Cass is included?—I do not think there is any in those books.

31329. Neither by the name of Cass nor under any other heading?—No, not to my knowledge.

31330. Then the accounts must be imperfect to that extent?—No, I cannot say they would be imperfect because it is quite possible they would be made on a list of expenses.

31331. On that same list which you have before you you have entered some names of police officers to whom you have paid money in the W Division?—Yes.

31332. What are their names?—Hancock and Betts.

31333. Do you know how Betts' name is spelt?—I should think that is how it is spelt—Betts. I am not sure whether it is Betts or Bex.

31334. Bex or Becks?—Bex I think it is.

31335. Or Betts?—Yes.

31336. Any other name there?—No.

31337. Only those two?—That is all.

31338. Who was Hancock?—A C.I.D. man.

31339. What rank?—I could not say at that time; it is so many years back.

31340. When was it that the payment to Hancock was made?—1895 or 1896.

31341. Do you mean 1895 or 1905?—1895 or 1896.

31342. Just let me read you the questions and answers in response to which you wrote down those names. At page 180 these are the questions put by the chairman:—"Will you write down the names of the constables and hand in to us, and we will consider whether we will ask you to state their names publicly? For the present I will pass from that. I have taken these names, and at present they will not be made public, but you will understand that we do not give any undertaking in the matter? (A.) If it has got to come out, I do not mind it coming out, but I want you to consider the first case first. (Q.) We are not giving any undertaking that the names may not come out in public? (A.) I do not mind, or else I should not have put them down. (Q.) If you do not mind, shall I read them out now? (A.) Not until the finish. I do not want them made public at the present time. (Q.) We will now pass from the G Division to another division. I think there is another division in which you carry on your business, is there not? (A.) I have done so. (Q.) Which is that? (A.) The W Division. (Q.) What district is represented by the W Division? (A.) I am not positive whether the W Division extends to Tooting or not. I do not know whether that is W or V. It is the V Division there in the first instance. (Q.) How long have you carried on business in that division? (A.) Five or six years. (Q.) Did you pay money to constables in that division? (A.) Yes. (Q.) Were you carrying on business in the W Division at the same time as in the L Division? This is all between 1897 and the present time? (A.) Yes. (Q.) We had better have the years in which you carried on business in the W Division?" (A.) From 1897 to 1902 or 1903. (Q.) Did you make payments to police-constables in that division as well? (A.) No, not to police-constables, but to detectives at that time, because we were not afraid of constables then. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Members of the C.I.D. (Chairman.) Do you remember their names? (A.) Yes. (Q.) Will you write them down, please? (A.) Yes. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You have no objection to giving these in public, have you? (A.) Yes, I have an objection to giving them in public at the present time. (Chairman.) Of the W Division? (A.) Yes, I am against that. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You would sooner not give those in public at the present time? (A.) No. (Chairman.) Then will you put them down? What amounts did you pay there, do you allege? (A.) Something similar." So that "something similar" means 48s. a week then. "Do you carry on business also, or have you carried on business also, in the V Division? (A.) I think it is V. (Q.) The W Division and the V Division are the same division, are they? The names you have given us are the names of two officers to whom you allege you paid bribes? (A.) Yes. At the present time one is at Scotland Yard and the other is at Bow Street. (Q.) I want you, in answering the next question, to deal with quite different years. Take the last four years. That would be part of 1906, 1905, 1904, and 1903. About how much do you say that you have spent upon bribing the police during the four years? Can you give me any idea? (A.) A matter of £200 a year." That is all that relates to the date. Now Hancock, you say, was in 1896 and 1897?—1895 and 1896.

31343. And that was a time when the C.I.D. men had to do with betting?—Yes.

31344. Have you paid Hancock nothing since 1896?—Since about 1896, yes.

31345. Nothing since then?—No.

31346. Bex or Betts, who was he?—A C.I.D. man.

31347. What have you paid him?—Different sums of money. It is so far to go back. I could not say exactly what amounts.

31348. How far have you got to go back to the last payment to Bex or Betts?—About the same period as Hancock.

31349. And nothing paid to him since?—No.

31350. So that on the 18th October, 1906, you solemnly wrote those names of officers whom you alleged you had bribed in 1895 and 1896 for the information of the Commission?—I was taking the ten years period that was asked for.

31351. You were just within the time as to 1896 and just out of it as to 1895?—Put it about that time.

31352. That was the very last payment you made?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Where is the reference to the ten years period?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There is some reference to it just at the beginning—question 7097:—"I want you to go back to 1886, when you first started this kind of business in Lambeth. When did you first have anything to do with any policeman at all? (A.) The first day I started." Then question 7102: "(Q.) Do you remember the names of any of the constables that you have bribed in this way in 1886, 1887, 1888, and so on? (A.) Yes. If you ask me that question there are several of them on pension, and several of them are dead. They are pensioned off at the present time. (Q.) At what time did you carry on this kind of business in Lambeth? (A.) I have never left it off. (Q.) Did anything take place in 1903 that altered your arrangements at all? (A.) Yes. (Q.) What was that?" Then he speaks of 1903. My recollection is, sir, that in putting a question from the chair you said, "Limit your evidence to the last ten years," when the witness was going further back.

31353. (Chairman.) I do not find that, but I have a recollection of something of the kind being said, and I suppose it is from that observation that you get your idea of the ten years period?—I suppose so, sir. I could not recollect that.

31354. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) We know from your evidence yesterday that you were betting in Tooting in 1904 through an agent?—Yes.

31355. And also in 1905, were you not?—Yes, I suppose that would be about the period.

31356. Though you were betting in that division, which is the V and W Division that you mentioned, you have mentioned no name of any officer that you paid any bribe to since 1896?—That is so.

31357. Does that mean you have paid no bribes to any officer since 1896 in that division?—That is quite true.

31358. Do you think you could carry your memory back to the ten years period and recognise Hancock?—Yes.

31359. You think you could?—Yes.

31360. From seeing him where—ten years ago?—I have seen him very often since.

31361. Where have you seen him very often since?—He has passed my house many scores of times since 1896.

31362. Have you been betting in the Bow Street Division since 1896?—Yes.

31363. Has Hancock been at Bow Street during that time?—Not at the time I was betting there.

31364. When did you last see Hancock?—He was drinking in the same saloon bar that I was in, a matter of five or six months ago.

31365. You would be quite able to recognise him?—Oh, yes, I know him.

31366. Have you seen him in Court to-day?—Yes.

31367. Will you point him out?—That is him (pointing).

31368. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) What is your name?

(The Officer.) Hancock.

31369. So you know him quite well?—Yes.

31370. That is the man you say you bribed for the last time in 1896?—Yes.

31371. Did you do that yourself?—I think I left change on the counter, whatever my change was, the last time.

31372. Left the change on the counter?—what do you mean by that?—If I remember the circumstance I changed a sovereign and called for some drinks and left him to pick it up.

31373. Where?—At the Fountain public-house, Tooting.

31374. In 1896?—About the time that I am speaking of. It is a long way back.

31375. You fixed the time?—Just about that time.

31376. What time of the year do you remember it was?—In the summer months.

31377. In the summer of 1896?—Yes.

31378. How much change did you leave there for the officer to pick up?—I could not be positive.

31379. About. Was it a large part of the sovereign or a small part of it?—Between 10s. and 15s., I should think.

31380. Did you see the officer pick it up?—Oh, yes.

31381. Were you doing your own betting at that time?—Part, and I had some assistance as well.

31382. But Hancock knew you as the man who was carrying on the betting?—Yes.

31383. Otherwise there would be no object in your paying him the money?—No.

31384. How often did you bribe Hancock as far back as 1896 or 1895?—Two or three times, I should think.

31385. Only two or three times?—That is all.

31386. How long were you betting? You were betting in both those years 1895 and 1896, and you only bribed Hancock two or three times?—Yes, I think about that time he got shifted. I think that is the reason why.

31387. He was there, according to you, in 1895 and 1896, and you only bribed him two or three times?—That is all.

31388. What benefit did you get in return for those two or three bribes?—I got left alone fairly well.

31389. You did—the whole two years?—Yes.

31390. Now with regard to Bex or Betts, when did you see him last?—(After considering.) About twelve months ago, I should think.

31391. Have you seen him between 1896 and twelve months ago?—Once or twice, I should think.

31392. You know him quite well by sight?—Yes.

31393. Can you pick him out in Court to-day?—Yes.

31394. Will you point him out?—There he is, just in front of Hancock (pointing).

31395. Is that the one?—Yes.

31396. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) (To the officer pointed out.) How do you spell your name?

(The Officer.) Bex.

31397. How often did you bribe Bex?—(After considering.) Five or six times, I should think.

31398. In those two years?—No, he did not cover such a long period. I think he got shifted to Croydon, if I remember rightly.

31399. When were your payments to Bex made?—I would not be positive to what years.

31400. When was the last time that you made any payment to Bex?—I could not say.

31401. You must try, Mr. Platt?—I could not say.

31402. Was it before 1896 or since 1896, or in 1896?—It would be about 1896, I should think.

31403. For the last time?—Yes.

31404. So that he was outside your ten years' period?—You are fixing the date of the ten years' period.

31405. That was the last time that you gave any bribe to Bex, as you say?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Where do you get the ten years' period from?

(Chairman.) I have asked as to how this ten years' period came to be mentioned, and I do not find anything in the notes about it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is not really very material, but I cannot find it in the notes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Perhaps it was my bad arithmetic, and I thought 1886 was the ten years' period. It really is a twenty years' period.

(Witness.) I really think the question arose in taking me from when I first began betting, and when I first began giving bribes.

31406. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You began betting in 1886?—Yes.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Mr. Platt used the phrase himself

31407. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is so; but, at any rate, taking your own phrase, it is outside your ten years' period?—Yes.

31408. How often do you say you bribed Bex?—Five or six times, I should think.

31409. How much at a time?—Half a sovereign.

31410. Over what period did those payments extend?—Only a few months, if I remember correctly.

31411. Only a few months?—I should think so.

31412. Those payments, you say, were made all in a few months?—Yes, to the best of my recollection.

31413. If I caught an answer of yours a very few minutes ago correctly, you said the payments to Bex extended over a longer period. What did you mean by that?—Perhaps two or three months longer than Hancock.

31414. But Hancock you bribed both in 1895 and 1896, as I understand you?—I am not positive of that.

31415. But still that was what you said?—In that period.

31416. Whereas with regard to Bex you say the bribes were all within a few months?—Yes.

31417. How is that over a longer period than Hancock?—I meant from the time and the company I had been in with them. If I remember correctly, I believe Bex was shifted before Hancock.

31418. Then why were your payments to Bex over a longer period than the payments to Hancock?—I mean for the time that he was there.

31419. I do not follow. Can you give any other explanation of your answer that your payments to Bex were over a longer period than your payments to Hancock?—If you are taking the time literally from 1895 and 1896, and during the time that I was there, he was only there a few months, if I remember rightly.

31420. I have asked you for an explanation, and is that all you have to say about it?—That is all I can say from my recollection.

31421. Where were your payments to Bex made?—In the Old Castle public-house.

31422. All of them in the Old Castle public-house?—No. The King's Head or the King's Arms.

31423. They were in public-houses?—Yes.

31424. How long have you been betting in Tooting altogether from first to last?—I could not say.

31425. Were you ever convicted of betting there?—No.

31426. Were any of your men convicted?—No.

31427. Never?—No.

31428. Did you do your betting personally at all?—I did in 1895 and 1896.

31429. The whole of it?—No. I cannot say the whole of it. Some period of the time.

31430. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Tell us who did the rest?—Men who had nicknames. Of course, I have not been in touch with them since, so I could not say.

31431. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) In other words we are dependent on your statement for saying that none of your men were convicted?—Yes. I do not think there would be many convictions proved in Tooting in those years as regards betting.

31432. You produced a new book I understand to the Commission. Will you look at that. (Book marked "A. P. 7" handed to the witness.) When did you produce it for the first time?—Yesterday.

31433. Why did you not produce it before?—I did not know I had it.

A. F. Platt.
31 Jan. 1907.

31434. Where did you find it?—Amongst some old novels.

31435. When?—Some time on Tuesday evening.

31435. (Chairman.) Last Tuesday evening?—Yes.

31437. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Whose handwriting is that book in?—Mine.

31438. Entirely?—Yes. I believe so. I do not know if there are any odd bits in it.

31439. That is to say it related to the period during which the Fishers were working for you?—Yes, during some part of the period. Here is another note I have seen. I did not have a proper look through it.

31440. What is that note that you are calling attention to?—A note of moneys given to an officer. That would be the date it was given.

31441. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is the same Laing as in the other book?—Yes.

31442. Is there any other?—I do not know. I was looking through that to see if it was in my handwriting.

31443. There is a payment to Laing on this page. Is there any other payment on this page which relates to the police to your knowledge?—No.

31444. That entry is June 22nd, and I understand the year to be 1906?—Yes.

31445. (Chairman.) I thought you were going through the book to see if it was all in your handwriting?—I was, and I came across this.

31446. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I have a copy of that book. I saw it last night?—A copy of everything that is in that book?

31447. Yes. I want to know from you whose handwriting the whole of the entries are in.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) This entry referred to is an entry of June 22nd, and there is a payment of 10s. to Laing.

31448. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Do not tear out pages?—I was tearing out what was not in my handwriting.

31449. (Chairman.) No, do not tear anything out. I want you to go over it now simply to see if it is all in your handwriting?—It is not all in my writing. I have come across one that is not.

31450. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Down to that last page upon which the name Laing occurs under the date of June 22nd, is it in your handwriting from the beginning?—Yes, I think it is. I think everything is up to that.

31451. (Chairman.) "Down to the entry relating to June 22nd is in my handwriting"?—Yes, Sir.

31452. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You remember yesterday that I put to you two dates with regard to your betting transactions with the Fishers, namely, that they began on the 7th May, and that on the 23rd June your brother-in-law ceased to be a partner. You remember that question being put to you?—I remember the question being put to me, but I could not answer you as to the time or anything of that sort.

31453. Can you answer me now that you have the book before? Is not that the date on which your brother-in-law ceased to be a partner—June 23rd?—I could not say.

31454. Do not those entries stop on June 22nd?—Yes.

31455. Was that book a book used by you for settling accounts with your brother-in-law?—No, I cannot say that it was.

31456. I suggest to you that it was a book used by you for settling your accounts with your brother-in-law, and that you ceased to use it on the 22nd, and used it for the last time on the 22nd June?—No, the settling of accounts was always done by those books nightly.

31457. For what purpose was that book kept if not for settling accounts?—This book was kept for things I have got in it, for people who betted and did not pay, and for little extra expenses.

31458. You see all the expenses put down there—"Bob"—that is Robert Fisher?—Yes.

31460. "Bill"—that is William Fisher?—Yes.

31460. "Scouts," and so on?—Those only covered some expenses, not all.

31461. Why did you have a book which covered some expenses, and not all?—I carried the money in my pocket, and I always let my pocket be the tell tale, and what I was deficient I pnew I must have spent or otherwise given out.

31462. I put it to you again that that book ceasing as it does on the 22nd June was used by you as a settlement book with your partner?—No.

31463. As I understand you you started out in the morning with so much in your pocket. Is that it?—At times, yes.

31464. At all times?—Something or nothing—we will put it that way.

31465. When you came home at night you would make up your accounts?—No.

31466. When did you make up your accounts in this book?—It is very seldom that I had to refer to that book. I had a motive for putting one or two things in that book at that time.

31467. What was the motive?—One of the things was perhaps tallying the papers up or putting down, as I say, bets that people had not paid, or commission that some people had received for what moneys they brought through the week. There would be some instances of that.

31468. When did you make the entries in that book?—Perhaps at the time of making up the papers, or perhaps the following morning, or perhaps the same evening.

31469. I will go through it with you in details, but I want you to tell us what the object of keeping that book was?—Perhaps knowing a punter who had a big win to-day and who owed us a bit, I should say "Stop so much." I think you will see one or two names occur regularly.

31470. You said something about using your pocket as a tell tale?—Yes.

31471. What did you mean by that?—If I was speculating to-day I know what money I would start with, and perhaps I should leave my partner for so many hours, and I should have so much in my pocket. What was left represented the difference in what I had spent.

31472. For which you had to account to your partner?—No, that was a simple reckoning up we would have nine times out of ten.

31473. And when you made up your accounts, if there was a deficiency you say you knew you had spent it?—Yes.

31474. And you would put down as far as you could remember how you had spent it?—There was never a need for that; we accepted one another's word.

31475. Did you put down how you spent it?—No, I cannot say I did. I can tell you if I look through the book.

31476. I will take you through the book in detail, but I want to know first did you put down how you had spent it?—No, I cannot say that I did.

31477. Before I go in detail through the book, do you find an entry, under the date of the 12th June, "Russell 10s."?—I rather think it is 15s.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I think it is 15s.

(Witness.) I think I can remember the occasion that the 15s. was put in for.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The 12th June. I think you are looking at the wrong entry.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is an entry of the 12th June, "Russell 15s."

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, it is 15s.

(Chairman.) There is no doubt it is 15s.

31478. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The amount is immaterial, but no doubt it is 15s. Who is Russell?—A man who made a bet.

31479. What is his other name?—I could not tell you. I only know him as Russell.

31480. Is it not Jack?—No. This Russell is the man who sent a telegram on the day that this was entered, or the day before, with three horses' names on from Brighton, and it came to the Sutton Arms, Sutton Street.

31481. It is not Jack by any chance?—No, I could not tell you his Christian name.

31482. Why is the 15s. struck through like that?—Because the man paid it two days afterwards, or when he returned from Brighton.

31483. (Chairman.) Is that the telegram that you refer to that you handed to the Secretary?—Yes, it is the telegram.

(Secretary.) It came out of the book marked "A. P. 5."

(Witness.) It is the first time the man had ever betted on the nod, and I had occasion to remember it. That is the first time he betted without paying his money.

31484. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You say that is the telegram?—That is the telegram. (Telegram put in, and marked "A. P. 8.")

31485. Just look at your book again. The entry is June 12th?—This entry is June 12th.

31486. Now look at the date on the telegram?—Is that on a Sunday or Monday?

31487. No, it is the 4th June?—Then that would be the day he paid it. He was in Brighton all that time in between. There are three horses at 5s. each. The man may have been at Brighton the remainder of the time, and he paid that sum of 15s. then.

31488. Do I understand from you that that entry "Russell 15s." meant that Russell owed you 15s. or paid you 15s.?—Paid 15s. I should think it was, or was owing 15s., and I scratched it through.

31489. Have you any previous entry showing that Russell owed you 15s.?—Not that I know of. I think that was the first time he ever betted with me without paying the money.

31490. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The telegram mentions three horses' names, and 5s.?—That is 5s. on each, and that would account for the 15s.

31491. (Chairman.) What I understand you to say is that on the 4th June, or whatever the date on the telegram is, you received a telegram from a person who signed his name as Russell giving you the names of three horses?—Yes.

31492. And, contrary to your usual practice, you treated it as a valid bet?—Yes. He sent it to the landlord, and that is the landlord's Christian name.

31493. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is addressed to "Sid, Sutton Arms, Great Sutton Street, Clerkenwell. Vincula, Morgendale, and Radium, 5s.—Russell"?—Yes.

31494. (Chairman.) The telegram is not addressed to you directly, but to "Sid, Sutton Arms"?—Yes.

31495. (Mr. Whitmore.) How did you get the telegram?—It is handed over to us by the landlord.

31496. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) So that the entry you make is made on the 12th June, and the amount is 15s., and it is struck through?—Yes.

31497. What is the meaning of it being struck through?—Perhaps I had entered him up as not paid that day, and perhaps it was paid that day.

31498. The 12th June is the entry. The telegram, if that is the telegram, is the 4th June?—Yes.

31499. Eight days before?—Yes.

31500. So that you must have entered it up on the 12th June the first time?—No; I think, as far as my recollection will carry me, I thought it would be only a matter of two or three days him being away, and I did not trouble as far as that is concerned.

31501. (Chairman.) I take it that Russell had not won with regard to any of the horses?—No; I take that to be so to the best of my memory. I could not be exactly positive, but that would be the entry, and that would be the telegram relating to the 15s.

31502. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Had you any transactions with Russell before?—Very seldom.

31503. Had you any money of Russell's in hand?—No, none whatever. We had no transactions with him because the Fishers had been a little time paying him some money, and he knew they were virtually on the rocks.

31504. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Who was on the rocks?—The Fisher brothers.

31505. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) And you trusted this man to the extent of putting on 15s. for him?—£15 if he wanted it, because he was worth the money.

31506. And he trusted you, or the Fishers, who were virtually on the rocks, to the extent of the amount he would win if he won?—He knew there was some money behind the Fishers when he had that bet with us. I do not believe he had been betting with the Fishers for some months previous.

31507. What does the striking through of the 15s. mean?—That I had perhaps accounted for it, or was paid for it that day and accounted for it.

31508. To whom?—Perhaps in the moneys I had in my pocket.

31509. Accounted to whom for it?—That particular entry would be perhaps accounted for to—may I look at the entry? (After examining the entry.) I should think in this particular instance that I had paid some money out which totalled £1 3s. 9d., and I received moneys, and I was showing the balance of that perhaps on this occasion to my brother-in-law, or taking Bob's money—I would not be positive. Why I totalled some of these items in is that I found they were allowing people to bet—Ah, I know what it was. We started another brother at work, and before he had gone into the street where he had been in the habit of betting we had to find so much money.

31510. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Another brother Fisher?—Yes. If you give me one of the books I will hand you the list I saw before.

31511. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) What I want to know is—I do not know whether this is an answer to it or not—why there is a line drawn through the 15s.?—I had struck all moneys out that I had received, but I did not strike anything out that I paid out. This was a sort of odd and even book I kept to tally with people who had so much to come from the Fisher brothers, and I allowed them to bet up to half the sum that they had to come and paid them the balance.

31512. (Chairman.) I think that you said that you now remember that a brother was started?—Yes.

31513. Bearing that fact in mind, can you explain the whole of the entry now?—From what I can make out of it here I should think that we had the two brothers, because I know that they were on the rocks when we took them over, and previous to us taking them over they had two pitches going. I found the expenses were so heavy that I asked them what they were going to do, and it was proposed that one brother should go back on the pitch that they vacated if we would find the money, and I think this is some of the items that I have put down, in the way that people had so much to come and worked out a bit, and made it a sort of odds and evens book, and I could not swear to every item that I wanted it for.

31514. (Chairman.) You said that you wanted to look at another book?—(Seven books handed to the witness, who examined them.) There is another loose sheet, I think, in one of these books. (Loose sheet handed to witness, and marked "A. P. 9.")

31515. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) What do you want to say about that?—This is one of the lists that the Fishers made out. They were owing on this pitch £14 15s. 11d.

31516. When you took it over?—When my partner and myself took it over.

31517. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Have you told us whose handwriting that is in?—I should say that is Robert Fisher's.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Is that sheet dated?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) No.

31518. (Chairman.) You were looking at that in order to refresh your memory, so as to be able to explain what you meant by the item "Russell 15s.," with a stroke through the 15s.?—There might be some entries in that book relating to something off this. I would not be positive, but that is how I tried to account for some of those entries. As I say, I would not be positive.

31519. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) My question is simply with regard to that one item on the 12th June, "Russell 15s." struck through. I want to know why the 15s. is struck through?—Because he paid me.

31520. That is what it indicates?—Yes.

31521. Just look at the 15th June. Do you find Russell again?—Yes.

31522. 15s. not struck through?—Yes, it is.

31523. Struck through is it?—Yes.

31524. Let me see it. (Book handed to the learned Counsel.) Quite right, it is struck through. So that is another item of Russell?—That he paid

A. F. Platt.

31 Jan. 1907.

31525. That is what it means is it—that he paid?—That would mean that.

31526. There are a great many other items in that book struck through in the same way. Is not that so?—Yes.

31527. What does it mean in the other cases?—That they had paid.

31528. You are quite clear about that?—Yes, I am going by the names.

31529. Now look at June 7th, Leach 10s., with the item struck through?—Yes.

31530. What does that mean?—That means it was paid.

31531. That Leach had paid you?—That was struck out of the list of expenses and the moneys that were owing on that day.

31532. Does that mean that Leach paid you like Russell and the others?—No, that meant that we did not count that in the expenses as we did the others.

31533. That means something quite different to the items of Russell and the others like Russell?—Yes. You will find there are only two items struck out here.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) May I have the exhibit on which the witness wrote down Leach's name as one of the officers in the division.

(Chairman.) It seems to me that in settling with an agent whether the agent has paid 10s., say to Leach, or whether Russell has paid him 15s., in each case it might be in making up the account it might be struck out as being a matter taken into account in arriving at the total.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I have pointed out what the contents of this book are, and the object of my doing so is that it brings us back to this, that we are absolutely dependent on this man's word as to what the meaning of those entries is. That is the object of my putting the questions.

(Witness.) I think I have given as fair an answer as I can give to that. I did not have a look at the book.

31534. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Would you look at the book. You see the name above Russell—"Stevens"—and then a man named Hoffman is under Russell?—Yes, you see that very often.

31535. Who and what is Stevens?—That would be a bet he owed and paid.

31536. That is struck through, and that means that he paid?—Yes.

31537. Then you find Hoffmann?—Yes, he paid that day.

31538. Was he a person who owed a bet?—Yes.

31539. That is also struck through. Then there is another name underneath it on the 12th June. Does that also mean that he had paid?—Yes.

31540. Then all those four names mean bets paid?—Yes, that would be one of the things that I found, that they were letting people bet who were not paying at the time.

31541. Look at June 7th. Who is Nelham 1s.?—That would be a man we would allow a little commission to. That would be the list of expenses worked out there.

31542. That is June 7th. Just above that entry there is an entry with a name struck through and the amount?—Yes.

31543. Was that for a bet?—Yes.

31544. A bet that was paid?—I think that was the potman of the Sutton Arms public-house, and I think we allowed him 1s. for the little favour he did us; and it is struck through.

31545. You did not claim it?—No.

31546. Now look at the entry above the one that is struck through. What does that mean?—I would not be certain whether that was 1s. bet or 1s. commission.

31547. Look at the one above that?—That was commission.

31548. (Chairman.) How is that entered?—Fleet 6s.

31549. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Does that mean commission which you would have to pay?—Yes.

31550. Was it paid in cash? Yes.

31551. Why was not that struck through?—Perhaps one of the Fishers had paid that.

31552. I do not quite understand that, because if you are striking through what is paid, why should you not strike through Fleet as having been paid? According to what you have told us, you struck out Leach because you paid Leach, and you struck out Nelham because you were not going to pay him—you treated it as paid. There is a payment of 6s. to Fleet for commission?—I was just thinking whether it would be commission, or whether it was a bet he left and settled the next day or at the end of the week.

31553. (Chairman.) Why do you strike out some entries and not strike out others?—Perhaps there was no occasion at the time to strike them out.

31554. Do you mean disposed of for the purposes of account, or what do you mean by striking them out?—Perhaps owing that way.

31555. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I find on the same page on June 7th another entry just opposite Leach—Stevens 10s.?—I would not be positive of that.

31556. Is not that Stevens?—I could not understand it myself. It is Stevens.

31557. Underneath it is 10s. struck through?—Yes.

31558. Who was Stevens?—I cannot say.

31559. I have come across the name several times?—Yes—he was a punter.

31560. Do you think that is a bet which he paid?—I could not trust my memory as to that.

31561. Who is Crow?—A punter.

31562. Who is E. and B.?—He is a punter. You can see the others are bets.

31563. There is an entry E. & B. or S. & B. 7s. 6d. What does that mean?—That is a bet.

31564. E. & B. would be a bet, Crow is a bet, Nelham is a bet, and Symes is a bet?—A bet.

31565. Fleet?—I should say that was a bet that day.

31566. All the entries so far which I have gone through on that page, on June 7th, except Leach, are bets.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) And Leach is written in the middle of them.

31567. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Can you explain why Leach should come in a series of entries each one of which is a bet, if it was a payment to Leach?—I could not say, only in calling through the items that one of the Fishers was accounting for——

31568. Do not those entries to which we have been calling attention on the left-hand side of that column mean that is money which you have to receive?—Yes, it would be that.

31569. And you find Leach 10s. in the entries in the money which you have to receive?—This is all in my handwriting.

31570. That is particularly why I am calling attention to it. It is all in your handwriting. We have been through each one of the entries and every one of the entries there, except Leach's, for the moment, is a bet that is made. When a bet is paid I understand you to say it is struck through. Is that right?—Yes.

31571. Then those were bets which had been made for which you had not had the money when it was not struck through?—I never had a punter of the name of Leach. If you look right through the book you will find there is not a punter of the name of Leach.

31572. (Chairman.) Is all the writing on this page in your handwriting?—I am dealing now with the entries on June 7th. Are all the entries on that page in regard to June 7th in your handwriting?—Yes.

31573. Was there anybody present when you made, according to your recollection, the entries in the book?—I should say so.

31574. You do not recollect whether there was anybody present?—Bar these two books and the book which has unfortunately been destroyed I do not think I ever made an entry unless it was in the presence of the Fisher Brothers or my brother-in-law.

31575. This was literally a note-book, as I understand it, which you carried in your pocket?—An odd and even sort of book, I term it.

31576. On the same page, with reference to the same date. I see these words, "Bob, £16 12s. 6d.; Bill, £3 15s. 6d."?—Yes.

31577. "Frank, 14s. 6d."?—Yes.

31578. Then comes the total, £21 2s. 6d. That is on the right-hand side of the entry?—Yes.

31579. Then on the left-hand side are the entries with regard to which Mr. Rufus Isaacs has been asking you questions, beginning with Fleet, and going down to the entry Leach, and so on?—Yes.

31580. What do those larger sums mean? Why have you entered them?—They would be moneys I had received from the Fishers and Frank.

31581. On that day?—Yes.

31582. So that if you were sitting down in a room and they paid you the amounts you would put them down in the book?—I may not have received the money, but that was the money I was to have taken.

31583. Do you mean Bob, on that day, the 7th June, would have to account for £16 12s. 6d.?—Yes.

31584. Bill for £3 15s. 6d.?—Yes.

31585. And Frank 14s. 6d.?—Yes.

31586. The total then was £21 2s. 6d.?—That is it.

31587. How do these smaller sums come to be entered on the left-hand side?—That would be the money that would have to be accounted for.

31588. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) To whom?—To me.

31589. (Chairman.) Fleet, 6s. Do you mean Bill or Bob said, "Fleet owes us 6s.; he has not paid"?—Yes, that is right.

31590. And the same about Symes?—Yes.

31591. Then there is Nelham. That is struck through?—Yes.

31592. Do you mean by that that that item is got rid of or allowed?—Yes, that is done with.

31593. That means you have nothing more to say to Bill or Bob about that payment?—No.

31594. Then you come to Leach, 10s.?—Yes. That would be 10s. Leach received that day.

31595. If Bill or Bob said, "We have paid 10s. to Leach" you would strike Leach through?—That is what I mean.

31596. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Stevens, 10s., is struck through. That you have told us was a bet?—Yes.

31597. All the other entries you have told us (I do not want to go through them again) are for bets—for money which had come to you?—That is it.

31598. I do not understand why you should put "Leach, 10s.," if that was a payment made by Fisher to Leach of 10s., in the same series of items of moneys which are to come to you?—Perhaps when he called out the name I put it in.

31599. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you wrote down what is on this page, were either of the Fishers present?—They might have been.

31600. When did you write these down?—In some instances it would be in the presence of them.

31601. Would it have been when you went round to see them?—We were never away from one another. We made up our papers together.

31602. Did you make up this page from some other paper?—We might make it out on a bit of rough paper. I do not think that would be so in that instance.

31603. I see you do not add this up?—No.

31604. Why did you not add this up?—Because of the loose way I had of doing my business. I do not think I have added any of them up.

31605. Yes, you have added the amounts that you say they owed you, or they paid you. Now comes £21 2s. 6d. These other items are put down without any addition. I do not understand why you put them down at all?—Simply perhaps to keep it in hand if the bet is not paid.

31606. These are all written down at the same time?—Yes.

31607. And all written down from information that one of the Fishers gave you?—Yes.

31608. It is a record of their dealings or of his dealings?—Yes.

31609. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Are you sure you never had a bet with a man called Leach?—I think I am rather positive of that. I do not remember the name being entered up. I never entered up anything in the paying out book. I always left it to Fisher brothers.

31610. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) For aught you know, the Fishers may have had bets with a man called Leach?—I think I should remember the name.

31611. (Mr. Dickinson.) You said just now there was one name, Nelham?—Yes.

31612. That is 1s. which Nelham owed you?—Yes.

31613. That is struck out?—Yes—did not claim it.

31614. Fisher had taken that bet?—He had taken a paper for that bet I should say.

31615. Then the other one, Crow, 1s. That was 1s. owing to you?—Owing to the Fisher brothers.

31616. And which, as you did not strike it out, was still owing to you?—Unless he is lower down.

31617. (Mr. Whitmore.) When it is paid it is struck out?—Yes.

31618. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It means it is a bet which he has to pay if it is not struck through?—It might be a bet paid, or 1s. lent to the man because he might borrow a shilling.

31619. Whether it is a 1s. bet or 1s. loan, it means it is something which has to come to you from that man?—Yes.

31620. (Mr. Whitmore.) And not anything which has to go from you to them?—No.

31621. (Chairman.) I understand these entries are put down for the purpose of your settling with the Fishers?—No, for the purpose of them settling with me.

31622. That is the same thing.

31623. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When you struck through an entry, that means it no longer is coming to you, but has been settled?—Yes.

31624. That is what the meaning of striking through "Stevens 10s." is?—Yes.

31625. Then Nelham is struck through altogether. That is struck through because he has not paid it, and because you mean to take the whole entry out?—Yes.

31626. When you first entered Nelham it was 1s. to be received?—That is right.

31627. Then afterwards I suppose by some arrangement it was agreed that it was not to be claimed from him, and you put the pencil right through the entry?—Yes.

31628. When you entered Stevens you entered 10s., which was money to be received for a bet?—Yes.

31629. When you paid it you struck it through with a pencil?—Yes.

31630. By the look of it that seems to stand exactly in the same position as Leach's entry, does it not?—Yes; but I know what those items are. I know how they are accounted for through the Fishers.

31631. (Chairman.) Do you mean that the Fishers had mentioned those men's names to you, and you took them down?—The Fishers that day, or the previous evening, must have given Leach 10s.

31632. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Would not Fisher, if that is the case, give you 10s. less the next day when he was accounting for the money?—It is just according to what time I would meet him in the afternoon when he had not accounted for the money.

31633. That is what is bothering me about it. I should like you to explain it if you can. It is important. Look at it for yourself. I want to understand it. On the right hand side, as you have told the Chairman, you have got an entry of what had to come to you from the Fishers?—Yes.

31634. That is the total amount of money that they had to hand to you?—Yes, I should say that was the money that was handed to me—say it was on the table.

31635. If he had spent 10s. out of that by giving it to Leach it would not be money on the table?—No.

31636. Therefore the money which he had received in the course of the betting would have been 10s. less by what he had given to Leach, would it not?—Leach was given 10s. that day, and it was put down and struck out almost immediately, I should think; that is my firm opinion.

31637. (Chairman.) Had you got all the slips with you when you made this kind of settlement. Did they bring the slips to you?—Yes.

A. F. Platt.

31 Jan. 1907.

31638. They also brought money?—Yes.

31639. If you added up the amounts mentioned in the slips you would find the total amount in respect of which bets had been made by punters with you or with the Fishers?—Yes.

31640. Does the total that you have on the right hand side mean the total amount of the money that they had received in the course of the day?—I should say the total of the money.

31641. On the table?—On the table.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He said it was money on the table.

31642. (Chairman.) Supposing they produced fifty slips, and you added up the figures on the slips, the total might be larger than the amount on the table?—Quite possible.

31643. Is that the sort of thing that did happen?—It can happen very often that the slips total up more than the money.

31644. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) If these were bets owing then there would be to that extent more than the money that was on the table?—Yes.

31645. (Chairman.) There would also be 10s. deficiency because of a payment made in the course of the day by the Fishers to Leach?—Yes.

31646. That is your suggestion?—That is right.

31647. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Then it would not be on the table?—No—it would be less.

(Chairman.) The money on the table would be less than the money on the slips.

31648. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not see how you are to find out, if that is the case, whether the man has paid the bet or not?—We know it is a bet, and we know the men we are doing it with.

31649. Have you any recollection yourself of that entry of the 10s. paid to Leach. Is anything definite and clear in your mind as to why that entry was made in the middle of that column succeeded and preceded by bets which were owing to you? Have you any recollection of why it was done, or of how it came to be done in that way?—No, no more than I have Bill there with nothing.

31650. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) How long have you known Leach to know his name?—Since last May.

31651. Do you know his Christian name at all?—No, I cannot say as ever I heard.

31652. Or his initials?—No, I cannot say as ever I heard.

31653. Do you know how to spell his name?—I cannot say that I do.

31654. How have you spelt it there?—L-e-a-c-h.

31655. What was your belief as to how he spelt his name?—I could not say particularly.

31656. When you were writing of this particular Leach who is referred to in that entry there, how did you spell his name?—L-e-a-c-h.

31657. Always?—I do not know if it is in the book anywhere else.

31658. But that is how you spelt this man's name?—Yes.

31659. When you were speaking of Leach you meant this police officer?—I should say so.

31660. Will you look at "A. P. 6? ("A. P. 6" was handed to the witness.) Is that the same man?—Yes.

31661. The name is spelt L-e-e-c-h?—Quite true.

31663. So far as I am aware Leach's name occurs only once in all these books that you have produced. It occurs only in slip "A. P. 6," and once in that book, and it occurs on this list which you wrote for the information of the Commissioners. Those are the only three instances in which I know the name of Leach occurring in any document that is before the Commissioners. Why did you spell in "A. P. 6" the name Leach differently to what you did in the pocket-book, and to what you did on the list which you wrote for the Commission?—I could not give you any account of it.

31664. While we are upon that look at "A. P. 6." That has got on the back of it a betting slip?—Yes.

31665. With the names of three horses—"Red Warrior," "Vrill," and "Sweet Florence"?—Yes. There are five horses.

31666. I think there are only four names?—"Red Warrior," "Sweet Florence," "Vrill," "Narrateur," and "The Page."

31667. Do you know what meeting that referred to?—No, I could not say from memory.

31668. Was it Gatwick for "Narrateur" and Haydock Park for the other three—"Red Warrior," "Vrill," and "Sweet Florence"?—I could not say.

31669. I want to get at the date, if I can. Can you tell me the date?—No, I cannot.

31670. Now look at the other side—"Lookers, 4s. 6d., "Yam"—what is Yam?—A nickname.

31671. Who is it?—A punter.

31672. "Yam, 5s." Would he receive 5s.?—That would be 5s. commission for what moneys he had bet during the week.

31673. Nelham, 1s.?—That would be the potman at the public-house.

31674. (Chairman.) For his services?—Yes.

31675. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) "Major, 3s."?—3s. commission.

31676. "Lookers." That is lookers-out, Bill and Bob?—Yes.

31677. "Leech, 10s."?—Yes.

31678. "Police, 4s." That is entered out £6 14s. 6d. Is that right?—There may be a mistake in adding it up.

31679. Yes, but still, that is what you have got there?—That is what I have got down.

31680. Are those moneys that you are accounting for to somebody?—No.

31681. What did you put those items down for and total them up for?—To let the brothers Fisher see what our expenses meant, independent of anything that was spent by the partner and myself. This would be the Saturday's settling.

31682. What is the 15s. below that?—I could not tell you that, as I have nothing to show it. It is perhaps something accounted for. I could not say what the 15s. was for.

31683. If that is what it was for, why did you make two items of "Leech" and "Police"?—That is distinctive. "Police" meant the police that were on the beat.

31684. That is a document which comes out of your possession?—Yes.

31685. And not of the Fishers' possession?—Yes, this was in the Fishers' possession.

31686. How does it come back into your possession?—I suppose I put it in one of the books.

31687. You say that document was prepared by you to let the Fishers see what the expenses were?—This document was made out in the presence of the Fishers and my brother-in-law.

31688. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) By you?—Yes.

31690. Who paid the lookers?—The Fishers.

31691. Who paid Yam?—That would be a query, perhaps—who paid Yam? Perhaps my brother-in-law or I would. I would not say in every instance, but in most instances it would be the Fishers.

31692. Who would pay Nelham?—I should say the Fishers.

31693. Who would pay Major?—He would very likely pay himself, or the Fishers would pay him.

31694. Who would pay the lookers?—The Fishers.

31695. Bill and Bob knew what they got?—If there was a deficiency perhaps we should have to pay it out.

31696. Who would pay Leech?—The Fishers.

31697. "Ins and outs"—who would pay that?—I should say on this particular occasion the Fishers.

31698. So that every item in that list which you say was prepared for their information was an item of payment made by the Fishers themselves?—I made lists in the presence of the Fishers, and I take this to be one of them. This was coming out of Saturday's takings. I take it these items on this piece of paper are Saturday's takings.

31699. You say that was prepared for the information of the Fishers?—To let them see the expenses. Instead of being verbal, it was put down.

31700. Information which they had before that list was written out at all?—Yes, but perhaps could not account for the money.

31701. Information which you could not have known unless you were informed by the Fishers?—That is so.

31702. Yet you prepared it for the information of the Fishers?—Yes.

31703. I suggest to you you prepared it for the purposes of settling with your brother-in-law?—No, that was always done in the presence of the Fishers.

31704. And your brother-in-law?—In nine cases out of ten.

31705. That was the one you have told us?—Quite possible. If you are on the date, I could not tell the date.

31706. You told us that was prepared in the presence of your brother-in-law?—No doubt it was. Most of them were done so.

31707. Just look at that betting slip. "Narrateur" was running at Gatwick on Saturday the 19th May, 1906?—I take it to be on a Saturday, because that is on the list.

31708. "Red Warrior" was running at Haydock Park on the same day?—You have the book there.

31709. "Vrill" was running in a race the same day, "Sweet Florence" was running at some meeting on the same day, and "The Page" was also running at Gatwick on the same day. Have you any doubt that that relates to Saturday, the 19th May?—You have Ruff's Guide. That is always good to stand on.

31710. You rely on Ruff's Guide a good deal, do you not?—Yes.

31711. And you have in the morning some paper which you patronise which gives a list of probable starters for the day?—Every paper that publishes racing news.

31712. Every respectable paper?—Yes.

31713. Among the horses running at Haydock Park on the 19th May was there a horse called "Leech"?—Not that I know of.

31714. Look at the right-hand middle column at the top of the page. (Ruff's Guide was handed to the witness.)?—Yes, I see it.

31715. "Leech"?—Yes.

31716. That is a mere coincidence?—It may be, in your mind.

31717. On that slip prepared that day relating to horses at that very racing meeting there is a horse called "Leech"?—I should like to know how many people would back it in England. What price did it start at? Is it quoted?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I expect it is included in the 20 to 1 others; it says "20 others," which I take to mean that.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

31718. That is how Leech is spelt on that occasion, and there are about two other occasions when you are referring to this May you spell it L-e-a-c-h. Leach (eliminating Leech) occurs only once in all the books you have put in, and that was the book which contains the one entry we have been dealing with?—Yes.

31719. Now I want to call your attention to the date of the 22nd June in the same book, A.P. 7. Do you find there a list of names?—Yes.

31720. "Ex—look out—spent 1s."?—That is not "look out."

31721. "Look—o"?—No.

31722. What is it?—Laing 10s.

31723. I think we are not looking at the same place. June 22nd is at the top. "Bill £8 10s., S. and B. 16s." Who are S. and B.?—The men we allowed to bet.

31724. "Ex," and then "look-o. 2s., spent 1s."?—Right.

31725. Then "Bob £16 4s. 6d.—£8 10s.—£24 14s. 6d." Then "ex—Laing 10s."?—Yes.

31726. "Spent 5s. 6d.—ex 9s. 6d."?—Yes.

A. F. Platt
31 Jan. 190 .

31727. "Hoffman 1s." Who is Hoffman?—That man's name often occurs in the book—he had a bet. We allowed him to have a bet on the nod.

31728. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) A backer?—A backer.

31729. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) "Stevens 2s."?—Quite right.

31730. Who is Stevens?—I take it it is Jack Stevens; I do not think there is any other Stevens.

31731. Who is Jack Stevens?—A backer of horses.

31732. "Symes 1s." Who is that?—A backer, I should say.

31733. All those names are in the same column as "Laing 10s."?—Yes.

31734. Just let me see the book. (The book was handed to the learned Counsel.) Let me call your attention to the fact that Laing is at the top of the list, and that is the last page in which there is any entry in your handwriting?—It is the biggest item, and I suppose it was the first one mentioned. It cannot be the first. "Bob" is the first on the page. The money is handed over, and under "ex" the other entries go on. I start with Bob first.

31735. There are spaces of two lines—intervals—in several places. That is the only entry of the name of Laing written in full in the book at all.

31736. (Chairman.) Have you any answer to give to that?—No, I take it it is so.

31737. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The only other entry of "Laing" is in "A. P. 1."

(Mr. Whitmore.) How many entries are there in all?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Two in all—one in this book and one in "A. P. 1."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The one in "A. P. 1" is "L—g," is it not?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes. You say "L—g" is Laing, do you?—Yes.

31738. That is in a list of items owing. Who is Stevens?—A punter, I should say.

31739. "Hoffman" 1s."?—Yes.

31740. "Symes" 1s."?—Yes.

31741. Those are all punters?—Yes.

31742. Then comes the word "expenses"?—Quite right.

31743. "Darby 9s. 6d." Who is Darby?—That is Queries.

31744. What would Queries be?—They would be perhaps in making up a paper we should make it 6d. short or 2d. short, and punters are very exact in asking for their last ½d., so there would be a deficiency of 9s. 6d. in the money, which we should put under the name of "Query."

31745. "L—g" (which you say is Laing) 10s.—spent 5s. 6d."?—Yes.

31746. You add all those up together?—Yes.

31747. Including Stevens, Hoffman, and Symes?—Yes.

31748. Then comes an entry of 6s. in your handwriting?—Yes.

31749. £1 15s. adding the whole thing together?—Yes.

31750. Was that for the purpose of accounting to somebody?—No—only to account between the Fishers and ourselves.

31751. Take the right-hand page, and tell me what are those names? What do they relate to?—These relate to bets that were paid.

31752. Near the bottom of the page do you find a name that looks like either "Larry" or "Laing"?—"Sidney"—if that is the one second from the bottom.

31753. No—"Larry"?—"Jerry."

31754. Do you say that is "S-d-n-y"?—Sidney that would be, son of the proprietor of the public-house.

31755. It looks a little like "Laing," does it not, to a person who does not know what it means?—No, I do not know that. Knowing the man's handwriting, I can detect it at once. I think you notice the same name occurs very often in that book.

31756. A person might be in some difficulty as to what that was, and put the first letter and the last?—Not to a man who is always writing.

A. P. Platt.

31 Jan. 1907.

31757. Had you a punter called "Larry"?—Not to my knowledge; I do not think so; I do not think the name is in the book.

31758. (Chairman.) No punter of the name of Larry?—Not to my knowledge.

31759. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Look again at the right-hand page and tell me if those are bets?—Paying out bets.

31760. Do you find one of the backers there, Laing, near the bottom of the page?—Yes, I should say so.

31761. Quite clear?—Yes.

31762. So that you had a punter called Laing?—May have done that particular day. I do not know whether you will find him in the book any other time.

31763. You do not find this one in any other book at the time?—You do not find any other name spelt the way that is that day.

31764. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) These were all punters?—All punters. You do not see the sum of 10s. written in the same way in the list of punters as it is in the list of expenses.

31765. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Do you know how the police officer Laing spells his name?—I cannot say.

31766. Did you ever know how the police officer Laing spelt his name?—No.

31767. Do you know now that in fact he spells his name "L-a-i-n-g"?—I do not.

31768. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Would you allow me, Sir, to put a question on a matter of identification on another point? (To the witness.) You remember I asked you yesterday whether you had paid the fine of one Thomas Farrington?—Yes.

31769. And I put to you a statement of John Lewis, a police-constable, who said that you made inquiries of him with regard to Farrington's fine?—So you said yesterday.

31770. Is that John Lewis (pointing)?—I don't know him, but I can bring a witness here who paid the fine for Farrington on that occasion.

31771. Did you make inquiries—that is the point?

(Chairman.) How are we to take that, Mr. Muir? Do you say that is John Lewis who you have pointed to?

31772. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, ex-Police-constable Lewis, who made the report which appears on page 36 of the bundle of documents which was before you yesterday, dated the 10th December, 1903. (To the witness.) You say you do not know this man?—I don't know him. You were positive in saying that I paid the fine. I have not a witness in attendance, but I can have him here. Mr. Muir asked me positively if I paid the fine to Lewis.

31773. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Oh, no?—I believe that is what you asked me.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No; you were asked whether you paid the fine for Farrington, and you were asked whether you had a conversation with Lewis with reference to the time at which Farrington's fine would have to be paid. That was the question.

31774. (Chairman.) What did you say to that?—The answer to that is this. It was Manchester November Handicap day, and I believe it was the day that Switchcap won, therefore I should be longer in the streets betting than I would on an ordinary betting day. I have not looked up Ruff's Guide for it, and I am only standing on my memory as far as that is concerned, but I believe that was the day that Farrington's fine was paid.

31775. (Chairman.) You may refresh your memory, if you like, by looking at the Guide?—It would not be in that book—that would only have the year.

31776. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Look at the book which you produced for the first time yesterday. (Exhibit "A. P. 7" handed to the witness.) Will you look at a page or two after the date of the 22nd June? When was that entry made?—I could not say.

31777. About what time was it made?

(Chairman.) How do you identify the entry?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I can only do so by referring to the contents of the entry itself, but I want to know, if possible, when the entry was made. What year is it? You see it is made between the entries of the 22nd June and the 2nd July.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that the one relating to Limerick?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Witness.) I should say this was done about two or three days within this date.

31778. That relates to a bet between J. Watts and Dick McCarthy?—Yes.

31779. Who is J. Watts?—This Jack Watts.

31780. Yes?—I believe he was some public-house friend, to the best of my recollection.

31781. That is a Jack Watts, is it?—Yes, this is a Jack Watts.

31782. Is it the same Jack Watts we were talking about yesterday?—I believe it is.

31783. So that you were in communication with him as lately as June or July, 1906?—I do not know about communication. I think, if I remember the circumstances of this being entered, it was in some public-house.

31784. It might have been anywhere, but my question relates to the date. When was it made, and when were you in communication with Jack Watts with regard to that bet?—I have not seen him since this bet was made.

31785. That is the very last time you saw him, was it?—Yes.

31786. (Chairman.) Was he present when the entry was made?—Yes. I think I have seen him once since. It would be near about the time. Perhaps it would be in respect of this bet that I saw him.

31787. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The very last time that you saw him?—Yes.

31788. Let me call your attention to this fact, that in that book there is no entry at all relating to "Coppers"?—I do not suppose it was needful.

31789. Do you accept that as being a fact?—If there is no entry, I should take it for granted that it was not needful. I had this book for odds and ends purposes.

31790. You will find dates running on if you will turn to the first page of it; there are two dates, the 25th and 29th May?—Yes.

31791. On the next page you will find the 26th May?—Yes.

31792. Then you go on on pages 3, 4 and 5 with no dates at all?—That would show that I was using the books for odds and ends purposes.

31793. Just answer my question. There are no dates at all on pages 3, 4 and 5. Is that right?—Yes, I don't see any dates.

31794. Then on the sixth page the 7th June?—The 6th June is the first date I have got here.

31795. Now the dates run continuously going on page after page, 7th, 8th and 9th?—Yes.

31796. In 1906 the 10th was a Sunday, and there is no 10th here. The 11th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th—a Sunday and no date there. Then the 19th, 20th, 21st and 22nd. There is a fortnight of consecutive dates, and you say you were paying Leach 10s. a week and Laing 10s. a week, besides other moneys to policemen. How much was Cass getting a week?—I would not say positively.

31797. About?—I would not say positively, because I know he was not out so very often.

31798. Let me point out to you that throughout that fortnight there are no entries of what you allege you paid to the police—Leach 10s. and Laing 10s.?—Yes.

31799. A fortnight continuous entries, and nothing about "coppers" or police at all?—I say it was not needful.

31800. Why was it needful in some instances and not in others?—I cannot say that. I had a purpose in it, no doubt, as far as this book is concerned, and in the books which are here which are the entries of the Fishers and the slips. The generality of the expenses were reckoned up on the slips. We took a slip on a beat that Leach was on; it was destroyed the same night or within five minutes of it being made out.

31801. Have you got any other explanation to make with regard to there being no entry there of the 10s. a week to Leach and the 10s. to Laing?—Not in this book, no.

31802. On the question of the date when you ceased to trade with the Fishers, do you find entries in another handwriting beginning the 2nd July?—They are not in another handwriting. It is my handwriting.

31803. You told us that that book was not all in your handwriting?—Up to this date, and then when I was going to tear this out you told me not to tear anything out of the book, so that very likely it escaped my looking. This is my handwriting.

31804. Is that book all in your handwriting?—No, not all in my handwriting, because this is the thing you asked me about.

31805. That bet about Jack Watts and Dick McCarthy?—Yes.

31806. Whose handwriting is that in?—I could not say positively.

31807. There is no date on that?—No.

31808. With that exception is the whole of the book in your handwriting?—As far as I can see I should say it is.

31809. Those entries beginning the 2nd July—are they in your handwriting?—Yes.

31810. And the 3rd July, and so on?—Yes.

31811. And I notice that your dates there are most particularly entered. You enter not only the day of the month and the month, but the day of the week as well?—Yes.

31812. Monday, Tuesday, and so on?—Yes.

31813. Was that the starting of a new business with somebody else?—(No answer.)

31814. Who are Alf and Frank?—(After considering) I cannot say offhand.

31815. Really. This is since you closed your business with the Fishers. Who are Alf and Frank?—Evidently someone who I was personally taking money from.

31816. Let me point out to you that the 30th June, the day upon which it is suggested to you that your business relations with the Fishers ceased, was a Saturday?—Yes.

31817. Therefore the 2nd July was the Monday?—Yes.

31818. Up to the last entry in that book your entries are all about "Bob" and "Bill." Those are the two Fishers?—Yes.

31819. On the 2nd July you begin with Alf and Frank. Who were Alf and Frank?—(After considering) As to the reason I have entered it I cannot call any further names to mind.

31820. Do you want more time to think of the names?—I cannot possibly think who I meant for them.

31821. Just look. The 2nd July, 3rd July, 4th July, 5th July, 6th July—Alf and Frank every day. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) 1906?

31822. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) 1906?—I really cannot recall the further names to mind.

31823. You know, Mr. Platt, with your memory I suggest to you that if you say you cannot remember who those persons are you will not be believed?—Now, there you are asking me to do something. You are telling me I have had a bother on the 30th June, and you don't know under what circumstances I entered that in my book, and you don't know whether I was in health when I entered that in that book.

31824. I suggest to you that if you tell this Commission that you don't know who Frank and Alf were that you made those entries about the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th July you will not be believed?—I don't know. I should tell you at once.

31825. (Chairman.) You have given your answer definitely on that point; you do not know?—Yes. Who Alf and Frank are I cannot possibly say.

31826. On that card that has been put in evidence the word "Frank" occurs?—You will find there is the name of Frank in some of the books earlier, but that Frank would be no relation to this Frank here.

31827. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) How do you know?—Because I know that this Frank that I have here was up in training either in the Yeomanry or the Militia a week or so previously to the finishing up of the 30th June.

31828. You do remember the date of the 30th June now, do you?—Through your telling me.

31829. You remember it now through my telling you?—You tell me it is the 30th June. I don't know. I am going by your word that it is the 30th June.

31830. Where were you betting on Monday, the 2nd July, and the following days in that week?—I think I was in Covent Garden Market more than I was anywhere else.

31831. Do those entries relate to bets in the Covent Garden Market?—It is quite possible. I should say from the way I have put this down they did relate to betting.

31832. "Frank" is not a bet, and "Alf" is not a bet?—I should say that is what they have laid out.

31833. "Frank 4s., Alf 3s.; Frank 5s., Alf 4s."

31834. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Who laid out?—These persons who gave me the money. I have put them down in this rough way as a rough way of doing my business.

31835. It is the same person every day?—Very likely two people I kept on meeting, but I cannot think who they are from the way I have put them down.

31836. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Let me call your attention to what the other items here are. First of all, on the 2nd July there is only "Frank and Alf." On the 3rd July, "Frank and Alf, takings 3s., pay out 18s. 6d." That is all. Then Wednesday: "Frank and Alf, takings 18s., pay out £1 3s. 6d. 5th: "Frank and Alf, takings 13s. 6d., pay out £1 13s. 6d." Friday: "Frank, George, Alf, takings £1 2s., pay out 17s. 6d." Who was George?—(No answer.)

31837. Well?—I cannot think quite, off hand.

31838. Now let me point out to you that is a week's entries, except the Saturday. Saturday, the 7th July, would be the Saturday after the 30th June when you discontinued the business. Did you discontinue that business on Saturday, the 7th July?—Would you lend me Ruff's Guide, because if I see some of the horses that won I might be able to call some facts to mind. (Ruff's Guide handed to the witness and examined by him.) I do not find July 2nd here.

31839. Take July 6, which was the Friday.?—I think I have got my memory back a little better now.

31840. Where were you betting during that week?—I was not really betting, but now I think of it, a man thought he could take some, and that would represent his takings and the name that he gave me.

31841. Who is Alf?—I could not say who he was.

31842. Who was the man who thought he could take some?—I think you will find it would be George to the best of my recollection.

31843. Who is George?—I would not know his other name.

31844. Where is he to be found?—I could not tell you.

31845. Did you discontinue that business in that week?—Through insufficiency of takings, that would be.

31846. Cannot you remember where you were doing that betting?—He was dodging about between the Strand and the City.

31847. Was he in Fore Street, City?—No, it would not be Fore Street.

31848. Did you employ a man in Fore Street, City? Will you swear you did not employ a man to take bets in Fore Street, City?—Yes, I think I can swear I did not.

31849. Then that man was not in Fore Street, City?—No, he is a man who had not been employed in work for a long time, and I was asked to give him a chance.

31850. Throughout your betting transactions did you always bribe the police?—I wish I was worth what it cost me one way or the other.

31851. Throughout your betting transactions did you always bribe the police in the districts where you you were carrying on betting?—It is according to which way you do the bribing—money or wet drinks, as I term it.

A. F. Platt.

31 Jan. 1907.

31852. Did you bribe the police in the districts where you were betting?—Yes—put it that way.

31853. Is there any entry here at all—here is the whole of your takings and the whole of your paying out—about the police?—In a week?

31854. Yes?—But I was not there myself. I was knocking about the Strand and Covent Garden Market. I might have gone once with this man to the best of my recollection.

31855. I call your attention to the fact that there is nothing here indicating any payment to the police such as you point out in your other books?—No.

31856. Having seen those entries, do you accept the dates from me that I gave you that on the 23rd June your brother-in-law ceased to be a partner, and that on the 30th June you discontinued the business which you had carried on with the Fishers?—It looks as if it would work out that way.

31857. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I find some entries in the other books of "Frank." Do you know who that Frank was?—If you will let me have a look at it I will soon tell you.

31858. There are several entries in this book of "Frank" sometimes coming after "Bill"?—He would be a man who was in our employ.

31859. Until when was he in your employ?—Some time in last June.

31860. There is one entry of "Bill, £3 8s.," and then "Frank, 14s. 3d"?—Yes.

31861. Frank was somebody in your employment?—Yes.

31862. Then I have seen an entry certainly one, and I think more often, of "Alf." Do you know who that would be, too?—If I had a look at it I might tell you.

31863. Cannot you remember without my putting the entry to you?—No, not unless I see the handwriting.

31864. Do not you remember having somebody called Alf in your employment?—I could tell you better if I saw the entry.

31865. What is your own name?—Alf.

31866. Is that what you are usually called?—Yes.

31867. Might it be yourself?—This would be myself (pointing to an entry).

31868. That is under the entry of "Alf"?—That would be myself in this instance.

31869. That is June 19th, June 20th, Alf, and June 21st, Alf. This is the one I was looking for, June 22nd, Alf?—Yes, that would be me.

31870. Mr. Muir's question to you is with regard to July 3rd, Alf.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That first date is July 2nd.

31871. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Have you any doubt as to who that is?—It may have been myself.

31872. Have you any doubt?—I would not be positive, because that week I take it for granted from the date that Mr. Muir has mentioned there was a little bit of a bother, and I would not trust my memory so greatly these three or four days as I would on other days, but if George is the man I take him to be I think there is not much doubt about being able to produce him, and if it is the man I think it is, he was dodging about from the post office, I think, to the Gaiety.

31873. That is George, but I am asking you about Alf.?—I should think it was myself. Perhaps I took a bet off somebody and put it down to myself. I take it to be that way.

31874. And Frank—was he the man who had been in your employ before?—No.

31875. That man who appears on all these days—have you any doubt as to who Frank was? Just think a little. It is only three months ago. Frank had been with you some time?—Frank who is in the other book would be away on his Yeomanry or Militia drill. He went away unexpectedly.

31876. Is this some other Frank?—It must be in this instance. The Frank in the other books was a man, if I can trust to my memory, who left us unexpectedly on a Saturday night, with moneys.

31877. When would that be?—That would be a fortnight previously to the discontinuance of the business.

31878. (Chairman.) What was the bother you referred to about the 30th June?—Having the knowledge of the betting business that I have, it has always been my endeavour to keep down working expenses as much as possible, and I found that by employing the Fishers, looking to the moneys that the employees were receiving, we were virtually working for nothing; and, in fact, the greater part of the money we lost went in working expenses. That was one of the reasons of our discontinuing the business.

31879. That was the bother?—That would be the bother.

31880. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Frank continues right through the book, I see?—He would be almost every day in that book. A book like that would only last about three days.

31881. Do you want us to understand that you have no notion who that Frank is?—Whether it is this George who has introduced Frank I would not be positive, but I think from the slight idea I have in my head I could find out this afternoon who this George is, and find out if I can find him. If he is the man I think he is that I was asked to give a chance to, I think I could settle all that.

31882. It is Frank I am asking you about?—I do not know who that Frank is.

31883. No notion?—No, I cannot say off-hand.

31884. It is the same name and spelt in the same way as the one before?—It is not that one which is in the other book.

31885. Is it somebody you were paying money to who was working for you?—No, I should take it for granted these are moneys that have been taken.

31886. Do not be flurried about it. Take your time, and look at it. It appears with your own name and in your handwriting day after day for several days last July. You must be able to remember who he was?—From the name of George being in it I should think it was the man that I was asked to employ from the Gaiety.

31887. That is George?—Yes.

31888. But I am asking you about Frank?—Frank I could not call to mind.

31889. Now tell us?—I wish I could. I would tell you with pleasure. I may have taken that bet in the market myself.

31890. It is not a bet taken; it is a payment made?—I have put down "Takings 3s."

31891. That is a different matter. It begins "Frank, Alf."—those are payments which you are making. Alf. is not a bet you made with yourself?—I would not say who that Alf. is.

31892. But you told me just now you had no doubt it was yourself?—Whether it was a bet I put down for Alf.—someone that I knew.

31893. Just follow a moment. You told me just now that you had no doubt that these entries of Alf. are yourself?—It is possible it would be a bet I have entered in the name of Alf. and put it down to myself.

31894. Do you mean as a bet? Perhaps you would like to think it over. Do not bother about it now. We will give you another opportunity of saying who it is.

31895. (Chairman.) The witness may be a bit tired. (To the witness.) I should like to know whether that is your final answer, or whether you would like to think it over?—I will ask the question of one man, and he will be able to tell me. He will have more knowledge as regards this man than I should have perhaps myself—these particular three or four days.

31896. Who is the man?—I don't wish to mention his name. I will find out.

31897. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is it Frank?—No, it is not Frank.

31898. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You have from time to time produced various books to the Commission. Have you any more?—No, not to my knowledge. I don't think there are any more of any sort.

31899. You are quite sure we have seen the last of them?—I should think so.

31900. Now I am going to another matter. You made your statement before Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer on the 20th October, 1903. Just look at that document. (Document shown to the witness.) This is the record of the evidence that you gave on the 20th October, 1903:—"Statement of Alfred Platt, of No. 7, Bird Street, Brook Street, Lambeth, 'bookmaker':—At 2.40 p.m., 17th inst., I was in Robert Street, Waterloo Road, when P.C. 180 L came up to me and said, 'I brought you a bet from the governor; you may as well have it as anybody else. It will do you a bit of good.' He gave me a paper with two sovereigns. On the paper was written 'Oasis' 20s. win; 20s. 1, 2, 3. Any to come, 'Albanico,' 20s. win, 20s. 1, 2, 3. I asked him what races these horses were in. He replied, 'I do not know.' I then invited him into a public-house close by. We went in, and I called his attention to the time by the public-house clock, which was ten minutes to three. I said, 'These clocks are generally a bit faster on Saturdays and Sundays than on other days, but I will time the paper 2.40 p.m.' On looking at the paper I saw the first-named horse was in the 3.45 p.m. race. I then gave him 5s., and bid him good-day. At 7.10 p.m., 17th inst., the P.C. came to my house and asked for payment over the winner of the 2.15 race, saying, 'I want the money to take to the governor.' I promised to meet him in 20 minutes at the 'Two Eagles,' Brook Street, but did not keep the appointment. At 12 o'clock the same night my wife informed me that the man who called at 7.10 p.m. had called again about 8 p.m. and said he wanted the money, as it was not his own, and she told him I was in bed asleep. She asked what the money asked for referred to. He said, 'It is over a bet.' She said I did not pay out at night, but on the following day, and as the bet was made on Saturday it would not be paid till Monday. At 1.15 p.m., 19th, I was at Waterloo Railway Station, where I saw the P.C., who said, 'You have not been half mucking me about for the money. You make me feel bloody wicked.' I promised to meet him in Price's public-house, but did not keep the appointment. I then went to Kennington Lane Police Station, and made a complaint. At 4 p.m. I was informed by a friend that he had arranged for me to meet the P.C. at the 'Tankard' public-house, Brook Street, at 8 p.m. At 6 p.m. I informed Inspector Knell of the appointment, and he advised me to go home, and no doubt I should hear from someone. At 8 p.m. the P.C. and another man, whom he had previously represented to be a C.I.D. sergeant, came to my house. The P.C. said, 'I have come for the money.' I said, 'Go to the "Tankard" and wait for me.' He said, 'I'll wait at the corner of the street.' I went out almost immediately, and together we went to the 'Ship' public-house, Kennington Road. I told him I had not the ready money to pay him. I could not get a cheque cashed at the 'Ship,' but I could at the 'Tankard,' and told him to follow me there, which both of them did. I entered the saloon bar, and saw them enter the bar on the Kennington Road side. I did not try to get the cheque cashed, and did not go into the bar they were in. After waiting about a quarter of an hour they left. I was informed they were waiting outside, and I remained till about 10.30 p.m., when I was informed they had gone. I then went home." Then you sign that "Alfred F. Platt," and Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer signs immediately underneath. Is that right?—They are the signatures here.

31901. Then "Question by P.C.: Where did I meet you at 2.40 p.m.? (Reply.) At Mepham Street, near the public-house. (Q.) When I met you did I not say, 'I have got a bet from a friend of mine,' not the 'governor'? (R.) No, you said it was from the governor. (Q.) When I saw you at Waterloo Station, did you not say to me, 'Who is that man there?' (pointing to a friend of mine). 'I cannot get on my pitch, as there are several strangers about. I thought he was a detective'? (R.) Yes. I asked that question in order to gain time, so as not to pay out." That is signed by you and by P.C. Deed, and by Inspector Spencer, and afterwards by the Superintendent. Now I call your attention to the fact that in your evidence you say nothing at all about bribes?—They confined me to the one case. They have not even got down there when I was in Kennington Lane Police Station at 1.25 on the Monday.

31902. I call your attention to the fact that there is nothing throughout your evidence said about bribes?—They confined me to that one case.

31903. Not even about bribing Deed?—They have not even got me down as being in the station about 1.25.

31904. How often was that statement read over to or by you before you signed it as being correct?—I could not recollect now how many times it might have been read over.

31905. More than once?—It might have been.

31906. Were you asked whether you had any witness to corroborate you?—I don't think I was asked. I think I said there was somebody who could.

31907. Did you name a man called Turner?—Yes.

31908. You did not hear Turner give his evidence, did you?—No.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Where did he give evidence?

31909. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) He made a statement. I call it evidence because it was a sort of quasi Court. Did you know Deed by any nickname?—Patsey, I believe.

31910. Would this be a correct account of what happened between you and Deed on Saturday, 17th October? This is what Turner says: "About 2.40 p.m. on Saturday, 17th instant, I was standing outside the Hero public-house, Waterloo Road, when I saw a plain-clothes officer, whom I knew by the nickname of 'Patsey,' hand to Mr. Platt, a bookmaker, a slip of paper with some money, but I could not say what was the amount, as I was not close enough to see. The officer than walked away, and I saw no more of him. Mr. Platt then turned to me and said, 'What do you think of this paper? Here has Patsey been and backed the winner after the race had been run.'" Is that a correct account of what took place between you and Deed?—We went into the pub.

31911. This account differs altogether from yours?—He only differs about not entering the pub. We entered the pub.

31912. (Chairman.) Did you say that to Turner: "What do you think of this paper? Here has Patsey been and backed the winner after the race had been run"?—Yes.

31913. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) According to Turner, the constable never went into the public-house at all, but walked away, and he saw no more of him, and you turned to him, the whole thing happening in his presence. Is that right?—We entered the public-house.

31914. He was the only witness that you suggested could corroborate you as to the details of the betting with Deed?—The only one I mentioned then.

(Chairman.) But the other statement as to being in the public-house was signed by Deed as well.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, only the cross-examination signed by Platt and by Deed.

(Chairman.) Is that so? There are four signatures, in fact.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The statement-in-chief is signed by Platt, and witnessed by the Subdivisional Inspector Spencer, and then the cross-examination is separately signed by Platt and by Deed.

(Chairman.) And by Spencer and Noviss.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Chairman.) It comes to much the same thing, because Deed appears to have had an opportunity of saying he did not enter the public-house if he did not enter the public-house.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I am dealing with the question of whether this witness was corroborated or not by the man Turner, whom he vouched as the only person who could corroborate his statement. That is all I ask.

31915. (Chairman.) Mr. Platt, when you came here yesterday you commenced reading a statement, and you will remember I suggested that you had better postpone making any statement by way of explanation in regard to any matters touched upon in the cross-examination of Mr. Muir until after he had finished the cross-examination. He has now finished his cross-examination. Would you like to make your statement now?—Before doing that I should like to mention one thing to comment on the last statement that Mr. Muir has produced. I entered Kennington Lane Police Station about 1.25 on the same date. I was in there again in the afternoon, and then I came back at 6 p.m., knowing that all the time I should see Superintendent Noviss, and if these men are wrong in saying that I saw Inspector Knell that night, and it was Superintendent Noviss, why did they not tell me of it before I signed that paper? It was Superintendent

A. F. Platt.
31 Jan. 1907.

Noviss I saw, and not Inspector Knell. I saw Inspector Knell at midday, and he told me it was no duty of his, and it was left to the Chief Superintendent. You asked me that same evening what I was going to do. I told you I was going to return home, knowing Deed and others would be in my presence, and from that time, it appears, I was kept under the observation of Subdivisional Inspector Spencer.

31916. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You say, "You asked me"—and you looked at somebody in court. Who do you mean by "you"?—Superintendent Noviss. Is that correct or not? The further statement that I wished to make to the Commission is to show up the system and the methods as well as the bribery of the police. At the time of my first accusations against the police of 1903 there were great scandals connected with the police as regards betting and bribery. There was a police-sergeant and a constable who were had up for perjury at Greenwich.

31917. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is this a fresh statement?—I wish to show up different things. There was a police-sergeant and a constable being had up for perjury at Greenwich. There was a complaint against Inspector McCarthy, of the F Division at Paddington. There was likewise my complaint against the L Division. You see by the letters that have been produced here that I continually wrote to the Commissioner, and I had no attention paid me. I had nobody sent to me to investigate the charges that I was making. In the case of the F Division, in the case of Curtis and McCarthy, Curtis was a man who never wrote a letter, and never made a complaint at any police station, or to any chief officer—simply gossip of two police officers, and they make no report of it; but months after, when this scandal is in the air, an Inspector is sent to hunt that bookmaker from one public-house to another to make a statement, and insisted on him making it.

31918. (Chairman.) I think you are going a great deal further than is necessary?—The methods I was going to show. I am taken no notice of. Here is a man who never makes a complaint and never sends any letters, and an Inspector is sent after him to make a statement.

31919. Do you mean to say in that case they were ready enough to send somebody to get a bookmaker to come and make a statement, but would not take any notice of your complaint? Is that what you are suggesting?—They would not take any notice of my complaint.

31920. We have the correspondence in about that, so we know exactly what answers were sent by the Commissioner of Police and by the Home Secretary?—Yes, but Mr. Muir defended——

31921. That has nothing to do with us. That has nothing to do with this inquiry?—I have had no Counsel here for me.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is why you are being allowed a great deal of latitude.

(Mr. Whitmore.) We do not allow Counsel to make speeches.

31922. (Chairman.) That is substantially what you want to say, is it?—Yes—to show that Inspector McCarthy was dismissed on the uncorroborated evidence of a bookmaker.

31923. You have been cross-examined at very considerable length by Mr. Muir on several days, and you know pretty well what the points that he has been suggesting against you are?—Yes.

31924. You notice he suggests continually that you are telling what is absolutely false in regard to these policemen, and in regard to your relations to the police. Does any point occur to you upon which you would like to give some explanation—I mean upon the points that have been put to you by Mr. Muir in his cross-examination? With regard to the topics upon which you have been cross-examined, you have given your answers to him from time to time, and they have been taken down by the shorthand writer; you have given your explanations as you have gone along, but would you like to give any further explanation?—I cannot say about that.

31925. Let me suggest to you one thing—for instance, this statement that you signed on the 20th October, 1903, has just been read. I understand that you agree that you did sign it?—I see my signature there, so I must have signed it.

31926. Then Mr. Muir asked you this question: "How comes it you did not say one single word so far as appears from this statement about bribery"?—I should like to ask for all the statements that were made and signed on those dates.

31927. That may be important. You heard the statement read by Mr. Muir?—Yes.

31928. It is perfectly clear there is not one word about your charging Deed or anybody else with bribery in that statement?—No, nor in the charge book.

31929. Why did you not make a statement, or insist on saying something about the bribery?—It only showed I was in the office of these men, and had to go the way they wished to make out the report so far as I could give it them. I think you will find other statements I wrote.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That you signed?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Would you mind asking the witness whether he suggests he made any other statement?

31930. (Chairman.) Certainly. Do you suggest that you made any other statement in writing?—I really believe I had some foolscap that I signed, and Inspector Spencer took it down. I was asked to attend at Kennington Road Police Station at 11 o'clock.

(Chairman.) Will you let me have the original, please?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. (The original was handed to the Commissioner.)

31931. (Chairman.) When the statement was taken down, I suppose Inspector Spencer was sitting at his desk, was he?—Yes.

31932. You were in the room with Deed as well?—Yes.

31933. Who else was present—was Superintendent Noviss present?—No; only the P.C.

31934. That is the original statement which was read by Mr. Muir to-day, and your signature is there (handing)?—20th October, 1903. I am positive about the other.

31935. Is that your signature?—Yes, this is the signature. Deed cross-examined.

31936. He appears to have asked you some questions through the Inspector?—That is right.

31937. You recollect that, do you?—Yes, I recollect him sitting there.

31938. Then you signed the document in two places?—Yes.

31939. Did you sign any other document at that interview, or at any other interview?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is not necessary to look through that bundle. There is no other there.

31940. (Chairman). That interview was on the 20th October, was it not?—If that fell on a Monday. There was one on a Monday, that I had with Superintendent Noviss.

31941. 20th October was a Monday, I think?—I think that was a Tuesday. The 20th was a Tuesday, I think.

31942. What date was the Saturday?—The 17th.

31943. Deed's bet had been made on a Saturday?—Yes.

31944. And it was on the Tuesday you had the interview with Inspector Spencer at which this statement was taken down?—I was asked to go to Kennington Road at that time.

31945. What time was it that you saw Inspector Spencer in Deed's presence?—I saw Inspector Spencer in Deed's presence, I think, about 11 o'clock in the morning, or just after.

31946. Had you seen Inspector Spencer between the 17th and 11 o'clock on the Tuesday morning?—Yes.

31947. How many times had you seen Inspector Spencer?—Once to my knowledge.

31948. When was that?—On the morning of the Tuesday when I was asked to come back at 11 o'clock.

31949. That was about what time?—9 o'clock, or just after.

31950. At 9 a.m. the same day then?—Yes.

31951. Did you have any conversation with him then?—Yes. I had already spoken to Superintendent Noviss telling him that after leaving my house about

8 o'clock in the evening I had taken this man to the Ship; I had three or four friends at my house at that time, and we expected to have some blows; I took him to the Ship, and then from the Ship it appears I was followed by two females, and I did not wish to have any disturbance in front of them. I went on to the Tankard, and there we got into an altercation in the bar, and a tradesman in the neighbourhood interfered, and we dispersed. I went up the first thing the next morning and complained to Superintendent Noviss of the disturbance that I had gone through that evening.

31952. Was that the Monday evening?—The Monday evening. On Tuesday morning this would be.

31953. Then you saw Superintendent Noviss on Tuesday morning?—As well as on Monday evening.

31954. What time did you go there?—I went there just after 6 o'clock at night, when he asked me if I was going straight home or not.

31955. Now come to what I was going to ask you about—the first interview with Inspector Spencer on Tuesday morning. That you say took place about 9 o'clock. What passed between you and Inspector Spencer then?—I had told Superintendent Noviss about being followed, and the bother, and Superintendent Noviss asked me to repeat the same in front of Inspector Spencer.

31956. Was Superintendent Noviss present at the interview with Inspector Spencer at 9 o'clock on the Tuesday morning?—Yes.

31957. The Superintendent asked you to repeat your story?—Yes.

31958. Did you do so?—Yes.

31959. What else did you do?—Inspector Spencer then produced that paper carrying out the time from the time I left my house to the time I left the Tankard; he had had me under observation, and had seen me enter the Ship and the Tankard, but saw no altercation take place in the saloon bar.

31960. You had at 6 o'clock made a complaint, or a kind of appeal, for police protection?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Is there any note of any following of Platt on this day?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) On page 7 I think you will find it says: "Arrangements were made for Platt to see the P.C. at 8 p.m., 19th instant, at the Tankard Public-house, Brook Street."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is a report. What I understood Platt to say was that there was a paper which he saw. As I understood the Chairman's question, he wanted to see that paper.

31961. (Chairman.) I understood you to say that you told your story to Superintendent Noviss in the presence of Inspector Spencer?—I had already done it previously, but I had to say it again before Inspector Spencer.

31962. Then Inspector Spencer produced a paper, I understand?—Yes.

31963. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You saw the paper?—Yes.

31964. (Chairman.) On that paper there was a record of your movements, as I understand it?—Yes.

31965. But that record was made because I understood you had at 6 o'clock on Monday night applied for police protection?—Yes.

31966. What else took place between you and Inspector Spencer?—Of course I told Inspector Spencer the moneys I was giving these men, and told him to refer back to prove the words I was uttering—to look at the times I was taken into the station, and he pulled down a book in my presence, and entered them on a small piece of notepaper.

31967. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Entered the names?—The numbers.

31968. (Chairman.) "I told Inspector Spencer the moneys I was paying to these men"?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Was this at the same interview?

31969. (Chairman.) Yes, he says so. This was at the early interview on Tuesday morning?—No, not at the early interview on Tuesday morning.

31970. I was asking you about that. Keep your mind on that interview for the moment. Did anything else take place between you and Inspector Spencer at the interview in the early morning of Tuesday?—I was asked if it would be convenient for me to be at Kennington Road Police Station at 11 o'clock.

31971. And you did go to the police station at that hour?—Yes.

31972. Was that the first interview you had had with Inspector Spencer?—Yes, to be by ourselves.

31973. But you had got Superintendent Noviss there?—Yes. Superintendent Noviss was not with us at Kennington Road Police Station.

31974. At the interview at 9 o'clock in the morning he was. Where was that interview then?—At Kennington Lane Police Station.

31975. The second interview took place at Kennington Road Police Station?—Yes.

31976. You used these words a moment or two ago: "I told Inspector Spencer the moneys I was paying to these men"?—Yes.

31977. When do you allege that you told Inspector Spencer anything about the bribery?—When I alleged the bribery to him would be at 9 o'clock in the morning, when I turned round and told them—after having been followed about, and after giving the moneys I was giving.

31978. I understood you a moment ago to say that was not at the time Superintendent Noviss was there?—I did not quite follow you.

31979. Then let us go back. You did see Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer at the Kennington Lane Police Station at about 9 o'clock on Tuesday?—Yes.

31980. First of all, Superintendent Noviss asked you to repeat the story that you had told him about the way in which you had been followed?—Yes.

31981. And your movements on the preceding night?—Yes.

31982. Then Inspector Spencer from a paper read an account of your movements which tallied with what you had said?—Yes. Whilst that was being read I walked up and down the room and said: "After the moneys that I was giving them," or words to that effect. I said they had done this to me after having given them moneys.

31983. Did Superintendent Noviss or Inspector Spencer hear that observation?—Yes.

31984. What did they say?—Superintendent Noviss made the exclamation to Inspector Spencer: "I knew this sort of game was going on."

31985. The Superintendent said that?—Yes, as he sat on a chair.

31986. Did anybody make any other observation?—No, not that I know of.

31987. Did Inspector Spencer say anything in answer to what the Superintendent said?—I do not think so.

31988. Did you go on and give any further particulars to them?—No, I do not think there was anything further said.

31989. What did you mean by saying one of them went and fetched a book, or something?—That was when I got to Kennington Road Police Station.

31990. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) This is all at Kennington Lane?—Yes.

31991. (Chairman.) Have you told me all you wish to say about that first interview?—Yes. I must say this—I posted a letter in the first instance which Superintendent Noviss says he has never received.

31992. To whom was the letter addressed?—Superintendent Noviss.

31993. What date was that?—That was posted on the Sunday, the 18th.

31994. As I understand it the transaction with Deed took place on Saturday in the evening, and they came round for the money, and had an interview with your wife?—After seeing me previously.

31995. They had seen you once, and then they came to your house and saw your wife?—Yes.

31996. You did not go to any police station on Saturday night, did you?—No, I really did not know what I should do.

A. F. Platt.
31 Jan. 1907.

31997. Then you say you wrote a letter on the Sunday?—Yes.

31998. I think that is the first we have heard of that, is it not?—No. I think you will find in my statement I referred to that letter.

31999. At any rate, you did not go to Kennington Lane Police Station or trouble the police until 6 o'clock on the Monday?—I was there about half-past 1 on the Monday.

32000. Where?—At Kennington Lane Police Station.

32001. What did you go there for at this time?—You will see a further statement. I had arranged an appointment for 4 o'clock, and I went there as I wanted some officers to be there to see these men have this money from me, and have them in the act.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He did say when he first gave evidence in answer to the Chairman that he sent a letter to Superintendent Noviss. It is at Question 7177. He says: "I sent a letter to Superintendent Noviss asking him to send plain-clothes' officers to my residence so that when these men came and demanded the money under the circumstances that they did, I wanted them there to arrest them."

32002. (Chairman.) Then you went to the police station at 1.30 as well?—Yes.

32003. Did you see anybody there then?—Yes.

32004. Whom did you see?—I saw Inspector Knell.

32005. What request did you make then?—I told him as near as possible the facts of the case, and he told me I had better see the Chief Superintendent.

32006. And you did see the Chief Superintendent at 6 o'clock?—Yes.

32007. That is Superintendent Noviss?—Yes.

32008. Then we seem to have as far as those days are concerned an account of all the interviews you had with the police?—Yes. I went back again there in the afternoon. I was not positive of the time Superintendent Noviss would be there.

32009. You have given us all the interviews you had with him?—Yes.

32010. All the conversations you had?—Yes, I think so.

32011. Again I would call your attention to Mr. Muir's question that you did not complain to Inspector Spencer or Superintendent Noviss of these men having accepted bribes from you?—I did not see Inspector Spencer till the Tuesday morning.

32012. I quite agree. Then am I to take it that the only complaint you made on the Monday, or the Tuesday, about Deed and the others having taken moneys from you was the observation you made when you were walking up and down the room?—I exclaimed when I saw Superintendent Noviss on the Monday evening: "After the moneys I was giving these men." I made that exclamation then. I was simply asked if I was going home, and I told them, "Yes, I was going straight home."

32013. Do you mean at the interview with Superintendent Noviss you said anything about paying moneys to these men?—Yes, I told him about the letter.

32014. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) After what you had been giving them or paying them? Do you mean you said that on Monday evening and on Tuesday morning?—Yes.

32015. (Chairman.) You had further interviews later on in the year with the police about Soer, Powell, and Gunn, had you not?—Yes.

32016. I think you said something about the Inspector or the Superintendent having taking down some book, and then taking down some names or numbers?—Inspector Spencer did that when I told him about the arrangements I had made as regards times. I said, "If you will look in the charge book you will see what times I was brought in."

32017. When was that? I thought you told us that all that took place at the interviews on the Monday and Tuesday?—This would be on Tuesday when I told Inspector Spencer about the charge book.

32018. Do you mean at the interview at 9 o'clock?—No, at 11 o'clock.

32019. Now tell us exactly, please, what took place about that at Kennington Road Police Station?—A table runs along against the wall, and a shelf, where they can put these large folios in, and he reached a book from that—I could give him the dates then better than I can at the present time. "So-and-so and So-and-so—see what time I was taken in"; and he there and then with a piece of notepaper in his hand entered them in my presence.

32020. Entered them up in the book?—No, on a piece of paper. That was already done.

32021. (Mr. Dickinson.) The numbers of the officers you said you had given these moneys to?—When I was taken in—that I paid.

32022. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Those were on the days of your arrest?—Yes.

32023. (Chairman.) Was Deed present when that was done?—No.

32024. Was that after the written statement had been taken down?—I would not be positive whether it was just before or just after.

32025. At the Kennington Road interview did you go in and see the Inspector before Deed came in?—I think I was there waiting before he came in, to the best of my recollection.

32026. Before Deed came in?—Yes, because Deed, as soon as he must have been telegraphed for, ran to my residence, and stood at my door crying in the presence of my wife and mother and other persons in the house, and begged of them not to go on with it.

32027. Were you in the charge room with Superintendent Noviss and the Inspector before Deed came in?—Superintendent Noviss was not there—not at the interview I had with Inspector Spencer.

32028. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Not at 11 o'clock?—No.

32029. (Chairman.) There were four present. The statement is signed by Superintendent Noviss?—It was not signed in my presence.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Can you, Mr. Bankes, give us the Inspector's books for the 29th May, the 28th August, and the 1st August, 1903, and, I think, there is another date, the 13th October?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

32030. (Chairman.) The letter dated 19th November from you to the Chief Commissioner was read yesterday. In that letter you say: "I beg to state the complaint I made against the other three P.-c.'s, viz., 204 L, 203 L, and 209 L, which was in the presence of Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer at Kennington Lane, the above officers were in the habit of receiving of me a weekly wage," and so on?—Yes.

32031. I see you put that in the letter of the 19th November?—You have the date there. I could not tell you. My idea is that I must have written a little previously to that. I am under that impression. I do not know whether the copies of my letters impounded at Newington Sessions would show that I had written a little earlier than that.

32032. That is not the point I am on. In the letter of the 19th November you say that you make a complaint against three officers, whose numbers you gave at Kennington Lane?—Yes. I should turn round and say who took me in each time.

32033. The interview at Kennington Lane was at 9 o'clock in the morning?—Yes.

32034. You had an interview with Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer?—Yes.

32035. You told me that the talk about the numbers of the men and the pulling down of a book took place at Kennington Road?—That was when I turned round to Inspector Spencer and said, "Get the books and look at what times I was taken in."

32036. I asked you particularly whether you had told us all that was said by you about officers taking money from you at those interviews?—I meant to convey that impression.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You notice in the letter he says this statement about the numbers was made in the presence of both men—Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer.

32037. (Chairman.) That is exactly the point I am on, because both gentlemen were present at the interview at nine o'clock?—I referred to the numbers of the men who took me in.

32038. I have called your attention to the point. Mr. Whitmore wishes to have definitely from you an answer to this question. Do you think you mentioned the numbers 204L, 203L, and 209L, at the interview at Kennington Lane on the morning of Tuesday, the 20th?—I may not have said the numbers at the interview, but I said: "You can refer back to the officers and see—you can tell by the officers what times I was taken to the station."

32039. I understood from your answer a few minutes ago that that was said at Kennington Road?—I asked when I got to Kennington Road Inspector Spencer to get the book out and look, and he would see the times I said I was taken in.

32040. Then you say a very similar observation was made at both interviews?—Yes, as near as possible.

32041. The books were not at Kennington Lane?—No.

32042. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where do you say Inspector Spencer put down the names of the constables?—At Kennington Road.

32043. On what did he put them down?—On a piece of notepaper which they write memoranda on.

32044. Did you see him do that?—Yes.

32045. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Was it from a book like this he took it?—Yes, a large book, I can see him doing it now, sitting at the table.

32046. He put something down he got from a book on a piece of writing paper?—Yes.

32047. You say it was a book like this?—Yes.

32048. How came he to look at the book?—I asked him to. I said "If you refer to the charge book you will see the times I was taken in; therefore you will get the officers' numbers.

32049. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did he put down the times on the notepaper?—Whether he put down the times or the numbers I cannot answer for. I think he took the numbers and the times of the days I was charged.

32050. Did you mention the numbers?—I would not be positive whether I mentioned the numbers. I perhaps gave them their nicknames, or anything of that.

32051. Did you mention the names?—No doubt I mentioned one or the other—the numbers or the names. It is more likely I should mention the numbers.

32052. (Chairman.) I am not asking you these question necessarily with a view of closing your cross-examination on this. I am merely mentioning the interviews with Inspector Spencer as a point on which you may like to give some further explanation?—I could not understand why I was not "fronted" with the other men; I am only "fronted" with the man who gave me two sovereigns. I am not "fronted" with the other men that I complain about that I gave these moneys to.

32053. As I understand, Mr. Muir's suggestion is that the only complaint you had made against Deed then was that he had made a bet with you, and that what you brought to their attention was that he was guilty of an improper transaction in having a bet at all.

32054. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He said Deed had made a bet with him after the race had been won?—And in laying that complaint I said—"After the moneys I have given them. That was the man to take me into the station." At the time these men were the only men who were doing duty, they were only P.C.'s, and since that time there has been a police sergeant and a P.C. put out together.

32055. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you remember how many books the Inspector looked at to get the names?—No, I could not say I know, I was rather upset at the time.

32056. (Chairman.) There is another thing that I think I ought to call your attention to, and upon which I think you might give us some explanation in your own way without our cross-examining you upon it, and that is how exactly you carried on your business in the G Division—what were the exact terms that you made with the Fishers, whether you asked them to keep no books recording the transactions, whether you kept any book in which you showed the amount of money you handed them, or you and your partner handed them on each day, whether you kept at the time any book whether it survives now or not, and whether you kept any account of transactions between McCarthy and yourself. I am giving these suggestions as matters upon which you might like to enlighten the Commission?—First, I think there are three books in the hands of the Commission, and by keeping them I must have thrown the other books I have produced in with them. You will find sums of money entered up there on behalf of partner and myself, and you will find a list of moneys that were paid out from day to day—money that the Fishers owed.

32057. We have got seven or eight books before us, and we see the contents of those books. They do not seem to be very complete I should say from a business point of view. Did you and McCarthy, for instance, when you entered into partnership for business in the G Division have any note of the terms of your partnership?—No, none whatever.

32058. Did you keep any book showing your transactions?—In the books in the way I have kept them I never entered moneys that we have paid in and moneys that we have paid out to the Fishers. It was rather a loose arrangement that we had with the Fishers. They rather deceived partner and self in the moneys that they owed, and the first day we took the business over we found we dropped so much that we stuck to the business, otherwise I think we should have let the business fall through, but being "in the cart," as the saying is, we put more money into it in the hope of getting it back.

32059. When you took over the business was it one pitch or two pitches?—One pitch when we took it over.

32060. You said there was £14 deficiency?—On another pitch, as the expenses were so high, and the brothers had to live, I asked them what they intended to do, and then it was proposed that they should write out a list of moneys that were owing on that pitch, and I said "When you give it to us we will consider it," and eventually we started.

32061. When the business had started it seems to me that either you or McCarthy must have advanced moneys to some extent to the Fishers?—Yes.

32062. Who advanced the money?—I think the partner advanced the money greatly at first—he handed the moneys over.

32063. Did you and McCarthy not keep any book in which you entered what each paid to the Fishers or otherwise paid in regard to the transactions?—I do not think for the first day or so, but after the first day or so I bought three books, and you will find entries in them of the many transactions as regards the moneys that partner and self put in the business.

32064. Supposing you handed any money to the Fishers would you take a receipt from them?—No.

32065. Would the Fishers keep any book?—Not that I know of, I do not think they would, because their books are books that you do not often keep by you; they are books that you use up in three or four days, and you put them in the fire, or tear them up in the street going along.

32066. Then I understand what took place was that one of the Fishers took his place on the pitch, wherever it was, in this G Division. Is that so?—There was one pitch going, and there was one that was stopped for want of money owing, and after they had been in our employ a week we started the second pitch going.

32067. I am now on the question of the method on which you were doing your business, because it is on that we want a little explanation. The Fishers were your agents, I understand?—Yes.

32068. You had agreed to pay one £2 a week and the other £2 10s. a week?—Quite true.

32069. What did Fisher do? Supposing it was Monday morning, and a race day, what did Fisher do?—We should total the book up to see what moneys would be paid out.

32070. I mean on the very first day; no money has been paid out in the case I am putting?—The very first day we took moneys and paid them. I did the papers myself, and in totalling up the sum of money that the papers amounted to, and then totalling up the money, I found a deficiency of £10 odd.

32071. Very likely, but the Fishers were employed by you, one at £2 a week and the other at £2 10s. a week. On the very first day on which the Fishers went out to do your work where did the Fishers, or either of them, go to?—The first day that they started?

32072. Yes?—The first day we were really standing almost in the same street as they, but when they finished betting we simply took the papers and the moneys off them.

32073. I understand Fisher would go and stand at a regular pitch?—Yes.

32074. People would come up with slips and 1s., 5s., or whatever the amount was, was put in the slip, and handed to Fisher, who put it in his pocket. Was that so?—Yes.

32075. Then at the end of the day you met Fisher?—At the end of that day we did so, but on after days we met him a minute or so before each race. We were there a minute or so before racing up to the time they had left off betting.

32076. Then the only account that Fisher kept would be the slips, or rather he would keep no account at all?—He would keep no account at all.

32077. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Were the slips taken after the racing was begun?—Yes. Then you would clear yourself out of the first lot of papers, and if you had the first winner in the second lot of papers you would know you took it after time. That saved marking the paper.

32078. Then the papers would have to be handed from the pocket of one man to another before the next race?—Yes.

32079. (Chairman.) Supposing it was the 1.30 race, your man Fisher is on the pitch, and you are in some convenient place not far off?—Yes.

32080. Up to what time would you, or rather Fisher, receive a sum for the 1.30 race?—Up to 1.30.

32081. At 1.30 the slips would be handed over—you would collect the slips in some way or other from Fisher?—Yes, then it is possible to stand by him until 2 o'clock.

32082. What part do the blue cards handed in yesterday play in the business?—They are nothing to do with Fisher's business.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) They contain the rules.

32083. (Chairman.) They appear to be the terms on which you carry on the business?—The other card you will find is Fishers'.

32084. Do you give these cards to your customers or client?—Yes.

32085. By way of advertisement beforehand?—Yes.

32086. This is the yellow card: "Season 1906. The Clerkenwell Syndicate; with F. W.'s compliments. No limit. Representing F. and C. and S." Had you anything to do with this?—I think I should be represented there by Smith. That would be Fisher, McCarthy and Smith.

32087. Supposing a man who had never had one of those cards came up to Fisher with a slip, and he had put the name of a horse which was running in a race at a particular time of the day in proper form, with the money—say 5s.—what are the rules according to which you would pay him?—We should pay him as a rule according to the terms on the card.

32088. Whether you had given him a card or not?—If he was a stranger it is most improbable he would be able to have a bet unless he was brought by somebody who was known to the pitch.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It might be a trap.

32089. (Chairman.) The fact is you have regular clients or customers whom you know?—Yes.

(Mr. G. L. Bannerman.) Will you allow me, before you adjourn, to make an application on behalf of ex-Inspector McCarthy, a man who has been mentioned by this witness? I understand he has made several applications to the Commissioners to further inquire into his case, and he has received several communications from the Secretary, by direction of the Commissioners, saying that they have considered the documents which he has submitted to them, but that they have not yet come to any decision as to whether they will investigate his case or not. I wish to say it would be a convenience to those whom he will require to instruct if we could have as early an intimation as possible from the Commissioners as to what their decision is.

(Chairman.) I think, Mr. Bannerman, it is a very reasonable application, and we will let you know to-morrow morning.

(Mr. G. L. Bannerman.) If you please.

THIRTY-THIRD DAY.

Friday, 1st February 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
Rufus Daniel Isaacs, Esq., K.C., M.P.
Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. St. Lawrance Leslié, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).
J. F. Waley, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Assistant Secretary).

1 Feb. 1907.

(Chairman.) In regard to the application made by Mr. Bannerman yesterday the Commission desire to say that they have considered the papers sent to them by ex-Inspector McCarthy, and have decided not to investigate his complaint, as it does not come within the terms of reference. They have no power to inquire into the question of whether he was justly or unjustly dismissed by the police authorities.

(Mr. G. L. Bannerman.) I do not know, Sir, whether you would allow me to make an observation on that statement?

(Chairman.) No, I think not.

(Mr. G. L. Bannerman.) The only point I wish to put before you which would bring it within the scope of the reference, is that specific allegations are made against particular police officers. I have a list here of the precise allegations which Inspector McCarthy makes in those papers, and which he has instructed his solicitor to instruct me to put before the Commission, and I think perhaps those representing the police would desire to put the officers who are specifically named, and against whom the charges are made, into the box in order to put the matter before the Commission. After all, the Commission, as I understand, is appointed for the purpose of investigating.

(Chairman.) We cannot hear an argument about the matter. All the papers are before us, and we do not invite argument.

(Mr. G. L. Bannerman.) I would not suggest that I should argue the matter. All I wanted to put before you was that specific allegations are made against particular police officers.

(Chairman.) We have got all the papers before us, and it is sufficient for us to say that Inspector McCarthy's complaint does not relate to matters within our terms of reference.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you wish us to call our evidence now, Sir?

(Chairman.) No, Mr. Platt is not yet finished with.

ALFRED FRANCIS PLATT, recalled.

32090. (Chairman.) There is another matter on which you were cross-examined as to which perhaps you may like to say something. Mr. Muir stated at question 13223 on the 13th Day: "You told the Commission that one thing in corroboration of your statement, that you had an arrangement with the police, was that other men carrying on the business of bookmakers were convicted oftener than you"?—Yes.

32091. I do not find in the notes that you did make that statement.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I can give you the reference to that, Sir.

(Chairman.) I confess I have not been able to find any such answer.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I asked him about corroboration at page 212, question 8809, and he suggested as an item of corroboration the hour of arrest. That is the beginning of it, and I take him through the items he suggests as corroboration. The item of corroboration as to the hour of arrest begins at 8809. Then the next is 8848, the absence of summonses, and then at 8890 there is the actual statement. "I want to know what beside your bare word that Soer ever received a farthing from you have you got to lay before the Commission. (A.) These books will prove the convictions against me in such a few cases as compared with the other men who were betting in the district who did not pay."

(Chairman.) What books were those?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It begins at 8888. "With regard to Soer, you have mentioned the fact that there was no summons as you suggest corroborates your statement that those arrests were arranged. Is there any sort of corroboration outside of those two arguments that Soer ever received a farthing from you for any purpose at all. (A.) The proof would be in bringing up the men that he did summons and get convictions against in a greater proportion to what I had."

32092. (Chairman.) (To the witness.) You have heard those answers of yours read. What have you to say now in reference to that matter?—Mr. Muir in his explanation of convictions explained that if a man was served with four summonses and was fined £20, that would only count as one conviction, whereas I have been fined four separate times covering a certain month, and I only paid the same fine then, but mine is counted four convictions.

32093. In giving those answers to Mr. Muir, were you referring to the period between April and October, 1903, or were you referring to your whole career as a bookmaker?—I was referring particularly to 1903, because I believe (I have no record of anything of that) that if the police records are shown I believe that year there were more fines than any previous years, and most of them on summonses.

32094. You draw this distinction as I understand between the proceeding by summons and the proceeding by warrant that in a summons several offences may be alleged or it may be alleged that the defendant was guilty of the offence on several days?—Yes.

32095. Is that what you mean?—That is how they allege the thing, but with us men in the capacity of street bookmakers we should look on those four summonses as four convictions.

32096. That is because there are four charges in the summonses?—Yes.

32097. Whereas if you are arrested only one charge is dealt with?—Yes.

32098. That is the disorder on the occasion with regard to which you are arrested?—Yes.

32099. That is your point?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Now, Mr. Muir, I should like the list of convictions that you cross-examined Mr. Platt upon, or referred to. You say at Question 13232, "I can save you the trouble because we have a return of everybody who was convicted at this police court within that period."

32100. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Let me see that I quite understand what your explanation to the Chairman is. You mean when you say that other bookmakers were convicted more often than you were that there were more separate offences charged against them during the year than there were against you, because of a number of offences being charged in one summons. Is that it?—No, Sir. The explanation which I wish to give is that they paid more money in fines than I did.

32101. But that would not necessarily mean they were more often convicted?—If they are going to make four summonses one conviction that is another matter. A man is paying £20 on one conviction, and I am paying £20 on four convictions.

32102. (Chairman.) I was going to refer to Chapman's case because I think in that case Chapman was charged with betting on four separate days, and was fined in respect of each offence.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not quite understand the explanation that you have given at present.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I have the list of convictions here, Sir. (Handing in the list.)

32103. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In your view were they fined more often or fined any larger amount than you? Which is it you mean?—If they are only going to count four summonses as one conviction, and going to count my being taken out of the street as one conviction, they paid more in one conviction than I did. That is, they paid £20 on one conviction, when I only paid £5.

32104. That is they were fined more heavily than you were?—Yes.

32105. (Chairman.) According to the list of convictions which has been handed in no one was convicted more than four times. Is that your recollection, and do you agree with that. Between 29th May, 1903, and the 13th October, 1903, in this district according to the list of convictions handed in there are fifty-seven convictions altogether?—I was taking the period from March, 1903, up to and including December.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We can get a full return.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The shorthand note shows that my questions were confined within that period. Again and again the period was mentioned.

(Witness.) Put it November.

32106. (Chairman.) There are four convictions against one Smith. Do you know anything about Smith?—I am Smith—that is the name I betted in.

32107. The highest other number of convictions is three in a good many cases. There are six cases of three convictions against the same persons—Rolfe, Howe, Bolton, Serle, Clements, Burnett, Copper, and Noon. Do you know any of those men.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) This particular point would not be apparent from this return without some further explanation, but the full return will be got out.

32108. Chairman.) The explanation which you give of that is that though there were four convictions against you under the name of Smith, they were four convictions upon your being arrested?—Yes.

32109. And in the case of Chapman, for instance there was a summons?—Yes.

32110. You find Chapman twice I think?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There is a Chapman in that list, but that is not the conviction that he refers to, because that is at a later date.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you would indicate what dates you want the information for we will supply a full return.

(Chairman.) I think we had better have it for the whole year 1903, showing in what cases the proceedings were by summons and in what cases by arrest, and the amount of the fine.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That shall be prepared.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It would be an advantage to have it for each month.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly, Sir.

32111. (Chairman.) You had never been arrested in Lambeth Division before 1903, I gather?—No.

32112. Were bookmakers to your knowledge arrested before that year in the Lambeth Division?—Oh, yes. There had been raids on betting houses previous to 1903.

32113. I am not talking of raid on betting houses. I am talking about street betting?—Yes.

A. F. Platt.
1 Feb. 1907.

32114. Men had been arrested for street betting in the Lambeth Division before 1903?—Yes.

32115. Do you recollect any case in the year 1902 or 1901?—I do not know that I could particularly mention any year. I should say Rolfe had been in in 1902, and I should say Bolton had been in in 1902; I should say Clements had been in in 1902. I think Moon was in in 1902, and I think Copper was in in 1902, and I think Burnett.

32116. I understand that in the years immediately before 1903 you had been carrying on this business of street bookmaking in the Lambeth Division?—Yes.

32117. To what do you attribute your immunity from arrest up to that time?—Because I had done it so very very quietly. I had not betted so conspicuously as the generality of the men did.

32118. You mean you did your business a little more cleverly than other men?—It is quite possible, Sir. There are men in the division at the present time who have never been arrested.

32119. I understand now you do not suggest that your immunity from arrest up to 1903 was due to the fact that you bribed the police?—Oh, no, not so much as that. 1903 I believe was the first year that the police had the power to summons a man. I am not quite positive of the fact; but I think it was the year 1903.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) What he means is the County Council bye-law.

(Chairman.) We see in Chapman's case the proceedings were taken under the bye-law of the London County Council, and that was a case of summons. I think in Platt's case he was proceeded against under the other section.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, for obstruction under the Metropolis Streets Act.

32120. (Chairman.) Mr. Muir suggested in cross-examination to you that your correspondence with the Commissioner of Police and with the Home Secretary was due to the interest that you took in the appeal of Chapman. He suggested that Chapman had been convicted on summons, and that Chapman was going to appeal to the Sessions. Deed had been dismissed under the circumstances which we all know about now, and Mr. Muir suggests that your attack on Soer, Powell, and Gunn in your letter to the Commissioner was due to the interest that you took in Chapman's appeal. What do you say to that?—The answer to that is this, we knew in what an unfair manner these men, Deed and Soer, had obtained the evidence to get these summonses on Mr. Hepwell, as he was the leading man in the part, being Chapman's stepfather; we knew in what an unfair manner they got the evidence on the summons, and we were determined to fight them. Perhaps if I have the pleasure of cross-examining these constables I daresay I can give you a very good reason, and how they obtained the evidence to get the summons.

32121. How long have you known Chapman?—It is possible I may have known him eight or nine years, but as to being in close contact with him I had not been in his company till previously to Deed being dismissed. Then he came to me and asked me to give him particulars of the why and the wherefore of Deed's dismissal.

32122. Is Chapman any connection of yours?—No.

32123. Was he working on his own account in 1903?—No, he was working for his stepfather, or his late stepfather.

32124. What is the name of his stepfather?—Frank Hepwell.

32125. Is Hepwell any relation of yours?—No.

32126. Then you say your interest in the appeal of Chapman was due to the general indignation felt by the street bookmakers at the way in which the police had got up that particular case?—Not only in that instance but in other instances. They took such undue liberties in the summonses.

32127. In what way do you mean?—In the evidence that they obtained, and us men really know the way in which these men obtained their information.

32128. What is the suggestion? I do not follow that. Why should they not obtain their information against law breakers in what way they reasonably like?—I think I have said in my statement that these men are as well known as us men are.

32129. Which men are these?—Men that are sent out on this special duty. Soer made a remark to me "I am too well known for this neighbourhood," and he knows it. There is not a better known officer than him, and not a better known officer for his tricks than he is.

32131. (Chairman.) What do you mean by tricks?—The unfair means that he would use.

32132. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) To catch men?—To catch men.

32133. (Chairman.) Give me an instance of the unfair means?—I will quote Chapman's particular instance. We knew that these two officers could not see where these men were, and before they could get within 100 yards of them the signal was up and the men go in and close themselves in a house. There is nothing really done. While the men are in the immediate neighbourhood there is no betting. In the case of Chapman, there was Deed's brother-in-law who took the bets down, and he was engaged at work within a few yards of where the men were summoned from. Of course these men can swear that they saw a horse's name written out in the name of a punter on the paper. That is one of the officers' ways.

32134. You consider the fair way is to arrest you with the slips on you, and if you get caught with the slips on you you do not complain of the prosecution?—Not at all. That is fair, and we are done with it. It is very few instances where these men can catch you fair.

32135. How came you to give evidence on the appeal at Newington? Has anybody come to you to ask you to be a witness on Chapman the appellant's behalf?—No, I was not asked in any way whatever. I felt very indignant over the case. I was asked the full particulars of Deed's dismissal, and I believe the solicitor told Chapman, "There is no corroboration of this man Soer, and I should appeal."

32136. We have got the proceedings on the appeal. What is the date of the notice of appeal?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The 29th October.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It was heard on the 15th January, 1904.

32137. (Chairman.) The conviction of Chapman took place on the 24th October, 1903, and he was convicted of offences against the County Council by-law on the 5th, 6th, 7th and 8th days of October, 1903. The appeal is dated the 29th October, 1903. Was it after that that you were asked, if you were asked, to go and give evidence on the appeal?—I was never asked to give evidence, but I interested myself in the matter, and I believe Mr. Conway, the solicitor, suggested that I should be a witness, or perhaps I wished to show up the police. I think that would be more the idea as to why I went to Newington Sessions, to have my affair properly opened and seen into.

32138. Were you subpœnaed?—No.

32139. Were you told by somebody what day the appeal would be heard and that you ought to be there?—No.

32140. You went there quite voluntarily then?—Yes.

32141. Were you in Court when the proceedings commenced?—I was in Court and I was told to move out of Court. I daresay the constable thought that I was going to say something, and I was asked to go out of Court.

32142. By the Bench?—I do not know whether it was by the Bench, but someone asked me to go out and I went out.

32143. Then the next thing that you know, apart from what you may have heard since, is that you were asked to come into Court?—Yes.

32144. Who examined you?—I think it was Mr. Elliott.

32145. The counsel for Mr. Chapman, the appellant?—Yes.

32146. Before you got into the box did you give any statement of what your evidence would be to anybody?—Yes.

32147. To whom?—To Mr. Conway, the solicitor.

32148. Was that a statement of what you were prepared to state in the witness box?—They never thought

I would do it. I told them the facts of my case, but at the time it was taken down I do not think they had an idea that I would go on with the case, because at the very last moment Mr. Conway asked me if I would go into the witness box. I said "Yes, I will go in." That was almost the last moment before the constable got out of the witness box.

32149. On what points with regard to the appeal were you speaking. What did you understand was the evidence that you were to give relative to the appeal?—What I had said to Mr. Conway.

32150. That Soer and Gunn had taken bribes?—Soer and Gunn and Deed.

32151. Was that part of the case for the appellant?—No, I believe the firm opinion of counsel was that the appeal would be dismissed because there was no corroboration. I believe that that was the sole ground that they stood on, and I believe that was why I was particularly asked at the last moment if I would go into the box, because they solely relied on no corroboration.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Chapman was not called.

32152. (Chairman.) You would hardly know that?—No.

32153. He appears not to have been called, and you were the only witness for the appellant?—So it appears. I did not know that until Mr. Muir put it to me.

32154. Mr. Muir read to you a series of questions and answers from the transcript of the shorthand notes of your evidence at the Newington Sessions. Have you anything to say in addition to what you answered to him? He suggests that you said there that you had given Soer and Gunn, for instance, a sum of 10s., whereas before us you told us that you had given Soer and Gunn on the particular occasion one sovereign?—Yes.

32155. What have you to say about that?—In some instances I have given £1 or half a sovereign, and perhaps I conglomerated the exact figures up.

32156. But then Mr. Muir points out that you have said one thing before us and another thing at Newington. That is what he points out, rightly or wrongly. My question to you is, have you any explanation to give of the discrepancy or contradiction?—Nothing different to what I said last time.

32157. You have nothing to add to the answers you gave to Mr. Muir?—No.

32158. Mr. Muir the day before yesterday cross-examined you a good deal as to your credit as a bookmaker, suggesting that you were a "greased lightning bookie," or a welsher, and things of that kind. Would you like to add anything to what you said in answer to him in regard to those matters or the matter of Jack Russell at Victoria Station?—It is well known that when a man does leave off betting there are plenty of men ready to go into the same place and start betting and use your name, and I believe those instances occurred at my place at Waterloo, where I believe men were convicted, but whether in my name or not I do not know.

32159. You say a bookmaker who has carried on, we will say, on a pitch at Victoria Station for a certain number of days or weeks, and then discontinues going there, is open to the charge of being a welsher or a greased lightning bookie, because some other dishonest bookie goes there and trades under his name. Is that it?—It would be to that effect, but it would not happen if a man has only been there a few days.

32160. Supposing you employed a man like the Fishers on a pitch for a few days, and then the connection between you and Fishers terminate, you mean you cannot prevent Fisher from using your name the week following?—Not unless I was watching all the time, or told every punter who came along.

32161. You have several times referred to "my place" and "my pitch." Is there a kind of property in a pitch recognised in your business?—Yes.

32162. We have had a photograph of the place where you used to stand. Would it be considered a wrong thing for another bookie to go and stand and take his place there on any day when you were not there?—Oh, yes. Sir. The place that you bet in is recognised as a right; it is yours, among the fraternity.

32163. There is no great difficulty, I suppose, for any detective officer to find out who is on such a pitch?—It is according to how you do your business. I believe as a general rule these officers who are sent out on this duty either obtain their information through the jealousy of another bookmaker whose business you will interfere with when you come and start, and he has perhaps been in the habit of bribing these said officers, and he would very likely say, "A new bookmaker has started over there; I cannot give you so much as I have been in the habit of doing; we shall have to take him down," and then they want these officers to take you down in the busiest hours of your business, so that people would not find you in your place, and they would go to the man who bribed the officers to arrest you.

32164. Look at those three cards that were all put into your hands on Wednesday. Do you admit any connection between yourself and those cards?—Do you mean that they are your cards in the sense that you either paid or contributed to payments for the printing and circulation of those cards?—These would be the two.

32165. Then you admit your connection with the one endorsed "J.H.," and which is marked "A.P. 15"?—Yes.

32166. That is the card you have used?—That I have not used myself, but I have caused it to be used by agents.

32167. You never used this card yourself?—No.

32168. What agent used this card?—A man named Horner.

32169. Was that at Tooting?—No.

32170. Which part of London was that?—That was at Covent Garden.

32171. Then the one "J. R." which was put to you, had you anything to with that?—Yes.

32172. What had you to do with that card?—At Waterloo?

32173. This is your Waterloo card?—Yes, that was a card that I used at Waterloo after I had the trouble with the police. I did not bet in the name that I had been betting in before, and that is an agent that I caused to be betting for me.

32174. Who is J. R.?—J. Rowle.

32175. You have not any card of 1903?—No, they were the cards that I had. I had no personal cards.

32176. But this card related to Covent Garden?—Yes.

32177. And the J. R. one was the one used after the trouble of 1903?—Yes, both those cards were used.

32178. Have you any card that you used or that your agent used before your trouble in 1903 with the police?—Yes.

32179. The card which is endorsed "R.M.D." you have nothing to do with?—No, I have no knowledge of that card.

32180. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I thought that was Davis's card?—Mr. Muir said something about Davis.

32181. (Chairman.) That is what was exactly in my mind. What do you say to that? Mr. Muir is making rather a point of it. Just look at it again?—I am under the impression that it was thoroughly understood that I knew nothing whatever about this.

32182. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That certainly was not my understanding. Davis was the man who was betting for you, and that was his card?—Perhaps you have misunderstood me. I never had a man named Davis betting for me.

32183. I thought you told us that you had?—No. There is a misunderstanding.

32184. (Chairman.) Mr. Muir cross-examined you about the Victoria Railway Station and one "J. R.," or Jack Russell, who had disappeared?—Yes.

32185. I understand you to deny that you were Jack Russell?—Oh, yes, Sir.

32186. Then the J. R. card was put in?—I had no representative who worked for me as Jack Russell.

32187. You say that J. R. on the card that has been put in was Jack Rowle?—That card was Jack Rowle's, somebody else may have got hold of the card.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) My recollection is that he said it was both Jack Russell's and Jack Rowle's.

A. F. Platt.
1 Feb. 1907.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He certainly said J. R. was Jack Rowle.

(Mr. Dickinson.) He said "I used the card J. R. in 1905; that meant J. Rowle, who betted for me at Waterloo."

32188. (Mr Rufus Isaacs.) My recollection is he began by saying as regards J. R., J. R. was Jack Russell. That is what he said at first. When he went to a pitch at Victoria. (To the Witness.) It was at Victoria, was it not, that the J. R. card was used?—Yes.

32189. You said at first that J. R. was Jack Russell?—Yes, Mr. Muir was speaking about Victoria, and I said I knew a Russell and he betted at Victoria, and there were two Russells.

32190. The question was put to you whether the card having J. R. on, that card which you did say was Russell's, the J. R. at Victoria, was your card. Then you said it was Jack Rowle and not Jack Russell that the J. R. meant?—Yes.

32191. (Chairman.) That is the substance of it. What do you say now?—That the card with the J. R. on is Rowle's card. He betted with that card at Waterloo.

32192. What do you say about the card R. M. D.? I do not know anything about that at all.

32193. It was suggested it was Davis?—Mr. Muir suggested Davis at Tooting, if I remember right.

32194. Then another point was made by Mr. Muir in connection with an alleged payment of somebody's else's fine—a man named Farrington. Will you tell us exactly how that matter stands according to you?—I could have had Chapman here myself this morning to have given evidence that he paid the fine for Farrington, but he has had to be at Sydenham owing to his late stepfather's death, and he has promised to appear at the next sitting with Farrington.

32195. You deny that you paid Farrington's fine?—Yes, I did not know the man really till this trouble. That is a card I had previous to my trouble, and I was betting with that in 1903 previous to the bother.

32196. That is in the name of Forbes?—Yes, but you see "At Waterloo Alf." I was termed "Waterloo Alf." That was my nickname.

32197. Looking at this card I find first "J. Forbes, London, established in Hornsey since 1895, but now represented there by G. Holloway; in Crouch End by J. Taylor; at Waterloo by Alf."

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Before you pass away, Sir, from the question of Farrington, what was put to the Witness specifically was the statement in Lewis's report on page 36 of the documents.

32198. (Chairman.) Did you ever ask John Lewis, a police constable, what time Thomas Farrington would be taken away by the van in the event of the fine not being paid?—I have no recollection of it at all.

32199. Do you remember any conversation with Lewis in November, 1903?—No.

32200. Do you know Police-constable Lewis?—No.

32201. Then if he was in plain clothes it is possible you might have had a conversation with a man about Farrington?—No, I do not think I was there at all. It being a big handicap day I should be so late in leaving my pitch.

32202. The suggestion is that the consultation took place at 3.30 in the afternoon, and that P.C. Lewis was on duty at Southwark Police Court. Did you go to Southwark Police Court on that day?—No, Sir, not to my recollection. I should be sure to be late that day, it being the day that Switch Cap won the Manchester November Handicap, and being Saturday I should be very late.

32203. You would have a good deal to settle up?—Yes, being Saturday it would make it later still. I am always late on Saturday.

32204. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that race run as late as the end of November?—Yes, I think it was the 29th; I am not certain.

32205. (Chairman.) You wish to add nothing more about Farrington?—No, no more than I thought Mr. Muir put it to me very positively that I paid the fine of £15 0s. 6d.

32206. Now referring to the card upon which I was founding a question or two, this card of "J. Forbes, London," is your own card as I understand?—No, that was a man I was in the employ of.

32207. I notice on the first page of the card the names G. Holloway, J. Taylor, Alf, George and G.?—Yes.

32208. Are you Alf?—Yes.

32209. Alf and George were both names that occurred in one of the notebooks yesterday—A.P. 7?—Yes.

32210. And you could not say who Alf and Frank were?—No.

32211. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You did eventually say who Alf was—yourself?—I thought it might be myself, but I would not be positive. I said I would make inquiries.

32212. (Chairman.) Be careful and apply your mind to the question. Have you anything further to say on the question of the identity of Alf and Frank mentioned in this notebook?—I think eventually I can find the men. From inquiries I made last night I could not see the right man—I think that that week being the week after I had finished with the Fishers I was knocking about Covent Garden and the Gaiety, and I think I put a man to work, but whether his name is George I cannot be positive of yet.

32213. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs). Alf is yourself?—Alf, I think, is myself. It would be the way I would enter a bet up with the man or a man I was paying something out to. I would not be positive about that week because it was a week I was on the booze.

32214. Be careful about that. If Alf is not yourself who is it?—I will inquire from the man who worked for me then.

32215. (Chairman.) We have got Frank £1 2s. 6d., May 26th, 1906, and Frank, £1 2s.?—That would be the man who was working for me, and they would be his day's takings, which you will find recorded in all the other books, and you will find it is in a different way. It is under the different headings—what they are. You will always find Frank under "Bob" or "Bill."

32216. You were asked a good many questions about these entries beginning Monday, July 22nd, and going down to Friday, the 26th. Can you say anything further now as to who Frank and Alf were. We now know that Alf was yourself?—It is possible it was me. I put a bet down like that; I believe I had got a man running about for me that week between Aldersgate Street and the Gaiety. I tried to find him last night.

32217. George I see here; is he the same George who is mentioned on this card?—No.

32218. You have nothing more to say?—Not at present, but I will very likely refer back to it next time.

32219. That is all that it is necessary for me to ask now by way of re-examination, so to speak. Is there anything else you would like to say? You have been cross-examined at great length, and you know pretty well what they are going to say against your accusations?—I do not quite understand you, sir.

32220. You know pretty well what Mr. Muir is suggesting, and what kind of evidence they are going to bring in answer to your charges. Is there anything else you would like to say. They are going to deny it as far as I understand it?—I wish to bring as few persons into this as I possibly can, because people who are in employment have such a dread of their employers finding out their betting propensities, and likewise there are people in the neighbourhood who do not wish to come before the Commission, so I would like to listen to the police evidence, and I would like to ask a few questions myself, and then I shall know what witnesses it will be necessary for me to bring forward.

32221. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Let me follow what you wish to say about this. I am not asking you to give us Frank's other name, because you may have a reason for not giving it, but there is the name of Frank here, and there is the name of Alf. We put these questions to you yesterday, and I want you to just consider, because you see what we have to determine is on which side the truth lies or which side which is being put before us is correct. Where there is a conflict of fact we have to say which we are to believe. I want you to look at those entries again and just consider them again with the assistance of the questions that were put to you yesterday, and after thinking it over. You see a number of entries day after day with Alf and Frank, and no other name mentioned. Alf you admit is yourself?—Yes.

32222. Is not Frank the same Frank whose name appears a very few days before that?—No, sir. If I see the man who used this book, it is a man I was inquiring for last night, I could give a full explanation of Frank and Alf.

32223. Alf you have given us the explanation of—it is yourself?—Yes.

32224. Alf you have told us stood for yourself?—I think you will find it is myself.

32225. I have no doubt I shall?—No doubt you will.

32226. Then what I am asking you about is this; I do not want you to give us any further names, but there is a Frank mentioned. Do you say it is not the same Frank as had been acting for you a few days before?—No.

32227. Not the same?—No.

32228. Do you know who the Frank is who is mentioned here? You need not tell me his name?—No.

32229. No notion?—No.

32230. No idea who it is?—No. I should think I can give an explanation if I can find the man, or perhaps the police will find him for me.

32231. What is the use of your looking to find a man who you say you do not know?—I should give an explanation of why it is in the book.

32232. That is not what I am asking you. I am not asking you to give an explanation of why it is in the book. I want to give you an opportunity of telling us whether you now remember who Frank is. I am not concerned with who he is. Do not you know in your mind who the Frank is who is mentioned in that book on those days?—To give an explanation of it, now, sir, I really believe they were meant for nonentities at this particular time. They were really meant for nonentities bar to Friday, the 6th.

32233. I do not quite understand why you should put down in a book for yourself the names of nonentities?—If I am correct in why this was used in this particular way, it was the man that I was asked to give some work to, and he said he could take some money, and I think I had this book on me in my pocket, and I really believe I gave him the book, and I must have initialled this out a day on the Tuesday or on the Wednesday afterwards, or on the Thursday afterwards, so that it should appear when he was paying out some money that he had a list of people to pay. I really think those are the circumstances of how these entries are in the book. So if anybody should look over his shoulder they could see he had some names and some money in the book. I really think that will be the proper explanation of it.

32234. You mean to say that anybody who was looking over him should see he was making bets?—Should see he had somebody in the book he had to pay out to.

32235. Whose handwriting is it?—It is mine.

32236. Is it written from day to day or written all at one time?—No, the first day was Monday, and perhaps he took nothing, and on the Tuesday perhaps he took nothing, and on the Wednesday he took a bob or two.

32237. There is an entry here: "Takings, 3s."?—Then I should fill those in so that anybody looking over his shoulder could see the figures so as to know they were betting with a man who was doing some business.

32238. Would it be written at one time? Would, for example, all that sheet be written up at one time?—It is quite possible the man only starting on a pitch on Monday would take nothing; he could only be taking a few shillings, and I think that he virtually had that himself. I think his expenses were 3s. or 4s. a day, and then he had 2s. 6d. for himself, and the takings were gone really.

32239. The partnership was at an end at this time?—Yes.

32240. You had nobody to account to but yourself?—That is all.

32241. I think I follow your explanation now. The person who was to stand at the pitch, I suppose, was Frank, whoever Frank was?—Oh no, I really do not know his name.

32242. The man who was standing on the pitch?—No.

32243. Then Frank was a fictitious person, and Alf was a fictitious name for a person who made a bet?—Yes.

32244. George?—He might have taken a punter or two that day. I am not certain, because that week I was muddled, I admit.

32245. While I am dealing with this book, first of all would you tell me how you know a horse's name entered in a book of this kind. Supposing there was a bet made on a horse by the man who was betting for you, would he enter the name of the horse and the money?—If he did he would tear the slip off. If he did, I should cut them out; he would tear the piece out and put it amongst his other slips.

32246. If he did tear it out and put it amongst his other slips, it would appear just as if it was some person with whom he had made a bet, would it?—I do not quite follow. If the slip was amongst the other slips. If I did not have any other paper in my pocket I should very likely turn up that book and write it down or tear him a sheet out and let him put it down. As a rule, we street bookmakers don't enter any bets, because it gives cause for disputes to arise as it is in your own handwriting.

32247. As I understand, the way you do your business is you do not make any entry. I suppose first of all it might be awkward, because you would be found with a book in your possession which might say more than you wanted to. You do not keep a book for that?—You keep a book for paying out, and very likely you would keep a parcel of slips.

32248. Would the man keep in the books which he would have with him on the pitch the names of persons who had made bets with him?—Only those that he had to pay money to.

32249. The bet would be made by the handing of the slip?—Yes.

32250. He does not make any entry in his book when he gets the slips?—No.

32251. He stands there and goes on taking slips as long as they are handed to him?—Yes.

32252. Then when he comes to the end of the day he has to see what he has to pay out. He knows how much he has in his pocket with the money and the slips, and he has to account for what he has to pay?—Yes.

32253. Then for that purpose he does not make out what we have seen in one of the books—A.P. 1, for example?—On that occasion they would be bets that he laid on a future handicap.

32254. Take for example this page, where there are a number of amounts. Those cannot represent bets that he has made on a future handicap, because there are no odds?—Those are the names of people who have to receive money from bets already made.

32255. That is to say, some persons who have handed him slips?—Yes.

32256. That is an account which he would make out whoever it is who is doing the work, and of the persons who had to receive the money as the result of the day?—Yes.

32257. Then he does that at the end, and he knows what he has had to pay out, and that ought to tally with the balance he has in his pocket, less something for expenses?—Yes.

32258. Then besides that, sometimes I gather from what you say there are slips from persons who do not pay when they hand in the slips?—Yes.

32259. What you call betting on the nod?—Yes.

32260. Therefore his slips would total up to more than the balance would total up to, more than the full amount of takings less the amount he had had to pay?—It would be according to how you work that day. Some days perhaps you would have more slips with non-payments, and those you would tally away together, you put them back on one side and keep them separate, and do not tally them up at all.

32261. He would deal only with his ready-money betting by taking what he has received, and then showing in a book what he has had to pay?—Yes.

A. F. Platt.
1 Feb. 1907.

32262. Have you any kind of check over the men who are betting for you except this system that we have just had explained?—In what respect do you mean a check?

32263. Have you any means of knowing whether he is handing you over all the money he has received?—Invariably you are in his company.

32264. And keep a watch on him?—Yes.

32265. That means, I suppose, that you do not know what amount of money he is taking, but you know money is going into his pocket, and as long as the money is in his pocket you do not leave him until he has accounted to you?—No; you might leave him for a short space of time as the races are run. For instance, supposing I took the half-past 1 papers, I would not come back until 2 or a few minutes to 2, and I might stop with him until half-past 2.

32266. He would be on his pitch all the time?—Yes.

32267. He would not go away from there?—No—only momentarily.

32268. To come back to the question I was putting to you before, how would the name of a horse get entered into this book of yours?—Only in the way of laying a future event bet.

32269. Then you must have the name of the person who is the backer?—Oh, yes, and the amount of the odds, and the amount that you lay it to.

32270. And the race?—Yes. You just enter the race and the rate of odds and the amount you lay it to.

32271. I will tell you why I am putting those questions to you. It was suggested to you yesterday that Leech, which is the name that appears there on June 7th, may be the name of a horse?—No, I do not think there is the name of a horse in that book.

32272. That is what I was going to ask you. I do not find anything that would suggest to me that it is. There is no other?—Oh, no. If this had been the name of a horse it would have been on the side that the other horses' names are written on.

32273. You have got the slip A. P. 6 before you. You have got the name; you find there the entry "Leech—spelt L-e-e-c-h—10s.," and just underneath it is "Police, 4s."?—That is so.

32274. Then ins and outs 6s., and in accounting for Leech 10s., as money, it just makes a total of £6 14s. 6d.?—Yes.

32275. If you look over on the other side you find there there is a paper signed Jack Stevens, with the names of five horses which were running either at Gatwick or at Haydock Park that day, the 19th May?—Yes.

32276. The 19th May was the date identified from Ruff's Guide as the date on which those horses were running at those two race meetings, and Leech was also running in a race at Haydock Park on the 19th May?—Yes.

32277. The suggestion to you is that that 10s. Leech appearing on that payment was a payment in respect of a horse called Leech?—No.

32278. That is the suggestion. I want you to tell us why is not that possible?—Why it is not possible is this. If that was a horse's name, that horse's name would be amongst the other horses and on the side that the bet is made.

32279. That is not quite sufficient, and I will show you why. What I am dealing with is Jack Stevens' bet. Clearly it is not one of those bets, but the suggestion is that in some way it must be a bet of a person who is dealing for you?—No.

32280. If it is Jack Stevens it would not appear under the name of Leech; it would appear like other bets, under the name of Stevens?—Decidedly.

32281. It was not suggested to you it was a bet of Jack Stevens?—No.

32282. What is suggested to you is that the name of a horse appearing, and that being a coincidence, it may be, as I follow the suggestion, that a person who was doing the business for you had had 10s. to pay out on that horse. Would it appear in that way if it had been the case?—No, it would appear in the punter's name, whose ever name it was, who had to receive the 10s. for Leech. It would be in that man's name.

32283. But supposing it was the man himself. I do not know with your experience of betting whether the man who is doing the business for you would ever do such a thing as to put money on a horse?—It is quite possible he might.

32284. Supposing he put 10s. on Leech, would he account for it in that way?—No.

32285. Would he account to you at all for it?—Verbally, because being so close handy to him he would say, "I am having 10s. So-and-so," or "£1 So-and-so," whatever it was.

32286. Is that with the idea of saving heavy losses or anything of that kind, or is it merely because it is a fancy?—He might have a fancy, but sometimes it pays us men to hedge.

32287. In whose handwriting is that?—This is in my handwriting.

32288. Then can you tell us was there any suggestion of the kind that he had put 10s. on this outsider Leech?—No, I do not suppose the man knew it was running any more than I did.

32289. You mean until Mr. Muir happened to point to it in "Ruff's Guide" that day?—I never knew there was such a horse in England.

32290. (Chairman.) Will you tell me whether there are any printed forms of slips handed round by any of your men?—Only in the case of future event betting; but of late that is almost abolished, because it does not pay a street bookmaker to lay the rates of odds on these future events.

32291. The slips that are referred to are written by the punter on any bit of paper he likes?—Decidedly.

32292. Of any size?—Yes.

32293. And he wraps the money in them?—Yes.

32294. Here is an instance of a slip which we have got?—Yes, that is a real slip.

32296. Then Jack Stevens is not a person to whom you pay out on the day, is he?—He might go two or three days. I have known him go as long as a week.

32297. (Chairman.) Is that slip torn out of your own notebook?—No.

32298. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) This seems to be another one of the same size, and this also is Jack Stevens'. Apparently that came from Jack Stevens. (Handing slip to witness)?—Yes.

32299. One point more with regard to this, to clear it up. This other entry there, except the words "police," and "ins and outs," represents a person?—Yes.

32300. It does right away—from the top right down to Leech, and including Leech?—Yes.

32301. (Chairman.) We had better have this slip marked. Look at that paper. There is another of Jack Stevens' slips. "Wave Curl"—that is the name of the horse, I suppose?—Yes.

32302. That is a note or slip of a bet made by Jack Stevens with you or the Fishers on that horse?—Yes.

32303. What are the others that are mentioned there?—"Wave Curl, 2s. 6d. to win. If cash, 2s. 6d. to win Eastbright"

32304. Signed Jack Stevens?—Yes.

32305. Is that in Jack Stevens' handwriting?—As far as I know.

32306. It is not in your handwriting?—No. (The slip was put in and marked "A. P. 16." Betting card marked "Jack Forbes" put in and marked "A. P. 17."

32307. (Chairman.) It did run apparently on the same day?—I could tell it by the papers from the mark.

32308. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) One of them ran and lost?—Yes.

32309. The 7th June I want to call your attention to. You will remember I asked you some questions about that entry of the 7th June, where Leech's name appears in the middle. The entries above and the entries immediately after are all payments out?—Yes.

32310. These are payments, I understand from you yesterday, which would have to be made to you?—Yes.

32311. That is what I understood you to say?—Yes.

32312. All these payments are payments which would have to be made to you?—Quite right.

32313. The only exception is "Leech, 10s."?—Yes.

32314. As I understand from you, you say, although Leech appears in that position in the middle of all those entries of payments to be made to you, it was, in fact, a payment made on your behalf, but not by you, to Leach, the police-constable?—That is right.

32315. That is your statement?—Yes.

32316. I asked you yesterday if you could explain to me how it was Leach appears, if that were the case, in the middle of all the entries on the side on which nothing but payments which have to be made to you appear?—Yes.

32317. I do not know whether you can tell me now anything more than you did yesterday?—No, I could not give you more information than I did yesterday; it was a sort of odd and even book I kept of people who were owing money which was not coming in.

32318. On the face of it, looking at it as it is there, it would appear as if it were something that Leach owed you?—Yes, it would in the way you put it; but the name has been called out—there must have been something at that time, but what it was I could not just think of, and I include his name as appears there.

32319. "Frank 14s. 6d." Does that mean that he has 14s. 6d. to account for?—Yes.

32320. That he would have to give you?—Yes. That is Bob, that is Bill, and that was the money that was accounted for.

32321. You have three names—"Bob," "Bill," and "Frank"—each of them accounting for the money which he had on balance to hand over to you. That is what that means?—Yes.

32322. This shows moneys still to come to you?—Yes. Perhaps this would have been put down some hours before that was put down. This might have been put down at 5 o'clock, and this would not be put down until our papers were all finished being made up and counted up, and then we should account for the money.

32323. I should have thought, if that were so, all the more reason why Leach's name should have appeared separately. The man comes to you, and the important thing which he has to do is to take the cash out of his pocket and put it on the table. That is the important thing?—Quite right.

32324. When he had done that you would count it up and see what it amounted to?—Yes.

32325. When you see what it amounted to you make an entry in the book?—Yes.

32326. The result of Bob's takings is that he owes you £16 12s. 6d., and he puts on the table £16 12s. 6d.?—Yes.

32327. That is the balance of the money he has in his pocket?—Yes.

32328. If he paid 10s. out to Leach he would have had 10s. less, would he not?—Not if he left £16 12s. 6d. on the table, as far as that is concerned. Perhaps I was counting the papers afterwards.

(Chairman.) What you suggested to me yesterday was that the total was the total amount of money received according to the slips—that it was the total of the money shown on the slips.

32329. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I rather understood differently, from what he has been telling us to-day as to the system. I am dealing now with what he has told us to-day as to the system, which I suppose is correct?—Yes.

32330. I understood from you, and we went through it carefully a little while ago, what he would do when he came in—that is, Bob, or Bill, or Frank, or whoever it is—the thing to do is to put the money on the table?—Yes.

32331. That is the first and important thing?—Yes.

32332. You will agree with me in that?—Yes.

32333. And he has to put it on the table—all he has got left in his pocket?—Yes. He might have some money in one of his pockets.

32334. Not that you knew of?—No; he might pull it out later on. He might put it in promiscuously. A. F. Platt. 1 Feb. 1907.

32335. But it ought all to go on the table?—Yes.

32336. And what is on the table is the balance of what he has in cash?—Yes.

32337. Then he would hand you the slips?—The slips would be put on the table at some time, and then it would be straightened out.

32338. You have the money and the slips, and you work out the slips to see what there is to pay?—Yes.

32339. This is only what you have taken, and the payments have to be made the same night, or the next morning, out of the money in the ordinary course which has been taken during the day, and you see what the result of the day's work is?—Yes.

32340. What I want you to devote your attention to for the moment is when he puts the money on the table. When he puts the money on the table, supposing it is £16 12s. 6d., and he has already given Leach 10s., the amount of money really that he received, according to the slips, would be £17 2s. 6d., but all he puts on the table is £16 12s. 6d.?—Yes.

32341. And that is the amount you have appearing there?—Yes.

32342. I do not understand, if that is so, why you should make the entry of "Leach 10s."?—I suppose there must have been some laxity that particular afternoon in the way of our papers. I could give no further explanation. I know it is there, and there must have been some reason for its being there.

32343. But we must be as precise as we can with regard to your recollection about this, because it involves a serious statement against Leach. As I understand, what you say with regard to it is that all you recollect about it now is, according to your view, knowing that money was paid to Leach, that that 10s. was a payment to Leach. Is that right?—Yes.

32344. I mean you have nothing but that to go upon?—No.

32345. You have no specific recollection of the occasion?—No.

32346. It is only because you know very well, according to your view, that Leach did receive moneys from Fisher, that when you find an entry of "Leech 10s." you think that must be a payment by Fisher to Leach, the police-constable?—Yes.

32347. And that is why you say that specific entry is the 10s. paid to Leach?—Yes.

32348. I want to call your attention to the book, so that you may see one or two other entries in it, as you have not had an opportunity of looking through it whilst you have been examined. You were examined as to this entry on the 12th June in which a number of names appear. You remember those names (I need not go through them again; Russell was one of them and Stevens was one of them) which represented moneys they had to pay to you, and which you crossed out when you received them?—Yes.

32349. Do those figures which appear in that column represent expenses of yours?—Yes.

32350. "Look-out 4s."?—Yes.

32351. "Scout 2s."?—Yes.

32352. I do not know what that is?—"Norman 1s."

32353. "Bob 2s. 6d."?—Yes.

32354. The entry on the left-hand side there begins—I do not know whether it is "Bill" or "Ball" 11s. Do you know what it is? Never mind that entry. Take the next, "S. & B." That is somebody who was betting with you?—Yes.

32355. Apparently 7s. 6d. he had to pay you, which is struck out when he paid?—Yes.

32356. That quite clearly on the left hand column is an amount "S. & B." owed you?—I would not be positive whether that 7s. 6d. was not commission.

32357. I will tell you why I am putting it to you. I do find on some of the pages that on the left-hand side you have entries made of expenses?—Yes.

32358. For instance, "Look out 2s."?—I think you will find that 7s. 6d. is commission that we paid to "S. & B."

32359. Here apparently come "S. & B." again the next day—"5s. 6d." Is that commission or a bet, do you think? He would not have commission every day, would he?—I should say that would be a bet then, and he paid from day to day. Perhaps that day we had some trouble with that man, and I should say he was betting then from day to day.

A. F. Platt. 1 Feb. 1907.

32360. Who is "Ball"? That name occurs again. Have you any recollection. I do not want to know who the individual is, but was he a person employed by you, or was it a bet?—A bet.

32361. A backer?—Yes.

32362. Is "A. J." a backer?—Yes.

32363. Bill, Bob, and Frank we know. On June 19th you begin here "S. & B. 14s." "Fleet." Is that Fleet Street?—No, a person we call Fleet Street.

32364. You call him Fleet Street?—Yes.

32365. Is that the same one as Fleet which we see sometimes?—Yes.

32366. Then "Ex."—that is expenses?—Yes.

32367. Then apparently from day to day you have a record of expenses?—Yes, I was starting keeping promiscuous expenses.

32368. On June 19th I find an entry of "Alf. 3s. 6d.," which you have to account for?—That would be 3s. 6d. I had to spend.

32369. No doubt "Alf." is not a nonentity. It is you?—Yes.

32370. On June 20th apparently on the left-hand side you have a regular list of expenses?—Yes.

32371. Again, "Alf. 1s. 6d."?—Yes.

32372. On June 21st, again, "List of expenses—Alf. 2s."?—Yes, that would be 2s. I should have to account for.

32373. On June 22nd, again, "List of expenses, Alf. 4s." That still you had to account for?—Yes.

32374. Then we go to July 2nd, where we have "Frank" and "Alf."?—Yes.

32375. This book is being kept from the period of May 25th, if I recollect aright, the date of the first entry, and it goes on to somewhere about the middle of July—not perhaps so late in the middle of July, but within the first ten days of July. The last date I think I have got is the 6th. It may be there is an entry later. I cannot find any entry in this book so far as I have looked through it of payments to "Copper" or payments to police, or payments to any policeman except the two you have identified of Leach and Laing 10s. each. If you were paying money out to these persons why should they not appear in the book?—The sum could not have been so much as that, and perhaps we worked it out on the slip of paper like I have worked out that list on a slip of paper; our expenses were then only weekly—they would be more often worked out on a slip of paper.

32376. This book was a record of the transactions going on at this time, because you were working for "self and partner." I think that was your expression, yesterday, was it not?—Yes.

32377. This was meant to show what the state of the accounts was between you and McCarthy the same day?—No, we really knew the time the slips were made up, and the balance of the money was struck. It was always in the company of the Fishers, what I term the making up time of slips and money settlement. We were always together, but I found that people were betting on the nod, and we were not getting the money, so that from that date I entered the names, and you will see I have put "expenses" in besides. Perhaps other moneys might have been given, and it might have been on a slip.

32378. But if you make an entry in the names of Leach and Laing when an amount of 10s. has been spent, why should you not make an entry in the same book when the amount has been spent for the "Police 10s."?—We have not taken that so much into consideration.

32379. Follow for a minute. In this account of expenses which you have got on a number of days you have such small items as 2s., and even 1s. for "Look-out," "Scout"?—Yes.

32380. According to one of the books which we have seen you had in the book an entry of a payment to the police. It is in A.P. 6. There is "Police 4s." and "Leach 10s."?—Yes, but that is not in my handwriting.

32381. I understand that. That is Fisher's, is it not?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) According to the slip it is in his handwriting.

32382. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) At first I thought it was, but he says it is not. I thought I asked you the question a moment ago, and you said it was?—The slip is in my handwriting.

32383. The back of the slip?—Yes, the back of the slip.

32384. That was the one I was putting to you. I thought a moment ago you told me it was. That is the one in which the entry appears of "Leech" as contrasted with "Leach," as was put to you yesterday by Mr. Muir. Then under that appears the item "Police 4s."?—Yes.

32385. That is in your handwriting?—Yes.

32386. That is about the same time. We know it cannot have been made before the 19th May of this year, because the horses were backed for that day. We do not know how long after it may have been made, but we know it cannot have been made before the 19th May?—Yes.

32387. You make the entry there "Police 4s."?—When that slip was made, being on a Saturday, Fisher would be having to account for more expense than on any other average day.

32388. You would be taking down from him the total of how he had spent the money?—That day.

32389. That is to see how much it amounts to?—Yes.

32390. It amounts to £16 14s. 6d. That is the amount he is accounting for there?—Yes.

32391. I do not quite follow, if that is the case, why you should not do the same on any one of these days, because here you are working out very small items—you have such items as 2s., and as I will show you some items even of 6d. Here are three, one after the other, of 6d. There is no entry of any kind there except those?—Yes.

32392. You see "A.P. 1" and "A. P. 2," for example, which is this book, relate not exactly to the same period but relate to the same year; I mean all these books are for 1906?—Yes.

32393. This one begins in February.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is Fisher's book.

32394. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That book had nothing to do with you?—No.

32395. It begins about the material time that we are dealing with—May—I suppose. In this book are the entries we have had referred to of "Copper" and "Coppers." There apparently appears "Coppers 4s."?—Yes.

32396. Then we know there is another one in which it appears "Copper 1s."?—Yes.

32397. The suggestion that was made to you in cross-examination was that those amounts when they appear "Coppers 4s.," should be "pence"?—No.

32398. I see on one day these two items appear together: "Coppers 4s., looker-out 4s."?—Yes.

32399. You say "Coppers" there represents payments made to the police?—Yes.

32400. Would there be any reason why they should put down the amount of coppers if it represented pence separately?—No.

32401. If that is the right suggestion, that it represented the pence that were taken, it would have to appear in every day's account?—Yes.

32402. But it does not?—No.

32403. According to your view it does not because it did not represent pence, but represented payments made to the police, and would only appear in the book when the payments were made?—Yes.

32404. I observe on another date as to which questions were asked you about this, there appears the item "Copper 1s.," and immediately above that "Lookers-out 4s., Tecs 10s. "Tecs," you have told us, means detectives?—Yes.

32405. And "Copper 1s." is a policeman?—Yes.

32406. Now I want to ask you about this book "A. P. 1" just one question, and that is as to the item

"L——g 10s." You have told us that is Laing?—Yes.

32407. The other entry in "A. P. 7" (that is in your book) is "Laing 10s."?—Yes.

32408. There is no dash, but his name is spelt. There is no mistake about it?—That is right.

32409. Why is it written here with a dash, and in your book written out?—That would be in case that book should be lost no one should know whose name that was.

32410. That is Fisher's handwriting?—Yes. Detective officers who bet do not wish their names to be entered in the book as their right name.

32411. Just see what you are saying. You say "detective officers who bet"—might that have been a bet with Laing?—No, it is under the head of expenses.

32412. But the other—might that have been a bet with him?—No, I do not think they betted at all.

32413. Why did you say just now that detective officers who bet do not want to have their names appear? It is not betting according to you. This is, according to your story, a bribe which was given to him?—Yes.

32414. I suppose you mean it was not done in the same way, because if anything happened to the book his name should not be known?—Yes.

32415. If that is the case, why should you have written out the name in your own book if that represented a policeman? What is puzzling me is if that is the way you make an entry of a payment to a policeman so that his name should not appear, why should you in your own book in respect of the two payments which were made enter the names without any attempt at hiding them?—As to that name he would be more precise than I was.

32416. More careful?—Yes.

32417. Mr. Muir has called your attention to the fact, and it is only right that you should just consider this, that about this time there was a punter punting with you under the name of Laing?—I do not know. I think he pointed it out.

32418. You see there was no entry. You will remember there was one entry put to you which he suggested might be Laing, and you said it was "S-d-n-y," which represented the son of the landlord of the "Sutton Arms" public-house. Then he put an entry to you which was clearly "Laing," which you admitted was "Laing," and which did represent according to the way it appeared in the book, according to you, the name of a backer?—Yes, that is right.

32419. Why may not that 10s. also be a payment made to a backer?—It could not be; if it was it would be in the ordinary column.

32420. The difficulty about that would be that all that would appear in the ordinary columns of this book from what you told me of the system of keeping the books would be the money that was payable to Laing. The money payable by Laing for a bet would not appear?—No.

32421. What I am asking you about is money which would be payable by Laing. I have not the entry before me.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is in the book you have in your hand. It is the last slip of paper.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The one you are dealing with, and which you are probably referring to, is an entry, if I recollect aright, of 3s. 6d. paid to Laing.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is money paid by Laing. I think you will find it is the last slip. That is the amount paid by the punters.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) No, not according to this witness. That is exactly the question I asked at first.

32422. As I understand your evidence, this represents money paid to the punter?—That is true.

32423. It is money paid to the backer?—Yes.

32424. Not by the backer?—No, to the backer.

32425. This contains a record of what has to be paid when your man has brought back the money, has put the slips on the table, has looked through the result of the racing, sees then, as the result of that, what has to be paid, and then he makes these entries of what has to be paid, and when they are paid he crosses them out?—That is so.

32426. That being so, this entry of "Laing" represents a payment to Laing of 3s. 6d.; and if Laing had made bets or a bet which amounted to 10s. as a backer, there would be nothing in this book to show that?—No. A. F. Platt. 1 Feb. 1907

32427. But if a bet had been made with Laing under which Laing owed 10s. to you, that would have to appear in the column in which it does—in fact appear in your book?—I do not quite follow you. In that book, yes.

32428. That is the point I am putting to you. Was Laing a person with whom you ever had a bet on the nod, as you call it?—No.

32429. I understand you to mean when he does not pay cash. That is what it means?—What I have got there, yes.

32430. I see it appears here first of all as a list of expenses, and it is under date of June 22nd, but then "Spent 5s. 6d.; ex. 9s. 6d."?—Yes.

32431. "Ex." that is expenses, 9s. 6d.?—Yes.

32432. "Hoffman 1s." What does "Hoffman, 1s." mean?—That would be 1s. perhaps he had borrowed. That would be a 1s. owing bet.

32433. Stevens would be 2s. owing, and Symes would be 1s.?—I think that would be about it.

32434. There are two items which are quite plain—"Spent 5s. 6d.; ex. 9s. 6d."?—Yes.

32435. Then follow three items, giving the names, "Hoffman 1s., Stevens 2s., Symes 1s." Each of those three items in the same column represents money owing by that individual named to the extent named against his name. Is that right? Just look at it for yourself. You have told us before when we have asked you questions about these very same names—"Hoffman 1s. 6d., Vyse 6s. 6d."—that that was money owing to you for bets?—Yes, that is right.

32436. Here we find three or four days after "Hoffman 1s., Stevens"—I suppose that is Jack Stevens—"2s., Symes 1s." Those represent bets owing to you by men who have made bets on what you call the "nod"?—Yes.

32437. But if they had made a bet on the "nod" of 1s. with you, that is exactly where their names would appear?—No, it would be here.

32438. It would be after "expenses" instead of before?—There are expenses here.

32439. But it would be in the same column?—Yes.

32440. Only it would be for expenses you mean instead of appearing as it does on the top after the word "ex."?—Yes.

32441. Does not that look as if you had started expenses, and then had stopped at that? You see it is written twice. You see "ex." here, and then I think three entries lower down there is "ex." again?—Yes.

32442. Then appears the name of Laing?—Yes.

32443. Now that I have called your attention to it let me ask you again as to the way in which it appears in the book. Have you any specific recollection of that item, or is your recollection merely that you know moneys were paid to Laing (a policeman), and therefore when you find that entry of "Laing 10s." you come to the conclusion that that means 10s. paid to a policeman?—Yes.

32444. That is what you mean?—That is what I mean.

32445. You do not remember the actual occasion, but you do know that Laing was paid 10s., being bribed?—Yes.

32446. Therefore when you come to "Laing 10s." you come to the conclusion that that must have been 10s. paid to Laing as a bribe?—Yes.

32447. Just a few questions with regard to what took place as to the Chapman incident. As I understand what you have told us you had made a definite complaint against Deed, Soer, Gunn, and Powell before the Chapman case was heard. Is that right?—Yes.

32448. I understood you to say so?—Yes.

32449. You are challenged upon it, but I understood in answer to Mr. Muir that you had this definite statement that you had mentioned these policemen before Chapman's case was heard?—Yes.

32450. The 20th October, I think, was the Tuesday. The 20th was the day on which you had the various interviews of which you have told us?—Yes.

A. F. Platt.
1 Feb. 1907.

32451. You remember in particular the one at which you say Superintendent Noviss turned to Inspector Spencer and said: "I knew this sort of thing was going on"?—Quite right.

32452. That is the 11 o'clock interview?—No, that was the 9 o'clock interview. The 11 o'clock interview was when I saw Deed at Kennington Road.

32453. At Kennington Road, and not at Kennington Lane?—Not at Kennington Lane.

32454. The point I want to get a definite answer from you upon is this. What were the actual words, so far as you recollect, that you used on that occasion on the morning of the Tuesday? What did you say?—I can give you the words as near as possible: "To think they should do this to me after the moneys I have been giving them."

32455. Then you did not mention who "they" were at that interview?—I would not be positive.

32456. If you did not mention it at that interview, had you mentioned it at any interview before?—I would not be positive. I know I was in an excited state of mind then.

32457. You see you have told us about the one interview at which the Inspector took down the charge book?—Yes.

32458. And wrote something on a slip of paper?—Yes.

32459. Which you say was the names, or rather, that you had referred to the names, and he looked at the Charge book to see whether it was right, and wrote something on a slip of paper?—That is right.

32460. As far as you can remember, when was that?—At 11 o'clock at the interview on the Tuesday.

32461. At Kennington Road, that would be?—Yes. I must have mentioned it.

32462. On that day?—Yes.

32463. I just want to call your attention to this. It is suggested that this complaint of yours against Soer, Powell, and Gunn never was made by you until after the Chapman conviction?—That is wrong.

32464. I want to call your attention to this; we have the documents before us now, which probably you have not seen. There is your statement of the 20th October which was referred to yesterday by Mr. Muir which you made at the police station?—Yes.

32465. And that relates particularly to Deed, and to the bet of £2?—Yes.

32466. But, nevertheless, you have told us, and I understand you are positive as to its having happened, that you did on that same day when you made that statement which is in writing formulating the complaint against Deed, also make a complaint against the other three for having taken bribes?—Yes.

32467. It is on that statement that you were challenged. Did you ever go to Kennington Lane Police Station and see Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer together, except on that day, the 20th, the Tuesday?—No.

32468. I do not think any other occasion has been suggested to you, so that we may take it as quite clear that the only time when you saw Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer together at Kennington Lane Station was on that Tuesday, the 20th October?—After he had made some observation the previous evening, and I believe Superintendent Noviss rang for him.

32469. On the 19th November you wrote a letter to the Commissioner which I will just call your attention to: "Respecting the statement I made of P.C. 180 L" (that was Deed) "who has been dismissed from the force through the facts of my statement, I beg to state the complaint I made against the other three P.C.'s—namely, 204 L, 203 L, and 209 L, which was in the presence of Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer at Kennington Lane, the above officers were in the habit of receiving of me a weekly wage, and, moreover, they never fairly arrested me in my occupation as a street bookmaker; that was always prearranged as to what time they should come and take me into custody, which in the Charge book will prove I was only charged between the hours of 2.30 p.m. to 3 o'clock p.m. It, moreover, has come to my knowledge the other three officers as above mentioned has not been punished or reprimanded, so I am sure you will give the matter your kind investigation and act as you may think proper in the matter as regards the truth of my statements." That letter was written by you on the 19th November of the same year, 1903, and you put into writing there a statement to the Commissioner that you had made this complaint in the presence of Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer at Kennington Lane, and that you had made it on the only occasion at which you had seen Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer, which was on Tuesday, the 20th October?—I am under the impression I wrote a letter previous to that.

32470. Yes, but I have a reason for calling your particular attention to that letter, if you will follow me for a moment. The reason why I am calling your attention to it is that you do state there what the complaint was that you had made on the 20th October, that being the only occasion on which you had seen Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer at Kennington Lane Station. Now I want to see what the police say in answer to it. On the 23rd November there is a report. You have never seen this. This, I suppose, is a report?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Just follow this. It is a report of Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer on the 23rd November.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) May I call your attention to this? That is signed by Superintendent Noviss merely because he was the superior officer.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Very likely. It is the report of Inspector Spencer, is it?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is signed by Inspector Spencer and Superintendent Noviss?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is dated the 23rd November, and, as I follow, it is the report of the Inspector dealing with the letter which Mr. Platt had written to the Commissioner dated the 19th November, 1903.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes. What I wanted to call your attention to was that the Superintendent's report is on the next page.

32471. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is quite right. This is the statement in it. Dealing with that letter in which you have made the assertion which I have just read they say: "The assertion that he had paid a weekly wage to various police officers was made as stated"; so that apparently, as I read this report, it is not disputed that you had made this complaint to Inspector Spencer and Superintendent Noviss at Kennington Lane Police Station on the only occasion when you had the interview with them. That was the only occasion?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There is a question about whether he mentioned the number.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I must say that was not my impression of the suggestion.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am not saying a word about it except to call your attention to the next report.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes, I will deal with that in a moment. In the next report there is a reference to not having mentioned specific numbers. I am dealing with the statement:—"The assertion that he had paid a weekly wage to various police officers was made as stated." What he had stated was: "I beg to state the complaint I made against the other three P.C.'s, namely, 204 L, 203 L, and 209 L, which was in the presence of Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer at Kennington Lane, the above officers was in the habit of receiving of me a weekly wage."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Would you mind reading the next two lines?

32472. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Certainly, I want to read them to him. "And he further stated he kept a diary in which the particulars were entered." I want to ask you about that. "He was invited to produce the diary so that the necessary particulars as to numbers, names, etc., might be copied for investigation, but he declined." Did you say you kept a diary in which the particulars were entered?—I may have had a book in my pocket of this sort or description, and I might have said "I mean a book like that."

32473. Just follow the question. Did you say that you had kept a diary in which the particulars were entered?—No, I could not say that, because I never kept a diary.

32474. Were you invited to produce the book?—No.

32475. The statement is that you were "invited to produce the diary so that the necessary particulars as to numbers, names, etc., might be copied for investigation"?—No.

32476. "But he declined"?—No.

32477. You say that is not correct?—No.

32478. "When he made his complaint at Kennington Road Station" (that is the 11 o'clock interview) "which I" (that is evidently Inspector Spencer) "took down I again invited him to tell all he knew, but he declined to give particulars, but made sweeping allegations against police generally." Inspector Spencer says in his report that he again invited you to tell all you knew. Is that true?—I told him to look at the Charge book for the dates when I was charged and he would find the numbers of the officers.

32479. In the charge book?—Yes; he got a little memorandum paper, and he put them down or he figured something.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The numbers of the constables, I suppose, would appear on the charge book, would they not?—I see you have got the full convictions now. We have a copy of the charge sheet.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is endorsed "Charge sheet," but it should be "Charge book."

32480. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Apparently, according to your statement, if he had looked at the charge book for this purpose he would have found those four officers' names, and only those four?—That is right.

32481. Each one of them either arrested you or was a witness against you?—That is right.

32482. In each case the names of the witnesses and of the policeman making the charge appears—that appears before us in the charge sheet—and they are Powell, Soer, Gunn, and Deed. "He" (that is you) "also stated that when charged on 13th October he handed 10s. to two P.C.'s in the charge room." That is what Inspector Spencer says you said. Is that true? Did you tell him that?—It was not the two; when it was recalled to my recollection I recollected I passed one.

32483. (Chairman.) Deed and Soer were the two who arrested you on the 13th October?—Yes, and that was the first time that they had arrested me, and knowing I believe there was a little ill-feeling between them I never let one of them see me give the other money.

32484. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What I mean is, did you tell Inspector Spencer that you had on the 13th October handed 10s. to two police-constables? Did you tell him that fact?—No.

32485. Had you never told him that?—I told him I gave money in the charge room.

32486. You told him you gave money in the charge room. The only point of difference seems to be he says to two constables. If you gave money in the charge room it would not convey anything?—I said I gave one the money.

32487. Did you tell him you had given money to the police constables in the charge room?—Yes.

32488. Did you say not to the two?—No. I would not give it to the two in the charge room.

32489. Did you tell him you had given money to two police officers when you were charged on the 13th October?—That is possible.

32490. I understand you did?—Yes.

32491. Your objection to it is you say you did not tell him that you had handed 10s. to two police-constables in the charge room?—Yes, that is right.

32492. It is the charge room part of it you object to?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I think it was the report of Superintendent Noviss that you asked me to refer to?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. The incident about the book we say occurred in connection with that statement.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Then I will deal with it. I think it is right it should be put to the witness.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think it was put by Mr. Muir.

32493. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The substance of it has been put, but we have the advantage of having the reports which he has not, and which, if he had had counsel, he would have had; therefore I want to give him the benefit of it. On the 23rd November, on the same date Superintendent Noviss reported: "I beg to state that when Platt made his complaint against P.C. 180 L, Deed, who was dismissed, vide P.O. 23rd October last, he made a sweeping allegation against police generally, stating that it cost him £3 10s. per week to pay them all. I invited him to mention any case, which he refused to do." First of all, did Superintendent Noviss invite you to mention any case?—I do not think I gave him time to ask me to mention anything, I think I blurted it out.

32494. You mean what you told us just now?—Yes.

32495. That is all relating to the morning, is it?—Yes.

32496. Had you told him it cost you £3 10s. a week to pay all the police? Do you mean you had blurted that out?—I would not be positive.

32497. Did you say this: "I have notes in my pocket-book"?—I do not think I said that.

32498. But from what I understand from you it was your view that you had notes in your pocket-book?—In the book I had on me at the time.

32499. Did you say to him, "I have notes in my pocket-book," and did he ask you to let him see them?—No, I do not think so.

32500. (Chairman.) I thought you told Mr. Rufus Isaacs that you may have said something about a book. When he put to you a question about the diary you said "I may have referred to a pocket-book"?—I should mean to that effect.

32501. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is what I thought you had said. You very likely did say to him that you had notes in your pocket-book. Then did he ask you to let him see them?—Not to my knowledge.

32502. It is a very likely thing to have happened, is it not? If you said you had notes in your pocket-book the Superintendent would very likely have asked you to let him see them, would he not?—Yes.

32503. Did you say you had no further complaint to make?—No.

32504. According to this report it is said you stated you had no further complaint to make?—No.

32505. As I follow from your evidence you went on from this date, the 19th November, sending in letters pretty frequently to the Commissioner and to the station?—Quite right.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The rest of the letter does not deal with that.

32506. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I only want to ask you one question more, and I want to understand this quite clearly. One of your grievances against Soar is apparently that you thought he caught you by tricks, and by unfair tricks. That is what you mean?—No.

32507. Is not that one of your grievances against him?—No.

32508. I understood that it was?—No.

32509. Let me put it to you in another way. Was one of your grievances against Soer that he caught other bookmakers by tricks?—That is one of them. There are other grievances as well.

32510. I do not think you quite follow the question. I am not suggesting to you that that is your only complaint, or your main complaint against him, but I say one of the grievances that you had against Soer from what I understood you said to Mr. Muir was that Soer, according to you, resorted to unfair means to procure a conviction?—That is right.

32511. I mean your view was that he did not behave straight and above board in catching you?—That is right.

32512. He did not let you see him first?—It was not that.

32513. Or, at any rate, that he resorted to means by which a conviction was secured without your having known that he was watching you?—Yes. But that was not the main point. When I said his tricks I was then specially referring to what they had done in the summons that was issued against Chapman.

32514. I do not want to take up time by going into the particulars of what they did with Chapman, but I thought the substance of your complaint was that this conviction had been obtained by means which you did not think were right?—No.

A. F. Platt.

1 Feb. 1907.

32515. That is right, is it not?—Yes.

32516. And that Soer was responsible for it?—He was one of the parties to it.

32517. Caught him unfairly?—Yes.

32518. Have you the same grievance against Powell and Gunn?—No, not that particular grievance.

32519. You think you ought to be allowed to have a fair run for your money. Is that it?—Yes.

32520. (Mr. Dickinson.) I want to go back to these books again. This book which we have called A.P. 1 is written in whose writing?—William Fisher.

32521. That is the man you call "Bill"?—Yes.

32522. These purport to be a series of bets which Fisher has got to pay out to the backers?—Yes.

32523. Do you know what this cross against all these names means?—They are paid out.

32524. He puts a cross against them when he pays them?—Yes.

32525. What does it mean when he strikes out the figure?—The same thing.

32526. How did you come into possession of this book?—I am his employer and he has to hand the book over to me of a night or the first thing the next morning, and then I go through it and total up the balance—what he has to pay the following day and what has been left from the previous evening.

32527. Now take this day. On this day you have totalled up the bets which have to be paid, to £25 4s. 5d. You put under that £13 14s., the difference £11 10s. you put down, as I understand, lost?—Yes.

32528. That means he has paid £25 4s. 5d. and he has only received on the slips £13 14s.?—That is right.

32529. The next page the first word you have got there is "owing"?—Yes.

32530. Under the word "owing" you have got "Stevens, 2s.," which means Stevens owes 2s.?—Yes.

32531. Hoffman owes 2s.?—Yes.

32532. Symes owes 1s.?—That is quite right.

32533. Then you have the word "Expenses" written in between the two next lines?—That is quite true.

32534. What is that word next to "Expenses"—2s. 6d.?—Queries.

32535. What does that mean?—If we have a man down for 8s., and he asks us for 8s. 2d., we pay that 2d., and perhaps in the total up of the day's papers it might amount to 2s. or 9s. 6d. It is quite possible for a bookmaker who has so many papers to make up to make a mistake, and it is more likely than that the punter who has only his one paper to make up should make a mistake, so when we pay more than we have got down in the book to the punter's name we put that down under the heading of "Queries."

32536. That means sundry losses?—Yes.

32537. Then the next item of that is an item we have had to consider "L——g, 10s." That you say is a payment which was made to a police officer?—Yes.

32538. Then comes an item, "Spent 5s. 6d.," making a total of £1 9s., and 6s. added to that, making a total of £1 15s. I suppose you can say what that 6s. is for?—No.

32539. And under that we have the figure of £18, and under that £6 5s., which added together make £24 5s. What would that £24 5s. be?—I cannot tell you. Some money transaction of some sort.

32540. There is no date in this book?—No, I do not think there are dates in any of the books.

32541. (Chairman.) Which books do you mean? There are dates in some of them?—I mean in the paying-out books.

32542. (Mr. Dickinson.) This is a book I understand which William Fisher keeps for you and presents to you at the end of the day, is it?—Yes.

32543. Have you any means of knowing what the date of this item is?—I cannot say.

32544. Let me help you, because I am anxious to get at this. On the opposite side you see certain bets—"Golden Gleam, Troutbeck, King Charles" 1s. on each. Then come 2s. 6d., Cynosure and Troutbeck, a bet with Symes, and then Crowder on Golden Gleam. Does that enable you to say what the date of that page was at all?—Will you give me the Ruff's Guide? (Ruff's Guide handed to witness.)

32545. Do you know at all what time those horses were running?—(After referring.) It was at Ascot.

32546. Were those horses running on that day?—Yes—Golden Gleam, Troutbeck, King Charles, and Cynosure.

32547. (Chairman.) What is the date?—The 22nd June.

32548. What day of the week?—Friday.

32549. (Mr. Dickinson.) Are you able to say from that, that that was the date of that entry?—Yes.

32550. What did you use this black book for?—That is what I term an "odd and even" book for my own purposes. That was a sort of a check more on the Fishers, because I had had so many difficulties with them in paying out moneys that they owed and people were betting on the nod, as I term it, and I had so many difficulties of that kind that I kept a little book like that for my own convenience.

32551-2. Was it a record for your own purposes of what they had accounted to you for in their book?—Yes, at most times—in instances; I will put it in that way.

32553. On the 22nd June those items ought to appear in this black book?—Yes.

32555. Those items total up to £1 9s., which is the £1 9s. in A.P. 1?—Yes, the other 6s. would be something that Fisher would have to account to me for, and perhaps somebody has come for 6s. which we had not got in the book.

32556. I do not know whether you will be able to explain this, but with reference to these two figures, £18 and £6 5s., £24 5s., in your book we have "Bob, £16 4s. 6d. and £8 10s.," making £24 14s. 6d. Have those figures got anything to do with each other? What does that represent in that book?—I could not say offhand.

32557. You have told us what these figures are?—They represent the takings. "Bill" took £8 10s., "Bob" took £6 14s. 6d. That was the sum total. You can see from that book the date that Frank discontinued in my employment. Frank was in my employment from the dates in this book.

32558. Never mind that for a moment. These two men, Bob and Bill, took £24 14s. 6d. between them?—That is right.

32559. Does that figure there represent their takings—£24 5s.?—I expect that is what it is.

32560. We can check that, but I think probably that is so. What is the £1 13s.?—"Yham." You find his name occurs very often in the book. What the £1 13s. is for I don't know.

32561. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that owing to you or by you?—I would not positively say.

32562. This is a book kept, you say, by Bill?—That would be in Bill's writing kept by Bob.

32563. Has Bob got another book, because why do you keep the receipts separate from Bob and Bill?—To know the expenses of each pitch. Those are the expenses on Bill's pitch, and those are the expenses on Bob's pitch.

32564. These other expenses do not appear in this book at all?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I say a word about the £1 13s.? The £1 13s. is the result of adding up the figures on the other side, including "Alf, 4s."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It does not follow that that is the same.

32565. (Mr. Dickinson.) What does this entry mean, "Yham, £1 13s."? Who is "Yham"?—A punter.

32566. Does that mean you paid him £1 13s.?—I could not say what that item is or what heading it comes under.

32567. You have got at the top of this page "Owing." That undoubtedly means, does it not, that 2s. was owing to Stevens, one to Hoffman, and one to Symes?—I should think they were owing it to us. Stevens was owing to us 2s., and Hoffman 1s., and Symes 1s.

32568. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Bets made on the nod and not paid?—Yes.

32569. (Mr. Dickinson.) All these payments before are payments which have been paid to a backer?—That is right.

32570. That is to say, you owed them to a backer and you paid him?—Yes.

32571. Are the other ones money that is owing to backers who have not been paid?—No, they are owing by the backers to the bookmaker.

32572. (Chairman.) I understand you have got the date of those as the 22nd June?—Yes.

32573. (Mr. Dickinson.) Now I want to know whether you can equally well fix the 7th June. This book A. P. 1, if I understand right, is a record of every day's proceedings?—The day to day proceedings.

32574. Is this A. P. 1 the only book that you had in use at that moment?—Yes.

32575. Therefore it would be a record so far as it goes backwards through the month of June?—I do not know about the month. I would not say how many days it would last.

32576. Will you look at this item on one of these pages? I find at the end "Yham, 13s. 10d." That would be a backer?—Yes.

32577. "Nelham, 2s.," and "C. C., £1." What is "C. C."—He would be a punter.

32578. Then a "T" or "S" with a dash, 15s., what would that be?—It is a "T."

32579. Do you know what that refers to?—I am not positive. I think he had a night out that night, and saw one of the officers. I should think it was money owing and scratched off.

32580. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Why should it be written "T" with a dash?—It is money to a punter.

32581. (Chairman.) What is money to a punter?—"T" with a dash, "15s."

32582. (Mr. Dickinson.) With reference to that entry "L——g" in that book of the 22nd June, which you say is Laing, if it is entered in that way in that book, why did you write the full name L-a-i-n-g in this book?—It came to my mind, I suppose, and that is the way I thought to spell the name.

32583. (Chairman.) I did not understand that it was you who wrote L——g?—No, I never wrote L——g.

32584. (Mr. Dickinson.) No, but I understand you made out this book from that book, and there is the entry L——g?—That is just the way I have done it.

32585. You wrote the name in full?—Yes, knowing what the "L" with a dash and a "g" meant.

32586. But do you know of any other occasion on which Laing was paid at that time?—No, I cannot fix any times.

32587. I want to know why you should enlarge that L——g into Laing when, so far as that book goes, that is the only occasion on which it appears that Laing received anything?—I cannot say.

32588. Do you assert that Laing was receiving money at that time?—Oh, yes.

32589. On other occasions than those?—Yes.

32590. How is it that it does not appear anywhere else than in that book?—I could not say. Is it in any of the other books?

32591. But that book extends over a period of at least a fortnight. Have you ever seen it in any other book and copied it into your accounts as you did on this occasion?—I cannot say.

32592. You cannot say you have?—No.

32593. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is one question I want to ask. Apparently "T" with a dash and "15s." that you told us of just now represents a payment to a punter?—Yes, a punter has to receive from me or my agent.

32594. Then you do write sometimes the initials with a dash when it means a punter?—It seems to have been done so on that occasion.

32595. (Chairman.) That book is not in your handwriting, is it?—No.

32596. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Fisher wrote it. It is not you personally?—No.

32597. I find another one here of the same kind, in A.P. 2. There is an entry "T" and nothing else. I do not know whether it is "T" or "S"?—That would be "S." That is my writing, and that would be their list of expenses out that night.

32598. Is this your writing?—That is my writing up there.

32599. It is your writing on the top of the page—that is to say, until half way down the page where the total is in A.P. 2 up to the total in faint pencil?—Yes.

32600. Then from the entry "Lookers" to the end?—That is in William Fisher's writing again.

32601. "Lookers 4s., Stevens 7s." Lookers are expenses, I suppose?—Yes.

32602. "Stevens 7s." Is that money owing by Stevens to you, or by you to Stevens?—Stevens to us.

32603. The same as the others?—Yes.

32604. Then there is another name 12s., and then appears that letter—I do not know what it is, and it does not matter much what it is. It is "S" or "T"?—Yes.

32605. You think it it "S"?—Yes.

32606. But it is one letter only, and then follows the amount?—Yes.

32607. According to you, is that money owing to you by a punter?—Yes.

32608. Then that is another instance of Fisher making an entry in a book simply with the initial, and not filling up the name of the backer who owes the money to you?—Yes.

32609. It does appear that it was sometimes done by Fisher?—Yes.

32610. That is a book he was keeping while in your employ?—That is one book where there is a great part of it before he was in my employment.

32611. I notice a good many initials only—"H. V." or "N. V."?—A punter might put "N. V." on his paper, but they are all in the list of punters.

32612. Persons to whom money is paid?—Yes.

32613. Can you suggest any reason why he should simply put the initials of a man who was owing money to you, whereas in all the other instances he is putting the name?—Simply because a man only used an initial in that instance.

32614. You would not take bets from a man simply with an initial?—Yes.

32615. On the nod?—Yes. All the better reason we should know him.

32616. If you knew him he would only be in the same position as Stevens and Hoffman and Symes?—Fisher would know that particular punter better than I did, and would give a better reason than I could why he initialled it like that.

32617. In the entry that we have got in A.P. 2 and one of the other books, "Coppers 4s. and Police 4s.," and so on, have you anything but Fisher's word that that money was paid to the police?—No.

32618. You do not know except from what Fisher tells you whether he has paid it?—Oh, yes.

32619. Do you mean you do know?—Yes.

32620. That is what I want to understand. Why do you know it?—I have seen it.

32621. You mean that when you find an entry, for example, in Fisher's book, "Coppers 4s.," do you mean you saw him pay the 4s. to the police?—I will not say in every instance, but in instances I have seen him pay the money, and when that entry occurs in the book perhaps he has given the money to the scouts, and perhaps could not just account for it.

A. F. Platt.
1 Feb. 1907.

32622. Take, for example, any one of these entries we have been referring to—"Coppers 4s." Would he, whenever he paid money and you were present, make an entry in the book?—I might turn round and say it was not needful when we tallied up the money, knowing he had paid it. Perhaps I had seen him pay it.

32623. Then would that mean that when you did see him pay it he did not make the entry in the book?—Yes.

32624. Then would that mean that when you did see means occasions when you did not see him and he had to account?—Oh, no. It means perhaps in going through the papers that he would not think for a moment when he had counted his money up, and then would say, "You know, Alf.—so-and-so," and I said "Yes, you gave him 4s., because I saw it." That is what it means.

32625. (Chairman.) That will do to-day, Mr. Platt, but I expect some evidence will be called to-day by Mr. Muir, so you can watch if you like, and hear what evidence is given against you. Have you any other witnesses in attendance?—I am not bound to ask any questions from anybody to-day, am I?

32626. (Chairman.) No, you are not bound to ask any questions at all. Are there any other witnesses that you would like to bring up?—Not at the present moment.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you wish us to proceed with our evidence, Sir?

(Chairman.) Before we do that we will confer. (After conferring.) We have been conferring really with regard to our future sittings with regard to this particular case. We are very anxious we should all sit together to hear the remainder of the evidence in Platt's case as nearly as possible. I do not think we can all be together at 11 o'clock on Tuesday, but we think we might all of us be present at 2 o'clock on Tuesday, so I think when we adjourn to-day we will adjourn to 2 o'clock on Tuesday, and in that case we shall sit later, and shall probably sit until 6 o'clock. Mr. Whitmore was unable to be present to-day, but I do not think any great harm will be done by your going on with your evidence and getting it upon the notes.

Sergeant WILLIAM POWELL, 103 R, sworn.

Sergeant W. Powell.

32627. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you now a police sergeant, No. 103 in the R Division?—Yes.

32628. Are you attached to the Deptford police station?—Yes.

32629. How long have you been in the Force?—About seven and a half years.

32630. Were you promoted sergeant on the 23rd October, 1905?—Yes.

22631. Prior to that were you police constable 203 L in the L Division?—Yes.

32632. In the year 1903 were you employed at all in plain clothes in connection with street bookmaking?—About two weeks the whole of the year.

32633. How came you to be employed on those occasions?—I was only really a stop-gap; when other men were not available I was brought out.

32634. Are you able to fix the time of the year?—About four days in May, two or three in October, that I am sure of; and the others I would not be certain of.

32635. We have got the return, and it appears it was the 9th, 15th, 16th, 27th, 28th, 29th and 30th May, and the 16th, 17th, and 21st October.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that the complete list?

32636. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, of the days he was on this duty. Did you arrest Platt on the 29th May?—Yes.

32637. As far as you know had you ever seen him prior to that day?—I had never seen him.

32638. Were you in company on that day on duty with P.C. Soer?—Yes.

32639. Did he speak to you about a man who was betting in Robert Street, Waterloo Road?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I ask, Sir, to be allowed to have that conversation. I think it is material.

(Chairman.) Yes, I think you may have it.

32640. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What did Soer say to you about this man?—He made the remark that there was a bookmaker standing in Robert Street; he had been there some little time—I would not be certain the time he said now—and he had boasted that he had not been caught yet, and he would not be. I said, "We will see what we can do with him to-day." We then went to Waterloo Station, to the approach to the station, which is higher ground, so as to be in a position to see whether there was anything going on in Robert Street. We could see clearly that there was, so Soer remained in the station, and I went to Waterloo Road into Mepham Street, and there I saw Platt in Robert Street. There were two men with him making bets, and on my going to him another man came—I believe a railway porter—and just at that time I got there a respectably dressed gentleman with a silk hat handed a slip with 2s. I then told Platt who I was, and told him I should arrest him. He said, "I did not know you." He then said, "I wish you had come half an hour later, as I have someone coming at half-past 1 who will do me some good. Cannot you go away for half an hour and then come back, and I will be here." I replied that he must go with us now. I then took him to the end of Robert Street, and waited there for Soer, who was then in the station. He evidently thought I was coming round Waterloo Road, and waited at the gates for me, but he did you leave Soer, as you have said, on the station?—

32641. Was it some little time before Soer came up?—It was several minutes.

32642. When you went to the place which you have described in order to see whether you could see Platt did you leave Soer, as you have said, on thestation?—Yes.

32643. Whereabouts did you leave him?—On the approach from York Road, where the 'buses stop.

32644. Is that a place where Soer could be seen by anybody who was on the look out in Robert Street?—No, not from there.

32645. However you left him there?—Yes.

32646. You went round?—Yes. Then Soer went to the other approach to the station, where he could be seen.

32647. After leaving you he went to the other approach to the station, where he could have been seen by the scouts if there was one?—Yes.

32648. After Soer joined you, did you all three go to the police station together?—Yes.

32649. Was Platt brought up that same afternoon and fined?—Yes.

32650. Have you ever been employed to keep observation upon him after that date?—No.

32651. Have you ever spoken to him since that date?—No.

32652. Have you ever received any money from him?—No.

32653. Has he ever directly or indirectly, either himself or by anybody else bribed you in any way?—No.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have got a plan of the place here, Sir, if it is convenient for the Commission to see it. The witness can explain it to you.

(Plan handed to the Commissioners, and explained by the witness.)

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Which part of Waterloo Station is this?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The North Station.

32654. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Where do you say Soer was standing first?—Here (pointing on the plan).

32655. Soer saw Platt from there?—Yes.

32656. (Mr. Dickinson.) You saw him also from there?—No, I saw him from here.

32657. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You came along here together—you and Soer?—Yes.

32658. And then how far did you go together?—Not from there. Soer went this way and I came out of the station.

32659. (Chairman.) Just look at that photograph.

There is a person coming to a wicket gate there?—Yes. He was standing the other side.

32660. This is what Soer would see. Soer standing at the wicket gate would see Robert Street that way?—Yes.

32661. Where was the bookie standing?—In that doorway.

32662. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You have told us you were on this kind of duty in October as well as in May, 1903?—Yes.

32663. Do you remember what part of the division you were in in October?—On Kennington Lane subdivision.

32664. Is that a different part of the division altogether from Robert Street?—Yes.

32665. Do you remember being asked to make a report in connection with your arrest of Platt?—Yes.

32666. And did you make it immediately after or the same day that you were asked to do it?—Immediately I was asked.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You will find the report, Sir, on page 29 of that bundle of documents. It is dated the 21st November, 1903, and was made in consequence of Platt's letter of the 19th. "With reference to allegation laid by Alfred Platt of receiving money from him weekly during the summer, I beg to report I was not employed in plain clothes more than two weeks during that time, 29th May, in company with P.C. 204 L Soer. I arrested Platt (who then gave the name of Smith) at Robert Street, Waterloo Road, at 1.15 p.m., when he said, 'I wish you had come half an hour later, as I have someone coming about half-past 1 who will do me some good. Can't you go away for half an hour and then come back, I will be here?" I replied, 'You will go with us now.' I most emphatically deny taking any money from him at any time, and have not spoken to him since."

(Chairman.) You can stand down.

(Mr. Platt.) May I ask him a few questions?

(Chairman.) Yes.

32667. (Mr. Platt.) You have told these gentlemen you had never seen me before?—Yes.

32668. And that I did not know who you were?—Yes.

32669. You say you left Soer at the top of York Road approach?—Yes.

32670. Where was I standing when you turned the corner of that street?—Which street?

32671. Robert Street?—In the first doorway on the right.

(Mr. Platt.) Photos, please. (The photograph was handed to Mr. Platt.)

(Mr. Platt.) I call your attention to this fact. He says it was in the first doorway. That is where that gentleman told you the other day I went through that door, and came out of that window.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are not speaking of the same occasion.

(Mr. Platt.) I have asked this man where I was standing, and he says in the first doorway.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) (To the witness.) Will you mark the place on the photograph where you say Platt was standing?

(Chairman.) You had better mark it with a red pencil. (The witness marked the photograph.)

32672. (Mr. Platt.) Was I in the doorway?—Standing in the doorway.

32673. Standing in the doorway of the first door?—Yes.

32674. Speaking to two persons?—To two persons, yes.

32675. You are sure?—Quite sure.

(Mr. Platt.) I must ask for these two officers' diaries of that date.

32676. (Chairman.) Have you your note-book here for 1903?—No, I have not got it.

32677. Perhaps you will see that the note-book is here. We should like to see the books, please. They have no doubt been preserved?—Yes.

32678. When you have finished with a particular book it is handed back, I suppose?—When I was on those particular jobs we took the name and address of the bookmaker, the place of arrest, and the time. Sergeant W. Powell.

32679. It would be in the book?—Yes.

32680. (Mr. Platt.) Speaking to two persons?—Yes.

32681. Would it surprise you to know that that doorway that you say I was standing in is very rarely open?—I did not say it was open. It was shut. You were standing in the doorway.

32682. What is the depth of that wall, if I was standing in the doorway?—I do not know, I am sure.

32683. Speaking to two persons. Is not the truth of it that you came to me as I came to the second doorway, and you did not know me until Soer came through the wicket?—I did not see Soer.

32684. You could not arrest me, you did not know me, and you were walking away almost when officer Soer came and gave you the nod—that is the man?—Nothing of the kind.

32685. How long were you in my company in that said Robert Street that morning?—When?

32686. On the morning that you arrested me?—Previous to the arrest?

32687. Yes, previous to the arrest?—Not at all.

32688. Were you not in my company for three or four minutes?—After the arrest?

32689. No, before the arrest?—No.

32690. You were talking to me; you did not know who I was, because I looked anything but the gentleman you were looking for?—I had no doubt at all about you.

32691. You had no doubt—not when you were walking away?—Where did you first see Soer?

32692. Where did I see Soer?—Yes.

32693. When he came through that wicket?—You first saw Soar with me at the corner of Robert Street and Mepham Street.

32694. I did not. I first saw you when Soar came through the wicket.

(Chairman.) It is no use having a discussion of that kind. Put your questions and he will answer them.

32695. (Mr. Platt.) Soer came through the wicket, stood on the steps, and gave the nod to you that I was the young man?—I did not see him.

(Chairman.) Mr. Platt, you must ask questions, please, and not make statements. We do not wish to hurry you. Take your own time over the matter.

32696. (Mr. Platt.) You say I said to you: "Give me another half hour"?—You said: "I wish you would give me half an hour longer. Cannot you go away for half an hour, and then come back?"

32697. Did you tell the magistrate that?—It was not necessary. You pleaded guilty, if I remember right.

32698. How long grace did you give me in Robert Street after you arrested me?—None.

32699. You are sure?—Quite sure.

32700. You are sure you did not give me five or six minutes?—No, no grace.

32701. You are positive that no remark was made about how long we were standing there?—When?

32702. When we were in Robert Street after you had arrested me?—No.

32703. You are positive?—Positive.

32704. No remark made?—No, no remark made.

32705. No such remark made that you did not wish to stand there any longer, as somebody might come by that might know you?—Nothing of the kind.

32706. When we were at the police court you know where we adjourned to?—You left the police court before me.

32707. We did not have a drink anywhere?—No.

32708. You did not feel dry?—No.

32709. A most unusual thing for a policeman, is it not?—I do not know.

32710. Did you not in company with your fellow-officer adjourn with me to a public-house?—No.

32711. And you had a drink?—No.

32712. So that as you were not out so often as Soer,

Sergeant W. Powell.

1 Feb. 1907.

who was doing this duty, you would not know the system so well as Soer did?—No.

32713. So that before you would take any money you looked at Soer to see if he would take his first. Is that true?—Is that a question?

32714. I am asking you. I am not so well versed in it as our friends here.

32715. (Chairman.) Did you look at Soer at all, is the question?—I will give the details of what took place.

32716. You deny that you went to a public-house with Soer and Mr. Platt?—Certainly—most decidedly.

32717. Did anything take place outside the police court?—No. The process is, in the case of a bookmaker, or any other prisoner, when the man is convicted he is taken back to the gaoler's room, where, if he has the money, he pays the fine. He is then shown the door and shown the way out, and, as in this case, Platt left the court, and I did not see him again. He refers to my looking at Soer in a public-house somewhere.

32718. Yes; but you deny that you entered a public-house with Soer?—Most decidedly.

32719. You understand we have only asked you to stand down, but we shall require you to come back later?—Yes.

P.C. Arthur Soer, 204 L, sworn.

P.C. A. Soer.

32720. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are a police-constable, No. 204 L?—Yes.

32721. How long have you been in the force?—On the 7th March, 1898, I joined; that would be about eight years and nine months.

32722. I think you have a clean defaulter's sheet?—Yes.

32723. During the year 1903 were you engaged a good deal in plain clothes in the duty of detecting street bookmakers?—Yes.

32724. Were you employed in the months of April, May, June, July, August, September, and October?—Yes. One day in June only.

32725. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) One day in June, but during the other months, you were continuously on that duty?—Four hours each day.

32726. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) On the 13th, 14th, 18th, 22nd, 23rd, and 28th April, and seventeen days in May, and not at all in June, but practically continuously in July, August, September, and October.

32727. (Chairman.) Do you accept that return which has just been read?—Quite so.

32728. It is not quite the same as what you told us?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I asked him a leading question, I am afraid.

(Chairman.) Very well.

(The Witness.) Excepting the one day in June.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He said he was on duty one day in June only, and apparently he was not continuously on duty in the months of April and May.

(Chairman.) He was not employed in June at all. However, it does not matter. I only wished to know which he accepted.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If it is material we will look and see if we have it correctly extracted.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is not material.

32729. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you remember the day on which Platt was first arrested, the 29th May?—Yes.

32730. Had you had any complaint about him on the day previous?—About that time; I am not sure of the date.

32731. Prior to that 29th May did you know Platt by sight?—No, I do not know that I had ever seen the man before.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I should like to ask him what the nature of the complaint was.

(Chairman). I see no objection to it in this inquiry.

32732. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What was the nature of the complaint that was made to you?—I was walking down the Waterloo Road and a man who I had never seen stopped me.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You had better tell us what was the complaint.

32733. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What did the man say to you?—He asked me if I knew there was a man betting in Robert Street of the name of Platt. I said "No, I am not aware of it." He said, "I made a bet with him and the winnings come to £1 6s., and he refuses to pay me out." I said, "I am afraid I cannot help you, but I will have a look round that way to-morrow and see if I can see him." I said, "If you wish to lodge any complaint you had better walk to the station." That is all that passed between us.

32734. Up to that time did you know that there was any man betting in Robert Street?—No.

32735. Did he say anything about the man having boasted that he had not been arrested, or anything of that kind?—He did mention that.

32736. You did not tell us that. What did the man say about that?—He said he boasted he had never been arrested.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I asked that question because of what Powell said.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Powell said Soer had told him that Platt had boasted that he had never been caught.

(Chairman.) In one or two other cases we have received conversations between constables when the complainant was not present. That was for obvious reasons.

32737. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I desire to keep entirely within your ruling, and I did not think I was exceeding it. Were you out with Powell on the 29th?—Yes.

32738. Will you tell the Commissioners in your own way what happened with reference to Platt on that day?—As to how we arrested him?

32739. Yes. What passed between you and Powell before you went up there?—Me and Powell met that morning on the 29th, I told him the information I had received about Platt, and I told him how he was dressed. I said, "We will see if he is there, and see if we can arrest him." I said, "He starts on Waterloo Station, we can go where the 'busses pull up and look over the top of the wall, and we will see what is going on." We did look over the top of the wall, and we saw some men going into Robert Street. I said, "There is someone there." I could not see that it was Platt. I said, "You go down the slope into York Road and along Mepham Street." I said, "Perhaps he don't know you so well, this being about your first time out. As soon as I see that you get round to Robert Street I will make my way down the slope towards Waterloo Road." Half way down the slope there is a side door leading into Robert Street. I looked through the door and I saw 203, Powell, standing close to a man whom I thought was Platt. There was a railway porter there, and a gentleman came up with a silk hat on, and I saw him hand Platt a piece of paper, or the man who I thought was Platt. With that I saw Powell make the arrest.

32740. Where was Platt standing at that time?—He was standing close to a little door—just by a door with a lamp over the top.

32741. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you mean at that one with a lamp at the top (handing photograph)?—Yes.

32742. The one this side of the lamp?—This is the nearest to Mepham Street.

32743. You had better mark the photograph with a cross.—(The Witness marked the photograph.)

32744. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is where he was standing when you were looking on, is it?—Yes.

32745. After the arrest had been made what did you do?—I walked down the slope into the Waterloo Road slowly, and went round to the corner of Mepham Street where I met P.C. 203, Powell, coming along with Platt.

32746. Then was he taken to the station?—Yes.

32747. You have told the Commissioners that you had told Powell, or described to Powell, how Platt was dressed?—Yes.

32748. How did you know anything about how he was dressed?—The party complaining to me really told me how he was dressed. He told me he was in a brown suit.

32749. Did you two or three proceed to the police station?—Yes.

32750. And he was charged that afternoon, and fined?—Yes.

32751. He pleaded guilty, I believe?—Yes.

32752. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Just tell us what took place at the police court?—He was taken into the charge-room, the charge-sheet was handed to the gaoler, and by the gaoler to the Magistrate. Then he would be taken into the police court, placed in the dock, and the charge read over to him. He pleaded guilty, came out, and was taken to the gaolers' room, and he paid the money.

32753. Under those circumstances was no statement made to the Magistrate?—No.

32754. On simply reading over the charge he pleaded guilty, and that is all that took place?—That is all in the usual way.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Mr. Muir tells me that the gaoler is asked whether he has been there before, and if the gaoler says no, the fine is £1, but if he has been there before, the fine is £5.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It was £1 on this occasion.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is the tariff.

32755. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What did you do after leaving the police court?—Platt left the court before me. After that me and Police-constable Powell left together, and went down to Kennington Road Police Station, as we always did.

32756. Is there any truth in the suggestion that you went into a public-house with Powell and Platt?—No.

32757. Is there any truth in the suggestion that Platt on that occasion gave you any money?—No.

32758. Have you ever received any money from Platt, or from anybody employed by him?—Never.

32759. Have you ever received anything in the nature of a bribe either from Platt or from anybody employed by him?—Never.

32760. Had you ever spoken to Platt before this 29th May?—Never.

(Mr Rufus Isaacs.) He said he had never seen him.

32761. (Mr Eldon Bankes.) I think the next occasion that you arrested him was the 1st August?—Yes.

32762. Was anyone with you on that occasion?—Yes.

32763. Whom?—Police-constable Gunn, 209 L Division.

32764. Had you any conversation with Platt between the 29th May and the 1st August?—No.

32765. Had you been watching him, or attempting to catch him at all between that time?—No, I was not out on that duty.

32766. My friend reminds me that there is one incident before the 1st August. Do you remember on the 9th July keeping observation with Gunn in Robert Street?—Yes.

32767. What took place on that date?—We arrested a man of the name of Forbes, who was taking slips of paper from Platt.

32768. Was anyone there?—There were two men came up and handed Forbes some papers; at the same time I rushed down the steps.

32769. Where were Forbes and Platt standing?—They were both standing in the centre of the street—Robert Street.

32770. Somewhere in the same position that you had seen them on the 29th May?—No; Platt was standing in the doorway on the 29th May.

32771. But somewhere near the same part of the street?—Yes.

32772. Where were you and Gunn watching?—We were watching through the side door at Waterloo Station leading into Robert Street.

32773. Did you from that door see the papers pass?—Yes.

32774. Then you were just going to tell the Commissioners that you rushed down the steps?—I rushed down the steps and arrested Mr. Forbes. Platt ran away.

32775. What did Platt do?—Ran away.

32776. In which direction?—Towards Mepham Street.

32777. What did Gunn do?—Gunn ran after him.

32778. Was he able to catch him?—No.

32779. Then I think you took Forbes to the station, and he was charged at the police court. Did he plead guilty?—Yes.

32780. And he was fined £5?—I am not quite sure.

32781. I think it was £5.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Had he been there before?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I suppose he must have been.

(Witness.) No.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We had better look and see.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Either it was a mistake or the tariff is not uniform.

(Witness.) Sometimes they fine them £5 the first time, and sometimes £1.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is what Mr. Muskett says.

32782. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Now I will go back, if I may, to the 1st August. Did you see Platt at all between the 9th July and the 1st August, as far as you remember?—No. I might have seen him, but not betting.

32783. Did you keep observation upon Robert Street?—I passed by there on several occasions to see if I could see him, as I have done with other bookmakers. I have been all over the subdivision.

32784. Who was with you on the 1st August?—209 I think it was.

32785. That is Gunn?—Yes.

32786. What happened on that day?—We went on to Waterloo Station, and went down to the side door leading into Robert Street, and looking through we saw Platt standing on the pavement close to the door which I have already mentioned taking slips. I rushed down and caught him.

32787. (Chairman.) What time was that?—2.30, I think, or somewhere about that time; I am not quite sure.

32788. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is your recollection?—As far as I can recollect.

32789. Did you then take him to the station?—Yes.

32790. And he was charged the same afternoon. On that occasion I think he pleaded guilty and was fined £5?—That is right.

32791. Is there any ground for the suggestion that that arrest was prearranged, or that the time at which you should arrest him was arranged with Platt?—Not by me.

32792. Or by Gunn, or by anybody so far as you know?—So far as I know.

32793. At that time was there anybody employed by Platt as a scout to your knowledge?—Yes.

32794. Where did that man stand?—Opposite Robert Street in Mepham Street—in fact, there were several round there.

32795. Would it have been possible to have approached Platt in that direction?—I tried to, but I was not successful owing to the numbers of lookers-out he had there. There was always someone about; he always had someone standing at the entrance to Robert Street on the slope there.

32796. That was the 1st August. Did you arrest him again on the 28th August?—Yes.

32797. Was Gunn with you also on that occasion?—Yes.

32798. Did you see him from the same doorway on that occasion?—Yes.

32799. Was anyone with him on that occasion?—Some men betting with him.

P.C
Feb. 1907.

32800. Just describe the circumstances of the arrest on that day?—We had made an arrest previous to that day there.

32801. Just tell the Commissioners shortly what happened?—I went down the slope from Waterloo Station, and looking through the trapdoor I saw Platt standing in the same way that I have already mentioned with some men betting with him. I said to Gunn, "Here he is." I rushed down the steps; he ran into the doorway along the passage through the workshop up the steps on to the next floor, and jumped from the doorway into Robert Street. I jumped after him and fell on the top of him.

32802. Just point out to the Commissioners on the photograph which is the window, or doorway you call it, that you and he jumped out of?—That one there.

32803. (Chairman.) The first floor?—Yes. He went in at this door along the passage, then through a workshop here, and jumped from this doorway into Robert Street.

32804. It is rather a high jump, is not it—how many feet?—I should think it is about 12 feet.

32805. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did you take him into custody when you both landed on the street?—No. He scrambled up, and ran to the Hero public-house, to the doorway, and there I caught him and told him I should take him into custody for betting. Hhe threatened to strike me. I then took him on the way to the police station at Kennington Road.

32806. Did you see a man named Mansell that day?—Yes, previous to the arrest.

32807. Where did you see Mansell, and under what circumstances?—We saw him in the same street, looking through the doorway. I said to Gunn, "Hullo, there is someone fresh here to-day." We saw a man come up and bet with Mansell. Gunn rushed down and caught him. On the way to the station he broke from our custody and ran down Griffin Street, and went to Waterloo Station where he was caught by Gunn and taken to Kennington Road Police Station, where he was charged.

32808. What time would that be?—I think about 1.30.

32809. Was that before you arrested Platt?—That was before we arrested Platt.

32810. After having taken him to the station, did you go straight back and arrest Platt, or was there an interval?—After we made the charge we came straight back on to Waterloo Station, and went down the slope, and looked through the doorway and there we saw Platt. I mentioned to Gunn that we would go back and see who was there. I said: "There is a fresh man working, we will see if Platt is there," and when we got there we found it was so.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) About what time was it when you saw Platt on the 28th?

(Witness.) About 2.45 as near as possible, I am not certain.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Does the time appear in the charge sheet, or is it omitted by mistake?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I have the time put down as being 2.30 at the station.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Then it is omitted by mistake.

(Chairman.) It is given in the usual column.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes, but it is omitted in this one.

(Chairman.) It is given in all the others—date and hour brought to the station. That is omitted with regard to this arrest.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is 2.30 in the charge sheet.

32811. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is there any ground for the suggestion that on that occasion Platt was arrested by arrangement?—No, certainly not. He would not have run away and given me all that trouble I should think if it was.

32812. I think the next time you arrested him was on the 13th October?—Yes.

32813. Deed was with you on that occasion?—Yes.

32814. Had you been keeping observation on Robert Street between August 28th and the 13th October?—I had been by there several times to see if I could see Mr. Platt.

32815. Had you ever seen him on any occasion betting there?—No, I had seen him about there, but I had not seen him betting. Sometimes he got the "tip" that I was coming.

32816. And on the 13th October did you manage to catch him again?—Yes.

32817. How did you manage to catch him on that occasion?—In the same way, through the side door leading into Robert Street.

32818. Was he taken then to the station, and did he plead guilty then in the afternoon, and was he fined again £5?—Yes.

32819. Have you had anything to do with him since?—No, I have seen him as I have passed him in the street a time or two.

32820. Were you called upon to make a report, do you remember?—Yes.

32821. I think you made your report on the 21st November; I had better read it: "I beg to report that I have been employed in plain clothes for four hours daily on all the principal race days during this year in company with P.C.'s 203, 209, and 180 Deed. I arrested Platt in the name of Alfred Smith 27, Oakley Street on the 1st August, 1903, in Robert Street, witnessed by P.C. 209. I again arrested Platt in the name of Smith in Robert Street, 28th August, 1903, witnessed by P.C. 209. I again arrested Platt in the name of Smith in Robert Street, 13th October, 1903, witnessed by P.C. 180 Deed. I was also in company with P.C. 203, 29th May, 1903, when Platt was arrested in the name of Alfred Smith. I deny the allegation laid against me by Alfred Platt of receiving money from him and making arrangements for the time to arrest him.—Arthur Soer." Is that statement at the end true?—Quite true.

32822. Is there any foundation at all for suggesting that you have been bribed by this man to refrain from arresting him, or that you have arrested him by arrangement when you did arrest him?—Never.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I make this request? There are two men whose names have been mentioned, the two Fishers. I think they have been in communication with the Clerk to the Commission, and they also wrote us a letter, and as a result we have taken their statements. I should like to supply them to the Comsion, because those men stand in a peculiar position.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Are they to be called?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, we can take steps to have them here.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) We cannot receive their statements without their being called.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, certainly not.

(Chairman.) What Mr. Bankes means is he thought they had been to the Secretary of the Commission as well.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I believe they have been to the Secretary.

(Chairman.) No, they have not approached us at all. Sooner or later we may have to determine whether we shall have to summon them.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think the Secretary must have forgotten it.

(Secretary.) They came with Mr. Muskett to look at certain books, but they have not been to me at all.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is only a question of receiving the statements. We can receive the statements if the witnesses are going to be called.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You follow what I mean? There is a difference between calling a person as your witness and bringing a person before the Commission because you think he ought to be heard.

(Chairman.) You may take it, I think, that we shall take steps to see that the Fishers are here unless you do so.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Would you like to have their statements beforehand?

(Chairman.) After the cross-examination of Mr. Muir I think it would be better if you do call them.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have not the slightest objection.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) We understand what you mean. You are going to call them because you think they ought to be before the Commission, but they are not to be taken as your witnesses?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Quite.

THIRTY-FOURTH DAY.

Tuesday, 19th February 1907.

[The Sitting fixed for February 5th was, in consequence of the Chairman's indisposition, adjourned to to-day.]

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
RUFUS DANIEL ISAACS, Esq., K.C., M.P.
WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).
J. F. WALEY, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Assistant Secretary).

(Chairman.) Is Mr. Higgs here?

(Earl Russell.) I am told he has not been seen yet.

(Chairman.) What is the allegation against the police in this case, Earl Russell?

(Earl Russell.) I only had the papers last night, but the allegation, as I understand it, is that Higgs interfered to protect his wife from either some rough handling or some rough talk by the constable, and in consequence both he and his wife were run in, and in consequence of that he lost his licence as a cab driver. That is the substance of the allegation, as I understand.

(Chairman.) He says that some constable trumped up a charge against him, and in consequence of that, because the Magistrate bound him over to keep the peace, he lost his licence.

(Earl Russell.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is it suggested that a charge was trumped up against him?

(Earl Russell.) His story is, as I understand it, that he went to protect his wife.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, I think there is no suggestion of that kind. You have seen, I presume, Sir, what happened before the Police Magistrate?

(Chairman.) I have seen the original statement handed in by Higgs himself to the Secretary of the Commission, and the general effect left on my mind by that statement was that the allegation was that the charge had been trumped up against the cabman, and that the Magistrate bound him over to keep the peace, and that as a matter of persecution, apparently, he had lost his licence. That is why we said we would take up the case.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Higgs' proof or statement of his evidence does suggest this, that a policeman had given a false statement, and said that he, Higgs, and his wife had followed the constable for something like a quarter of an hour, and that is why he was charged.

(Earl Russell.) According to Higgs' statement, the trouble with the constable began in this way: "I spoke to the constable, and said I should report him." That is Higgs' own statement of how it arose.

(Chairman.) As we said when Higgs himself came to Mr. Leslie, and we considered the statement that Mr. Leslie took down, that we would take the case, we are ready to hear Higgs now.

(Earl Russell.) He has been warned to attend, but I am told, as a matter of fact, he is not here.

(Chairman.) We will wait a little while.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) With reference to the allegations about his cabman's licence, perhaps you would like to see the statement that I have here.

(Chairman.) Show it to Earl Russell first. (Document handed to Earl Russell.) 19 Feb. 1907.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) His licence had been taken away several times and re-granted, and taken away again in consequence of his conduct.

(Earl Russell.) It is obviously desirable that Higgs himself should go into the witness-box, if we can get him.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is the letterpress between that is important rather more than the other part of the document. (Handing document to the Commissioners.)

(Chairman.) We will adjourn for a short time, and if Mr. Higgs is not here when we return, we will make a statement about the matter.

(Chairman.) Although Mr. Higgs has not appeared we have now had an opportunity of reading his full and detailed statement, and on consideration we do not propose to make further inquiry into the matter. It is a pity we have nothing else to go on with to-day.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am afraid not.

(Earl Russell.) I should like to make a statement to you, Sir, with regard to the doctor in Mr. Baker's case. You will remember it was said by Mr. Baker himself in his examination-in-chief that the doctor did not come because he was given a wrong name, and I think my learned friend called evidence to the effect that that was impossible, because the name was written on a piece of paper. Some evidence was called to contradict that. We have now what amounts to a proof from the doctor, and I should like to call him unless the Commission would admit this letter. I do not suppose Mr. Eldon Bankes would care to do that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not mind admitting any letter, but it is so very immaterial whether in the middle of the night two people agree or disagree as to whether a man said "Baker" or "Barker."

(Chairman.) If we think, when we come to consider the evidence, it is necessary to call the doctor, we will call the doctor.

(Earl Russell.) It does not seem to me immaterial as to the credibility of the police evidence.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The admission of the letter will not affect that, will it?

(Chairman.) We will take the letter.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not in the least mind your taking the letter.

(Earl Russell.) Then I will hand it in.

(Chairman.) We will adjourn now to 11 o'clock to-morrow, when we shall take Gamble's case, and that is the last definite case we are going to take.

THIRTY-FIFTH DAY.

Wednesday, 20th February 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).

Rufus Daniel Isaacs, Esq., K.C., M.P.

Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister at-Law).

Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).

J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).

20 Feb. 1907.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) In this case of Gamble, Sir, I would ask that the witnesses should be out of court. I have not hitherto asked it, but I have a special reason in this case, and if you desire I will give you the reason.

(Chairman.) It is quite a proper application, and the witnesses on both sides had better be out of court.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have sent my witnesses out, but I was going to ask Earl Russell whether he would prefer them to remain in case he wanted to identify them.

(Earl Russell.) I shall want the constable and a sergeant.

(Chairman.) If the witnesses on one side go out of court the witnesses on the other side should go out, and they can be called in when any point of identification arises.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I ask that one Inspector may be allowed to stay to help me with regard to the localities and the beats.

(Earl Russell.) If he did not witness the occurrence I do not object.

(Chairman.) That is only right.

(Earl Russell.) May I ask that the Commission should issue a subpœna to Dr. Walter B. Billinghurst, of the London Hospital. I think the Commissioners will agree that they will want first-hand evidence of the injuries in this case?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Earl Russell.) If the Commissioners will agree, he might be taken first thing to-morrow morning.

(Chairman.) We will cause a summons to be issued to him.

George Gamble, sworn.

G. Gamble.

32823. (Earl Russell.) Is your name George Gamble, but are you also called Pearce?—Yes.

32824. In August last year were you living at the Victoria Home in Commercial Street?—Yes.

32825. On Tuesday, the 21st August, were you out in the street very late, going home?—Yes.

32826. About what time was it?—I could not say exactly, but it was after closing time at night.

32827. Was it daylight or not?—No.

32828. Could you say what time it was?—I should say about 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning, as near as I could say—1 o'clock.

32829. On the way home did you meet somebody?—Yes.

32829*. Who was that?—A woman.

32830. What was her name?—Griffiths.

32831. Ethel Griffiths?—Yes.

32832. Had you known her by sight before?—Yes.

32833. Had you spoken to her before?—Yes.

32834. Was that the extent of your acquaintance with her?—Yes.

32835. You just knew her to speak to and by sight?—Yes; to speak to at different times.

32836. When you met her did you stop and have some conversation?—She stopped me and asked me if I was going to have connection.

(Chairman.) What were the exact words she used?—She asked me if I was going to have a short time—she put it as that.

32838. (Earl Russell.) How long was your conversation altogether with her?—We had not been many minutes talking.

32839. Did someone come up while you were speaking to her?—Yes, a police-constable came up.

32840. Was there anyone in the street at the time you were talking to her?—I could not see anyone.

32841. What street was this in?—I could not say; I did not take that notice of it.

32842. Did the constable say anything?—Yes, he said, "Go on; come out of this."

32843. (Chairman.) Let us have the street identified as nearly as you can. You do not know the name of the street?—No, but it was leading just off Brick Lane—not far off Brick Lane.

32844. A street at the top of Brick Lane?—It was nearly off Brick Lane. Brick Lane leads off by the top of it.

32845. (Earl Russell.) That is in Whitechapel?—Yes.

32846. (Chairman.) We have had a map of this locality already before the Commission. Do you understand a map?—Yes.

32847. You see where Brick Lane is on this map (handing map to the witness)?—Yes.

32848. (Earl Russell.) Was it near a public-house that you know the name of?—No; it was one of the streets leading up there. Brick Lane was on the top.

32849. (Chairman.) Was it Spelman Street or one of the streets parallel to it?—I could not say which it was. It was one of the streets leading from Brick Lane.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He says that Brick Lane is at the top of that particular street.

32850. (Chairman.) That is the nearest you can tell us—one of the streets leading from Brick Lane?—Yes.

32851. (Earl Russell.) When this constable came up did he say anything?—Yes.

32852. Was he in uniform?—Yes. He said, "Come on, get out of this; you are after no good with the likes of this."

32853. (Earl Russell.) Who did he say that to; to you or to Ethel Griffiths or to both of you?—To both of us; we were both together.

32854. What happened when he said that?—I said, "All right, there is no hurry," and I walked steadily on.

32855. Did Ethel Griffiths walk on with you?—No, she stopped with the constable.

32856. You walked on?—I walked on.

32857. Away from the policeman?—Away from the policeman. I went on and got half way up the street and she caught me up again, and she said, "What do you think yon policeman wanted to do. He wanted to go in and have a short time with me, and take me round the corner and have a short time with me." I said, "Did you go." She said, "No, no fear." She had hardly said those words before he followed her up again and caught me up. He said, "You are not out of it yet." I said I was going, and he said, "You are after no good." I said, "Why." He said, "You ought to be ashamed of yourself." I said, "It is not me to be ashamed." I said, "You ought to set a better example to the woman instead of asking her to go round the corner with you."

32858. Was Ethel Griffiths with you all this time after she joined you again?—She came up just as the policeman caught me up.

32859. And she was with you while this conversation went on?—Yes.

32860. Then what happened?—He followed me up and kept trying to tread on my heels and shoving me all the time up the street, and then when I kept walking on he would get in front of me and try to stop me from walking on.

32861. Were you both talking during this time, or not?—Yes.

32862. What sort of things were you both saying?—He was going on and saying he would take me down to the police station. I said, "If you do I shall certainly report you about wanting to have connection with the woman."

32863. Was there anyone in sight at this time?—I did not notice anyone.

32864. Did you use any bad language in the course of this conversation?—Not at all, because as I thought he was trying to rile me to make me strike him.

32865. Then what happened?—He followed me up and kept dancing in front of me, as I have said, and trod on my heels and shoved me, and when he did that he knocked me down, and started kicking me between the legs.

32866. Where was he when he knocked you down?—By the side of me, walking up the street. I kept on walking all the time, and the moment I went walking on he kept dancing in front of me, and tried to stop me.

32867. Was Ethel Griffiths in front of you?—She was quite behind, and he told her to get out of it.

32868. What did he do after he knocked you down?—Started kicking me between the legs.

32869. And after that?—I got up and went away, and he followed me.

32870. Did you get up yourself?—Yes. I went away, and he followed me half-way up the street, caught me up, and knocked me down again, and started giving me some more boot.

32871. How did he knock you down the second time?—With his hand. He knocked me down, and started kicking me again, and while I was on the ground, before I got up to the top of Brick Lane, a sergeant stood on the top of the street talking to some man. I could not see who the man was.

32872. At what time did you first see the sergeant?—I could not say what time it was.

32873. Was it before the constable knocked you down the second time, or after?—The second time.

32874. Before he knocked you down or after he knocked you down the second time?—After, because I was on the ground before the sergeant came up.

32875. Just before he knocked you down you saw the sergeant?—Yes.

32876. The sergeant came up when you were on the ground?—While I was on the ground, and the constable was kicking me. The sergeant stood there, and said, "That is enough—you have done enough to him."

32877. Did you say anything?—No, I could not, I only shouted. I was on the ground, and he was kicking me.

32878. Did you hear the sergeant say anything more?—All I heard him say was telling him to stop—"You have done quite enough."

32879. Did he stop?—No, not for a little while. He said, "Get up, and fight him like a man."

32880. Who said that?—The sergeant.

32881. You say the constable went on kicking you while the sergeant was standing there?—Yes, because he said, "That is enough—you have done enough."

32882. When he stopped kicking you, what happened?—They left me there, and I walked steadily to the wall the best way I could, because I had not started swelling so much, and I did not feel the effects of it.

32883. When the constable left you there, did he walk away?—I walked away by myself, and got to the wall.

32884. Did the constable stop there, or did he walk away?—He walked away, and left me as I was.

32885. What did the sergeant do?—He never came near me.

32886. Did he stop there, or walk away?—I could not say whether he walked away or not.

32887. You say you managed to get up by yourself?—Yes, and I walked to the place, and then this boy and this woman helped me to the hospital the best way they could.

32888. What was the place you walked to?—Down to the Victoria Home. I thought of going in and going to bed, but I found I was gradually swelling. It took me a good while to get down, I was swelling that bad, and I was in terrible agony.

32889. Where did you feel the swelling?—Between the legs, where the kicking was.

32890. You did not go into the Victoria Home?—No, I thought of going in and going to bed, and then I found I was swelling like a balloon between the legs.

32891. What was the next thing that happened to you?—This boy and this woman took me to the hospital.

32892. Which woman?—Ethel Griffiths.

32893. What was the name of the man who helped you with Ethel Griffiths?—Wiltshire.

32894. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that the boy that you have referred to?—Yes.

32895. (Earl Russell.) Did you know Wiltshire quite well?—No, I had never seen him.

32896. (Earl Russell.) I should like to have Joseph Wiltshire called into court, in order that he may be identified. (Joseph Wiltshire called into court.) Is that the boy?—That is one of them. There were two, and one stopped outside the hospital.

32897. Do you know the name of the other?—No.

(Earl Russell.) I am told, Sir, we do not know the name of the other.

32898. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I should like to get this clear. You say there were two of them. Do you mean two boys?—Two young men similar to Wiltshire.

32899. Ethel Griffiths, Wiltshire, and another boy helped you?—Yes.

32900. (Earl Russell.) It was the London Hospital that you went to?—Yes.

32901. Do you know what time it was when you got there?—I should say between 2 and 3 in the morning, because it took a little while getting down.

32902. Which doctor saw you when you first went in?—Dr. Billinghurst, the house surgeon.

32903. How long were you in the hospital?—From August 21 to November 16, and then I went to a convalescent home for twenty-six days.

32904. Where was that?—At Swanley, Kent.

32905. How long were you there?—Twenty-six days. I got two weeks' extension.

G. Gamble.
29 [illegible] 1907.

32906. When were you discharged from the convalescent home?—On December 13, as near as I can say.

32907. Have you been able to go to work again now?—Yes, I went about a week after I came out to do some light work.

32908. Have you the number of this constable?—No, I did not get to see his number, but I could identify him.

32909. What did you notice about him particularly that you would know now?—His moustache.

32910. What about it?—It was very red—ginger.

32911. Have you found out his number since?—No, I have had no chance. I have never been there since I came home.

32912. (Chairman.) Are you able to work at your trade?—No, not the same as I could. I am only doing very light work at the shop.

32913. What is your trade?—Painter's labourer.

32914. (Earl Russell.) Have you seen the constable since?—No, I have not been round there since I came home.

32915. You have not seen him this morning?—Yes, I saw him this morning. He passed me outside here.

(Earl Russell.) We have his number. I do not know whether he ought to be asked to come into court.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) They had better all come in.

(Chairman.) All the constables who were on beats near Brick Lane.

(Earl Russell.) And any others too if Mr. Bankes likes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We have brought the constables here who were on these beats, and they had all better come in, and the sergeant too.

32916. (Earl Russell.) Can you identify the sergeant if you saw him again?—No, I could not, because I was on the ground when the sergeant came up.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Had the constables better come in with their helmets on or their helmets off?

(Chairman.) Their helmets on. The witness says the man was in uniform, and I take it he had his helmet on on that occasion. (Several constables and a sergeant in uniform came into court.)

32917. (Earl Russell.) Can you identify the man?—Yes, the third man from that end.

32918. Can you see his number?—Yes, 207 H.

32919. That you say is the constable you have been speaking of?—That is the very man.

32920. Are you able to identify the sergeant?—No, I am not, because I was on the ground, as I say, when he came up.

(Chairman.) The officers can retire now.

32921. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Were you at work up to the time of this occurrence taking place?—Yes, I was at work, or rather I had been working the same day.

32922. What day of the week was it?—Monday evening, or early Tuesday morning.

32923. It was Monday evening that you were out, and this happened on Tuesday morning?—Yes.

32924. And you had been at work on the Monday?—Yes.

32925. You say you were living at the Victoria Home?—Yes.

32926. What is that?—It is a men's lodging-house.

32927. Is it a common lodging-house?—It is a kind of common lodging-house.

32928. You know what I mean by common lodging-house. Is it registered?—Yes, it is registered.

32929. Is it for men only, or for men and women?—Men only.

32930. And whereabouts is it situated?—Commercial Street.

32931. How long had you been living at Victoria Home?—As near as I can say six or seven months.

32932. You say you knew this woman Ethel Griffiths by sight?—Yes.

32933. Had you ever spoken to her before?—Oh, yes, I had spoken to her.

32934. Is she a prostitute?—Yes.

32935. You knew that?—Yes.

32936. Did you know where she lived?—She lived somewhere round Brick Lane. I do not know the exact place.

32937. What had you been doing on the Monday evening—up to what time did you work?—Six o'clock, down at Westminster.

32938. What had you done after that?—I had been up to the theatre, and I was on my way home.

32939. What theatre had you been to?—The London.

32940. Did you go alone or in the company of others?—Alone.

32941. What time did you get out of the theatre?—A little after 11, or as near as I can say 11 o'clock.

32942. Had you had anything to drink?—I had very little, only ginger wine, because I do not drink, I suppose, an average of three glasses a month.

32943. After you came out of the theatre where did you go?—I made my way home, and cut across Brick Lane, so that I could get down that way, and as I was making that way the woman stopped me.

32944. That would be between 11 and 12 o'clock?—It might be one o'clock, or between 12 and one, as near as I can say. I could not say exactly the time.

32945. It is not very far, is it, from the London to Brick Lane?—It all depends which way you go. I went across London Fields way.

32946. How long would it take you to go?—I could do it in half an hour if I went straight up Commercial Street.

32947. Did you go the shortest way?—No, I came that way—straight down.

32948. That would be the shortest way, would it?—No, I think the shortest way is straight down Commercial Street from Shoreditch.

32949. Would it take you half an hour to come the way you came?—Yes, more than that.

32950. What time was it that you got out of the theatre?—A little after 11, as near as I can say.

32951. You would get to the neighbourhood of Brick Lane, according to that, about 12 o'clock?—About 12 or a little after.

32952. If you were coming from the theatre to go home you would come to Commercial Street before you came to Brick Lane, would you not?—Yes, and get straight down Commercial Street.

32953. Where you live, Victoria Home, is in a street leading out of Wentworth Street?—Yes, that is quite right; at the corner.

32954. That is the theatre side of Commercial Street. You would come to Wentworth Street before you came to Commercial Street if you were walking from the theatre?—Oh, no, because Commercial Street runs straight up to Shoreditch.

32955. You must have gone past your Victoria Home to get to Brick Lane?—No, Brick Lane is higher up Commercial Street. It is further up towards London Fields way.

32956. Can you tell us the way you came, and then perhaps we shall be able to trace it. Do you remember what road you walked from the theatre?—Yes.

32957. (Chairman.) In what street is the theatre?—It is on the main road.

32958. What road?—Commercial Street.

32959. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What is it called?—The London Music Hall, Shoreditch.

32960. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is in the Commercial Road?—Yes, straight up the Commercial Road.

32961. If you wanted to come the shortest way home you would walk straight up the Commercial Road?—Yes.

32962. Is the London in the High Street, Shoreditch?—It all joins Commercial Street. It is all one long street. The trams run right up there.

32963. If you had come from the theatre and walked straight up Commercial Street would you have turned to your right or to your left to get into Wentworth Street?—Coming from the London Music Hall?

32964. Yes?—You would come straight down.

32965. You would want to turn off Commercial Street to go into Wentworth Street?—You would turn off to your left to go up Brick Lane way, but I turned off from Spitalfields Church.

32966. Supposing you were walking straight from the theatre to the Victoria Home, and had walked straight up Commercial Street, would you have turned to your right or to your left to get into Wentworth Street?—You would turn to the left, and one side goes into the Lane.

32967. You would have walked straight up Commercial Street and turned to your left into Wentworh Street?—Yes.

32968. Brick Lane is on your right?—On your left coming from the London Music Hall.

32969. It is the opposite side of Wentworth Street?—The London Music Hall is here, and you come down here, and Brick Lane is on the top of it. (Describing.) 32970. Does Wentworth Street go both sides of Commercial Street?—Yes, it leads into the lane.

32971. It is the same side of Commercial Street as Brick Lane?—Yes.

32972. The part of Wentworth Street you lived in?—Victoria Home is on Commercial Street, really.

32973. Would you tell us the route you came?—As near as I could say after coming from the music hall I went round by Spitalfields Church, and that is not so far off the music hall, just by the Standard theatre, and then got round by Brick Lane. I called in there and had a shandy ale.

32974. You came up Brick Lane?—Yes.

32975. You say you called in there—where do you mean?—Before I got there—just by the Spitalfields Church.

32976. You went into a public-house?—Yes.

32977. Did you have something to drink?—A shandy gaff.

32978. Were you alone then, or in company?—All alone.

32979. Did you stay in the house till closing time or not?—No; I set off about ten minutes before closing time, as near as I can remember.

23980. Then did you go straight up Brick Lane?—Yes, straight up Brick Lane, and I came down Wentworth Street towards home.

32981. Closing time is half-past twelve?—Yes.

32982. And then coming up Brick Lane in that direction you would have turned to your right to get into Wentworth Street to go home?—Brick Lane runs on the top of these streets where this occurred, and Wentworth Street runs off Brick Lane.

32983. You would have turned to your right out of Brick Lane to get into Wentworth Street to get home?—No; turned to the left.

32984. Not from Brick Lane?—Yes.

32985. Whereabouts did you meet this woman?—I could not say the name of the street, but it was one of the streets off Brick Lane.

32986. Was it in Brick Lane you saw her?—No; one of the streets off Brick Lane.

32987. Had you got up Brick Lane into the street in which she was?—No; I was making up Brick Lane to make for home.

32988. You had not got into Brick Lane then?—No. it was one of the streets leading off Brick Lane.

32989. Cannot you tell us at all what street it was?—No, I could not, because I was making my way home, and I never looked to see the streets.

32990. What was she doing?—She was walking along when she stopped me.

32991. How long were you with her before anybody came up?—Not above two minutes when this constable came walking along.

32992. Did you notice anybody in the street at all?—I never noticed anyone.

32993. Was it empty so far as you could see?—Yes.

32994. I will pass just for the moment from what you say happened to the time when you went to the hospital. I understand this woman and two boys took you to the hospital?—Yes.

32995. You were there for some considerable time?—You.

32996. Did you ever make any complaint to anybody of having been assaulted by a constable?—Yes; when I went to the hospital I told the doctor. He asked me how it happened, and I told him I had been kicked by a policeman—ill-treated by a policeman. I stated everything to Dr. Billinghurst, the house surgeon, two or three different times, and told him how it occurred. G. Gamble. 20 Feb. 1907.

32997. (Earl Russell.) Have you only told the one doctor?—I have told two or three—the dressers and students. They have asked me how it occurred, and I told them.

32998. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did you make any complaint to the police authorities?—No, I had no chance. I had to undergo my operations all the time; I had no chance.

32999. No complaint was conveyed to the police for some months afterwards?—Not at all. I never had anyone up there to see me at all as regards the police.

33000. Has anybody ever asked you not to give evidence against the police or to say nothing about the case?—No; I have never seen anyone. I went straight out of the hospital to the convalescent home.

33001. It was said you were not coming, but nobody has ever spoken to you on behalf of the police and asked you not to come?—No; I have never seen anybody.

33002. Nobody has ever spoken to you to try and keep you away from the Commission?—Oh, no.

33003. Before you left the hospital do you know that a letter was written by a firm of solicitors on your behalf to the Commissioner of Police?—No.

33004. Do not you know that?—No, I do not. Nothing was mentioned to me about it if it was.

33005. Have you not heard of the letter?—I have never heard of any. The only thing I heard of was this gentleman coming to see me.

33006. When was that?—That was when I was in the hospital.

33007. They came to see you in the hospital?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Who does he refer to?

33008. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I suppose you mean Mr. Timewell?—Yes.

33009. Mr. Timewell came to see you in the hospital?—Yes.

33010. When did he come?—He came two or three different times. He came once when I was upstairs geting ready for one of my operations.

33011. How soon after this occurred would that be?—I daresay three or four weeks, or four or five weeks.

33012. That would be in September or October?—Yes, as near as I can say. He came four or five times.

33013. Did you make a statement to him about it?—Yes; I told him about it at the time.

33014. Did he come two or three times afterwards?—He came two or three times afterwards.

33015. Up to the time that you left the hospital did you know the name or number of the man who you now identify as having done it?—I have never seen him since it occurred.

33016. (Chairman.) You have never seen him until this day?—Not until to-day since the night it occurred.

33017. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Until you saw him outside this court this morning?—Yes; he passed by, and I identified him then.

33018. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Had anybody told you his name or his number?—Never.

33019. Let me read the letter that was written on your behalf.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) But he says it was not.

(Chairman.) At present I do not know how we can have it.

(Earl Russell.) There is no mystery about this letter. This letter was written in contemplation of quite a different set of proceedings, as is shown on the face of it. It was subsequently to that that the case came to the Royal Commission. This letter contemplates criminal proceedings.

(Chairman.) Mr. Gamble says he never instructed any firm of solicitors.

33020. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did you know that the hospital authorities has asked a solicitor to write on your behalf?—No; they never mentioned it to me. It was unknown to me if they did. They never mentioned a word to me. That gentleman was the only gentleman who came to see me except from my work.

G. Gamble.
20 Feb. 1907

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I should like, Sir, to put this letter in when the time comes, because it is the very first intimation we received.

(Chairman.) I think you may as well put it in.

33021. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Let me read the letter—I am not binding you to it in any manner. This is written from 27, Chancery Lane: "Sir,—We have just been instructed in the case of George Gamble, and we think it right to lay the facts before you in order that the case may be investigated by the authorities. Our client has been in hospital since the assault complained of, and is not yet recovered, but it is proposed to issue process against the police constable complained of as soon as he is able to attend." Had you said anything to anybody about commencing proceedings?—No, nothing at all. I never instructed anyone.

33022. Then this letter goes on in this way: "The facts are shortly as follows—On the 21st August in this year, in Spelman Street, Whitechapel"—did you tell anybody that this happened in Spelman Street?—No, I did not.

33023. "George Gamble was speaking to a woman named Ethel Griffiths at about 4 a.m." Did you tell anybody in the hospital that this occurrence with the constable had happened at 4 o'clock in the morning?—No, because I was in the hospital before that time.

33024. "At about 4 a.m., when, after some conversation, the constable knocked George Gamble down and kicked him several times while on the ground. The constable is stated to be aged about thirty, with a ginger moustache." Did you tell the authorities at the hospital that the constable who assaulted you had a ginger moustache?—Yes.

33025. "The constable is stated to be aged about thirty, with a ginger moustache, and to be No. 207 H. George Gamble, in consequence of his injuries, was taken to the hospital, where he has since been an inpatient.—We are, sir, your obedient servants, Radford and Frankland.—To the Commissioner of Police, New Scotland Yard."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is not the 23rd November after he was out of the hospital?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think he said he came out of the hospital on the 16th.

(Witness.) I was down at the convalescent home about that time.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The question was put whether while he was in the hospital he had given instructions to the solicitors. The date of the letter shows that it is written after he left the hospital. That is all. He might have seen somebody after.

33026. (Chairman.) Did you see the solicitors, Messrs. Radford and Frankland, or anybody else, after leaving the hospital?—No; I went straight down to the convalescent home after leaving the hospital, and I did not come back from there till the 12th or 13th December.

33027. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You have no explanation to offer of how this letter came to be written?—No, I have not.

(Chairman.) The original of this letter had better be handed in.

33028. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The writer of this letter was mistaken when he said it was 4 a.m. in the morning?—Yes, because I was in the hospital by that time.

33029. Did you tell anybody it was 4 a.m.?—No, I did not.

(Chairman.) The suggestion in this letter is a suggestion of criminal proceedings rather than civil proceedings.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know what it was.

(Earl Russell.) There is no question about it, it was written as a warning before taking out a summons before a police Magistrate on my advice.

(Chairman.) Anybody who knew the facts might have prosecuted.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Earl Russell seems to know all about the letter.

(Earl Russell.) All about it—there is no mystery about it.

33030. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is very odd to us. We understood the man had sent it. (To the witness.) But you knew nothing at all about it?—No.

33031. I assumed this was written by your instructions, and that is why I passed to that point, because I wanted to ask you about the time mentioned in it?—I did not know anything about it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is plain that this must have referred to some criminal process.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Quite likely.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It cannot be that it was intended to put forward a claim for damages, or anything of that character.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, I think that is so.

(Earl Russell.) It never says it is written on Gamble's instructions, but it says, "We have just been instructed in the case of George Gamble."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Surely that means he has instructed them.

(Chairman.) Not if it is a criminal prosecution.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I thought it was the subsequent words that appeared to me to show it was a criminal process. "We think it right to lay the facts before you in order that the case may be investigated by the Authorities." The point, as I understand you are making on the letter is, whether it is written by Gamble's instructions or not, the information came from him.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I assumed the information came from him. He says it did not, so I have nothing more to say about it at the moment.

(Chairman.) He does not say the information did not come from him. He admits he had seen Mr. Timewell, and he had told Dr. Billinghurst.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) But he says he never told anybody it was 4 a.m., and he never told anybody that the constable was 207 H. Those are the two material points.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There was one thing further, and that is that it was in Spelman Street.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, that is so, Sir.

33032. Now, I understand you to say that you were in conversation with this woman only about two minutes before this constable came up?—Two or three minutes.

33033. Quite a short time?—Yes.

33034. Were you standing in the street talking to her?—Yes, talking to her when he came walking along.

33035. She had invited you to go with her?—Yes.

33036. Did she suggest any place you should go to?—No, she had scarcely time when the constable came round.

33037. Do I understand you to say that you did nothing, and said nothing which could have provoked the constable in any way?—No, only to mention what she said about him wanting to have connection with her round the corner.

33038. You have said that a sergeant saw what happened the second time?—He was at the top of the street, and there he was, within sight of him—that was when he knocked me down the second time.

33039. When you say the top of the street, just describe to me, as nearly as you can, what the position occupied by the sergeant was?—That is the corner of Brick Lane, and this is the street that I came up. (Describing.) I do not know what street it was.

33040. This was in Brick Lane?—The corner of Brick Lane and this street. He stood at the top of the street.

33041. He was partly in Brick Lane and partly in this street?—He was just at the corner.

33042. Did you see the sergeant before you were knocked down the second time?—I could see him in the distance, it would be about 50 yards off, talking to someone at the corner, but I could not say who it was. I could not get near enough to see him.

33043. Was it dark at the time?—Yes.

33044. What makes you say it was a sergeant?—Because I could see it was; I could see his stripes on his arm at the distance.

33045. At the time you were near enough to see the man had got stripes?—Yes, because he stood right in the gas lamp.

33046. Is Brick Lane a place where there are people passing up and down?—Yes.

33047. Did the sergeant come towards you, or did you go towards him?—We were making up towards him, and before we got up to Brick Lane the constable knocked me down the second time, and the sergeant came up while I was on the ground.

33048. How far from Brick Lane do you say it was that this second assault took place?—I could not say. It might be 50 yards or it might be 20.

33049. You said the sergeant was 50 yards off when you first saw him?—Because I could see him in the distance.

33050. Then you were walking towards Brick Lane?—Yes.

33051. How much nearer to Brick Lane had you got before this second assault that you speak of took place?—It was just before I got to the top of it—20 or 30 yards, as near as I can say.

33052. You were quite close to Brick Lane, according to you, the second time you were knocked down?—Yes.

33053. At that time were there people passing up and down Brick Lane?—Not so many, because it was the middle of the night.

33054. Did you call out?—Yes.

33055. You shouted as loud as you could?—Yes. I could hear windows going up, but I could not see where they were.

33056. Did anybody come up except the sergeant?—I could not say. I was on the ground and I lay on my face, and he was kicking me between the legs.

33057. Was the woman with you the whole time?—She followed up, and she was shouting out, telling the policeman to stop.

33058. Was she shouting out?—Yes, telling the policeman to stop.

33059. Was she screaming for help?—Yes, telling the policeman to stop, and he told her to get out of it.

33060. Was she shouting in such a way that anybody in Brick Lane could have heard her?—Yes, and they could have heard the windows going up, and everything.

33061. You mean that in this particular street, whatever it was, people's attention was generally called to what was going on?—They could not help it, because of the noise that was going on and shouting.

33062. And people were throwing up their windows and looking out?—Yes.

33063. Are any of those people here, do you know?—I don't know who is here and who is not.

33064. You have said that you told the doctors and the people at the hospital that you had been assaulted by a constable. Did you tell any of the doctors that a sergeant had passed you while this was going on?—Yes.

33065. You told the doctors that, too?—Yes, I told them how I was beaten.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no further question to ask. May I just say this, Sir, that we have used every means to find out about this case, and we cannot find out that the occurrence ever took place, and under those circumstances I am only entitled to ask questions which would elucidate the story as far as possible.

33066. (Earl Russell.) When you were at the hospital, was there another man named Weekes, who was also a patient, there?—Yes.

33067. You had some conversation with him about what happened to you?—Yes, he asked me how this occurred.

33068. Did you say anything to Weekes to the effect that you thought something further ought to be done about it?—Yes, and he said he knew someone who might take my case up, and he was going out of the hospital.

33069. Did you ask him to do anything about it?—He said they would send someone to see me in a day or two, and Mr. Timewell came.

33070. You thought yourself something ought to be done about it?—Yes, I thought so.

33071. On the 23rd November you had left the hospital a week, and you were in the convalescent home?—Yes.

33072. And, of course, you do not know who Mr. Timewell might have seen besides you?—No, I do not.

33073. (Chairman.) What is your age?—Thirty-three.

33074. Are you a Londoner born and bred?—No—Lincolnshire.

33075. When did you come to London?—I have been in London the last three or four years.

33076. Were you apprenticed to any trade?—No, I was only a painter's labourer.

33077. What did you do in Lincolnshire before you came to London?—Farming.

33078. You were an agricultural labourer?—Yes.

33079. You came to London and obtained employment as a painter's labourer?—Yes.

33080. Had you been in pretty good work until this occurrence?—Yes, I was working then at the time.

33081. Had you been under the same employment or firm all the time?—Yes, and I have gone back to the same place. They gave me some easier work, because I cannot do any scaffolding work or anything of that kind.

33082. But I am asking you for whom you were working before this occurrence took place?—I was working for the same employers.

33083. All the time in London?—No, not all the time.

33084. Who were your last employers before this occurrence in August?—I had been with them over a twelvemonth.

33085. Then you were in work a twelvemonth for the same employers before this occurrence in August?—Yes.

33086. Can you give me the name of your employers?—I would rather not, Sir.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no objection to his writing it down.

(Earl Russell.) He does not wish to publish the name because he is afraid it might affect his further employment.

33087. (Chairman.) I do not think it would, but you might write it down for us. But, at any rate, they have taken you back after you had got away from the convalescent home, and you have been doing such light work as you can do?—Yes. (The Witness wrote down the name of his employers and handed same to the Commissioners.)

33088. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You were working there as a painter's labourer?—Yes.

33089. (Chairman.) How many times did you see Mr. Timewell while you were in the hospital?—Three or four times. He came different times to see me.

33090. Did he take down any statement?—Yes, he asked me how it occurred and that kind of thing.

33091. And he wrote it down at the time?—Yes.

33092. In your presence?—Yes.

33093. Have you seen Mr. Timewell or anybody else since you left the convalescent home and have come back to London working?—Not till last evening.

33094. I want to know a little more particularly if you can remember as to the places in which these assaults took place. Do you know now that Ethel Griffiths stopped you in Spelman Street—do you agree that that is the case?—I could not say the name of the street.

33095. Have you never given the name of Spelman Street to anybody?—No. I told them where it was as near as I could say. I knew there was a lodging house at the top of the street.

33096. What do you mean by "the top of the street"?—Leading on to Brick Lane—the top of the street where this assault occurred.

33097. The top of the street nearest Brick Lane you call the top of the street, and there was a lodging house there?—Yes.

33098. You are not prepared to say it is not Spelman Street?—I could not say the name of the street, because I did not take any notice of the street. I know it was a street leading off Brick Lane. Brick Lane runs on the top of it.

G. Gamble. 20 Feb. 1907.

33099. You are perfectly certain that you did not tell Mr. Timewell it was Spelman Street?—No, I did not tell him, because I did not know the name of the street. I gave him the directions whereabouts it was as near as I could say.

33100. My reason for asking is that in the statement that was sent in to us in accordance with our procedure you are made to say, "When I was in Spelman Street I don't remember seeing the sergeant or the constable there." Did you know where was Spelman Street?—Yes, I had heard tell of Spelman Street, but I did not know exactly where it was.

33101. How far do you think was the place at which Ethel Griffiths stopped you from the place where the constable first assaulted you?—The place where she first stopped me was not far off a church—when the constable first came up to me.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Would you tell me, Mr. Bankes, for our information whether you have seen any of the statements which have been handed to us?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, and I was going to ask if I might have the statement he says he wrote in the hospital.

(Chairman.) He says Mr. Timewell wrote it down—he did not write it himself.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) But he signed it. I was going to ask that they might be called for.

33102. (Chairman.) Did you sign what Mr. Timewell had written?—Yes.

(Chairman.) We had better have the original of that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There is one question I forgot to ask the witness, and perhaps it might be convenient if I asked it now.

(Chairman.) Certainly.

33103. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I want to know this. You entered the hospital under the name of Pearce?—Yes.

33104. You gave the name of Pearce?—Yes.

33105. You were known at the hospital as Pearce?—Yes.

33106. Why did you do that?—I don't know how it was, but when I saw it on the board it was given as Pearce, and whether they misunderstood it Pearce instead of "Police" I could not say, because I was half insensible when I got up there with the pain and one thing and the other. I told them about it, and they said "You have got entered as Pearce."

33107. They could not mistake the name "Gamble" for "Pearce"?—They must have asked me, because I said "That is not my name," and they said, "That is what we understood you to say."

33108. But the first question asked by Earl Russell of you to-day was "Is your name George Gamble, and are you also known as George Pearce"?—Yes, I was in the hospital.

33109. Have you ever been known before as Pearce?—No.

33110. Never?—No.

33111. When you went to the hospital do you remember somebody asking you your name?—No, I do not.

33112. Do not you?—No, I do not.

33113. Had anything happened with this woman that you were ashamed of so that you did not want to give your own name?—No, there was nothing. She was only a loose woman, but there was nothing more.

33114. You told the Commissioners you do not remember giving the name of Pearce?—I do not. That is what I say. If I did give it it was while I was in such pain.

33115. (Chairman.) I understood you to suggest that the name of Pearce might have been taken down, because you were saying "Police, Police," or something like that in your pain?—Yes, something like that.

33116. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There is one other question I ought to have asked. Can you say whether the policeman kicked you, or the man whoever it was kicked you; kicked you from the front or from behind?—From behind. I lay on my face with my arms over my head, and I thought he was going to kick me in the head. I was trying to save my head, and that is how I got it between my legs.

33117. (Earl Russell.) If the Commissioners wish these originals to be put in I have had them found. (To the Witness.) Will you look at the signature there? (Handing document to the Witness.) Is that your writing?—Yes.

33118. Do you remember that statement being made?—No, I cannot very well.

33119. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Earl Russell tells me that that first one is signed "Pearce."

(Chairman.) Both are signed "Pearce."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I very much doubt whether it is "Pearce." It might be "P-e-a-r," and certainly one is signed "P-e-a-c-e," and it looks as if it was going to be made "Place."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) This one is quite plain—"George Pearce." (Handing another document to the Witness.)

33120. (Earl Russell.) Did you sign that one too?—Yes, I think I did.

33121. Do you remember those being taken from you either by Mr. Timewell or a friend of Mr. Timewell's?—I remember one being taken.

33122. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I ask a further question on that before I read them? How came you to sign those "George Pearce?" At the time you signed those you knew quite well what you were doing?—No, I did not. I was undergoing operations all the time.

33123. But a gentleman came to you, and asked you to give your evidence, and you gave him your evidence, and he wrote it down?—Yes, I told him how it occurred—that was all.

33124. Do you suggest to these gentlemen that you were not at the time in a fit condition to know what was going on?—Oh, yes. I certainly knew what was going on.

33125. Then how came you to sign the name of "Pearce" to those documents?—Because I was in the hospital under the name of Pearce, and I was on the register as Pearce.

33126. (Chairman.) Have you any recollection of being asked your name shortly after you went into the hospital?—Yes.

33127. What name did you give?—I told them my name, but they said they had got it made out as "Pearce," and I notice it on the blackboard in the ward that it was "Pearce."

33128. Who asked your name?—The nurses when they were going to send for my sister for one of my operations.

33129. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You do not seem to have known how to spell it?—No.

33130. (Chairman.) What was written up on the blackboard?—"Pearce."

33131. Just spell it out letter by letter?—I could not say.

33132. What did you see on the board?—"P-e-a-r-c-e" or "P-a-r-s-e"—"P-a-r-s-e," I think it was.

33133. Were there other names on the blackboard as well?—No.

33134. Why was your name on the blackboard in the ward?—This was my diet board over my bed.

33135. I was going to ask you as to the places at which these assaults took place. You told me when you were talking to Ethel Griffiths a police constable in uniform came up, and then there was a conversation?—Yes.

33136. You said, "All right, there is no hurry," and then walked on?—Yes.

33137. Ethel Griffiths stopped with the constable?—Yes.

33138. And subsequently Ethel Griffiths came up to you?—Yes, she caught me up again.

33139. And then the police constable caught you up?—She caught me up, and she told me what he had asked her to do.

33140. Then after that, while you were talking to Ethel Griffiths, the police constable catches you up again?—He had followed her round.

33141. How far was the place at which he caught you up from the place where you and Ethel Griffiths had been talking when he first spoke to you?—The second time when he caught me up, you mean?

33142. When he caught you up the first time?—Round the corner. There was a church where he first caught her, or a school, and he went round the corner and caught me up there.

33143. I must put my question again, and please listen to it carefully. The first time you came into contact with the police constable was when you were talking to Ethel Griffiths?—Yes.

33144. And you do not know the name of the street in which that conversation took place?—No, I do not. I could not say; it is no use saying I could.

33145. As the result of that conversation you walked on, leaving the police constable talking to Ethel Griffiths?—Yes, I did.

33146. Then you walked on for some little time?—Not so long, because I only walked steadily on, and he caught me up.

33147. You walked steadily on, and then first Griffiths caught you up?—Yes.

33148. Then when you were still walking on, I understand, the police constable caught you up?—Yes, he had followed her round.

33149. Where were you when the police constable caught you up—in what street were you?—That I could not say; it was a street leading straight up into Brick Lane.

33150. Was it in the same street?—No, I had turned round the corner. There was a church when he first came up to me when I was talking to her. I got round the corner, and he came up the second time.

33151. You do not know the name of that street?—No, I don't.

33152. But there is a church there?—A church or a school or something there.

33153. How far was the place at which the constable caught you up and spoke to you the second time from the place where he first spoke to you?—I should say 300 or 400 yards, or something like that, as near as I could say. I did not take that notice. Being dark, I did not take that notice of it.

33154. Might it have been half a mile?—No, it would not have been half a mile, because the time would not allow for that.

33155. How many minutes, do you say?—Not five minutes.

33156. Did you tell Mr. Timewell, when you saw him in the hospital, that it was about half a mile from the place?—No, it would be under half a mile. I could not say exactly.

33157. What I have got down here in this statement that you signed is this:—"I first came into contact with the constable quite half a mile or more from the place where he assaulted me"?—I could not say exactly how far it would be, because it was round the corner, and being a dark night, and being upset as I was, I could not say exactly.

33158. You think now it was about 300 or 400 yards?—As near as I could say—500 or 600 yards. I could not say. I should know the place again if I went there.

33159. In your first statement you seem to say that after the conversation with the constable you went on about a minute?—It was not five minutes, any way.

33160. Then I understand he knocked you down soon after he had caught you up and had a further conversation?—No, I kept walking on, and he kept treading on my heels; when I tried to stop he kept shoving me.

33161. You told us, "He followed me up still, he knocked me down, and started kicking me"?—Yes, he did.

33162. How far had you walked then from the place where he caught you up?—A nice way.

33163. A nice way?—I was walking steadily on, and he kept talking and treading on my heels and shoving me, and he knocked me down.

33164. How far did he walk doing that kind of thing before he knocked you down?—I could not say; I could not remember.

33165. A couple of hundred yards, or something like that?—I could not say.

33166. When you were knocked down the first time, did you hear any windows being opened?—No.

33167. After you had been knocked down the first time, I understand, you got up and walked away?—Yes, I did.

33168. He still followed you?—He followed me, and knocked me down and kicked me.

33169. How far was the place where he knocked you down the second time from the place where he first knocked you down?—I could not say, because I turned round the corner and went up the street.

33170. Was it half a mile away, or only one hundred yards?—I am sure I could not say; it might have been half a mile or it might have been less; I turned round the corner of the street.

33171. How long do you think the whole matter took? We know that closing time is half-past 12. You left the public-house, you said, about ten minutes before closing time. That would make it roughly about twenty minutes past 12?—Yes.

33172. Then the street in which you met Ethel Griffiths does not seem to be very far from the public-house where you had the shandy-gaff?—It was a good way.

33173. What do you mean by a "good way"?—It was one of the cross streets.

33174. Only a few minutes' walk?—Yes, that is all—ten minutes.

33175. It must have been a good deal before 1 o'clock?—Yes, it was.

33176. Assuming you left the public-house at ten minutes past 12, your conversation with Ethel Griffiths took place before 1 o'clock?—One o'clock, or a little after. I went steadily on.

33177. Forty minutes? Did you walk for forty minutes?—No, I did not hurry. I went and had some fish and potatoes. I went and had some supper.

33178. Where did you have the supper?—At a fish shop.

33179. Whereabouts? Do you know the name of the street?—No, I could not say; it is one of the cross streets.

33180. Then when you first spoke to Ethel Griffiths, or she spoke to you, it was about 1 o'clock in the morning?—Yes, as near as I could say.

33181. Take it to be 1 o'clock. How long did all this business with the policeman take, from the time he first interrupted your conversation with Ethel Griffiths to the time when, by command of the sergeant, he left off kicking you?—Say a quarter-of-an hour to twenty minutes, or something like that.

33182. I understand you did not get to the hospital until about three o'clock?—I went down and stood against the wall and thought of going to bed, and then I found I was getting worse, and made up my mind to go to the hospital.

33183. As nearly as I can follow the story it took you a good long time to get to the hospital?—Yes, because I went and stood against the wall, thinking of going to bed. I did not think it would be so bad as it was, but it started swelling, and I found I had to go.

33184. Did Ethel Griffiths and Wiltshire walk with you to the hospital?—Yes, they went with me and they stopped there for a time.

(Earl Russell.) I should like, with your permission, to put in this postcard. It is on the question of his condition and also as to his willingness to make a statement. May I read it?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Will you hand it up? I am rather wanting to know something about that. (The postcard was handed to the Commissioners.)

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That has a date on it,

33185. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes. Can you tell us how it was that Mr. Timewell, or someone from Mr. Timewell, came to you? We have had no explanation of that yet. You know who Mr. Timewell is?—Yes.

33186. You had heard of him before you went to the hospital?—No.

33187. You never had?—No.

G. Gamble. 20 Feb. 1907.

33188. Who first mentioned his name to you?—A patient in the ward. I was telling him how this occurred. He said there was a society to take those cases up.

33189. Was that Weekes?—Yes.

33190. Weekes told you Mr. Timewell represented a society which would take up a case against the police?—Yes. He did not say against the police, but he said they might take my case up.

33191. Weekes knew your case was against the police?—Yes. I told them in the ward how it had occurred.

33192. Then you wrote to Mr. Timewell?—No, Mr. Timewell came to see me. He went out, and he went to see Mr. Timewell.

33193. Weekes went out?—Yes.

33194. According to your view, Weekes communicated with Mr. Timewell, and then Mr. Timewell came to see you?—Yes.

33195. Can you tell us how long that was, or have you any notion how long that was after you went into the hospital?—No, I could not say.

33196. I see this is a postcard, dated the 30th August, and it is written by you. Is that in your handwriting?—Yes.

33197. All of it?—Yes.

33198. Was that written before or after you had made the first statement?—I could not say; I could not remember.

33199. This postcard says: "Sir, if you can come to-day to see me, or to-morrow, between the hours of three and five; but come to-day, if possible, as I shall have to go through another operation yet, and it may be any day, perhaps to-morrow.—I remain, yours faithfully"?—Yes. He came to see me the same day I was to go under the operation.

33200. Did he come to see you after you wrote that postcard?—It was after he wrote about it and gave me his address. Weekes said something about that. He had been once to see me before that, but only to say a few words. That is all.

33201. Apparently someone from Mr. Timewell's society had written to you first?—They had been to see me once.

33202. You said just now that he came to see you?—Yes, he came to see me two or three times.

33203. Just follow. Had he written to you and been to see you before you wrote that postcard?—I could not say, because he came three or four times.

33204. Just look at it. What I want you to tell me is whether he ever came to see you before that postcard, or whether that postcard was not written by you?—The postcard was written by me.

33205. It was written by you before you had seen him or heard from him?—I heard from him.

33206. You wrote to tell him that he could come to see you?—Yes, that was it. He came. He said, when could he see me. I wrote that postcard to let him know. He came the same day as I was to go under the operation.

33207. He must have been to see you, apparently, because the postcard has his name written on it?—Yes, he came to see me.

33208. And left you the postcard?—And left me the postcard. That was the first time. Weekes sent him to me. He did not stay many minutes. He said I was to let him know when I could see him.

33209. I want you to follow this for a moment. Can you tell us whether you had ever used the name of Pearce before?—No.

33210. "G. Pearce"?—Yes.

33211. Had you never been known by that name?—No.

33212. Had you any reason for concealing your name?—I do not think I had.

33213. I only want to know whether you had?—No, only when I went to the hospital I was put on the register as Pearce.

33214. You sign yourself here without any difficulty, "G. Pearce"?—That is what was entered at the hospital.

33215. And it has the number of the bed—"G. Pearce—24 bed"?—That was the number of my bed.

33216. Did you tell them at the time that Pearce was not your name?—Yes, I mentioned it to them.

33217. To whom?—To Mr. Timewell, do you mean?—Yes.

33218. You mean to Mr. Timewell and not to the police authorities?—I had no police to see me at all.

33219. Nor to the hospital authorities?—Yes, I mentioned it to them once or twice. They said they had entered me as Pearce, and they had it in the books.

33220. Did you tell Dr. Billinghurst, do you remember, whether Pearce was your name or not?—I do not.

(Chairman.) The first statement is headed, "G. Pearce." The second statement is "George Gamble, known as George Pearce."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The second statement is "George Gamble, alias George Pearce."

(Chairman.) That is not so in my copy.

33221. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I am reading from the original. The copy supplied to us says, "George Gamble, known as George Pearce." This, which I understand is the second statement, is "George Gamble, alias George Pearce." Was this statement signed by you after that postcard had been sent, when they came to take a statement from you?—Yes.

33222. That was the first one?—As near as I could say. I do not know which was the first or which was the second.

33223. Why was there any difficulty about your signing that?—I am sure I could not say; I was just going under an operation.

33224. Do you mean at the time you made this statement you were in pain?—Yes, I was in pain; I was just about going under the operation.

33225. You had difficulty in writing?—No.

(Chairman.) It is very good writing on the postcard.

(Earl Russell.) Yes, but I am told the nurse was in and out every two or three minutes.

33226. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did you tell him the story in your own language. I mean did you tell him the story and did he take it down when he took your statement?—As well as I can remember.

33227. Do you know whether it was Mr. Timewell who took it?—I think there were two gentlemen came. Two gentlemen came to see me once, and then one gentleman came once or twice.

33228. When you first saw them, or whoever it was to whom you gave the statement, you told the story, did you not, in your own way?—Yes, as well as I could remember.

33229. Did he come to see you after you wrote that happened. There is something I want to call your attention to. As regards the time, there is something missing apparently in the story. At what time is the London Music Hall over?—Sometimes at 11, and sometimes a little after, and sometimes at a quarter to 11.

33230. It does not matter very much whether it was 11, or a little after. Taking the longer way you came it would take you about three-quarters of an hour?—Yes.

33231. You told us you went in somewhere and had some shandy-gaff?—Yes.

33232. Is that where you had supper?—No.

33233. That was the first place. You only stayed in there you say a few minutes?—Perhaps five minutes.

33234. Then you went somewhere to have some supper?—Yes, some fish and potatoes.

33235. That was at a shop, I suppose?—Yes.

33236. How long were you there?—I could not say exactly; it might have been half an hour, or it might have been twenty minutes.

33237. You mean just a sufficient time to eat your supper comfortably?—Yes.

33238. Did you meet anybody you knew there?—No, because I did not mix with the people round there.

33239. You never talked to them?—No, I never mixed with them at all.

33240. Do you remember the place?—No, I do not.

33241. Do you remember the street?—No, I know it was by Spitalfields Church; there are several fish shops by there.

33242. Then you came away from there and met Ethel Griffiths a little time after?—Yes.

33243. How long was it after you had been knocked about and kicked as you have told us before you got to the hospital?—It might have been a couple of hours or an hour and a half. I went and stood down by the wall thinking of going to bed.

33244. Was Ethel Griffiths with you all the time?—No, she stopped at the top of the street, and this boy must have gone and fetched her when he found I had to go to the hospital, and I walked up, and they took me up to the hospital.

33245. Have you ever said you were brought to the hospital at five o'clock in the morning?—No, I do not know exactly what time it was, but I think it was about four, or something like that.

33246. Just look at your first statement which was taken. (Handing.) You see that says that "George Pearce, who is now under Dr. Billinghurst, was brought into the hospital on Tuesday morning about 5 a.m., 21st August"?—Yes. Of course I could not say to an hour or half an hour, because I lay down there thinking I would go to bed. I did not see the doctor for a long time, for he was in bed; they had to go and call him. I lay there for a long while before he came down.

(Earl Russell.) You notice that that does not profess to be his statement?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) No. It may or may not be. It is information supplied to somebody, but it is signed. It is not part of the statement.

(Earl Russell.) I think one may take it that what was read over to him would begin at the word "I."

33247. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It may be. The statement which is no doubt here comes from somewhere. There is one matter I want to understand from you. Are you clear in your mind that you had been kicked by the police-constable before you saw the police-sergeant?—Yes.

33248. When he kicked you the first time were you in sight of a police-sergeant?—No, I could not say. I know he came up while I was on the ground. I saw very little of the sergeant. When I saw him I was on the ground—when he came up.

33249. There were two occasions on which he kicked you, were there not?—Yes.

33250. When he knocked you down the first time you told us you were able to get up by yourself?—Yes, I got up and started walking away. He followed me up and knocked me down.

33251. Was there no question of his lifting you up?—No. He told me to get up. He said "Get up and fight him like a man."

33252. That was the second time. Do you say the policeman said that?—Yes.

33253. Not the sergeant?—I could not say—both of them stood there.

33254. I rather think you told us before that the sergeant said that?—Yes, he did say that at the time. He stood there. He said "Why don't you get up and fight him like a man." Other words he said, but I cannot remember what he said.

33255. I will tell you why I am asking you about this. Will you look at your statement. That is the first statement you made. (Handing.) You say this first of all before we get to the kicking: "The P.C. came up again and followed us when we came in sight of a police-sergeant and another police-constable." You notice before there is nothing about your having been knocked down or kicked?—No.

33256. Then is what you said there right. Read a little further back: "The police-constable caught hold of the woman and pulled her away. I went down, and soon afterwards, about a minute, the woman caught me up and told me that the police-constable asked her to go round the corner and let him have connection with her." Do you see that?—Yes.

33257. So far he had done nothing to you. That statement does not say that he had done anything to you so far. Then you see it goes on to the passage I showed you just now: "The P.C. came up again and followed us, when we came in sight of a police-sergeant and another police-constable, then he began pushing me about, evidently expecting me to strike him." Is that right—that he first began pushing you about expecting you to strike him, when you came in sight of the police-sergeant and another police-constable?—That is where it was; he was following me up all the time and trying to tread on my heels. He seemed to get worse when he got near the sergeant.

33258. But he had knocked you about and kicked you before you came up to the police-sergeant. That was the second time according to the story you told us this morning?—The sergeant came up, as far as I remember, while I was on the ground. He followed me right up the street, and even into Brick Lane, and when he got in sight of him he knocked me down. Then I got up and went away, and he followed me up and knocked me down again.

33259. That I understand you to have said. When he knocked you down the first time were you in sight of the police-sergeant and the other police-constable?—Yes, because he followed me up the street.

33260. Then that means that both times he knocked you down and kicked you you were in sight of the police-sergeant and the other police-constable?—I cannot say whether the sergeant was there or not the first time, but he was this time.

33261. Just think a minute about it. That is just the opposite to what you told us before; the story that yo ugave us before was that the policeman after Ethel Griffiths had caught you up and told you about the policeman came up to you and said "You are up to no good"?—Yes.

33262. (Chairman.) You will remember I asked you that question very plainly?—Yes.

33263. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You said also in answer to Mr. Bankes, besides the answer you gave to the question asked you by the learned Chairman, that there was no one in the street but the policeman who knocked you about, Ethel Griffiths, and yourself?—There was not as far as I saw.

33264. Then did you or did you not see the sergeant at that time?—No, I did not—not at that time.

33265. Nor the other police-constable?—No.

33266. That was the first time he knocked you down?—He caught me up a second time. He stopped behind me there, and then he caught me up.

33267. Then the first time, according to you, when you were knocked down you were not in sight of the police-sergeant or the other police-constable?—No.

33268. It was the second time he knocked you about in the sight of the constable and the sergeant?—I was making my way up, and then when he got up to me he knocked me down.

33269. That is different from the statement you made, when you were in the hospital, to Mr. Timewell, because according to that statement what you say is this: The first complaint you have as regards his knocking you about is that "The police-constable came up again and followed us; when he came in sight of the police-sergeant and another police-constable that he commenced pushing me about"?—Yes, he did.

33270. That is the first time you say he began pushing you about?—He caught me a second time and began pushing me about.

33271. Twice he did it?—He followed me after he had done one lot, and started on me again.

33272. So I understand you to say, but the point on which I wish you to give some explanation if you can is why, if that is the case, you made the statement quite early when you were in the hospital that when he came up and began pushing you about it was in sight of the police-sergeant and the other police-constable?—Yes, I really could not say whether it was the first or the second time, but I know it was when he got there, because I could see the sergeant at the top of the street.

33273. That, I thought you said just now, was the second time?—I could not remember, but I know the sergeant stood at the top of the street and stood looking at me.

33274. And spoke to you?—Yes, he said, "Why don't you fight him like a man." He said to the constable, "That is enough," and that is all I do remember. As to the sergeant, I did not get a look at him.

G. Gamble.

20 Feb. 1907.

33275. Did he ever lift you up?—I could not say; I cannot remember.

33276. Did you ever say this, "He kicked me outside the lodging house near Brick Lane"?—It was not far off; it was just before we get up to there. This sergeant and the man stood outside a lodging house there.

33277. I am trying to find out what you said with regard to this story. Did anybody ever tell you that this had taken place in Spelman Street?—They tried to tell me what street it was. I told them it was one of the streets leading up to Brick Lane.

33278. Who tried to explain it to you?—One of Mr. Timewell's men. He asked me if I knew the name of the street, and I said "No." He said it might be Spelman Street.

33279. It was somebody from them who first suggested to you that it might have happened in Spelman Street?—Yes. I told them about the court leading down opposite this lodging house.

33280. They said that was Spelman Street?—Yes, I did not know the name of the street. I said it was at the corner, with a lodging house at the top of it.

33281. Did you ever say this—that he kicked you outside the lodging house near Brick Lane?—Yes, it was not far off.

33282. And also at the schools near there?—Not far off the schools; it is either a school or a church.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is a long way off.

33283. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) How far would the schools be from the lodging house at Brick Lane?—It would be a nice way; it is very nearly the full length of one street.

33284. It is a nice way, by which you mean it is a longish way—is that what you mean?—Yes, like one street.

33285. There cannot be any confusion. It must be two different places?—Yes, two different places.

33286. So that, according to that, he kicked you outside the lodging house near Brick Lane?—And more towards the schools.

33287. What lodging house near Brick Lane was that?—I could not say; I did not get up there.

33288. I understood you to say that he kicked you outside the lodging house near Brick Lane. Which lodging house did you mean?—I think right at the corner of it. Leading out of this street to the corner of Brick Lane there is a lodging house at the top of it. It was below there. It was not just outside, but it was just below there. I could see the police-sergeant standing there by the lodging house.

33289. Do you mean when you were kicked and saw the police-constable you saw the sergeant close to the common lodging house?—Yes, he just stood by the corner. I had not got as far as the lodging house.

33290. He must have walked from there to you?—Down to where this occurred.

33291. Do you also say he kicked you at the schools near there?—Lower down than that—further down from Brick Lane than that.

33292. Would that be further away from your home?—Yes, that was nearer where he first assaulted me.

33293. That must have been the first time?—I could not say.

33294. You did not go back when you were getting to the lodging house?—I cannot say, I walked down to get out of the policeman's road, because he came after me to knock me down again.

33295. Did you go back again?—I am sure I could not say.

33296. You do not remember?—I do not.

33297. You say "He also kicked me at the schools near there"?—In that direction.

33298. And you say "Also in Spelman Street when he left me"?—That is the street leading up to the lodging house.

33299. If that is right that would make three occasions on which he kicked you?—There were only two occasions; he got up to the schools where he caught me up the second time.

33300. How far is the school from Spelman Street?—As far as I know it very nearly adjoins it— as well as I can remember—it is not so far off.

33301. I notice in this original statement there is a good deal of correction about the police-sergeant and the police-constable. (Handing statement.) Do you notice that?—Yes.

33302. Do you remember anything about it?—No.

33303. You see it has been corrected. There seems to have been some doubt as to what was to be written?—I know it was corrected.

33304. I want you to look at that particularly. Do you remember whether the words "P.S. and another constable" were written in when you signed it?—I never read this through as far as I can remember.

33305. Perhaps that is the explanation of it?—I cannot say that I read it through; I do not remember reading the contents of it.

33306. As far as you are concerned that explains it no doubt. You do not remember this being read over at all?—No.

33307. That is the time when you were in pain you have told us?—Yes.

33308. Can you remember how many times you have made a statement—once or twice?—Once or twice—once I think, when they came and took a written statement. I really cannot say, because he came five or six times to see me, and I do not know whether he took statements or not.

33309. Can you give me an idea of when that was taken. Was that after you had left the hospital or before?—Before I left.

33310. It was before you left the hospital?—Yes.

33311. You are clear as to that?—Yes.

33312. You see that second statement that you have got was written at the time when you were in the hospital apparently. There you see you do give the name of Gamble?—Yes.

33313. The second statement says "George Gamble, alias George Pearce"; is that the one you have signed "George Pearce"?—Yes, I signed them all as Pearce.

33314. Because you thought it was better?—Yes.

33315. Have you ever had any trouble with the police before?—No, I was not known. I never had any connection with them. The policeman was quite a stranger to me; he did not know me.

33316. I mean either with the police here or elsewhere in London?—Not that I am aware of; he is a total stranger to me. I never mix with no one.

33317. You have spoken several times about the policeman following you, treading on your heels?—Yes.

33318. I understand you to mean by that he followed you up purposely treading on your heels?—Yes. He kept following me, treading on my heels, and then danced in front of me. When I wanted to walk away from him he would run in front of me and stop me going on.

33319. Did he hurt you when he trod on your heels?—He tried to trip me up, and tried to make me fall down. Then he kept shoving into me. I said I did not wish him to lay his hands on me. I did not use any bad language.

33320. You have seen the man who has been identified in court to-day?—Yes, I could tell him anywhere.

33321. I understand you quite plainly to say it is not you who ever gave his number?—No, I never knew his number. I could identify him by his moustache.

33322. Had you ever heard his number at all until you saw it to-day?—Yes, I had heard his number.

33323. When did you hear it?—I heard it this morning.

33324. Had you never heard it before?—No.

33325. So that, if I follow you correctly, this man had knocked you about, as you have told us, on the 21st August last year, and you had never seen him again until this morning?—Not until this morning.

33326. Never heard his number?—Never heard it.

33327. But you picked out the police-constable 207, as we saw?—Yes.

33328. And you have no doubt whatever that is the man?—That is the man.

33329. You are quite clear as to that?—I could swear my life that that is the man.

33330. It is a serious matter. You are quite clear that that is the man you picked out?—Yes, that is the man.

33331. You told us you could not identify the other men, the police-sergeant or the other police-constable?—No, I could not, because they came up when I was on the ground.

33332. Why did you not get up and attempt to get away?—I did try. I was on the ground, and he was kicking me all the time.

33333. You have told us he knocked you down. When he knocked you down, as I understand, from an explanation which I think you gave to Mr. Bankes, you fell face forward?—Yes. I thought he was going to kick me on the head, instead of that he kicked between the legs.

33334. Did he kick you often?—Yes.

33335. That was after you had told him you would report him?—Yes. When he was shoving me I said, "I don't want you to shove me." I said I was going home and I wanted him to keep his hands off me.

33336. How did he knock you down?—He hit me with his hand first, then I fell forward.

33337. You mean he hit you with his hand—where?—On the face—by the side of the face somewhere.

33338. From the front or from the back?—From the side.

33339. As you were going along he was following you?—Yes.

33340. Then he hit you, and then you fell on your face?—Yes, and I thought he was going to kick me on the head, but he kicked me between the legs all the time.

33341. (Mr. Dickinson.) I want to understand a little bit more about the place that you were at. Am I right in saying that when the policeman first knocked you down you were in a street that led into Brick Lane?—Yes, as near as I could say; it was not far from the schools where it first occurred.

33342. You tell us that at one time you were able to see the sergeant at the end of the road, standing under a lamp-post?—Yes, he stood against this lodging-house corner.

33343. That is a lamp-post in Brick Lane?—Yes, leading up into Brick Lane.

33344. Was that where the policeman first assaulted you—in Brick Lane?—Yes, it would be.

33345. But was it?—It was, the second time.

33346. The second time you were in a street leading up to Brick Lane, and from which you could see Brick Lane?—Yes.

33347. Now carry your mind back to the first time. Between the first time that he assaulted you and the second time had you been walking along the same street?—I could not say to that; I turned to get away from the policeman, and he caught me up again and knocked me down.

33348. You began by saying, I think, that when you first saw Ethel Griffiths?—It was down by the schools or church, or near the schools.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Can you, Mr. Bankes, make out from the plan where the schools are?

(Mr. Eldon. Bankes.) There are schools, I am told, in King Edward Street. As far as I know, there are only two buildings there. There is a church here, I am told.

(Mr. Dickinson.) The school is in Brick Lane, I understand.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The only place we know where there are schools is in Osborn Place.

33349. (Mr. Dickinson.) On which side of the street that you were in, looking towards Brick Lane, is this church?—I am sure I could not remember; I could not say.

33350. Is it at the end?—It is at the bottom end of Brick Lane. Brick Lane is at the top, and the church, or school, or whatever it is, is at the bottom of it.

33351. At the corner of Brick Lane and the street you were in?—It is right at the corner, as far as I remember. You seem to go round the corner; I know I went round the corner.

33352. Is that the place opposite this church, or the schools, where you were first assaulted?—It was a little by there when he first caught me up—it was a little by there, round by that church, or schools, or whatever they are.

33353. That church and the schools are in Brick Lane.

33354. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He says the church or schools?—It is at the bottom; it is in Spelman Street, or whatever the name is.

33355. (Mr. Dickinson.) In Brick Lane?—No, Brick Lane is at the top. This was at the bottom. This was right at the bottom of the street, making up towards Brick Lane.

33356. You say you were going towards Brick Lane?—Yes.

33357. Cannot you help us to identify where this school is?—No, I cannot. I know it is at the far end—at the bottom. The lodging-house is at the corner of this street which runs down, and there is a church, or a school, or whatever it is, right at the bottom of that same street.

33358. I want to understand this: Where this lodging-house and the schools are is where you say the sergeant was?—Yes, somewhere at the top of Brick Lane.

33359. You said just now that was the place where you first came in contact with the police?—No, not first, because it was right down; he had been following me right up there.

33360. Before you got to this place where the church was he had been following you?—Yes, he had been following me right up.

33361. He had been following you?—Yes.

33362. And it was before he followed you that he first assaulted you?—Yes.

33363. Then the first assault was not at this place where the lodging-house is?—No.

33364. Was where the first assault took place in a road leading into this?—I could not say—some way off from the church or schools.

33365. After the assault, and up to the second assault you were walking towards it?—Yes, towards Brick Lane.

33366. That you are quite certain of?—Yes.

33367. After you had seen the sergeant, where did you go?—I then turned towards the lodging-house.

33368. Along which road?—Along Brick Lane, and went down Wentworth Street.

33369. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You cross Brick Lane to go down Wentworth Street?—Yes.

33370. (Mr. Dickinson.) You crossed Brick Lane?—Yes, and went into the top end of Wentworth Street, and then went down into Commercial Street.

33371. Now, I want to ask you one or two questions with regard to the hospital. You told us just now you remember being asked your name at the hospital?—No, I do not remember it, I cannot remember it; I was racked with pain.

33372. That was after you first went in?—Yes, when I was admitted.

33373. But you told them your name afterwards?—Yes, I told them.

33374. You said this, that the nurses asked you your name when they were going to send for your sister before the operation?—Yes, they wrote down for my sister.

33375. I want to know about that. They told you they were going to send for your sister before the operation?—Yes.

33376. What is your sister's name?—Mrs. Bish.

33377. Did they write to her?—They sent a telegram.

33378. Did you tell them what your name was?—No, I did not tell them.

33379. Did your sister come?—Yes, she came up.

33380. How would she know that "George Pearce" was you?—I do not know. They would know I was her brother. I told them my sister's name.

G. Gamble.

20 Feb. 1907.

33381. At all events, your sister came?—Yes.

33382. When she came, did she say anything to you about your name?—Yes. She said: "How is it you are in this name?" I said, "They have got it mixed up."

33383. Mr. Timewell came to you at the hospital, and you saw him two or three times?—Yes, or three or four times.

33384. Did you tell him the names of anybody whom he could see?—No, I did not. I told them who it was who was likely to have brought me up there; that was all; I did not know who else was there.

33385. You told him the name of Ethel Griffiths?—I told him about the woman; I do not really know what her name was.

33386. You did not know her name?—Not until they told me.

33387. You told him about the woman?—Yes.

33388. Did you give any description of her to him? Yes.

33389. What kind of description did you give him?—I told him the kind of woman she was; I left it all to them.

33390. You knew this woman?—I had seen her two or three times before.

33391. I suppose you had known her intimately?—No, I had seen her two or three times. They asked me, and I said, "I cannot bother."

33392. She accosted you in the street. Was that the first time she had ever accosted you?—No, but as I say, she had been round there—I had seen her at different times round there.

33393. And you had spoken to her?—Yes; only as a matter of form.

33394. What do you mean by "as a matter of form"?—She would ask me if I was going to treat her, or anything like that.

33395. Did she ask you to go home with her?—Yes.

33396. Had you ever gone home with her?—No, I could not say that I had.

33397. You knew where she lived?—Yes. She lived at a lodging-house.

33398. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Could you say that you had not ever been home with her?—No, I could not say that.

33399. (Mr. Dickinson.) You know exactly where her house is?—She changes—she has rooms.

33400. You knew where she did live at one time?—At one time, yes.

33401. And I suppose you told these gentlemen where they could find her?—No, I gave them a description, and I left it all to them. I did not know what they had done, or what they had not done.

33402. What kind of description did you give; you say you did not know her name?—I told them she was a stoutish person, and gave a description where she generally was, and what public-houses she generally went to.

33403. You told them she was a prostitute, I suppose?—Yes.

33404. And that she could be found at certain public-houses?—Yes, she was generally hanging about there.

33405. Did you tell them any other name?—No, only the boys that came with me.

33406. How did you describe them?—I did not describe them at all. I did not know their names—I did not know the boy's name until after asking the nurse.

33407. I suppose Mr. Timewell asked you for a description of them?—Yes, and I did not know.

33408. You could not give him any description?—No.

33409. You cannot account for how it was he managed to find them?—No, I cannot. And I only told them I did not know the boy's name.

33410. I am not quite satisfied about the time. You say that you spent two hours, I think, between the time when this assault took place, and your going to the hospital?—Yes, it took me a long time.

33411. You were quite close to your home?—Yes.

33412. You went straight there?—I did not go in, I stayed outside thinking whether to go to bed or not, and to see how it would turn out.

33413. As I understand, you had been living there at the Victoria Home for a time?—Yes.

33414. It is a common habit for people to go there night after night for months?—Yes.

33415. And you sleep in cubicles?—Yes.

33416. You had your cubicle. You had been there for months?—Yes.

33417. And you kept your clothes there?—Yes, I did.

33418. In that cubicle?—Yes.

33419. Why did you not go in and go to bed?—Because I waited to see how it would turn out; I did not know whether to go to bed. I thought, If I go to bed I shall have to get up. Then I found it swelling more than ever.

33420. The Victoria Home is a philanthropic institution, is it not?—Yes.

33421. It is a large home, and it is managed by a manager?—Yes.

33422. What is the name of the manager?—Lord somebody.

33423. There is a manager there, is there not?—Yes.

33424. He is there all night?—Yes.

33425. If you had gone in there you would have consulted him about this?—Yes.

33426. Why did you not go in. There was a friend of yours there?—He could not leave there. There is no manager there—there is only a night watchman there after a certain time.

33427. I suppose he knows you perfectly well?—Yes.

33428. You had been there for months, and yet you stand outside there; your own bed is ready for you, and you do not go into it?—No, it was no use my going to bed when I did not know how it was going to turn out, and I should have to get up again.

33429. (Chairman.) As I understand, Wiltshire and another boy were with you at the time?—Yes. They advised me to go to the hospital, and I said: "No, I don't think I shall go; I will see how it turns out"; and at the finish I had to go.

33430. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you mean to say it took you two hours?—No.

33431. How long did you stand outside?—I should think not more than half an hour, or three-quarters of an hour.

33432. Was this boy present with you the whole of the time?—Yes. He went to the hospital.

33433. While you were waiting outside Victoria Home?—He followed me down after the police.

33434. But Ethel Griffiths did not follow you down?—Yes, she came down as we started to go to the hospital—and she went to the hospital—she came into the waiting room.

33435. She had last seen you in Brick Lane when the assault took place?—Yes.

33436. She did not go from Brick Lane to Victoria Home?—No.

33437. Therefore you lost sight of her?—Yes, I lost sight of her. Then she was coming down there.

33438. She met you accidentally, you mean?—Yes, as she was going on the streets. She said: "Has he hurt you much?" I said, "I shall have to go to the hospital."

33439. Was the lad Wiltshire with you?—Yes, we were making our way to the hospital then—he was helping me along.

33440. Had he been with you ever since the assault?—He came down soon after. I made my way alone down there, and then he came down and helped me along.

33441. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I asked you before about the time you got to the hospital, and you said it was about 3 o'clock?—As near as I could say, about 3 o'clock—it might have been 2 o'clock. I should think I lay there an hour before the doctor came.

33442. I want you to pay attention to this, and think about it for a minute. Is it impossible for this assault to have been committed at about 4 o'clock in the morning, according to your view?—Yes, because I was at the hospital at 4 o'clock.

33443. Then you mean it is impossible it could have happened about 4 o'clock in the morning?—It would not be so late as that.

33444. It could not have happened?—No, not so late as that.

33445. I want you to tell us what is the latest time you say this could have happened?—I reckon, as near as I could say, between 1 and 2.

33446. Then if we were to say 2 o'clock in the morning——?—That would be the latest.

33447. It could not possibly have been later than that?—No, I do not think so: I was at the hospital between 3 and 4.

33448. You were at the hospital between 3 and 4?—Something like that, as near as I could say. Then I had to wait there so long before the doctor came down.

33449. Had you been home with anybody?—No.

33450. After you had come out of the fish shop?—No: I was making my way home, as I have said.

33451. You were walking home, and nothing else?—No.

33452. That is a question of only a quarter of an hour, or twenty minutes, at the most?—About half an hour.

33453. It does not matter very much about twenty minutes or half an hour. You had not been in anywhere?—No, only I stopped, and then went gently on.

33454. I do not think you quite follow. Do you mean you had not been in any house after that?—No.

33455. Not at any time?—No.

33456. Had you been talking to anybody after you left the fish shop?—No. I stood talking to some young fellows, and gave them some cigarettes, and that.

33457. Was that outside the fish shop?—No, further on; outside a tobacconist's.

33458. How long did you stop talking to them?—Not more than five or ten minutes.

33459. Then you went towards home?—Yes.

33460. It is said by a number of persons that this happened at 4 o'clock, or half past 4 o'clock, in the morning?—No, it could not have been so late, because, as I say, I was at the hospital at that time, and before, as near as I could say.

33461. Suppose they are right about the time, and suppose you are making a mistake about the time?—That might be.

33462. What I want you to tell us is this. Can you account in any way for what you were doing between those times? That is the importance of it. Can you account at all for what you were doing up to 4 o'clock in the morning?—As I say, I was at the hospital before this.

33463. First of all, let me point this out to you, for I want you to give us some explanation of it, if you can, and it is of great importance that you should, if you can, so you must be frank with us about what happened. According to the statement of Dr. Billinghurst, you were not admitted to the hospital till 6 o'clock in the morning?—I lay there above an hour before I saw him.

33464. Just follow what I am putting to you. According to some of the persons who will be called before us, who opened windows and so forth when there was kicking going on, that did not happen till 4 o'clock or half past 4. According to the recollection of certain persons who are going to give evidence, this kicking did not take place till 4 or half past 4?—I think it was before then. G Gamble. 20 Feb. 1907.

33465. It leaves such a long time unaccounted for. Had you been doing anything? Did anything happen between those times?—No; I went gently along.

33466. Were you going to work the next morning?—Yes.

33467. What time do you get to work?—At half past 6.

33468. You would not be likely to be wandering about the streets?—Yes, I never lose time.

33469. You go to your work at the proper time the next morning?—At half past 6.

33470. You would get home and go to bed: you would not be stopping about the streets till 4 or half past 4?—I have been out all night, and then got up and gone to work when I have been home.

33471. Can you not give us any further account of what happened after you stopped talking to the boys and giving them some cigarettes outside a tobacconist's shop?—There was nothing happened, only as I say.

33472. Only one thing more. Had you ever been home with Ethel Griffiths before?—Yes, but not for a long while before this. I had not seen her for a long while before this.

33473. I do not quite know why you answered Mr. Dickinson, when he put that question to you, that you could not say you had?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) And to me, too.

33474. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) And to Mr Bankes. You certainly said it to Mr. Dickinson. I put the question whether you could say you had not been home with her, and you would not swear that you had been home with her?—Yes.

33475. You knew quite well you had?—Yes.

33476. And more than once?—Not more than once.

33477. You knew her?—I had seen her knocking about there.

33478. You had known her some time before?—I had seen her about.

33479. But you had been home with her?—Yes, been home with her about once or twice.

33480. Or it might be a little more, I suppose?—No, I do not suppose it was.

33481. You had been home with her. Was that always in the same neighbourhood?—Yes, or thereabouts.

33482. During the time that you had been living in this neighbourhood?—Yes.

33483. How long was that?—Six or eight months.

33484. You knew her name?—No, I did not know her name until I heard her called "Ethel"—then I did not know whether it was her right name or not.

33485. I suppose you knew her by the name of Ethel Griffiths?—Yes. Some people called her "Alice." I did not know which her right name was.

ETHEL GRIFFITHS, sworn.

33486. (Earl Russell.) Is your name Ethel Griffiths, and are you living at No. 2, Flower and Dean Street?—Yes. E. Griffiths

33487. Are you acquainted with the last witness, George Gamble?—No, I don't know him, but I have seen him twice.

33488. You have seen him occasionally?—Yes.

33489. Did you know him by name before August last?—Only as George.

33490. Do you remember meeting him very late one night in August?—Yes.

33491. You had spoken to him before as well as seeing him in the street?—Yes.

33492. You do remember meeting him very late one night in August?—Yes

33493. Will you tell us, as near as you can, exactly what time it was that you met him?—I think it was between two and three; I cannot quite remember, because it is such a long time back.

33494. You can tell us whether it was dark or whether it was daylight?—It was dark.

33495. Did you meet him by accident or by appointment?—By accident.

33496. Where was it you met him?—I really could not tell you the name of the street, but it was opposite some chapel down by Osborn Place, the bottom end of Osborn Place; I don't really remember the name of the street.

33497. What street was it near to?—I really could not tell you.

T. Griffiths. 21 Feb. 1907.

33498. Osborn Place is near Brick Lane, is it not?—Yes.

33499. You say it was in Osborn Place or near Osborn Place?—Near Osborn Place—it was opposite some chapel where I met him, or a school.

33500. Do you remember any public-house that it was anywhere near to?—No, I do not.

33501. You stopped him, did you not?—Yes; I said "Good morning" to him.

33502. Did you begin to have some conversation with him then?—We just had a few words before I saw the constable.

33503. Was there anyone else in the street at that time besides you and the constable and Gamble?—No.

33504. Did you know the constable before?—Yes.

33505. You are often about in that part of the world, are you not?—Yes.

33506. What did the constable do or say?—He came up to me and called me on one side from George, and he asked me if I would come across the road to speak to him, which I refused to do; so I left the constable and went back to George.

33507. I do not think you have told us everything that happened. We want to know everything that happened.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Ask her if she knows anything more about the policeman. She has said she knew him, but she has not identified him.

(Earl Russell.) I want to know first what passed between her and the constable. (To the Witness.) Which side of the road was the constable when he spoke to you and saw you and Gamble together?—On the left-hand side of the road opposite the chapel.

33508. On the pavement?—Yes.

33509. Was the constable on the same side of the street?—He was in the middle of the road.

33510. What did he do exactly, first?—The constable?

33511. Yes?—He called me on one side.

33512. He called you to him?—Yes. I left George on the pavement.

33513. Did you go to the constable?—Yes.

33514. Close up to him?—Yes.

33515. I want to know what happened then. Tell these gentlemen exactly what happened. There is nothing to be afraid of?—He asked me if I would come to a certain place with him, and I refused.

33516. Did you understand what he meant?—Yes.

33517. After you refused what did you do?—I went back to George and told him what the constable asked me.

33518. Where was Gamble at that time?—He had walked on about five minutes' walk from where we were standing.

33519. You say it took you nearly five minutes to catch him up?—Yes, and the constable followed me.

33520. Did you walk back to him quickly or slowly?—I walked after him and left the constable.

33521. When you came up to Gamble what happened?—I told him what happened. He asked me, and I told him. The constable came and stopped us again.

33522. How near was the constable to you when you caught up Gamble?—He was alongside of me; a few steps behind me.

33523. What did the constable say either to you or to Gamble when he caught you up?—George told him what I had told him, and he said he ought to be ashamed of himself. One word brought up another, and there was a bit of an argument.

33524. Were you all walking on during this time, or standing still?—Walking on.

33525. Do you know what street you were in when you caught up Gamble?—A turning into Osborn Place going towards Brick Lane, because I was going towards Brick Lane when we met the constable.

33526. That was before anything happened at all?—Yes.

33527. During this time that you were walking along were you and Gamble alongside on the pavement, or where?—In the middle of the road.

33528. Was the constable alongside or behind, or in front?—Talking to George during the time they walked on. He told me to go one way and him to go the other. I said: "No; we are both going to Brick Lane, and we will go together," and the constable followed us.

33529. The constable told you to separate?—Yes.

33530. Can you remember at all what Gamble was saying to the policeman or the policeman to Gamble?—No, I cannot remember exactly.

33531. Can you remember anything about what they were saying. You have told us that Gamble said the constable ought to be ashamed of himself?—Yes.

33532. (Chairman.) Then you said there was an argument?—Yes.

33533. What was the argument?—About me, I suppose.

33534. It was an argument about you?—Yes.

33535. What did they say?—Because I would not leave George to go with him, and there was a bit of a "niff" about it.

33536. You would not leave George?—Because we were both going to Brick Lane, and we thought we would go together.

33537. You mean you would not leave George to go with the constable?—Yes; I refused to go with the constable, and he followed us up and separated us.

33538. (Earl Russell.) Was the constable at this time doing anything besides talking?—No, not until he got outside Osborn Place—Brick Lane.

33539. What did he do then?—Then he pushed George, and he fell on the pavement.

33540. Were you on the pavement then or in the middle of the road?—I was in the middle of the road, and George was on the pavement.

33541. You say the constable pushed him and he fell?—Yes.

33542. Was anyone else there at that time?—Yes, there were some few standing by.

33543. Anybody that you knew?—Yes, two.

33544. That was when he first pushed him and he fell down?—Yes.

33545. Let us have the names of the two people you knew who were there?—William Hughes is a witness we have here.

33546. Who was the other?—I could not tell you the name of the other young man, but he is one of the witnesses here.

33547. Somebody else we have seen here?—Yes.

33548. Did you know them before?—I have seen them occasionally in Brick Lane, but not to know them.

33549. What happened after George had fallen down?—There was a fight between the constable and him, and the constable kicked him and knocked him about.

33550. Did you see the constable kick him?—Yes; I went between them.

33551. On which part of the body did he kick him?—About the ribs and the back.

33552. Did you at that time see any other constable in sight?—The sergeant came on the scene.

33553. When the constable was kicking Gamble?—Yes.

33554. Where did the sergeant come from?—From the top of Brick Lane, opposite the Bell public-house.

33555. (Mr. Dickinson.) What do you mean by "the top of Brick Lane"?—Opposite the Bell public-house.

33556. (Earl Russell.) Can you fix this place where George Gamble fell down. Can you tell us exactly where it was. Do you know the name of the street it was in?—Osborn Place.

33557. It was in Osborn Place?—Yes, a few steps from the Bell public-house.

33558. From which way had you come into Osborn Place before it happened. How had you got to Osborn Place?—I turned by Vallance Road to come up to it first of all.

33559. How did you get into Osborn Place. Which end did you come in at—from the Brick Lane end or from the other end?—The other end.

33560. Do you know which street you had come from before you got into Osborn Place?—I could not remember the name of the street.

33561. How near was this other constable you say you saw at this time?—The sergeant?

33562. The one who was at this place while the constable was kicking Gamble—where did you see the sergeant?—He was standing outside the Bell public-house talking to another constable, I think.

33563. Where was the sergeant standing?—Opposite the Bell public-house.

33564. Past the Bell public-house?—Yes.

33565. Do you say he was talking to another constable?—Yes, I think I remember he was talking to another constable.

33566. What did the sergeant do?—He came on and stopped the constable from kicking him.

33567. Then what happened to George Gamble?—He got up on his feet and went across the road and the constable followed him. I don't know what happened in the next street.

33568. He got up on his feet?—Yes, and walked away.

33569. Quickly or slowly?—As quickly as he could.

33570. In which direction did he walk?—The way we came.

33571. Away from Brick Lane?—Yes.

33572. Not towards Brick Lane?—No.

33573. You saw the first constable follow him?—The one that did it.

33574. What did the sergeant do?—I don't think he did anything. He told me to go home, and I walked away.

33575. Did the sergeant follow with him or stop with you?—He stopped where he was, where it happened.

33576. Tell the Commissioners if you heard the sergeant say anything while the other man was kicking him?—I don't remember.

33577. Do you remember any conversation by the sergeant while the constable was kicking him?—No. I don't remember.

33578. Then you say that Gamble went on and the policeman after him?—Yes.

33579. Did you stand still and watch them, or walk after them?—No, I did not go in the same direction as they went; I went round the other way in a different direction and met him.

33580. Did you start going away before they got out of sight, or did you stand still until they were out of sight?—Until they were out of sight.

33581. You stood still and watched them?—Yes.

33582. How far did you see them?—Not so very far. I forget the name of the street now.

33583. Did they go straight on or turn round?—They turned round by the buildings.

33584. Do you know what street they turned into. Did they turn to the right or to the left?—To the right hand.

33585. They turned to their own right?—Yes.

33586. Did you see anything more happen before they got out of sight?—When he turned the corner he fell, and I don't know what happened after that.

33587. Who fell?—George.

33588. Did you see any more after that?—Not then—not till I saw him standing.

33589. Which way did you go after that happened?—Into Osborn Street into Whitechapel.

33590. Osborn Street or Osborn Place?—Osborn Street.

33591. Into what road did you go from there?—Into Whitechapel.

33592. Were you going home or looking for Gamble, or what were you doing?—To see where he went and to see what happened to him.

33594. Did you go on looking for him?—Yes.

33595. Where did you find him?—At Commercial Street standing outside the Victoria Home, No. 1, unable to walk.

33596. About how long was that after you parted from him at Osborn Place?—About a quarter of an hour, as near as possible.

33597. What was he doing when you found him?—Standing against the wall opposite Victoria Home.

33598. What did his condition seem to be?—He could not seem to move.

33599. Was there anybody with him there?—He was by himself.

33600. What did you do when you found him?—I went across and spoke to him, and asked him how he was. He said he was not able to walk. I asked two young men if they would help me to take him to the hospital, and he said yes, they would come with me.

33601. Where were the two young men?—One was with me.

33602. Where was the other one?—Standing outside the Princess Alice public-house.

33603. Do you know the names of those two young men?—I could not tell you. One of them is here as a witness, but I don't know his name.

33604. Did Gamble tell you anything about what had happened since you saw him?—Yes, he told me the constable kicked him, and he was not able to move.

33605. Did he say anything about whether it was as bad as the first time or not?—Worse than the first time.

33606. Was he able to walk?—He could scarcely walk at all.

33607. It was the London Hospital you took him to?—Yes.

33608. Are you able to say what time of night it was when you got to the London Hospital with him?—About four o'clock, as near as possible. I would not be positive to the time.

33609. Was it daylight?—It was just breaking daylight as I got there.

33610. You cannot tell us the time exactly?—No.

33611. Did you give your name to anyone at the Hospital when you got him in?—I did not go in with him; the two young men did. I stayed in the door while the two young men brought him in.

33612. Who did go in with him?—I don't know his name, but he is one of the witnesses.

33613. (Chairman.) Did both of the young men go in, or only one?—Both went to the inner door. One went in and the other one stayed outside.

(Earl Russell.) I do not know that I need call them in, but it is the other one we called in to be identified by the last witness. (To the Witness.) How was Gamble with regard to drinking—was he sober or not before this happened?—Perfectly sober.

33614. You say you did not give his name at the hospital to anybody?—No.

33615. You have visited him since he has been there?—Yes.

33616. Did you take any notice of the constable who you say kicked him? Should you be able to identify him? Would you know him again?—Yes.

33617. (Chairman.) Had you ever seen the constable before that night?—Yes.

33618. Had you ever talked to him before?—Yes, I had spoken to him.

33619. Was he a friend of yours?—No, he was no friend of mine.

33620. (Earl Russell.) What is it that you would know him by? How do you know him?—(No answer.)

33621. What would you recognise him by—how would you know him again?—I should recognise him.

33622. (Chairman.) Can you describe him?—Yes. He has a ginger moustache, has he not—207?

33623. Do you think you would know him again?—Yes.

(Chairman.) We had better have the officers in court.

33724. (Earl Russell.) Would you recognise the sergeant again who you say was there?—Yes, I should recognise the sergeant.

E. Griffiths.

20 Feb. 1907.

33625. Had you ever seen him before that night?—Yes, I had seen him before.

33626. Have you seen him about the streets since?—Yes.

33627. Have you seen No. 207 about the streets since?—I could not really say.

(Earl Russell.) If the witness can recognise the sergeant we had better have them all in.

(Witness.) I think I could. I am not positive of the sergeant.

(Several police officers in uniform were called into court.)

33628. Can you pick out the constable?—Yes, the second man on my right. (Pointing to P.C. 207 H.)

33629. Can you identify the sergeant?—I think the sergeant is on the right—the little one. The first one on my left.

33630. Which one do you mean? Do you mean the one the inspector has his hand upon now? (Police Sergeant 41 H.)—No.

33631. Which do you mean?—The other one. (Pointing to Police Sergeant 5 H.) I am not positive, but I think it is the one.

33632. You say you are not positive, but you think that is the man?—I am not positive.

(Chairman.) She identifies 207 as the police constable.

33633. (Earl Russell.) Yes. Now look at that man (207 H.). Have you any doubt about him at all?—No.

33634. Are you perfectly certain?—I am perfectly certain.

(Chairman.) You say the sergeant is the officer standing next to him?—I am not positive.

33635. (Earl Russell.) No, it is the second from that end. (Police Sergeant 5 H.)

33636. (Chairman.) Is that the sergeant you saw?—I am not positive of the sergeant.

33637. But you think so?—I think it is.

(Chairman.) What is his name and number?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) 5 H., Thomas Sheedy.

(The officers withdrew from the court.)

33638. (Earl Russell.) Do you remember being approached by Mr. Timewell, or somebody from Mr. Timewell, to make a statement about this at any time?—Last August, do you mean?

33639. Yes. Do you remember anybody coming to you, and your telling them what you knew about this?—Yes.

33640. Do you remember how long after George Gamble went to the hospital that was?—A fortnight or three weeks; I am not positive.

33641. It was not this gentleman, Mr. Timewell, that you saw, but someone else?—Yes.

33642. You only made one statement?—Yes.

33643. Was it read over to you and did you sign it?—I think I signed it.

33644. Was it read over to you first?—After I gave the statement he read it over to me.

33645. How many times altogether did you see the gentleman who took the statement?—About three times.

33646. Just look at that. Is that your signature at the end of it? (Handing document to witness.)—Yes.

33647. Did you see 207 H., the constable who has just been in court, last Sunday?—Last Sunday night.

33648. Where did you see him?—Outside the Carpenter's Arms.

33649. Was it before closing time, or afterwards, or when?—After closing time.

33650. How long after?—About ten minutes after the houses were closed.

33651. Was he on duty in the street?—Yes.

33652. Was he in uniform?—Yes.

33653. Did you speak to him, or did he speak to you?—I spoke to him

33654. What did you say to him?—I asked him if he knew anything about this, and he told me "No," and I said, "It is a funny thing that you haven't heard when I have." So after one or two words he said, "I have." He said, "What are you going to do?" I said, "I don't know what I am going to do." He asked me if I was going to do my worst.

33655. What next. Just tell the whole truth to these gentlemen. We want to know everything?—I said I did not know what to do. I said I thought it was all dropped until I heard on Saturday.

33656. What then?—(No answer).

33657. Now speak up, and turn to the Chairman?—I don't think much passed besides that. He offered me £2 if I would not go against him. That is all that passed.

33658. Was anything said about what might happen if you did go against him?—Yes, he said I should be sorry for it. He said he would do it in on me—what he meant by that I don't know.

33659. Anything more?—That is all.

33660. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I understand that you made this statement that I have just seen, and that has been shown to you, and which you signed, about three weeks after all this happened. That is so, is it not?—Yes, about three weeks or a fortnight as far as I remember. It is such a length of time.

33661. At that time the matter was pretty fresh in your recollection?—Yes.

33662. Did you tell the gentleman that all this had happened at four o'clock in the morning?—Yes. I forget the time; it is such a length of time.

33663. Did you tell the gentlemen that?—I do not remember; I may have done.

33664. Were you trying to tell the gentlemen exactly what had happened?—Yes.

33665. At that time it was fresh in your memory?—Yes.

33666. If you told the gentleman it was four o'clock in the morning was that because you believed that that was the time?—Yes, that was the time; it must have been.

33667. That must have been the time?—Yes.

33668. Do not you recollect quite well now that it was four o'clock in the morning?—I remember the time when we got to the hospital; it was breaking daylight. That was after it was all over.

33669. How long had you known this George?—I had seen him about twice before I met him on the 21st.

33670. How long had you known him then—how many months?—About a month before that I had seen him twice.

33671. Had you only known him for a month?—A month or so; I don't remember. I had only seen him once or twice previous to the 21st August.

33672. Did you know him as George Pearce?—Yes.

33673. You knew him as George Pearce?—George ——. I might have seen the name Pearce on the card at the hospital.

33674. Before this happened did you know him as George Pearce?—Only by the name of George.

33675. Are you sure of that?—Yes.

33676. Why did you tell this gentleman who took this statement that it was in a turning off Brick Lane near the Bell public-house you spoke to George Pearce?—That is Osborn Place.

33677. But why did you call this man George Pearce unless you had known him as George Pearce?—I must have heard him say so himself or he must have told me. I only remember him as George. I don't remember having seen the name of Pearce, only on the card.

33678. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you say you must have heard him say Pearce, who do you mean by "him"?—The gentleman I made the statement to.

33679. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) How many times had George been home with you before this happened?—Not once.

33680. You swear that positively?—Yes, I swear that.

33681. Just think and be a little careful about this. George has been here, and I want to ask you, do you tell these gentlemen on your oath he has never been home with you?—No.

33682. Never?—No.

33683. (Chairman.) The learned counsel says "has he been home with you," but had you not been somewhere for a short time with George before this occasion of the 21st August?—No, I had not.

33684. You say you had not been home with him. Had you been anywhere else with him?—No, I had not.

33685. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am afraid I must ask you this question—you are a prostitute, are you not?—I work for my living sometimes when I can get it.

33686. But at other times do you go with men?—Yes, at other times I do.

33687. I ask you has not George been with you before this night?—No, he has not.

33688. You swear that?—Yes, I swear that.

33689. Did you ask him on this night when you first saw him to go with you for a short time?—No, I did not, but I met him.

33690. But when you met did you ask him to go with you for a short time?—No—not George.

33691. That is untrue, is it?—Quite untrue.

33692. How long before you saw any constable had you first met George that night?—About ten minutes previous to that.

33693. No more?—No more.

33694. Had you been in any public-house that night?—Not that night—not with George.

33695. Not with George, but had you been with other people in public-houses?—No, I went in by myself.

33696. Did you stay in some public-house till closing time?—I could not exactly remember.

33697. Do you remember where it was you met George that night?—Vallance Road, I think.

33698. You remember that?—I think it was Vallance Road.

33699. Vallance Road is on the extreme right of this plan. Were you in Vallance Road?—I turned into Vallance Road.

33700. Where were you coming from?—From Bow.

33701. You were coming from Bow?—Yes, I turned that way.

33702. Were you coming from Bow?—Yes.

33703. Had you been to Bow?—Yes, that night.

33704. You remember you had been to Bow?—Yes.

33705. Where had you been to in Bow?—I had a drink in a public-house down there with a woman friend of mine.

33706. You had been in a public-house in Bow?—Yes.

33707. What was the name of the public-house?—I really could not remember.

33708. Had you stayed in a public-house till closing time?—No.

33709. How far is that public-house from Vallance Road?—This public-house is in Bow, but you turn by the Pavilion to get to Vallance Road.

33710. You say you had been in a public-house in Bow with your friend?—Yes.

33711. How far is that from Vallance Road?—A good distance.

33712. How long did it take you to walk?—I got in a tram.

33713. Now you are beginning to remember what happened. Can you give me the name of the friend you were with?—Yes, if she is about. I don't think she is there now.

33714. Can you tell me her name?—Yes.

33715. What is her name?—Mary Davis.

33716. You were in Bow with her that night?—Yes.

33717. It was Monday?—Yes.

33718. How late did you stay in Bow with Mary Davis?—A little after eleven o'clock. It had gone eleven.

33719. Then which way did you come?—I got in the tram and got out at the Pavilion.

33720. Is that close to Vallance Road?—Yes.

33721. You would have got to Vallance Road before twelve o'clock?—Yes.

33722. It is about a quarter of an hour's tram ride, so you would have got to Vallance Road well before twelve o'clock?—Yes.

33723. Did you meet George soon after you got to Vallance Road.

(Chairman.) What is closing time. Is it 12.30?

33724. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) She says she did not stay till closing time. She left Bow about eleven o'clock. (To the Witness.) You said about eleven o'clock, did you not?—Yes.

33725. Then you came by tram to the Pavilion, which is close to Vallance Road?—Yes.

33726. So you would have got there before twelve o'clock, certainly?—Yes, about half-past eleven.

33727. Did you meet George soon after you got into Vallance Road?—I met George about twelve o'clock, if I remember right. I do not exactly remember the exact time; it is a long time past.

33728. Did you meet him soon after you got into Vallance Road?—I did not meet him in Vallance Road; I met him further on.

33729. I asked you a moment ago where you met him and you said in Vallance Road?—I went into Vallance Road.

33730. Just tell me again. You got out of the tram by the Pavilion and you went into Vallance Road?—Yes.

33731. Did you meet George in Vallance Road?—I am not positive whether it was in Vallance Road or further on. I turned round on my left-hand side when I got to Vallance Road.

33732. Would it be close to Vallance Road?—Yes, close to Vallance Road; it was not far from a chapel or a school where we met.

33733. Is that close to Vallance Road?—I do not know whether it is close; it is further on. I do not know whether it is a church or a school.

33734. Is that close to Vallance Road?—No, further on than Vallance Road.

33735. You must just think again?—I do not know the name of the street. I turned to my left-hand side out of Vallance Road.

33736. You came from the Pavilion, and you got into Vallance Road?—Yes.

33737. Do you know Hanbury Street?—Yes.

33738. Was it in Hanbury Street you met him?—Opposite this chapel in this street, but I am not positive of the name of the street.

33739. Is there a chapel in Hanbury Street?—Really, I am not positive of it.

33740. How many minutes' walk would it be from Vallance Road that you met him—two minutes' walk?—More than that; I do not remember.

33741. How long would it take you to walk from Vallance Road into Brick Lane?—Five or ten minutes—ten minutes.

33742. Cannot you tell me any nearer where it was that you met George?—I do not know the name of the street. It was outside this chapel or church, or whatever it was. I turned to my left from Vallance Road, but I am not positive of the name of the street.

33743. (Chairman.) When you turned from Vallance Road did you turn into the street in which you met George?—Yes, opposite this church or chapel.

33744. Was it in a street turning out of Vallance Road that you met George?—I turned from Vallance Road on my left and I came out, but really I am not positive of the name of the street.

33745. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is a street that leads into Vallance Road?—It does not lead into Vallance Road, but from Vallance Road.

34746. You got into a street, the name of which you do not know?—Yes.

33747. Was it in this street you do not know?—Yes, in this street, outside the chapel.

33748. Did you meet him by accident or by appointment?—Accident; pure accident.

E. Griffiths.

20 Feb. 1907.

33749. Had you walked from the tramways to that point?—No, not straight, because we had a talk.

33750. You turned twice, but you had not stopped anywhere?—No.

33751. So that, according to that, you must have met George before 12 o'clock?—I am not positive of the time.

33752. If you met him before 12 o'clock, and if it is true that this assault upon him which you have speaking of took place at 4 o'clock, what would you have been doing between 12 and 4 o'clock?—I am not positive of the time I met him. It was after the houses were closed.

33753. You can give no account to the Commissioners of what you were doing between 12 and 4?—No, I do not know.

33754. After you met George did you stand speaking with him at the same place or did you walk with him?—The same place, standing in the middle of the road; we were talking and the constable came up.

33755. Was it while you were standing there that a constable came up?—Yes.

33756. That was outside this chapel or church where you had first met him?—Yes.

33757. You had not moved?—No, we were in the middle of the road standing talking.

33758. Was there anybody else in the street at the time that you could see?—No.

33759. Just say in your own way what took place while you were standing there?—Nothing took place.

33760. Did the constable speak to you?—Yes, the constable came and spoke to me.

33761. What did he say to you?—He asked me to come with him, as I have said before.

33762. (Mr. Whitmore.) Did he say that in the hearing of George?—No, he called me on one side from George.

33763. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you say he pulled you on one side?—He called me on one side.

33764. (Chairman.) Who do you mean?—The constable.

33765. Did he call you on one side or pull you on one side?—He called me on one side.

33766. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did he put his hand on you at all?—No.

33767. Did you go on one side and speak to him?—I did.

33768. Was the constable in uniform?—Yes.

33769. Did you know him by sight at that time?—Yes.

33770. Had anything of the kind occurred between you before?—No.

33771. Nothing?—No.

33772. Then did you go back to George?—Yes.

33773. And then what happened?—I told George what the constable asked me. He had followed me until I caught George.

33774. But do you mean to say, when you were speaking to the constable, George had walked away?—Yes, a little distance.

33775. Gone away by himself?—Yes, a little distance.

33776. How far?—About three minutes' walk; he just walked away slowly.

33777. Did he walk in the direction of Brick Lane?—Yes.

33778. Did you follow him?—I left the constable and followed behind, because I was going up Brick Lane.

33779. But when George walked away you followed him, did you?—I left the constable and then followed him because I was on my way home, and I was going to Brick Lane.

33780. Where did you catch George up?—He was only walking slowly.

33781. Was it in the same street?—Yes, in the same street.

33782. Did you see anybody else in the street then?—No, not until we turned into Brick Lane and Osborn Place.

33783. When you caught George up what did you do then?—I told George what the constable had asked me.

33784. And then what happened?—The constable and George had a word or two.

33785. Did anything else happen?—He kept following us up all the way.

33786. Did the constable strike George, or did George strike the constable?—Not there until they got up into Osborn Place.

33787. At that point nothing happened?—George told him he ought to be ashamed of himself and ought to set a better example, and one thing and the other.

33788. (Mr. Dickinson.) You said not until you got to Osborn Place. What road were you walking along at that moment?—From where I met George and we turned away into Osborn Place.

33789. You said just now you caught up George when you got into Brick Lane.

33790. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We will go back a little and try to clear this up. I understand that when the constable asked you to speak to him George went on?—Yes.

33791. When you had finished speaking to the constable you followed and caught George up?—Yes.

33792. Then you were in the same street, then, when you caught George up as you were when you first spoke to him?—Yes.

33793. That is clear?—Yes, that is clear.

33794. When the constable caught you up you say he and George had some words?—Yes.

33795. But there was no striking or kicking there?—Not there.

33796. Then you said that nothing happened till you got into Brick Lane?—Osborn Place, Brick Lane.

33797. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where did these words take place—in what street?—I could not tell you the name of the street.

33798. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is the same street in which you first met George?—Yes.

33799. (Mr. Dickinson.) You had not got into Brick Lane up to that moment?—No; we had not turned into Osborn Place. It was the same street as I met him.

33800. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have got to the point now at which you say George had some words with the constable?—I told George what the constable said.

33801. And George told the constable he ought to be ashamed of himself?—Yes.

33802. After that did you and George walk on together?—Yes, we both walked on, and the constable followed him.

33803. In which direction did you go?—Into Osborn Place.

33804. Do you know Osborn Place by name?—Yes.

33805. That is a street the name of which you know?—Yes.

33806. And then you got into Osborn Place?—Yes.

33807. You had been walking some considerable distance with George and the constable before you got into Osborn Place?—Yes.

33808. And nothing had happened, according to you?—No, nothing happened till we got to Osborn Place.

33809. When you got into Osborn Place what was the first thing that happened?—George got on the pavement, and the constable gave him a push, and he fell.

33810. How far had you got up Osborn Place then?—A few steps, from the Bell public-house outside the men's lodging house.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Can you tell us where the Bell public-house is, Mr. Bankes?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is the corner of Osborn Place and Brick Lane.

33811. (Chairman.) Is there a church or chapel in Osborn Place?—No.

33812. (Mr. Dickinson.) How far was it from the church that you speak of to Osborn Place? How long were you walking?—A good five minutes' walk.

33813. Five minutes' walk from the church where you met him?—Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) What about this public-house? Is it on the blue or on the pink?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The public-house is on the north corner—the blue corner.

(Chairman.) Is that the corner of Osborn Place and Brick Lane?

33814. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. (To the Witness.) So that, according to you, nothing happened between these men until they got within a few steps of Brick Lane?—Yes.

33815. Is Brick Lane a busy place, with people walking up and down?—Not in the morning time, I do not think. At that time it is quiet; there were a few about.

33816. How long before you got to the top of Osborn Place did you see that there was a sergeant standing at the top?—Not till after George was on the ground.

33817. You did not notice the sergeant till after George was on the ground?—No.

33818. Then you say that this constable kicked him while he was on the ground?—Yes.

33819. Did you notice which part of him he kicked?—On his ribs and back.

33820. How many times did he kick him?—Several times.

33821. And violently?—Yes.

33822. Did you scream out?—I did.

33823. I think you said that two people were there at that time whom you knew?—They are both witnesses we have here now; they were there at the time.

33824. Not two young men whom we have as witnesses?—They are here.

33825. Did you not say there were two men standing by when George was pushed on to the pavement?—Yes.

33826. You said Walter Hughes was one?—Yes.

33827. Do you know Walter Hughes?—By sight.

33828. Is he here?—Yes.

33829. Who was the other who was standing by—is he also here?—Yes.

33830. Is his name Rubenstein?—I am not positive.

33831. Should you know him by sight?—Yes.

(Chairman.) We had better have Hughes and Rubenstein in, in order to identify them.

(Hughes and Rubenstein and Wiltshire came into court.)

33832. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is that one (pointing to Hughes)?—That is one.

33833. He was there?—Yes.

33834. Did he see all that took place?—Yes.

33835. (Chairman.) Is that Walter Hughes?—Yes.

33836. You recognise him?—Yes.

33837. What is the name of the other?

(Earl Russell.) That is Rubenstein.

33838. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is he the other one?—No, that is the one (pointing to Wiltshire).

33839. That is Wiltshire?—Yes.

33840. Do you say they were both there when this took place in Osborn Place?—Yes.

33841. Before Rubenstein goes did you ask him to come and give evidence?—No.

33842. Have you ever spoken to him?—No.

33843. You say that both those youths were there at that time?—Yes.

33844. Have you spoken to them about this since it happened?—They were there at the time the statements were given last August.

33845. Where was it the statements were given?—In Brick Lane.

33846. In what place—in a private house or a public-house?—The White House.

33848. Is that a public-house?—No.

33849. What is it?—A lodging house.

33850. How many people were there giving statements?—Three—two besides myself.

33851. Who asked you to go to the White House?—I went there when I was fetched. This gentleman came to me about it.

33852. He came to you in the White House?—Yes.

33853. Were you lodging there?—No, I was not lodging there at the time.

33854. Is it a common lodging house?—Yes.

33855. He came to you in the White House?—Yes, the statement was made in the White House.

33856. Were the other two youths in the White House?—No, they were not there, but I fetched them.

33857. You all three made your statements at the same time?—Yes.

33858. According to you, after George had been pushed down on the pavement and kicked in this way at the end of Osborn Place he got up and went away?—Yes, and the constable followed him.

33859. Did he go back in the same direction from which you had come?—Yes.

33860. And you did not see him any more or what happened to him?—No, not after that.

33861. And you did not see him again until you saw him standing outside the house where he lived?—Yes—Victoria Home.

33862. You were looking for him, I understood?—Yes, to see how he got on.

33863. You went to the Victoria Home because you thought you would find him there?—No, I came down Whitechapel and came down Wentworth Street, when I saw him standing against the wall.

33864. Did you know he lived there?—No. I had seen him standing there, but I did not know he lived there.

33865. Have you ever been in the Victoria Home?—No, it is a men's lodging house.

33866. When George went away back down Osborn Place, did he walk or run?—He run.

33867. He ran, did he?—He walked quick.

33868. Did he walk or run?—He run.

33869. So that after this violent kicking that you saw he was able to run?—He walked.

33870. But did he run?—He went as fast as he could go.

33871. He ran. Is that right?—Yes.

33872. Before this constable pushed George down had you seen any other constable about?—No.

33873. You are quite sure about that?—Positive.

33874. You had not seen any constable or a sergeant in Brick Lane or anywhere else?—A sergeant—not a constable—a sergeant was standing against the public-house.

33875. But you had not seen him before George had been pushed down?—Not the constable, but the sergeant.

33876. Had you seen the sergeant?—The sergeant in Brick Lane.

33877. Had you noticed the sergeant before George was pushed down?—Yes.

33878. You noticed him?—Yes.

33879. A moment ago you told me you had not noticed him until he came up when George was on the ground. Do you now say that you saw the sergeant?—I remember he was coming by the Bell.

33880. He was standing there within a very few feet of George when he was pushed down?—He was coming up towards this place. I saw the sergeant at the top of the road.

33881. Did he remain there?—Yes, until George was on the ground. Then he walked down.

33882. I must ask again about that to get it quite plain. Do you say that when you and George were walking from Osborn Place towards Brick Lane you saw the sergeant standing outside the Bell public-house?—Yes.

33883. When you first saw the sergeant the constable had not hit or pushed George at all?—No.

33884. You have told me that George was pushed down just close to the Bell public-house?—Yes.

33885. So that he must have been within a few feet of the sergeant when he was pushed down?—A single men's lodging-house is next door to the Bell.

E. Griffiths.
20 Feb. 1907.

33886. So that he must have been quite close to the sergeant when the constable pushed him down?—Yes.

33887. And you suggest that the constable waited till he got close to the sergeant before he attacked this man in this way?—Yes.

33888. That is what you suggest?—Yes.

33889. (Mr. Dickinson.) How could you see the sergeant?—By the lamp.

33890. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did you see any other constable besides the one who pushed George down, and the sergeant?—No.

33891. You are quite sure?—I do not remember.

33892. Let me read from your statement. You say: "We both went on, and the constable followed us and stopped us, and asked George which way we were going. George said to Brick Lane, and told him he ought to be ashamed of himself to speak to me as he did. Some altercation ensued, and we walked onward, the constable following."

(Chairman.) "Onward towards Brick Lane," I think.

33893. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is not in the original. It is "on towards Brick." "Lane" is apparently left out. It must mean Brick Lane. "We walked onward towards Brick Lane, the constable following. When we got in sight of a second constable, who was standing in Brick Lane, the constable who had been following us pushed George down, and then the sergeant appeared"?—The sergeant was there all the time.

33894. Now you say the sergeant was there all the time?—It was my mistake.

33895. (Chairman.) I understand you to say in answer to Mr. Bankes you think the constable and the sergeant must be one and the same person?—Yes.

33896. Let me read it to you again: "When we got in sight of a second constable, who was standing in Brick Lane, the constable who had been following us pushed George down, and then the sergeant appeared"?—Yes.

33897. Did you see any constable besides the sergeant near Brick Lane?—No, the sergeant followed us, I remember.

33898. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) How did George get up? Did he get up himself, or how did he get up, or did anybody help him?—He was helped up, as far as I remember, by the sergeant. The constable pushed me on one side. I went between them. Then the constable started kicking him. I walked away a few steps and left them. I walked back again.

33899. Did you see if anybody picked George up?—No, I did not see anybody pick him up; I only saw him when he was on his feet.

33900. You are quite sure of that?—Yes.

33901. You told these gentlemen the sergeant picked George up. Was that right?—That is the statement I made. I do not remember. I have not considered it since.

33902. Then you say George ran away, and the constable chased him?—Yes.

33903. Did the constable run after him?—Ran after him and followed him.

33904. "I went round to meet George by some buildings and could not find him"?—Yes.

33905. (Chairman.) What do you mean by "buildings"?—Model buildings.

33906. I thought you meant something special by it.

33907. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) In which street are they?—Chicksand Street, I think.

33908. Why did you go there?—I went right round.

33909. To meet him?—Yes, I thought I might see him.

33910. And you did not find him there, so then you went into Commercial Street and then you found him standing by the Victoria Home?—Yes, I went into Whitechapel and turned down Commercial Street.

33911. Did you find him at the Victoria Home within a quarter of an hour of the time he left you?—Yes, as far as I remember, a quarter of an hour or twenty minutes.

33912. And then you went straight off to the hospital with him?—Yes.

33913. How long would it take you to get to the hospital?—It took us a good bit because he could not walk.

33914. How long would it take you—half an hour?—Yes, more than half an hour, because he could not walk.

33915. Would it take you three-quarter of an hour?—About three-quarters of an hour.

33916. So that according to that you would have got to the hospital just about an hour after you had seen him knocked down and kicked?—Yes.

33917. I have read your statement or the bulk of it to you. Were the other two men in the room when you made your statement?—No, I made mine first.

33918. Were you there when they made theirs?—No, I walked on one side when I had made my statement.

33919. Where were the statements taken?—In the room, but I was standing at the door when they made their statements.

33920. Could you hear what they said?—No, I did not hear what they said.

33921. Did you not want to hear? Do you suggest to these gentlemen that you purposely kept away so that you should not hear?—No, certainly not.

33922. Then surely you were interested to hear what they had got to say?—I do not remember hearing what they said.

33923. I just want to ask you a question or two about what George said. Did you hear anything said about going to the police station between George and anybody?—George said, I think: "If I am doing anything wrong take me." I remember something about it, but not exactly. He said, "Do not hit me about," or something.

33924. I want to ask you about this conversation which you say you had with this constable last Sunday night. What public-house was it outside?—The Carpenter's Arms.

33925. In what street is that?—In Wentworth Street.

33926. About what time?—About ten minutes to quarter past 11, as near as possible.

33927. Was he in uniform?—Yes.

33928. Was anyone else near?—No.

33929. Could anybody hear what was said?—No, there was nobody there.

33930. Nobody there at all?—No.

33931. Had you seen him before, or spoken to him since this occurence?—Yes, once.

33932. Had you seen him or spoken to him, do you mean?—Spoken to him.

33933. When was that?—Before Christmas. I could not tell you the date.

33934. What had you spoken to him about?—I had spoken to him about the same thing.

33935. You had spoken to him about the same case?—Yes.

33936. Where was he then?—He was on duty in Brick Lane on a Sunday morning, I think it was.

33937. Can you fix the date at all?—No, I cannot.

33938. Can you tell the time?—About 12 o'clock in the morning.

33939. In the day time?—Yes.

33940. It was 12 o'clock in the morning in Brick Lane?—Yes.

33941. Can you say how long before Christmas it was?—No.

33942. Was it a week before Christmas or a fortnight?—I cannot remember. I know I remember speaking to him about it.

33943. In what part of Brick Lane was it that you saw him on a Sunday morning?—It was in what we call Brick Lane.

33944. Brick Lane is a very long street, is it not?—Yes.

33945. In which part of Brick Lane was it that you saw him on this Sunday morning?—Just along by the public-house called the Cranes—a little further down than that.

33946. Not far from the Cranes public-house?—No, not far from the Cranes public-house.

33947. What took place between you and him on that Sunday morning?—I just spoke to him on the subject.

33948. What did he say to you and you to him?—I told him I had given a statement about it.

33949. You said you had given a statement?—Yes. He said "What did you do that for?" He told me he was a married man, and he told me I was not to recognise him if anything should occur.

33950. Is that all?—That is all.

33951. That is all that took place?—That is all.

33952. Did you tell anybody about that conversation?—No, never.

33953. Never mentioned it till now?—No, not till now as far as I remember. I do not remember ever repeating it.

33954. You do not remember ever repeating it till now?—No.

33955. When did you first tell anybody about the conversation you had last Sunday?—This morning.

33956. Was that when you were up at the building here?—Yes. E. Griffiths.

33957. Whom did you tell?—George. 20 Feb. 1907.

33958. Have you kept on friendly terms with George since then?—Never seen him since October, I think.

33959. How many times did you go and see him in the hospital?—I do not remember.

33960. Four or five?—Yes, four or five times.

33961. And you told George about this this morning?—Yes.

33962. That was the first time you ever told anybody?—Yes.

33963. Did you know where George worked?—No.

33964. Did you not know that he worked in the west of London?—I knew he worked in the west somewhere, but I could not tell you where.

33965. Will you tell the Commissioners why, if he worked in the west, he should live in Whitechapel. Was it anything to do with you that he did so?—No.

THIRTY-SIXTH DAY.

Thursday, 21st February 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).

RUFUS DANIEL ISAACS, Esq., K.C., M.P.

WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).

CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).

J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).

J. F. WALEY, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Assistant Secretary).

ETHEL GRIFFITHS, recalled.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Would you allow me, Sir, in the absence of my friend Mr. Bankes to question this witness on one point only?

(Chairman.) Certainly.

33966. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) How long before the 21st August had you been residing in this locality?—Altogether I have been there twelve months last May.

33967. So that you had been there some sixteen or fifteen months?—Yes.

33968. Had you spent a good deal of your time walking about?—The best part of it.

33969. Were the faces of the policemen on the beats in the locality pretty well known to you?—Yes.

33970. Were you friendly with them at all?—No.

33971. But not unfriendly?—No.

33972. You were not on bad terms with them at all?—No.

33973. You would be seeing their numbers from night to night?—Yes.

33974. Now, with regard to this man whom you have identified, did you know his number?—No.

33975. Just think. This was the 21st August. Had you been walking about every night during that month?—As far as I can remember.

33976. As far as you can remember, practically every night?—Yes.

33977. You would be seeing that man on his beat all the time?—On several occasions.

33978. Besides that, you had seen him, I suppose, during the previous months that you had been walking about there?—Yes.

33979. Come—did you not know his number?—I never took particular notice of his number. E. Griffiths.

33980. Did you not know it? Did you know his name?—No. 21 Feb. 1907.

33981. People, when they know a face, generally try to identify that person by something, and if you do not know the name, and there is a conspicuous number which you can read every night for the best part of twelve months or more, do not you think you had noticed it?—Yes.

33982. You think you would?—Yes.

33983. Did you not know it?—Yes; I only took particular notice of the number at the time it happened.

33984. I am not asking you whether you took particular notice of the number at the time it happened, but what I want to know is whether you identified a particular number with this man with the ginger moustache?—Yes.

33985. You must have known his number for months before that?—Yes.

33986. (Chairman.) I understand that you say to Mr. Muir that you did know the number of the constable with what has been called the ginger moustache?—Yes.

33987. Though you did not notice his number on this particular night?—No.

33988. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is what I understood. When did you make this statement? It is not dated at all?—I am not sure.

33989. About how long after the events that we are speaking about?—About a fortnight or three weeks afterwards.

E. Griffiths.
21 Feb. 1907.

33990. That would be the end of August or the beginning of September?—Yes.

33991. Did you tell the gentleman who took this statement what the number was of this man?—I cannot remember.

33992. You see you describe him as "A constable who I can identify, aged about 30, with a ginger moustache"?—Yes.

33993. You knew that man's number?—Yes.

33994. Did you tell that gentleman what the number was?—I do not remember.

33995. May you have done so?—I may have.

33996. When, after you took George to the hospital, did you first go to see him there—how soon after?—The second or third day after he was in the hospital. I am not positive.

33997. Did he ask you to find out who the constable was?—No.

33998. He did not?—No.

33999. Did anybody ask you to find out who the constable was?—No, I don't remember.

34000. Nobody ever asked you to find out?—I don't remember.

34001. Let me put it to you in another way. Did anybody ever ask you to find out who was the constable on that beat?—I don't remember anyone asking me.

34002. Did you ever yourself go out for the purpose of finding out who was the constable on that beat that night in that month of August?—I cannot remember.

34003. Did you ever go round that same locality during the month of August last?—I may have.

34004. Cannot you go nearer than that. Cannot you remember that you did. It was your beat, was it not, as well as the constable's?—I do not remember anyone asking me to find out.

34005. I have gone away from that, and have taken your answer that you do not remember. Did you ever, in fact, go round that locality in the month of August after you had taken George to the hospital?—I do not remember.

34006. Is your memory an entire blank upon that?—It has slipped my memory. I have quite forgotten everything about it.

34007. Did you ever see this constable with the ginger moustache?—Several times.

34008. Wait a moment till I have completed my question. During that month of August, after you had taken George to the hospital?—Yes.

34009. You did?—Yes, I have seen him.

34010. You were walking round that neighbourhood at night?—Yes.

34011. After you had taken George to the hospital in August?—Yes.

34012. And you saw this constable several times?—Yes.

34013. Now, you say that on the night of the 21st, or, rather, the early morning of the 21st, you did not notice his number, although you noticed his appearance?—Yes.

34014. On those other nights when you saw him, did you identify him in your own mind as the man who had assaulted George?—Yes.

34015. Did you look at his number on those occasions?—Yes.

34016. You took particular notice of it?—Yes.

34017. Do you remember what it was?—207 H.

34018. How many times do you suppose in August you took note of the fact that that man's number was 207 H?—Only once I noticed it.

34019. Does that mean that that so impressed itself on your mind that you had no occasion to look again?—Yes.

34020. Was that on the first occasion that you saw him round there that night after you had taken George to the hospital that you noticed his number?—No, I could not remember whether that was the day.

34021. But would it not be? You were looking to see if you could find the man who had assaulted George?

34022. (Chairman.) She has not said that. I understand you to say that nobody asked you to go and try and find the constable who had assaulted George?—No.

34023. What Mr. Muir is suggesting to you is that some time after this occurrence of the 21st August you went and looked for the constable?

34024. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) May I put it in my own way? I did not put it quite so high as that. (To the Witness.) You were in pursuance of your calling walking round this neighbourhood at night?—Yes.

34025. And looking about at the constables you met, did you look to see whether you could recognise the man who had assaulted George?—Not the same night—a few nights after that.

34026. That is what I am asking you—a few nights after that you were walking round there anyhow, and being there at night did you look at the constables whom you saw that night in order to see whether you could recognise the man who had assaulted George?—Yes.

34027. You did?—Yes.

34028. And, as I understand, looking like that you noticed the number 207 H?—Yes.

34029. And recognised that man as being the man who had assaulted George?—Yes.

34030. (Chairman.) Do you mean by that that you were in any doubt as to who had assaulted George?—No.

34031. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You say you did not know his number?—No, I was not positive of his number.

30432. And you took particular notice of it in your own mind—207 H?—Yes.

34033. And that was within a few days of the assault upon George?—Yes.

34034. A fortnight or three weeks afterwards you gave this statement?—Yes.

34035. And the number is not mentioned in it. You may take that as being the fact. Did you verbally tell anybody that you knew the number?—I don't remember.

34036. Were you asked whether you did know the number?—I am not positive.

34037. (Mr. Dickinson.) What do I understand is the date when the statement was taken?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) She says a fortnight or three weeks after the 21st August.

34038. (Earl Russell.) I understand you to say that you knew this particular constable by sight before this happened?—Yes.

34039. And you saw him again after it happened?—Yes.

34040. More than once?—Yes.

34041. But you were not positive, you say, about his number?—No.

34042. But apart from the question of his number, have you ever had any doubt at all as to the man?—No.

34043. Did you tell the gentleman who called on you from Mr. Timewell that you could indentify the constable?—Yes, I did.

34044. Did you tell him that you would be able to identify him with certainty, without any doubt?—Yes, as far as I remember.

34045. And you never have had any doubt at all as to the man being the man you met that night?—No.

34046. And the same man that you pointed out to us yesterday?—Yes.

34047. You told me yesterday in answer to my questions about a conversation that you had last Sunday night with this constable when he offered you money?—Yes.

34048. You had reported that conversation to George Gamble. Is that so?—Yes.

34049. Had you spoken about it to Mr. Timewell?—No.

34050. Or to anybody who took a statement for Mr. Timewell?—No.

34051. And did you intend that conversation to be repeated when you told George Gamble about it?—No.

34052. You said yesterday you never told anybody about the other conversation you had with him?—No.

34053. Was that previous conversation you had with him before or after you were asked to make a statement by Mr. Timewell's friend?—Before.

34054. Before you made any statement to any friend of Mr. Timewell's? You remember you said you had a conversation with him before Christmas about this same case?—Yes.

34055. Do you remember that conversation?—Yes.

34056. Was it before or after you made the statement to the friend of Mr. Timewell?—After.

34057. Who started the conversation—you or 207?—I spoke to him.

34058. What was it that you spoke to him about then?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Is not that a little wide, Sir?

34059. (Chairman.) Yes, I think it is. What were the first words that you used to the constable at the interview that you say took place before Christmas?—As far as I remember I think I asked him if he had heard anything about it. I do not quite remember the first words.

34060. I suppose you said "Good evening," or something of that kind?—"Good morning"—it was in the morning.

34061. (Earl Russell.) Did you ever speak to him besides these two occasions that you have mentioned—the one before Christmas and the one last Sunday—at any other time about what had happened to George Gamble?—No.

34062. Will you tell the Commissioners what is the reason why you did not mention these conversations when you made your statement? Why was it you did not tell us that?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) She could not have mentioned the second because it had not happened—or either of them, in fact.

(Chairman.) This statement was taken at the beginning of September.

34063. (Earl Russell.) I will put it in another way. Why was it you told George Gamble and not anyone else yesterday about your conversation on Sunday? Why did you not tell Mr. Timewell about it yesterday? What was your reason for not mentioning it?—I did not wish it to be repeated.

34064. Why did you not wish it to be repeated? What was your reason for wishing to keep it dark?—(No answer.)

34065. Why was it that you did not mention it?—I have no reason.

34066. You were also asked a question as to whether you had known George Gamble for some little time before this?—I might have known him a little time before, but I do not remember. Previous to this about a month I knew him personally.

34067. Previous to August?—About a month before this happened I met him about twice.

34068. What about a month before this happened—what happened?—I knew him, and I had spoken to him twice.

34069. You were also asked whether you had ever taken George home with you?—Yes.

34070. What is the fact about that? What do you wish to say to the Commission?—The length of time; I can remember about twelve months back that I have, but I did not remember yesterday.

34071. (Chairman.) He went with you for a short time somewhere?—Yes, he has been with me twice, as far as I can remember. I could not remember yesterday.

34072. Then you had known him for about twelve months about?—He was there for a length of time then, once or twice; I met him on two occasions about twelve months ago.

34073. Did he go home with you then, or did you go somewhere else?—Home.

34074. To your own place?—Yes.

34075. You have a room?—Yes.

34076. And you recollect now that Gamble did come home with you?—Yes, twelve months ago.

34077. You now know that he stated that to us yesterday, do not you?—No.

34078. (Earl Russell.) You told Mr. Bankes yesterday that you met Gamble about midnight, you think?—Yes.

34079. And you told me at the beginning of your examination in chief that this happened about 3 o'clock in the morning. Can you give any explanation at all to the Commissioners of the difference of time or of the interval?—I do not remember the time, it is such a length of time back.

34080. Can you tell us anything at all to help us about the time?—As near as I remember it was about 3 o'clock—between 2 and 3.

34081. What time do you think it was when you first saw Gamble? Do you still think that was 12 o'clock?—Yes, when I met Gamble.

34082. What happened in the time between?—Nothing between him and me in the time between.

34083. You cannot give us any explanation of that?—No, nothing happened.

34084. Now about the time when you made your statement. It was made, I understand, in the public room of a common lodging house. Is that so?—Yes.

34085. And you say that you made your statement when there was nobody else in the room?—Yes.

34086. And it was taken down?—Yes.

34087. And it was after that that you fetched in these two other boys?—Yes.

34088. Did these two boys make their statement together, were they alongside each other when they were making it, or how were the statements taken?—They were both together; I walked away.

34089. And the two boys were together at the time?—Yes.

34090. Did you see what was in their statements?—No.

34091. You did not hear them read over?—No.

34092. (Chairman.) It seems absolutely clear that Gamble received very terrible injuries on this 21st August?—Yes.

34093. You know you are making a very grave charge against a police-constable by saying that it was he who apparently without provocation kicked Gamble and caused those injuries. You see it is a very grave charge, is it not?—Yes.

34094. Have you told us everything that you know about what took place on that night?—As far as I remember—everything.

34095. Are you a Londoner born?—No.

34096. What part of the country do you come from?—Wales.

34097. What part?—Cardiff.

34098. When did you come from Cardiff to London?—Twelve months last May.

34099. Were you brought up at Cardiff?—I was there a length of time. I was not brought up there.

34100. Are your parents still living?—No.

34101. You said something yesterday about doing work. What kind of work have you been doing?—I was working at a laundry in Commercial Road.

34101*. What work were you doing at Cardiff before you came to London?—Housework.

34102. Domestic service?—Yes.

34103. Did you come up to London to be a domestic servant?—No, I did not.

34104. You had gone wrong in Cardiff?—Yes.

34105. You told us yesterday about doing some work in London, as I gather?—Yes.

34106. What kind of work was that?—Charing.

34107. That means that you got occasional jobs, I suppose?—Yes.

34108. Have you been since May twelvemonth walking pretty well every evening about Commercial Street and this neighbourhood?—Yes.

34109. What streets have you generally walked about in?—Commercial Street and Whitechapel.

34110. What were the streets that you generally walked along?—Commercial Street and Whitechapel.

34111. Whitechapel Road?—Yes.

34112. I suppose that you know by sight a good many of the policemen?—Yes.

E. Griffiths.

21 Feb. 1907.

34113. Have you ever been in any trouble?—Once.

34114. What was that for? Solicitation?—No.

34115. What was that for?—For being drunk.

34116. And disorderly, I suppose?—No.

34117. Simply drunkenness?—Yes.

34118. Were you taken to the station?—Yes.

34119. And you appeared at the police court?—Yes.

34120. What was the result?—5s.

34121. That is the only time you have been in trouble?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) Would you ask the date of that, Sir?

34122. (Chairman.) What date was that—in what month or week?—In October, as far as I remember.

34123. In October last?—October or November.

34124. After this affair had taken place?—Yes.

34125. Apart from that, you have never been in any trouble at all with the police?—No.

34126. Did you often talk to them?—No, not very often.

34127. I should like you, if you can, to make a full disclosure of everything, because you know we have power to give you a certificate if you make any revelations that might otherwise land you into trouble. If we think you have given a full, true, and complete disclosure of all that you know about the matter we are inquiring into, we can give you a certificate to protect you. Have you been on good terms with the police in the sense that you have been in the habit of talking to them—I do not say every night, but often?—Yes.

34128. And they knew pretty well what you were doing about the streets?—Yes.

34129. Have you been on really friendly terms with any of the constables—have they gone home with you, or gone with you for a short time, or anything of that kind?—No.

34130. Not at all?—No.

34131. But they have not molested you in any way?—No.

34132. And I take it that you have no feeling against the police at all?—No.

34133. You have had no cause to quarrel with any policeman, or with the police as a whole force?—No.

34134. As far as you know they are quite respectable, sober, well-conducted men in that neighbourhood, apart from this occurrence?—Yes, from what I know of them.

34135. You have never noticed a constable do this kind of thing to any man before, or interfering with you or any other women?—No.

34136. You are quite certain of that?—I do not remember it.

34137. Had any constable ever asked you to come with him before?—No.

34138. Then this is quite a curious and singular circumstances that he should interfere between you and George?—Yes.

34139. I forgot to ask you whether you are married or not?—Yes, I have been.

34140. You were married at Cardiff, I suppose?—Merthyr.

34141. Is your husband alive?—Yes.

34142. When did you separate from him?—Two years ago.

34143. Do you know where he is?—No, I do not.

34144. Did he desert you or did you leave him?—I left him.

34145. Why?—We could not agree together.

34146. Was he a sober, hard-working man?—No, he was not.

34147. Did he give way to drink?—Yes.

34148. What was his business or trade?—Carpenter.

34149. At Merthyr?—Yes.

34150. Then I take it that up till this 21st August you had been on good terms with the police in the sense that you have explained, that you have not come into collision with them beyond the case of drunkenness which we know was in October, after this occurrence, and that you had never seen any constable violent in this way or do anything wrong at all to any man?—No, I do not remember ever having seen it.

34151. You do not remember?—Not to my knowledge.

34152. You know a good many people, I suppose. I suppose you know some other women, do you not?—Yes.

34153. Did you ever hear complaints of the police being violent and ill-treating women or men without cause?—No, not without cause.

34154. You have nothing that would lead you to think that in the neighbourhood the police are unpopular?—No.

34155. What I am suggesting is that Gamble having received these terrible injuries, it is very easy for a lot of people to combine together and say it was the constable who did it. Do you follow me?—Yes.

34156. It is quite easy to say that it was the constable who did it, but from your conversation with people you do not find that the police are unpopular among the poorer class in this part of London?—No, I do not remember having seen them do anything.

34157. You told us yesterday that when the police-constable pushed George, and George fell on to the pavement when you were looking on—you only saw that happen once, I understand?—Yes.

34158. You told us that some few people were standing by?—Yes.

34159. That would be in Osborn Street or Osborn Place?—Osborn Place.

34160. How many people were standing by?—There were a few; I could not say how many; there were two.

34161. Were they standing in the road?—On the pavement outside.

34162. You then went on to say, "I knew two—William Hughes and someone else whom I have seen here"?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That was Wiltshire.

34163. (Chairman.) Yes, we know now it was a boy called Wiltshire. Where was Hughes standing?—Outside the pavement.

34164. Are you certain that Hughes was on the pavement at the time that disturbance commenced?—No, I am not positive. After George got off the ground it was then I noticed them.

34165. As I understand from your account, what the policeman did was to push Gamble?—Yes.

34166. And Gamble fell on the pavement?—Yes.

34167. Did you see the police-constable strike him? How did he push him? What do you mean by the word "push"?—He hit him.

34168. With his fist?—Yes.

34169. Where did the blow take effect; on his face, or where?—On his shoulders, if I remember.

34170. And Gamble fell?—Yes.

34171. Do I understand you to say that Hughes was on the pavement when that took place?—We walked up the road, and they were on the pavement outside the single men's lodging house.

34172. But supposing Hughes says he was at the window looking out when the constable struck Gamble—would that be untrue?—He may have been, because we were walking up the road and there were two men standing outside, but after Gamble got off the ground I recognised the two young fellows.

34173. Your impression is that the two men were on the pavement when the disturbance commenced?—Yes. Whether it was Hughes I am not positive. When I noticed them both they were in the middle of the road, alongside of me, when the sergeant told me to go away.

34174. That was after?—Yes, that was when I recognised the two young fellows.

34175. Did you notice the young man Wiltshire running from Brick Lane, or when you and Gamble were walking together, and walked into Osborn Place towards Brick Lane, was Wiltshire there then when the constable caught you up and the disturbance commenced? Where do you say Wiltshire was?—In the middle of the road.

34176. You did not see him running from Brick Lane?—No, I did not.

34177. You are perfectly clear about all this, are you? You have got no doubt at all in your mind about it?—I have a doubt because there were a few gathered round when it occurred.

34178. What I understand is this: that you are perfectly certain that Hughes and the young man Wiltshire, who you saw yesterday, whose name you did not know, were there after the sergeant had come up?—Yes.

34179. You are certain they were there then?—Yes.

34180. Are you certain that they were there at the time or before the police-constable knocked Gamble down?—I am not positive.

34181. How do you fix the time at which you met Gamble first on this night as being about 12 o'clock? What makes you think it was about 12 o'clock?—From the time I got the tram.

34182. Coming from Bow?—Yes, as near as I remember it was about 12 o'clock.

34183. After you have been examined by Mr. Eldon Bankes and Earl Russell on the point, what do you think now was the time at which you arrived at the hospital? Can you say anything further?—No.

34184. I think you said that when you got to the hospital the day was about breaking?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The sun rose at 4.55 on that morning, and the daybreak would be about an hour before that.

34185. (Chairman.) It would be about four in the morning?—Yes.

34186. Do you see that if you met Gamble first of all at 12 o'clock, if you have told us all that took place, four hours seems a very long interval to have taken place?—Yes.

34187. You met him at 12 o'clock?—Yes.

34188. You did not have a long conversation with him; the constable comes up and Gamble walks on first, and then you walk on and catch him up and have a conversation. Then the constable catches you both up in Osborn Place?—Yes.

34189. And then comes the disturbance, and the injuries to Gamble?—Yes.

34190. That cannot have taken more than, say, half an hour, can it?—No.

34191. You see the difficulty?—Yes. Nothing took place beween Gamble and me. We were simply talking and the constable came up.

34192. That is not what is in my mind. I am only pointing out to you the difficulty as to the time. It seems, according to your story, which is probably quite accurate on that, that you did not get to the hospital till about 4 o'clock in the morning. It seems also that you fix the time when you met Gamble pretty accurately, because you told us you came from Bow in the tram, so we know it cannot have been very late?—No.

34193. Even if you came by the last tram it cannot have been much later than 12 o'clock?—No.

34194. Then came the occurrence which you have described. How long did the whole affair take, do you think, from the time you met Gamble down to the time you found him leaning against the wall? How long do you think it took?—The constable and George were talking, and it took me a bit of time to walk to Brick Lane before this happened after the constable met us.

34195. Before you met Gamble?—After I met Gamble, when the constable came, there was a length of time talking before we got to Osborn Place.

34196. Can you give me any idea of what time elapsed between the time you saw Gamble go away after what had taken place in Osborn Place, and you finding him leaning against the wall?—As near as possible about a quarter of an hour or ten minutes.

34197. You told us you met him about 12 o'clock. The conversations, the walking, the knocking down in Osborn Place, and so on, cannot have taken more than half an hour?—Yes, more than that.

34198. Would they have taken an hour, do you think? In your statement it seems that your conversation with George was very short. "I was speaking to George Pearce"—near the public-house that was—"whom I knew by sight." That is true, but you knew him better than that?—Yes, I recognise him now. It was twelve months ago.

34199. "A constable whom I can identify, aged about thirty, with a ginger moustache, came up and asked me what I was doing." How long had you been talking to George?—I could not tell you; about ten minutes, as near as possible.

34200. Then, taking 12 o'clock as about the time when you had met Gamble after you came from the tram, that would leave it about quarter past twelve when the constable came up then?—It may be that.

34201. How long a time passed, do you think, from the time that the constable came and separated you and George, and the constable drew you aside, and the occurrence in Osborn Place?—Half an hour, I think.

34202. Then you see I was very near right in my suggestion to you that it was a little before one when the occurrence took place?—The meeting with the constable—it might have been later.

34203. If you met George at 12 o'clock, and the constable came up to you after you had been talking about ten minutes to George, that would make it from ten minutes to a quarter past twelve?—Yes, as near as possible.

34204. Then you tell us that you think about half an hour would be the time that elapsed from the time when you left the constable down to the time when this occurrence took place in Osborn Place?—It might have been later; it might have been more than half an hour, because they were having words one with the other as we were walking along and stopping.

34205. What was the distance from the place where you were walking with George when the constable came up, and this part of Osborn Place where the occurrence took place?—About five or ten minutes' walk as near as possible.

34206. Take it to be ten minutes. It seems to me that half an hour is a pretty liberal allowance for walking there, and for the few words, and for the final assault?—He was standing and talking to him, and he wanted to separate us, and it might have been longer.

34207. Take any reasonable amount of time. It seems to me that the occurrence must have taken place, if your account is accurate, before 1 o'clock in the morning?—Yes.

34208. Does it not seem to you to be so?—Yes.

34209. Then from 1 o'clock in the morning you have got till 4 o'clock, that is three hours before George gets to the hospital. How was that time spent?—I am not positive about the time; I may be mistaken as to the time. I do not remember.

34210. We shall be able to fix the time when George got to the hospital, or I think we shall, because we shall probably find an entry in some of the books of the hospital, so that we shall know. You say that it was when day was breaking. You are quite clear about that, are you not?—Yes.

34211. You see the difficulty, do you not, about these three hours?—Yes.

34212. It is not the difficulty of a few minutes, or five or ten minutes, but it is the whole three hours that has got to be accounted for. Now, Mrs. Griffiths, are you telling us all that took place?—Yes.

34213. Try and think. After the constable had come up and asked you what you were doing, and separated you and George for the first time, did you and he go somewhere?—No.

34214. Let me put it in another way. When you met him near the Bell public-house, or somewhere, after you had come from the tram, did you and George go somewhere together?—No.

34215. Whatever may have been the truth as to the details, did not this occurrence take place when you and he were walking away afterwards some hours later?—I don't quite follow you.

34216. I am suggesting to you—I am only trying to help you out of an admitted difficulty. You, yourself, do not seem able to explain this great lapse of time of three hours. I am inviting your attention to suggestions. For instance, if you apply your mind to it, is it not the fact that you and George went somewhere when you met that night, and being together a couple of hours, you and he went away, and then this took place?—No, we never went anywhere. Nothing happened.

34217. You can give no better explanation of this lapse of time?—No.

34218. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I have the details of the conviction and the date of it, and perhaps you will allow me to give them, so that we may get it accurately. 25th September, 1906, drunk and disorderly was the charge, and she described herself by the name that she now gives, and the address, and said she was a dressmaker. She was fined 5s. or five days. (To the witness.) Is that right?—Yes, that is my trade.

E. Griffiths.

21 Feb. 1907.

34219. And that would be the date—the 25th September?—Yes.

(Chairman.) That is really a very irrelevant fact, because it hardly goes to character under the circumstances.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Oh, no, Sir, it is not put forward as such.

34220. (Mr. Dickinson.) After this assault had taken place you told us you had walked round some model dwellings. Are they close by?—Not very far away.

34221. What did you go round there for?—To see if I could find George.

34222. And then you came back into Commercial Street?—Yes, Whitechapel and Commercial Street.

34223. Then you found him opposite the Victoria Home?—Yes.

34224. Did you know that he lived at the Victoria Home?—No, I did not know he lived there.

34225. What made you go there?—He had told me. I came that way to go home.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) We have a larger map now, embracing a larger area, and you will see the relative positions of the Victoria Home where the man lived, and the place where this witness lived also. (Handing in map.)

34226. (Mr. Dickinson.) I understood you to say just now that he did tell you that he lived at Victoria Home?—Yes.

34227. When did he tell you that?—After this happened.

34228. After the assault?—Yes.

34229. Why did you go to the Victoria Home to look for him?—I came down Commercial Street to find him, and I found him outside the Home.

34230. What did you want to find him for?—To see how he got on after the assault.

34231. You had seen him run away?—Yes—he walked away.

34232. He ran away?—Yes.

34233. As fast as he could?—Yes.

34234. When you saw him running away did you think he was very seriously injured?—Yes, I thought he was by what he had.

34235. You mean the blows he had?—Yes.

34236. When you were looking for him did you meet anybody else?—No. I had Wiltshire with me.

34237. You had Wiltshire with you?—Yes.

34238. When did Wiltshire join you?—He was the one who was standing outside when it was done, and I recognised him after the sergeant told him to go away, and he came with me to see if I could find him.

34239. Why did he come with you?—I asked him.

34240. You asked him on the spot?—Yes.

34241. That was before you had found George at the Victoria Home?—Yes.

34242. At the Bell Inn you asked Wiltshire to go with you to look for George?—Yes.

34243. Were you in Brick Lane at that moment or in this Osborn Place?—Osborn Place.

34244. You were in Osborn Place?—Yes.

34245. And with Wiltshire you walked away from Brick Lane?—Yes.

34246. You are sure of that?—Positive.

34247. Then Wiltshire did not find you in Brick Lane?—It is Brick Lane—outside the Bell. I call it Brick Lane.

34248. But you joined Wiltshire after George had gone away?—Yes.

34249. You walked round by the model dwellings with him, and you both found George at the Victoria Home?—Yes.

34250. How long did it take you to get from the Victoria Home to the hospital?—Over half an hour.

34251. It is quite close, is it not—quite near?—No, it is not so near.

34252. How long would it take you to walk at an ordinary pace?—It is a good ten minutes' walk if not more.

34253. A good ten minutes' walk to the hospital?—If not more.

34254. Did you have any difficulty in getting him there?—Yes.

34255. What kind of difficulty?—He could not walk, or he could scarcely walk.

34256. Did you have to help him along?—Yes.

34257. Did anyone come to your assistance?—Wiltshire was with me, and the other young man.

34258. Did you pass any policemen?—I don't remember; I did not take any notice.

34259. Nobody noticed that this man was ill?—No.

34260. Did he seem to be quite unable to get along?—Yes.

34261. I understand that you went to the hospital afterwards to see Pearce?—Yes.

34262. You told us you went three times?—About two or three times, I think.

34263. You told us that although twelve months ago you had intimate acquaintance with George, since then you have not had intimate acquaintance with him?—No.

34264. Have you seen him during this twelve months?—No.

34265. Why did you go so often to the hospital to look after him?—To see how he was. I took him in a few things.

34266. When you met him that night you said that was the first time you had met him in twelve months?—About a month previous to that I had seen him about twice.

34267. When you went to the hospital I suppose you talked to him about this occurrence?—Yes.

34268. Did you have a talk with him again about what the policeman had done?—He asked me if I was called forward would I come, and I said "Yes." That is what I remember.

34269. Did he ask you anything about this policeman?—He asked if I could recognise him, and I said "Yes," and he said he could do so.

34270. Did he ask you whether you could find out the number?—No, I don't remember him asking me.

34271. Did he ask you whether you knew the number of the policeman?—Not at the time of the first meeting in the hospital. I do not remember.

34272. Did anybody in the hospital ask you about the event at all?—No, no one in the hospital.

34273. When the policeman first came towards you you said that he called you across to him?—Yes.

34274. Where was the policeman then?—We were standing talking when he was coming up the road.

34275. From which direction was he coming up?—I don't know the name of the street. We met outside this chapel.

34276. And this chapel was a little way away from the Bell?—Yes.

34277. How many minutes' walk from the Bell?—Five or ten minutes.

34278. That was the place where the policeman met you. You were standing outside this chapel, and he came up?—Yes.

34279. Did he come up in the direction you had been coming from, or in the direction in which you were going?—In the direction we were coming from.

34280. Then he came up behind you?—I did not see him come behind. We were standing talking, and I noticed him come up the road.

34281. He called you to him?—Yes.

34282. How did he call you to him?—He knew me.

34283. What did he say? What name did he call you by?—He gave me no name at all. He said he wanted to speak to me, and I left George and went and spoke to him.

34284. Do you mean to say he did not address you by any name?—No, he did not give me any other name.

34285. What did he say?—He said, "May I speak to you?" I cannot remember word for word. He did not give me any name.

34286. Did you at that moment know him?—Yes, by sight.

34287. Did you know his name at all?—No.

34288. What did you think he was going to say to you? Why should he call you across?—I did not know at the time, but afterwards I did. I think I have made the statement, have I not?

34289. I want to get it perfectly clear. What was it that he said to you when you came across?—He asked me if I would come with him, and I refused.

34290. Were those the words that he used?—Yes.

34291. If you would come with him?—Yes.

34292. You say he had never asked you that before?—No.

34293. Never?—No.

34294. That you are sure of?—Yes.

34295. George had gone on then?—Yes, he just walked a few steps away.

34296. Had you any doubt as to what the policeman meant when he asked if you would come with him?—Not at that time, but when he asked me if I would come with him, of course I did then.

34297. Did he take hold of you at all by your hand or anything?—No, he did not touch me.

34298. You told the Chairman that no policeman had ever said that to you before?—No.

34299. Then you say he followed you, and I think your words were that there was some argument?—Yes.

34300. Between George and the policeman?—Yes.

34301. What was it?—I told George what the policeman asked me.

34302. That the policeman had asked you to go with him, and that he wanted to have connection with you?—Yes.

34303. You made George understand that?—Yes.

34304. And then the policeman came up?—Yes.

34305. How did the argument that you have told us of begin? Why should there be any quarrel about it?—When I told George of the constable asking me, when the constable came up to George, he said, "You go your way and leave her to go her way." George said, "We are both going the same way," and then George told him he ought to be ashamed of himself. One word led to another, but I could not remember it word for word.

34306. I think you said, when you were asked, "There was an argument about me"?—Yes, about myself.

34307. What did they say about you?—I could not remember word for word.

34308. But it became a quarrel according to what you say—a serious quarrel?—Yes, because I would not go with the constable, and he turned nasty.

34309. He still wanted you to go with him instead of going with George?—Yes.

34310. Did he keep on saying "Won't you come with me?"—No. He wanted to separate us.

34311. What did George say?—George told him he ought to be ashamed of himself because he was not doing anything, but I could not remember his words, they have slipped my memory. I remember those words. The constable asked him what he was talking about, or he did not know who he was talking to.

34312. Was there any disturbance before you got to the Bell? The assault you have told us took place at the Bell?—Yes, outside the Bell?—Osborn Place. There is a single men's lodging house, and the Bell is the next house.

34313. The corner of Osborn Place and Brick Lane?—Yes.

34314. That was the first time that George got knocked down?—Yes.

34315. Do you know whether George got knocked down at any other time?—No, not that night—not to my knowledge.

34316. When you were walking up Osborn Place towards Brick Lane was there then shouting and noise?—Both of them were talking together.

34317. When did the noise become loud enough to make the people open their windows?—When George was on the ground and the constable was kicking him.

34318. Not till then?—Not till then.

34319. And then people did open their windows and look out?—Yes.

34320. And at that time George ran away or hurried away down Osborn Place, and, I suppose, out of sight?—Yes.

34321. You following in that direction?—Yes.

34322. Then there was not sufficient disturbance in this argument to make the people open their windows?—Only the screams. He shouted, and I shouted as well.

34323. That was not till the constable knocked him down?—No, there was nothing before that.

34324. Not before he knocked him down?—No.

34325. You saw Hughes when the assault was taking place?—After.

34326. After the assault had taken place?—Yes.

34327. When did you see him next?—I saw him the next day.

34328. No—he went with you to the hospital?—Not Hughes.

34329. Hughes did not go to the hospital?—No.

34330. Who were the others?—Wiltshire and another young man I do not know. He is not here.

34331. Now I want to ask you one other question apart from this matter. Have you ever given the police any money?—No.

34332. You never have had to give the police any money in connection with your calling?—No.

34333. Has it ever been suggested to you that you should give them money?—No.

34334. You have been on the streets for a year now, I understand?—Yes.

34335. Out every night, I suppose?—Yes.

34336. Would you say that the police know you to be a street walker?—They see me every night.

34337. You have never been asked for money?—No.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There is one answer the witness gave to Mr. Dickinson that I could not quite follow. She said that George told her after the assault that he lived at the Victoria Home. I do not know what opportunity he had after the assault of telling her, because she says he ran away immediately.

34338. (Mr. Dickinson.) I think I understood what she meant. (To the witness.) What did you mean? I asked you whether you knew he lived at Victoria Home, and you told me that you did, but he told you that after the assault. I ask you again, did you know he lived at the Victoria Home before the assault?—No, I did not know he lived there.

34339. When did you become aware of that fact?—When I found him outside the home he told me he stayed there.

34340. (Chairman.) When you found him leaning against the wall?—Yes, after the accident.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I understood her to have said to you that she had gone to look for him at the Victoria Home.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I did not gather that. She described the way she went, and she said she walked down Commercial Street, and she found him outside the Victoria Home. I put it to her several times, and she denied it.

34341. (Mr. Whitmore.) You have said that you had seen George near the Victoria Home?—Outside the Victoria Home.

JOSEPH WILTSHIRE, sworn.

J. Wiltshire. 21 Feb. 1907.

34342. (Earl Russell.) You live at 19, Brick Lane?—Yes.

34343. Is that a common lodging-house?—Yes.

34344. What is your occupation?—Newsvendor.

34345. Do you recollect on the night of the 20th August or the morning of the 21st anything that disturbed you?—Yes.

34346. What time was it first, can you tell me, as far as you know?—I should think it was about between two and three o'clock.

34347. Where were you at the time?—I was standing outside the door.

34348. The door of your place—19, Brick Lane?—Yes.

34349. Were you standing in the street?—Yes.

34350. Or on the doorstep?—In the street.

34351. What was it that attracted your attention?—I heard some screams.

34352. What kind of screams?—A man's screams, a low groan of a voice, and I rushed up the street and I saw a man lying down on the ground and a constable leaning over him.

34353. Which way did you run?—Towards Brick Lane.

34354. I thought you were in Brick Lane?—I was in Flower and Dean Street outside the lodging-house. There are two entrances to the lodging-house.

34355. (Chairman.) There are two entrances to your lodging-house—the one entrance is from Brick Lane and the other is from Flower and Dean Street?—Yes.

34356. (Earl Russell.) You were standing at the Flower and Dean Street entrance?—Yes.

34357. You say you ran to Brick Lane?—Yes.

34358. Where did you see this man?—Outside the lodging-house in Chicksand Street.

34359. Is that on the opposite side of Brick Lane to where you had come from?—Yes.

34360. About how far from Brick Lane down the street was it?—Within a stone's throw—about as far as from here to the wall.

34361. And the man you say was on the ground?—Yes, and the constable leaning over him.

34362. What was the constable doing?—Hitting him—striking him on the ground. As the man went to get up, every time he went to get up, the constable hit him and kicked him.

34363. How close did you come to what was going on?—From here to where you are.

34364. As close as that?—Yes.

34365. Were there many people there?—Yes.

34366. Did you know the man on the ground?—No, he was a stranger. I only just know him by sight. Taking him to the hospital, that is all I knew him by.

34367. (Mr. Dickinson.) You said "I only just know him by sight." Do you mean you knew him when you saw him on the ground?—No, I did not know him before I saw him on the ground.

34368. (Earl Russell.) You mean as far as you know you had never seen him before?—No, only just being on the ground; that is the first time I saw him in my life.

34369. Did you know the constable?—Yes.

34370. Had you seen him before?—Yes.

34371. Had you known his number before?—Yes.

34372. What was his number?—207.

34373. Did you know his name?—No. I could not tell you.

34374. Do you know his name now?—No.

34375. Did you hear anything being said by the constable or by the man on the ground?—I heard the man say, "Let me get up and go away," and the constable said, "If you don't get out of it I will give you some more," and as the man went to get up the constable ran down the street after him and kicked him again outside the school in Chicksand Street.

34376. Are you talking of the second time when the man went down?—Yes.

34377. I am talking of the first time. I want to know whether you heard anything said the first time when you came up?—No, I only heard the sergeant say "Let him alone, he has had enough."

34378. There was a sergeant there?—Yes.

34379. Did you know the sergeant before?—No, I only knew him through being stationed up Brick Lane.

34380. You had seen the sergeant before?—Yes, I had seen him.

34381. Before this night?—Yes.

34382. How often—fairly often?—Yes; very often.

34383. Did you know the sergeant's number before?—No.

34384. Did you know it that night?—Yes—5 H.

34385. You are quite sure about it?—Yes.

34386. Were there any other police there?—No.

34387. No other police at all?—No, only the policeman and a sergeant.

34388. Did the sergeant say anything to the crowd?—He made them move along.

34389. How long was the man on the ground altogether after you came up?—About five minutes.

34390. Did you see the man get up from there?—Yes.

34391. Did he get up by himself or was he helped up?—He got up himself the best way he could.

34392. Got right up on his feet?—He tried to get on his feet, but the constable kept kicking at him.

34393. Did anyone help him at all to get up?—The sergeant gave him a hand to get up.

34394. What did the man who had been on the ground do after he got up?—He ran down the street.

34395. Which street?—Chicksand Street.

34396. Further from Brick Lane, or nearer to it?—Further from it.

34397. Did anyone go down the street as well as the man, or did he go down by himself?—He went down by himself and the constable ran after him.

34398. Did you run after him too?—I could not, the sergeant would not let us go past.

34399. Nobody else followed them down?—No.

34400. The sergeant kept the whole crowd back; is that what you say?—Yes.

34401. Did you see anything happen as the man ran?—Yes, when they got down near the school the constable kicked him again.

34402. What school is that?—I do not know; I think it is a Jewish school.

34403. Then you saw him fall again, did you?—Yes.

34404. Did you see the constable kick him again?—Yes.

34405. (Chairman.) Which police-constable was that?—207.

34406. (Earl Russell.) Was there any other constable at all there at that time?—No, not that I saw.

34407. (Chairman.) No other constable at all?—No.

34408. Only the sergeant and Police-constable 207?—The sergeant who was up at the top of the street.

34409. Was any other police constable there?—Not that I saw.

34410. (Earl Russell.) Did you see Ethel Griffiths there when you came out?—Yes.

34411. Did you know Ethel Griffiths before?—No.

34412. Neither by name nor by sight?—I just knew her by sight—by just coming through the streets—that is all.

34413. Did you take any particular notice of her then?—No.

34414. Did you hear or see her doing anything?—No.

34415. Did you stop to see how long the man was on the ground the second time?—No.

34416. What did you do after he went down the second time?—Me and Ethel Griffiths walked round the other way to see if we could find the man.

34417. Why did you walk with Ethel Griffiths if you did not know her?—We went round there to try and find out whether he was hurt or not.

34418. Did she speak to you, or did you speak to her?—I spoke to her.

34419. What did you say?—I said, "Where has the man gone who got kicked?" Ethel Griffiths said, "I think he has gone round that way." I said, "We will come round this way and try to find him."

34420. You say you and Ethel Griffiths were not allowed down Chicksand Street?—No.

34421. You came down Brick Lane?—Yes.

34422. Which way did you go after that?—Down towards Whitechapel.

34423. Did you turn to your right or to your left when you got into Brick Lane?—To the left.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I do not quite follow that.

(Earl Russell.) He says they came out of Osborn Place, and turned to their left in Brick Lane.

34424. (Mr. Dickinson.) That is to say, coming out of Osborn Place?—Yes.

34425. Right down towards Whitechapel Road?—Yes.

34426. (Chairman.) Turning to the left would be turning towards the Whitechapel Road?—Yes.

34427. Which runs across Brick Lane?—Yes.

34428. (Earl Russell.) Did Ethel Griffiths say anything to you as you went with her?—I asked her what the row was about.

34429. Did she tell you she had been with a man, or anything about it?—No.

34430. Did she tell you nothing about it?—No.

34431. (Chairman.) She made no answer at all?—No.

34432. (Earl Russell.) Did she tell you she wanted to find the man?—Yes.

34433. Why did you want to find him?—To see whether he was hurt in any way; to see if I could help him.

34434. Will you tell us as nearly as you can what streets you walked through before you did find him?—We went through Montague Street, and we walked through a street just at the bottom, but I do not recollect the name of it.

34435. (Chairman.) A street at the bottom of Montague Street?—Yes; and then came into Whitechapel Road again. Then we came towards Victoria Home, and we found the man outside.

34436. If you got into the Whitechapel Road you must have gone into High Street, Whitechapel, and turned into Commercial Street to get to the Home?—Yes.

34437. (Mr Dickinson.) You say you went down Brick Lane, and then you got into Montague Street?—Yes.

34438. That is a turning to the left?—Yes.

34439. (Chairman.) Montague Street is nearly parallel with Chicksand Street, where the man was?—Yes, the first turning past.

34440. You did not find him in Montague Street, or in any of the streets turning off from Montague Street?—No.

34441. Then did you make your way into the Whitechapel Road?—Yes, we turned out from Montague Street into Whitechapel Road.

34442. What made you turn into Commercial Street?—To see whether we could see the man sitting outside anywhere.

34443. And did you find him outside the Victoria Home?—Yes.

34444. (Earl Russell.) Was anyone else with you and Ethel Griffiths while you were walking round looking for him?—No.

34445. (Mr. Dickinson.) I understand you turned to the left down Montague Street, and then you turned to the right to get into Whitechapel Road?—Yes.

34446. When you got into Whitechapel Road, which way would you turn?—To the right again.

34447. And then you would get into Commercial Street?—Yes.

34448. And then you walked up Commercial Street?—Yes.

34449. (Earl Russell.) When you found the man at the Victoria Home, was there anybody with him?—There was a man standing there.

34450. Do you know the name of the man?—No—a stranger.

34451. Have you seen him again since?—No.

34452. Have you seen him up here?—No.

34453. Anybody else?—No.

34454. What position was he in when you found him? What was he doing?—He was groaning.

34455. Was he standing, lying, or sitting?—Leaning up against the wall.

34456. Which of you spoke to him first?—I did.

34457. What did you say?—I asked him whether he was hurt in any way. Then he told me what happened.

34458. (Chairman.) What did he say?—He said the constable kicked him.

34459. (Earl Russell.) What did you do then?—I asked him how he would like to go to the hospital, and he stood considering, and at last he found he had to go, so me and Ethel Griffiths went over to the hospital with him.

34460. You both helped him there?—Yes.

34461. Was anybody else there with you to help him to the hospital?—No.

34462. When you got to the hospital, I think you went inside with him?—Yes, and Ethel Griffiths stopped outside.

34463. And you took charge of his clothes, did you not?—Yes.

34464. Do you know what time it was when you got to the hospital?—As near as I can guess, it was about four o'clock, or a little after.

34465. Did you notice a clock anywhere?—No.

34466. Did you have to give any account of him to anybody in the hospital?—Yes, to a nurse.

34467. You saw a nurse?—Yes.

34468. Did you have to sign any book or anything?—Yes, before I took his clothes away.

34469. You had to sign a book?—Yes, and the name and address as well.

34470. And your name and address?—Yes.

34471. Did you notice what time it was when you came out of the hospital?—About half-past six.

34472. Half-past six when you came out?—Yes.

34473. What were you doing all that time?—We were waiting for the doctor. The doctor was a good three-quarters of an hour before he came.

34474. That brings you to nearly five o'clock. What kept you waiting the rest of the time?—I was upstairs about his clothes and talking to the nurse.

34475. How was it when you reached the hospital with regard to daylight? Was it still dark, or was it daylight?—It was just breaking daylight; it was not very dark and it was not very light.

34476. About how long do you think that was after the time when you first heard the man screaming and ran into Brick Lane?—Three hours after.

34477. When you reached the hospital?—Yes; it was about an hour after we got there.

34478. I do not quite understand it.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) He got to the hospital about an hour after he heard the screaming in Brick Lane, and three hours after he left.

34479. (Earl Russell.) Is that what you mean?—Yes.

34480. I mean when you first ran from your door when you heard the man screaming to the time when you took him to the hospital and first got to the hospital—how long do you say that was about?—About an hour.

34481. Have you seen this Constable 207 H since?—I have seen him this morning, and I saw him yesterday.

34482. Have you seen him since in that neighbourhood?—No.

34483. Have you seen the sergeant since?—No.

J. Wiltshire. 21 Feb. 1907.

34484. Have you seen him here?—I have seen the sergeant here and the constable here.

34485. Are you sure about the sergeant?—Yes, I am sure about both of them.

(Earl Russell.) I do not know whether we had better have the men in.

(Chairman.) Yes, I think so.

(Several police-constables were called into court.)

(Witness.) The first one is the constable (207 H).

34486. (Earl Russell.) Have you any doubt about him?—That is the one I saw.

34487. You are quite sure of that?—Yes, I would swear my life to him.

34488. Do you know the sergeant?—Yes.

34489. Which is he?—There he is, right at the back—the third one from the end.

(Chairman.) Go and point him out, please.

(The witness pointed out P.-S. 5 H.)

34490. (Earl Russell.) Are you quite certain of him?—Yes.

34491. Quite certain?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) While the men are here will you allow me to interpose a question? It will save another parade.

(Chairman.) Yes.

34492. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Do you recognise any other officer present in connection with this matter?—No.

(Chairman.) I understand the man he picks out as the sergeant is in fact a sergeant.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes. There are several other sergeants in that group.

(Chairman.) What was the number of the sergeant he recognised?

34493. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) H 5, Sheedy. Do you remember when you made your statement, which was taken down in writing, and which you signed?—I can remember it.

34494. You remember making a statement?—Yes.

34495. Where did you make it?—In the White House, in Flower and Dean Street.

34496. Do you remember how long it was after this event that you are speaking of?—No.

34497. Was it months, days, or weeks?—Months.

34498. Months, or a month?—A month.

34499. One month?—Yes.

34500. That is as near as you can put it?—Yes.

34501. Was Ethel Griffiths there?—She came and told me, and she left.

34502. Was anybody else there at the same time?—No.

34503. How many people were there taking statements from you?—One.

34504. Have you seen him here?—No.

34505. Have you seen him about the precincts of the court?—No.

34506. One person took your statement?—Yes.

34507. Nobody else present there at all?—No.

34508. Except Ethel Griffiths?—Ethel Griffiths came and told me, and she walked away.

34509. Where did she walk to?—She walked to tell the other boy.

34510. Did the other boy come?—Yes.

34511. Had you finished your statement by the time the other boy came?—No. He was standing there a little while; I had very nearly finished it when he came.

34512. After it was finished, was it read over to you?—Yes.

34513. Who read it over to you?—The solicitor—the one who took it down.

34514. He read it over to you?—Yes.

34515. Was the other boy there?—Yes.

34516. Then did he take the other boy's statement?—Yes.

34517. Was that read over to the other boy?—That I could not say.

34518. What hour do you say it was that you heard the shouting?—Between two and three.

34519. Are you quite sure of the time?—Yes.

34520. What makes you sure of the time?—Because I can tell what time I go to bed.

34521. What time do you go to bed?—I do not leave the City before half-past twelve, and I stopped up and made some tea.

34522. I do not quite follow. Just tell me again. What time do you go to bed?—About two o'clock.

34523. It was after two, you say?—Yes.

34524. How was it you were not in bed at two o'clock?—I was not in bed at two o'clock, not the night it occurred.

34525. How was that?—I stopped up and made some tea.

34526. Where did you make the tea—at home?—Yes.

34527. What hour was it you made the tea at?—Five minutes to two, as near as I can guess.

34528. How long did it take you to make the tea?—It takes me about half an hour to cook it and eat it.

34529. Then what did you do?—I came out against the door to have a smoke before going to bed.

34530. How long had you been at your door having a smoke when you heard a shout?—Ten minutes.

34531. So that it would be about half-past two to twenty minutes to three when you heard the scream?—Yes.

34532. Not later?—It might have been that, or a little later.

34533. Was it three o'clock?—No, it was not so late as three o'clock.

34534. How do you know that?—At three o'clock the watchman scrubs the table, and he had not started.

34535. At the house where you live?—Yes.

34536. He had not started?—No.

34537. What makes you remember that?—I thought I would remember in case I was asked. I thought I would try and remember all I could.

34538. To fix it in your mind?—Yes.

34539. Being important?—Yes.

34540. That was firmly fixed in your mind, and it is firmly fixed in your mind now, and has been all the time?—Yes, as far as I can remember.

34541. And it was when you made your statement?—Yes.

34542. Are you sure of that?—Yes.

34543. Did you tell the gentleman to whom you made the statement that it was four o'clock in the morning?—I told him between two and three.

34544. This statement was read over to you, you told us, before you signed it?—Not before I signed it—after I signed it.

34545. Was it correct?—Yes.

34546. Just listen to this; this is how it begins: "I live at 19, Brick Lane." That is right, is it not?—Yes.

34547. "At about 4 a.m. on the 21st August I was outside my house and heard a man scream." How do you account for that?—I did not say it was four o'clock.

34548. Then that is a mistake. Can you account for that?—No.

34549. It is very remarkable, is it not, that the gentleman who came to take your statement should have made such a mistake as that?—He must have misunderstood at the time what I said.

34550. He must have done. You are quite clear you told him between two and three?—Yes.

34551. You could not have made a mistake?—I might have done; I do not think I did.

34552. How could you possibly? At the very time that that was happening, or immediately after it happened, you fixed it firmly in your mind because you thought it was important?—Yes.

34553. You could not have made a mistake, could you?—I do not know.

34554. What do you think—did you make a mistake?—No.

34555. Now I want to ask you, first of all, with regard to the sergeant, No. 5 H. Did you notice his number at the time?—Yes.

34556. Did you fix that firmly in your memory?—Yes.

34557. Because you thought it important?—Yes.

34558. Was he a man whose appearance you knew before that night?—No.

34559. Had you ever seen that sergeant before that night?—No.

34560. Never had seen him before?—No.

34561. And never seen him since till yesterday morning?—No.

34562. You are depending absolutely on the accuracy of your memory as to his number?—Yes.

34563. You made no note other than a mental note of the number?—No—H 5.

34564. That is in your mind?—Yes.

34565. Not on any paper?—I shoved it on a paper that I had sent me.

34566. (Chairman.) You gave the number to the gentleman who took the statement from you?—Yes.

34567. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) What paper did you have sent to you?—A letter asking me to come up at 11 o'clock on Wednesday morning.

34568. (Chairman.) That is the summons to come here?—Yes.

34569. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I am talking of the number 5 H?—I gave it to the man who took my statement as well.

34570. That you did a month afterwards?—Yes.

34571. You mean you told the man who served you with the subpœna that it was 5 H—is that what you mean?—Yes.

34572. But you made no note yourself on any piece of paper at the time?—I took his number at the time?

34573. Yes?—Yes.

34574. Where is the piece of paper?—I have left it upstairs.

34575. In a room upstairs?—No, where I live.

34576. When did you make that note?—I shoved it on a note—when I had the letter sent to me after I read it I put the number on the back.

34577. Are you still talking about the subpœna served on you to come here on Wednesday?—Yes.

34578. That you got last—when?—Last Saturday.

34579. And you made a note of the numbers on the back of that?—Yes.

34580. In case you should forget them?—Yes.

34581. Had you made any note on any piece of paper at all before you made that note on the subpœna last Saturday?—Yes.

34582. When?—When the gentleman was taking the statement.

34583. He wrote that down, did he not?—He shoved the numbers down.

34584. But had you yourself with your own hand written this No. 5 H at all at any time before last Saturday?—No, not that I can remember.

34585. So that when you were giving your statement to the gentleman, as you say, a month after it happened, you were trusting entirely to your memory for the No. 5 H?—Yes.

34586. And you have remembered it ever since?—Yes.

34587. And last Saturday you remembered it and wrote it down on a piece of paper as you have told us in case you should forget it?—Yes.

34588. Are you quite sure you had never seen that sergeant before?—Quite sure. I have seen the constable up there.

34589. Do not let us talk about different things. Are you quite sure you had never seen the sergeant before that night?—Yes.

34590. And never seen him since?—No, not till yesterday morning.

34591. Do you often take a walk about Brick Lane and have a smoke just before going to bed?—I generally stand at the door.

34592. Do you ever take a walk about Brick Lane at night?—No.

34593. How far is your house that you live in from Brick Lane?—One part is in Brick Lane and another part is a little lower down.

34594. Do you say you never take a stroll round Brick Lane late at night?—I am never round in Brick Lane late at night.

34595. Your house abuts on Brick Lane?—Yes.

34596. Do you mean to say you never take a stroll down Brick Lane late at night?—No.

34597. Never?—No. I am up in the city with my papers until 12 o'clock at night.

34598. In the day time do you ever take a stroll down Brick Lane?—Yes.

34599. You see the police-sergeants walking round, I suppose?—Yes.

34600. Have you never seen 5 H walking round?—No.

34601. Neither day nor night?—No.

34602. How long have you lived there?—I have lived there about five years now.

34603. Neither by day nor by night have you ever seen 5 H walking about in Brick Lane?—No.

34604. Neither before nor since this affair?—No.

34605. You have a good memory, I suppose?—Not very good.

34606. Not very good?—No.

34607. Have you a good memory for figures?—Yes.

34608. Have you ever noticed any other police officer's number apart from 207 H? Have you ever noticed any other particular officer's number?—I never take the trouble to look; it does not concern me.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Let P.S. 30 H come in, please.

(P.S. 30 H was called into Court.)

34609. Have you ever seen that sergeant?—Not as I can swear to.

34610. Neither day nor night?—No.

34611. You have lived there for five years?—Yes.

34612. You have never taken any notice of his number?—No.

34613. (Chairman.) Have you ever seen him before?—No.

34614. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I have excellent reasons for wishing to fix this hour as nearly as you can give it to me at which you heard screaming and saw the sergeant. You appreciate that?—Yes.

34615. The nearest you can fix it, as I understand you, is 2.30 or 2.40 a.m.?—Yes.

34616. That is right?—Yes.

35617. At the corner of Brick Lane and Osborn Place?—Yes.

34618. When you arrived at the scene you saw a man on the ground?—Yes.

34619. Being kicked?—Yes.

34620. The constable was doing the kicking?—Yes.

34621. And the sergeant was—— ?—Looking on.

34622. Keeping the ring?—Yes.

34623. How long did that go on after you came up?—About five minutes.

34624. Was the constable continuing the kicking all the time?—He was kicking all the time.

34625. He took a sort of interval for rest?—That is it.

34626. How long?—About a minute. The man tried to get up, and as he tried to get up so the constable kept knocking him down, and would not let him get up.

34627. So as to kick him more conveniently?—He was pretty safe.

34628. With those continuous interruptions he was kicking him for five minutes?—I only saw him kick him once.

J. Wiltshire. 21 Feb. 1907.

34629. Only one kick in five minutes?—Yes.

34630. What was happening during the rest of the five minutes?—The man was groaning and holloaing out "Let me get up and go away."

34631. Was the kick that you saw at the beginning in the middle or at the end of the five minutes?—At the beginning.

34632. Right at the beginning?—Yes.

34633. And the man tried to get up how often?—He tried to get up three or four times.

34634. And each time the constable knocked him down?—Yes.

34635. How did he knock him down?—With his hand.

34636. Where did he strike him with his hand?—He struck him at the side of the face there (illustrating).

34637. How many times did that happen?—Once, as all I saw.

34638. I understood you, but I may have misunderstood you, to say that the man tried to get up several times?—Yes.

34639. And that the constable kept knocking him down?—He only knocked him down once. On the other occasions he shoved him down.

34640. Having got him down, did he do anything to him?—No.

34641. There was nothing to prevent him kicking as much as he wanted, I suppose?—No.

34642. One kick, one blow, and how many shoves?—About three.

34643. Where did the kick take effect that you saw?—The man shoved him arm up here (illustrating). Whether he kicked his arm or not I do not know. There was a pool of blood outside the door. Whether he kicked him in the arm or in the nose I could not say.

34644. Was it in the upper part of the body or in the lower part of the body that the kick took effect?—On the head, the first one.

34645. What about the other one?—The one I saw after that was down in Chicksand Street, the last kick that I saw.

34646. There was only one kick you saw that you think took effect on the head or about the head?—Yes.

34647. How close were you at the time?—From here to just there. (Indicating 5 or 6 feet.)

34648. Quite close. When was it you noticed the constable's number?—As he stood up. As the man got up to run away the constable stood up, and I noticed the number.

34649. That was at the end of the five minutes, then?—Yes.

34650. The man got up and ran away?—Yes, ran towards the bottom of Chicksand Street.

34651. And the constable ran after him?—Yes.

34652. How quickly did the constable start to run after him?—As quick as he could.

34653. The man no sooner started than the constable started?—That was it.

34654. That was the opportunity you had of noticing the number?—Yes, as the constable stood up.

34655. Before that had he been stooping over the man?—Yes.

34656. How far down the street did the man get before the constable overtook him?—Between Osborn Place and Chicksand Street there is a Jewish school. It occurred outside the school where the man fell.

34657. How far would that be down the street from the Bell?—I could not say.

34658. In yards?—About 100 yards.

34659. Did you run after them?—I started running, but the sergeant hunched us back.

34660. Where was it you got to before the sergeant hunched you back?—Just opposite the lodging house.

34661. So that when the constable caught up the man he had got nearly 100 yards from you?—Yes.

34662. What did you see happen 100 yards away?—I saw the constable go up to the man. He caught him and knocked him down, and kicked him again.

34663. How did he kick him?—As the man was falling.

34664. He knocked him down and kicked him as he was falling?—Yes.

34665. With his boot, of course?—Yes.

34666. But where did the boot take effect?—In between his legs.

34667. You are quite sure about that?—Yes.

34668. You saw all that at a distance of about 100 yards?—Yes.

34669. Was there anybody between you and the constable and the man?—Not that I know of.

34670. You were in the front rank?—Yes.

34671. How many people were there altogether?—About twelve.

34672. That is including everybody?—Yes.

34673. Including the man who was attacked?—No, without including him.

34674. Without including him and without including the policeman who attacked him?—Yes.

34675. There were twelve people round about where you were?—Yes, besides some looking out of the windows.

34676. On the street?—Yes.

34677. How many police were there?—Only the one constable and the one sergeant.

34678. Two?—Yes.

34679. The constable who made the attack—is that right?—Yes.

34680. And the sergeant who kept the people back while he was making the attack?—Yes.

34681. And you got the numbers of both of those?—Yes.

34682. Was any other constable present?—No, I did not see one.

34683. Are you quite clear about that?—Yes.

34684. That no other constable was present?—No, I did not see one.

34685. If there was one you did not see him?—No.

34686. If you had seen him you would have taken his number?—I daresay I would.

34687. As you did with the others?—Yes.

34688. Did you make any note of the No. 207 H?—Only just put it down on a piece of paper. I put down the two numbers on the piece of paper.

34689. You mean last Saturday?—Yes.

34690. Before last Saturday did you ever write down the numbers at all?—I did not write them down.

34691. Did anybody ever tell you that besides the sergeant, 5 H, and the constable, 207 H, there were any other constables there?—No, not that I can remember.

34692. And you certainly saw none?—No.

34693. You are quite clear?—Yes.

34694. Just let me read to you what appears in your statement, and, to make it clear, I will go back a little: "I ran into Brick Lane, and I saw a man lying on the ground and a constable standing over him and kicking him." That is constable 207 H?—Yes.

34695. That is the man you are speaking of, is it?—Yes.

34696. "The constable's number is 207 H. There was a sergeant there, No. 5 H. He was looking on at the kicking, and when a crowd had collected he ordered the people away." Is that right?—Yes.

34697. "There was another constable there"?—No.

34698. "But he only looked on"?—I did not see him.

34699. Can you account for that getting into your statement?—I do not know how it has come there. I did not say there was another constable there.

34700. It is absolutely untrue that you saw another constable looking on?—I did not see another one, only the two.

34701. "The man tried to get on his feet and the sergeant assisted him." Is that right?—Yes.

34702. "Then the man ran away down Chicksand Street, and he had got outside the school in Chicksand Street, Constable 207 ran after him, caught him.

knocked him down, and kicked him between the legs as he fell"?—Yes.

34703. That is all perfectly correct. "There was another constable there, about 30 yards away." Did you see any such constable?—No.

34704. "But he took no active part." Can you account for that getting into your statement?—No; I only saw the two constables there.

34705. According to that, as I read it, there were three constables there?—I only saw two, the constable (207) and the sergeant (5). Those are the only two I saw.

34706. You cannot account for that getting into your statement at all?—No.

34707. "I went into Brick Lane then to see if I could see Ethel Griffiths." When did you first know her name?—Yesterday morning.

34708. That was the first time you ever knew her name?—I knew it when the man took her case down. I forgot all about it until yesterday morning.

34709. Do you mean when she was giving her statement?—Yes.

34710. Did you hear her giving her statement?—I only heard her name go down. That is all.

34711. (Chairman.) Do you mean that the person who took your statement suggested the name of Ethel Griffiths to you?—Yes.

34712. Had you not known her name before that?—No.

34713. Although you had been to the hospital with her?—The only one I knew the name of ——

34714. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did you know her by any name?—No.

34715. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Not by Ethel?—I knew her by the name of Ethel, but I did not know her by the other name.

34716. How long had you known her by the name of Ethel?—Ever since the man took the statement down.

34717. Before this night or morning of the 21st August you had known her by sight, had you not?—Not very much.

34718. But you did know her by sight, seeing her about the streets?—Yes.

34719. Did you know her name was Ethel?—I knew her name was Ethel then.

34720. You did before this 21st August?—It was on the night of the 21st August when I first knew her name.

34721. On the night of the 21st August you first knew her name was Ethel?—Yes.

34722. How did you hear that?—A man called and asked what was the matter.

34723. Which man?—I heard a man call her Ethel, and ask her what the row was over.

34724. Some passer by?—Yes.

34725. He called her Ethel and asked her what was the matter?—Yes.

34726. What did she say?—She said there was a row with two "coppers."

34727. Anything else?—That is all I heard.

34728. Your statement goes on to say "I went into Brick Lane then to see if I could see Ethel Griffiths." That is right?—Yes.

34729. "I found her"?—Yes.

34730. Where did you find her?—At the corner of Chicksand Street.

34731. Do you mean Osborn Place?—Chicksand Street, where the row first occurred.

34732. Do you call it all Chicksand Street?—Yes.

34733. At the corner of Brick Lane and Osborn Place?—Yes.

34734. "We both went to see if we could find the man who had been assaulted"?—Yes.

34735. Did she tell you where he lived?—No. J. Wiltshire.

34736. Did you know where he lived?—No. 21 Feb. 1907.

34737. Did you hear the man's name?—No.

34738. When did you first hear his name?—Yesterday morning.

34739. What name did you hear yesterday morning?—I heard the name of George. I forget it now.

34740. Was it Pearce?—No.

34741. Was it Gamble?—No.

34742. It was neither of those names?—No, I could not tell you what it was now.

34743. It was neither Pearce nor Gamble?—No.

34744. You have an excellent memory, have you not?—Yes.

34745. Because you remembered those constables' numbers all those months up till last Saturday?—Yes.

34746. And you cannot remember the name of this man which you heard yesterday?—No.

34747. (Chairman.) Were you in court when this case was first called on?—Only yesterday morning.

34748. Yesterday morning you were turned out of court with the other witnesses, were you not?—Yes.

34749. You came into court once, I think, with another witness, did you not, to be identified, or not identified, as the case might be?—Yes.

34750. Were you here at the commencement of the proceedings?—I was outside.

34751. You remember a gentleman there (Mr. Eldon Bankes) asked me that witnesses might be ordered out of court. Do you remember that?—Yes.

34752. Then you had to go out of court?—Yes.

34753. Did you hear Mr. Leslie say anything about the name of the case that was being called on?—No.

34754. Then where did you hear the name of the man who had been injured at all yesterday?—Downstairs.

34755. Outside?—No, downstairs in the smoke-room.

34756. Where?—Downstairs in the waiting-room.

34757. In the room that you were taken to?—Yes.

34758. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Who told you the name?—They were all talking about it.

34759. And you cannot remember what it was?—No.

24760. (Chairman.) You mean the other witnesses were talking to you about it?—Yes, they were talking to one another about it, and I heard it.

34761. You remember yesterday you came into court again. Rubenstein was the name of an elderly gentleman who came in?—Yes.

35762. And Mr. Hughes came in?—Yes.

34762*. Were they down stairs talking about the case?—Yes.

34763. Who was it who mentioned the name of the man who was injured?—I cannot say.

34764. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You cannot remember who said it, and you cannot remember what it was?—No.

(Earl Russell.) To complete that letter that was handed in yesterday from Messrs. Radford and Frankland, I should like to hand in the reply from Scotland Yard.

(Chairman.) The Secretary had better read it.

(Secretary.) "New Scotland Yard, 8th December, 1906.—Gentlemen,—With reference to your letter of the 23rd ulto. I am directed by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to acquaint you that the police-constable referred to denies having seen or assaulted your client, and nothing is known to the police of the incident.—I am, Gentlemen, Your obedient servant, C. H. North, for Chief Clerk. To Messrs. Radford and Frankland, Solicitors."

JOSEPH WILTSHIRE, recalled.

34765. (Chairman.) What is your age?—17.

34766. Have you been to school?—Yes.

34767. What school?—Spicer Street.

34768. Is that in the neighbourhood of London in which you now live?—Yes. J. Wiltshire.

34769. A Board School?—Yes, it is now.

34770. When did you leave?—When I was 14.

34771. Were you living with your parents up to that time?—Yes.

34772. What is your father?—A bricklayer.

34773. Where does he live?—He is dead.

34774. Is your mother alive?—Yes.

34775. Does she live in the neighbourhood still?—Yes.

34776. But you do not live with her now, I gather?—No.

34777. Have you brothers and sisters?—I have two brothers.

34778. Do they help your mother to live, or does she do work herself?—She does work herself, and my two brothers are away.

34779. She lives alone?—Yes, I help her when I can afford it.

34780. And your brothers help her, too?—Yes.

34781. When did you cease living with her?—As soon as my father died.

34782. When was that?—About three years ago.

34783. How have you supported yourself?—By selling papers.

34784. Selling papers on your own account about the street, or have you some more regular employment?—Myself.

34785. You sell them about the streets?—Yes.

34786. In the City?—Yes.

34787. What time do you begin your work?—One o'clock in the day.

34788. When the evening papers come out?—Yes.

34789. And you remain in the City selling them until midnight?—Yes.

34790. Have you ever been in any trouble with the police?—No.

34791. When did you go and live at Flower and Dean Street, or rather the Brick Lane Lodging House?—Soon as father died; my mother could not afford to keep the rooms, and I went to live in the lodging house.

34792. Have you a cubicle there, or do you have a whole room to yourself?—We are all together.

34793. You have a cubicle there?—Yes.

34794. Then your occupation leads you to keep pretty late hours?—Yes.

34795. Do you generally walk home from the City?—Yes.

34796. You know pretty well all the roads and streets just about where you live?—Yes.

34797. Do you know any of the constables about there?—No, I never take much notice of any of them. I try to keep out of their way as much as I can.

34798. Why?—Because you are likely to get yourself into trouble.

34799. I can understand your keeping out of trouble, and I am very glad to hear from you that you never have been in any trouble, but I do not quite follow you when you say you keep away from the police. Why do you?—So that I don't get into trouble. I don't want to mix up with them.

34800. Do you think a policeman would do you any harm if you got into conversation with him?—Some might not and some might.

34801. Is there any feeling against the police among lads of your own age in your neighbourhood?—If you stand against a door they come and start throwing you away. That is what makes me keep out in the City so late of a night. If you go and stand against a door a constable comes down and starts turning you away, and that is what makes me keep out in the City so late.

34802. If you are selling a newspaper between 11 and 12 o'clock at night, would they interfere with your occupation?—No, not when I am out in the City.

34803. They do not interfere with you there?—No.

34804. Do they interfere with you when you are walking away from the City home?—When I get home and stand against the house a constable might come down and turn us away.

34805. Standing against your own door do you mean?—Yes.

34806. If you go standing in other people's doorways you would not be surprised if a constable told you to get away or inquired what you were doing there, would you?—No.

34807. Have you often before this night stood outside the lodging-house in which you live?—I generally stand outside.

34808. Has any constable ever interfered with you?—Not up till now.

34809. If you have never been interfered with what makes you suggest that constables are in the habit of doing it?—I have heard a lot of say about them.

34810. You have heard a lot of gossip in talking with other young men in this part of London?—Yes.

34811. Would you say the police are not popular with the young men in this part of London?—I don't know.

34812. At any rate, you tell me that you never had any quarrel with the police at all?—No.

34813. You have no personal cause of complaint against the Police Force in general or against any individual constables?—No.

34814. What time of the day was it when Ethel Griffiths fetched you to make your statement?—About 12 o'clock.

34815. Mid-day?—Yes.

34816. Had you spoken to Ethel Griffiths between the 21st August when this occurrence was witnessed by you, and the time when she came and fetched you to make a statement?—No.

34817. Had you ever seen her between those dates?—No.

34818. Where did she meet you to ask you to come?—Outside my lodging-house.

34819. She came to the lodging-house?—She sent a boy in to tell me she wanted me.

34820. How did she know where you were to be found?—A little boy told her.

34821. What you suggest is that when she was asked to find you she got some little boy in the neighbourhood to come and tell you?—Yes.

34822. What was the boy's name?—I could not tell you. We speak to one another round there and they quickly know your name.

34823. When you went to the hospital with George, the injured man, and Ethel Griffiths, did you have no conversation with her?—I spoke to her going along, and I asked if she had been to see him, and how he was getting on.

34824. But I am now dealing with what took place when you and she were going with the poor man to the hospital. Did she ask you on the morning of the 21st in going to the hospital, or when you were waiting at the hospital, or when you were coming away from the hospital, where you lived?—She asked me as we were going along.

34825. And you walked back together?—Yes.

34826. That was at half-past six, as I understand?—Yes.

34827. Where did you leave her on that morning?—I left her outside, and I went into the lodging-house.

34828. You left her outside your own lodging-house?—Yes.

34829. She lives in the same street, does she not?—I could not tell you.

34830. Flower and Dean Street?—That I could not say.

34831. She saw you turn into your house, at any rate?—Yes.

34832. Did she on that morning give you any account of what had taken place?—No.

34833. Did you, as you were coming back from the hospital, go back into Osborn Place again to see where this occurrence had taken place and have a look at it by daylight?—No.

34834. You mentioned something about a pool of blood?—We saw a pool of blood there before we went.

34835. You were not curious enough to go back and look and see how things looked then by daylight?—No, I did not go back and have a look.

34836. It was dark, I take it, when you went there first, was it not?—Yes.

34837. We have it that day broke about 4 a.m., and this was according to your account a little over an hour before that or a few minutes before three?—Yes.

34838. It was dark then, was it not?—Yes, I just managed to see it on the pavement—that is all.

34839. It was light enough for you to see there was blood there?—Yes.

34840. Was it light enough for you to see 100 yards distant exactly what took place between two men?—Yes.

34841. In Chicksand Street, 100 yards off?—Yes.

34842. How is Chicksand Street lighted—are they ordinary gas lamps?—Yes.

34843. 100 yards is a good long way?—I cannot exactly judge the distance.

34844. You have given a very particular account to Mr. Muir of what you saw. You actually saw where the kick, for instance, took effect. You saw one kick when the constable assaulted the man the second time. You say you saw him kick him?—It was right under the lamp.

34845. It was dark according to what you say. You say that the street was well lighted enough for you to see it at that distance?—Yes.

34846. When you were asked to make your statement you, I understand, went at once?—Yes.

34847. What did the gentleman in the White House say to you?—He asked me what occurred, and what time it occurred, and I told him.

34848. Was he sitting at a table?—Yes.

34849. Had he got paper with him?—Yes.

34850. And pen and ink, or a pencil?—Yes.

34851. Did he ask you questions?—Yes.

34852. At once?—Yes.

34853. He did not ask you to tell him what you saw in your own way?—No.

34854. He began by asking you questions? Is that right?—Yes.

34855. Now look at that. Is that the document he wrote out in your presence? (Handing document to the witness.) Just turn it over, and you will find your name is there?—I put my name at the bottom.

34856. You put your name at the bottom of that sheet after he finished writing?—Yes.

34857. Now look at the first sentence or two there—"Wiltshire, 19, Brick Lane, states about 4 a.m." How do you account for the 4 a.m. being put there?—I said between two and three.

34858. You are positive you said between two and three?—Yes.

34859. Did the gentleman make any rough notes first of all before he wrote them out fairly in that way?—No, not that I can remember.

34860. That is the only explanation you can give of how "4 a.m." got in there. Did you read over the statement before you signed it?—No.

34861. Did he read it over to you?—He read it out.

34862. There is no alteration there. It is written in quite good handwriting, "About 4 a.m. on the 21st August, 1906," it begins. When he read that you must have heard that he said "4 a.m." Did not that attract your attention?—No.

34863. How came you to go to the hospital? You found the man leaning against the wall as you have told us?—Yes.

34864. Had you ever met the man before?—No, never in my life.

34865. Did you suggest his going to the hospital, or who first talked about the hospital?—I could not tell you; I forget.

34866. Were you and Ethel Griffiths alone with the man leaning against the wall, or was there somebody else?—There were some men standing at the corner who live round the corner.

34867. Did they take any notice of you?—No.

34868. Did no other lad go with you to the hospital?—Not that I can remember.

34869. Then you had no object in going to the hospital, except the wish to be helpful to a man who was in pain and difficulty, and that is what you suggest?—Yes; I thought I was doing him a favour, because he was in pain. J. Wiltshire 21 Feb. 1907

34870. He was not a friend of yours at all?—No; quite a stranger.

34871. And Ethel Griffiths was a stranger?—I don't know none of them. They were two strangers to me.

34872. Had any occurrence of the kind taken place in that neighbourhood in your time before?—No.

34873. Then it was something quite new in your experience?—Yes.

34874. And you thought it was a right and proper thing to help this man in his distress; that is what you wish to say?—I thought I would help him to the hospital as he was in pain.

34875. You did not go and see him in the hospital, did you?—Only once.

34876. You did call once to inquire how he was getting on?—Yes.

34877. This was a man who was not a friend of yours in any way, and who you thought you ought to help to the extent of going to the hospital. How came it that you took away his clothes, and so on?—He said he had a mate, and told me to give them to his mate, and I came down and gave them to his mate, and I have not seen his mate from that day to this.

34878. He said he had got a mate, and wished you to take his clothes to his mate, or that his mate would come and fetch his clothes?—Yes.

34879. Then, as I understand from what you told Mr. Muir, he was undressed at the hospital, taken in as an in-patient, and his clothes were handed to you, and you gave the receipt for the clothes?—Yes.

34880. Did you see George after he was undressed?—Yes.

34881. Was he in bed in the ward?—Yes.

34882. Who handed you his clothes?—The nurse.

34883. And you gave the receipt to her?—Yes.

34884. What did George tell you to do with the clothes?—He told me to give them to his mate; I should find his mate outside, and I found a fellow outside, so I gave them to him.

34885. His mate was outside the hospital?—Yes.

34886. He was talking rationally—sensibly?—Yes.

34887. Though he was in pain still?—Yes.

34888. He had no difficulty in speaking?—No.

34889. Had you seen any mate outside?—I found a man out there, so I gave them to him. I asked him who he was first.

34890. You found a man outside waiting?—Yes.

34891. Had you seen him before you went into the hospital?—I saw him standing there.

34892. Before you went into the hospital?—As I was going in.

34893. Had he been with George at all?—That I could not say.

34894. I understood you to tell me, as you told Mr. Muir, that you and Ethel Griffiths went together, and were the only persons who went together with George to the hospital?—Yes, so far as I can remember.

34895. Did you speak to anybody except Ethel Griffiths and George before George went into the hospital?—No.

34896. And you went as far as the door, if I understand the story aright. You went to the door of the hospital, did you not?—I went right into the hospital with him—right into the ward and everything.

34897. Did you see him undressed?—Yes.

34898. And after he was undressed and the clothes put up into a bundle, he asked you to give the clothes to his friend?—Yes.

34899. Who was standing outside?—Yes.

34900. Did he tell you the mate's name?—No.

34901. Were not you surprised to hear there was a mate waiting outside?—Yes.

34902. Then this mate, according to you, had not spoken to George from the time he was leaning against the wall to the time that he got into the hospital and was undressed?—No.

J. Wiltshire.

21 Feb. 1907.

34903. Not spoken at all?—No.

34904. Did you observe anybody following you three?—I don't remember anybody following, and I don't remember speaking to anybody besides Ethel and George.

34905. When you went outside, I understand you did find a man there?—Yes.

34906. Had you noticed that man before you went in?—No.

34907. When you went out you found a man there, as George said you would find a man?—Yes.

34908. Did he say you would find his mate outside?—Yes.

34909. Do you know the mate's name or the man's name?—No.

34910. What did you say to him when you got outside?—I forget now; I cannot remember what I did say.

34911. You have forgotten the exact words. You were carrying the bundle, were you not?—Yes.

34912. And Ethel Griffiths was still in there?—No. There was only the man outside when I came out.

34913. Did he speak to you when he saw you with the bundle or did you speak to him?—I believe he spoke to me.

34914. What passed between you?—I could not tell you.

34915. I don't mean the exact words. Did you part with the bundle?—Yes, I gave him the bundle.

34916. Did it not strike you as rather odd that a man who you had never seen before should be waiting outside and that George inside should tell you to go out and give his clothes to a man that you would find waiting there? Did not that strike you as rather odd?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) It is suggested to me that there was a description or a name given. Perhaps, Sir, you would ask the witness that?

34917. (Chairman.) I will ask him, or you can in re-examination if you like. (To the witness.) Did George describe the man and tell you what kind of man his mate was?—I remember he said he had a blue and white handkerchief on, with a pair of brown boots and a velvet cap. That is all I can remember.

33918. George told you that before you left the hospital?—Yes.

34919. And when you got outside did you see a man there?—Yes.

34920. And he answered the description?—Yes.

34921. That man was not there, as I understand, when you went into the hospital?—No, not that I can remember.

34922. Had you seen him before that day at all?—No.

34923. Or ever at all?—No.

34924. Did it not strike you as rather odd that this man who you found leaning against a wall, who you had helped to the hospital, and who seems to have been rather doubtful at one time whether he would go to the hospital, knew that his mate was waiting for him outside?—Perhaps his mate was walking by the side of him, but I cannot remember anybody walking by the side of him.

34925. When you say a man's mate, one imagines that George is meaning a man that he knew pretty well?—Yes.

34926. That he was engaged in some occupation with him or in some business or work of some kind with him. Would you not understand that?—Yes.

34927. At any rate, a kind of acquaintance, if not a friend? Did it not strike you as rather odd that the mate should not have come to help him to the hospital?—Yes.

34928. Have you seen the mate since?—No.

34929. That is the last you have seen of the clothes, too?—Yes.

34930. Did you call at the hospital upon Gamble while he was in the hospital after that?—I went and saw him once.

34931. Did you tell him anything about the mate and the clothes?—I remember I told him I gave his clothes to his mate, and that is all.

34932. And he gave you no explanation of the mate being there in this somewhat surprising way?—No.

34933. Did you tell this about the mate to the gentleman who took your statement?—No.

34934. Did you tell him anything about the clothes?—No, not that I can remember.

34935. You confined yourself for the most part to answering his questions, I gather. You only answered his questions, as I understand?—Yes.

34936. Why were the clothes to be taken from the hospital at all?—That I could not say.

34937. Did George seem anxious to get rid of his clothes?—No, he did not seem anxious.

(Earl Russell.) I think the next witness will explain that.

34938. (Chairman.) You can throw no further light upon the matter?—No.

34939. (Mr. Dickinson.) I do not quite understand what you say about what happened after you left the hospital. I understood you to say that you went back with Ethel Griffiths?—Yes.

34940. You have just now said that she was not outside?—I met her at the corner of Commercial Street.

34941. I think you told us you were in the hospital for some time?—Yes.

34942. They kept you waiting there?—Yes.

34943. How long did they keep you waiting there?—It was about 6 o'clock when I came out. I went in about 4 o'clock, and they kept me waiting two hours.

34944. And then you walked back from the hospital to Commercial Street?—Yes.

34945. Why did you go to Commercial Street?—That is the way I came home.

34946. You were going back to your own lodging house?—Yes.

34947. Where did you meet Ethel Griffiths?—At the corner of Commercial Street.

34948. At the corner of Commercial Street and Whitechapel Road?—Yes.

34949. What was she doing there at 6 o'clock in the morning?—Standing there.

34950. Did she speak to you?—I said something to her, but I cannot remember what.

34951. You have remembered a good deal now. Just try and think. You had got rid of your bundle then?—Yes.

34952. Where did the man go when you gave him the bundle?—He went the other way. He came this way down Commercial Street, and he left me.

34953. He went the other way?—He cut through Montague Street, I think.

(Chairman.) That is one of the streets near Chicksand Street and Osborn Street.

34954. (Mr. Dickinson.) The London Hospital is in the Whitechapel Road?—Yes.

34955. When you gave him the clothes, did he leave you at once?—No, he walked a little way down the road with me.

34956. Down which road—Whitechapel Road?—Yes. As far as Montague Street.

34957. He was carrying the clothes?—Yes.

34958. I suppose you talked about what had happened?—Yes.

34959. Did you tell him about the police?—No.

34960. Did he tell you?—He told me.

34961. What did he tell you?—He told me that he saw a crowd up there, and he did not know what it was about, and then he went away from it.

34962. He told you he had seen a crowd?—Yes.

34963. Did he tell you where he had seen a crowd?—No. He said he saw a crowd up there, and then he went away.

34964. What did he mean by "up there"?—I could not tell you.

34965. You have said he was talking about it?—I did not know whether he was talking about George or who he was talking about. He said he saw a crowd up there.

34966. Did you tell him what you had seen—this policeman kicking him?—After he said that to me he walked away, and I walked straight down.

34967. Before he walked away you were talking to him, I suppose?—Yes.

34968. Did not you have any conversation about the policeman knocking this man down?—We did not have much; he only just came across the road a little way down, and then he went.

34969. At any rate, he seemed to have known about it?—Yes.

34970. Which direction did he go off in?—He went to the right when I got over the other side of the road from the London Hospital. He cut up Great Garden Street, I think.

34971. He did not go towards Wentworth Street?—No.

34972. Which direction did you go in?—I went straight down.

34973. Straight down Old Montague Street?—No, straight down the Whitechapel Road.

34974. And then you turned along where?—Commercial Street.

34975. Why did you turn along Commercial Street?—That was the way I was going home.

34976. You would have turned off earlier than that in order to get to your lodgings? Your lodgings are at the corner of Brick Lane?—Yes.

34977. Why did you not turn up Brick Lane instead of Commercial Street?—I went round the other way.

34978. You had not been to bed that night at all?—No.

34979. It was 6 o'clock in the morning?—Yes.

34980. Did you go to bed when you got home?—Yes.

34981. You wanted to get home quickly?—I was not in any hurry at all.

34982. You had been up all night?—I did not feel tired.

34983. What made you go round Commercial Street?—I went up that way for a walk.

34984. Do you mean to say Ethel Griffiths had not told you to meet her there?—No.

34985. You met her there?—I met her there, but she did not tell me then.

34986. You had left her two hours before?—Yes.

34987. What did she say to you?—She did not say anything that I can remember. I forget it.

34988. Try and remember; you are on your oath, and you have to tell us what really did happen?—It is a long time ago, and I forget now.

34989. Did you tell her how George was?—I remember that I told her that I left him up there and a nurse put him in bed, and then I got the clothes and I came out.

34990. You told her you got the clothes?—Yes.

34991. Did you tell her who you had given the clothes to?—I remember I told her I had given them to his mate.

34992. Did she seem interested in that? What did she say?—I forget now.

34993. You have said you forget a good many times, but try and think. You have got to tell us the truth you know?—I am speaking the truth, so far as I can remember.

34994. You told her you had got the clothes, and had given them to his mate?—Yes. J. Wiltshire. 21 Feb 1907.

34995. What did she say about that—anything?—I forget it.

34996. I do not think you do. Did she want to know who you had given his clothes away to?—(No answer.)

34997. You had better tell us the whole thing?—I cannot remember any more.

34998. When you got to Commercial Street where did you go to?—I went home.

34999. How did you go home from Commercial Street?—Through Wentworth Street. That is the way I always go.

35000. You found her at the corner of Commercial Street and Whitechapel Road?—Yes.

35001. Did you walk up Commercial Street as far as Wentworth Street with her?—No. I left her half way.

35002. You did not go to Flower and Dean Street?—I went through Wentworth Street and round by Osborn Buildings, and I went in.

35003. Then you got into Flower and Dean Street?—Yes, and I went to bed.

35004. Did you go through Flower and Dean Street?—No.

35005. Did you know that Ethel Griffiths lived in Flower and Dean Street?—I do not know.

35006. Are you sure you did not know?—I am positive.

35007. When you went to see George in the Hospital I understand you told him you had given his clothes to his mate?—Yes.

35008. Did he ask you whether you had given the clothes to his mate?—No, I told him as soon as I got in there.

35009. Did you go there to tell him that?—That is all I went there for on purpose to tell him.

35010. Did he talk to you at that time about the occurrence and about what had happened?—The man was in too much worry; I asked him how he was getting on, and I told him I had given his clothes to his mate, and I came out again. He was in too much pain.

35011. He did not talk to you about the policeman?—No.

35012. Are you sure of that?—Yes.

35013. When you went to the hospital, I understand you had to sign a book for the clothes?—Yes.

35014. Did they ask you anything about the case?—No, they did not ask me anything about the case.

35015. Did they ask you the name of the man you brought in?—No.

35015*. What did they tell you to wait there for?—I remember them asking George whether he was going to take his clothes off, and he said, "No, send me home."

35016. Then what happened?—They said, "Wait, and you can take his clothes." The nurse folded his clothes up and I had to sign a paper for it.

35016.* You waited for that?—Yes, and then I came out.

35017. You never told them his name?—No.

DR. WALTER BRINSMEAD BILLINGHURST, sworn.

35018. (Earl Russell.) What are your qualifications?—Bachelor of Medicine, Bachelor of Surgery, Oxford, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons and Licentiate of the Royal College of Physicians, London.

35019. You are, I think, house surgeon of London Hospital in Whitechapel Road?—Yes.

35020. And you were so in August last?—Yes.

35021. You were not on duty on the night of the 21st?—No.

35022. And you did not see this man until the next morning?—No.

35023. Am I right in saying that the first time you saw George Pearce was 10 a.m. in the morning?—Yes. Dr. W. B. Billinghurst. 21 Feb. 1907.

(Mr. Dickinson.) That is the 21st?

35024. (Earl Russell.) Yes, the morning of the 21st. Who had he been seen by on admission?—Seen by the doctor who takes the night up.

35025. Can you tell us the name?—Dr. Woods.

35026. Did you receive a report from him?—Yes. I heard about him at 6 o'clock in the morning. He came up and told me about him.

Dr. W. B. Billinghurst.

21 Feb. 1907.

35027. You heard about him at 6 o'clock, although you did not yourself see him?—No, I did not see him.

35028. You yourself saw him at 10 o'clock?—Yes.

35029. Will you tell us what the condition of the man was at 10 o'clock?—At 10 o'clock he was in great pain. The main cause of the trouble was a large hœmatona of the perineum and difficulty in passing his water. He had been relieved to a certain extent when he came in. It was necessary then to give him relief, but there were no other injuries about the body; it was all about the perineum.

35030. Was the condition still one of great pain at 10 o'clock?—He was much relieved then owing probably to the morphia he had had.

35031. He had been given morphia directly on admission?—Yes.

35032. What about his condition at 10 o'clock. What was the report as to that?—He came up then with this swelling of the perineum, and he was in great pain then, and his water was taken off, and he was relieved to a certain extent.

35033. Was there any report as to sobriety or otherwise on his admission?—Yes, he was quite sober.

35034. No sign of having been drunk within the previous twelve hours, should you say?—No, he did not look like it.

35035. I think it was not until some further investigation was made that you discovered a further injury to the urethra?—He became steadily worse, the swelling enlarged, and it was necessary to operate on him, and it was then discovered he had ruptured the urethra.

35036. When was the first operation performed?—On the night of the 21st.

35037. And the second one on the 31st August?—There was a second one performed on the 24th, and a third one on the 31st.

35038. You then discovered that the urethra was ruptured?—Yes, he had ruptured an artery in the urethra.

35039. And he was altogether in hospital from the 21st August to the 16th November?—Yes.

35040. And then he was sent to a convalescent home?—Yes.

35041. For about a month?—Three weeks or a month. I am not quite sure about that.

35042. Were those injuries that he had suffered, besides being painful at the time, of an extremely serious character?—Yes, extremely serious.

35043. What should you say as the result of your observation was the cause of them?—I think they were undoubtedly due to direct violence on the perineum.

35044. Would they be consistent with kicking?—Yes, distinctly.

35045. Consistently with kicking while lying on the ground?—It would have to be a kick between the legs, and the legs must be open.

35046. Not consistent with slipping in the street or falling down, or anything of that sort?—Not unless he fell on something between the legs—something hard.

35047. A thing like a square railing?—Yes, a fence, or anything of that sort. He could not do it by falling down ordinarily.

35048. What do you say as to his permanent recovery?—He is permanently damaged.

35049. I think you were approached about this matter some time in September, were you not?—Yes.

35050. And you gave this certificate on the 25th September, 1906 (handing document to Witness)?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) I should like to put that in, Sir, if the Secretary would read it.

(Secretary.) "George Pearce was admitted to the hospital on August 21st at 6 a.m. with extensive bruising and a large hæmatona of the perineum. On further investigation it was found that his urethra was ruptured. Two operations have already been performed to relieve the condition, and a third will be necessary shortly. He can never hope to be completely free from the ill effects of the damage he has sustained, which was certainly the result of direct violence. —W. B. Billinghurst, M.B., B.Ch. Oxon., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., London, 25th September, 1906."

35051. (Earl Russell.) Was the third operation to which you refer there subsequently performed?—Yes.

35052. That would be really the fourth?—Yes, it was the fourth.

35053. I want to ask you one or two questions which are not quite medical, but to which we attach some importance in this case.

35054. (Chairman.) Before you pass from that will you define the term "hœmatona"?—It is a blood humour—an extravasation of blood.

35055. (Earl Russell.) There is one more question as to the man's condition. How would he be as to walking to the hospital before admission. Would it be very slow and painful?—Yes, it would have been very painful.

35056. The pace at which he could progress would be—what should you say, even with assistance?—I should think not more than two miles an hour at the most.

35057. As fast as that you think?—Most cases like that are carried up. It would be very painful indeed. There is no doubt about it.

35058. It would be a very painful and agonising walk, and not a fast one?—Certainly not.

35059. Even with help?—No, I am sure it would not.

35060. You have examined, I think, the records of the hospital as to the time at which he was admitted?—Yes.

35061. You find the hour at which he was admitted was 6.5 a.m.?—Yes.

35062. Am I right in saying that what you mean by that is that he was admitted to the privileges of an inpatient of the hospital?—Yes.

35063. That would be subsequent to the examination of the case as to its seriousness?—Yes.

35064. Have you any record kept of the hour at which a case is first brought to the hospital?—I believe the gate porter is supposed to make a note of the hour at which a case arrives, but, of course, not of the name or of the injury. He just makes a note that the case has arrived, but I have not seen that.

35065. You have not got that?—No, that has nothing to do with us.

35066. Do you think it could be ascertained?—Yes, it certainly could be ascertained.

(Earl Russell.) I am sure, Sir, if there is such a note the Commission would be willing to let the doctor send it in in the shape of a letter.

35067. (Chairman.) Yes. (To the Witness.) There is a material issue apparently in this case with regard to the hour this man, George Gamble, accompanied by Ethel Griffiths and Wiltshire, arrived at the hospital. Can you help us to fix the exact hour at which he arrived at the hospital?—I will make inquiries.

35068. (Earl Russell.) Could you tell me from the usual practice, supposing he was admitted at 6.5—that is to say that the examination was concluded then, and it was thought a fit and a necessary case for treatment as an inpatient—would it be possible, including waiting for the doctor to come and so on, that he should have reached the hospital as early as between four and half past?—It is possible, but not probable. I do not think he could have reached it before five myself.

35069. You should say you would think 5 o'clock would be about the earliest time that he could have got there?—I think so.

35070. If you can ascertain anything further you will send it to us?—Yes.

35071. A question as to your practice with regard to clothes. When it is decided to admit a patient as an in-patient, what is it the rule to do with their clothes?—Their clothes must be sent away. They are not allowed to keep their clothes.

35072. You will not keep them on the premises?—No, they are not allowed to have their clothes till they are allowed out of bed.

35073. You do them up in a bundle and the nurse or somebody would take a receipt for them, and after that you would not concern yourself, I think, any further?—Not at all.

35074. Are you able to explain to the Commission how the man acquired the name that he was known under of George Pearce at the hospital?—No, I do not understand that. He was entered as George Pearce on the admission ticket, and he kept that name all through. I never heard of any other name. We always called him Pearce.

35075. You do not know who wrote him down under that name?—It would be the night nurse. She writes down the names in the admission book.

35076. You did not when you first saw him ask him his name yourself?—No, I copied it down from the admission ticket, but I understood that it was Pearce. I have always heard him called Pearce.

35077. Did you have any conversation with him on the first morning or two after his admission as to the cause of his injuries?—I did shortly after—a day or two afterwards.

35078. Do you recollect what he told you?—He told me he had been kicked by a policeman, and he said it was an unprovoked attack.

35079. Did he tell you what part of Whitechapel this had taken place in?—No, I do not remember his telling me.

35080. Did he tell you what the quarrel had been about, or the trouble, or the disturbance?—He just told me it was something to do with a woman; I did not inquire into the details.

35081. It was not your business, I quite understand that. Did he give you at any time then or afterwards any description of the policeman?—No.

35082. You did not go into the matter at all?—No, I just found out how it had happened. I did not know why the policeman should have kicked him at all.

35083. And the account given you was consistent with what you observed?—Absolutely.

35084. Do you recollect that Mr. Timewell, this gentleman here, came to the hospital to see him. I do not know whether you would see him yourself?—I remember seeing one gentleman with him, but I cannot remember whether it was Mr. Timewell.

35085. On the 30th August, or about then, permission was given for the patient to see a visitor to take a statement. I suppose you gave that permission?—Yes.

35086. What was his condition then. Was he still in pain on the 30th August?—No, he would not have been in pain then. He was mostly quite all right.

35087. Was he weak?—He was very weak.

35088. He did in fact have an operation on the 31st?—Yes, he was in a very depressed condition for a month after admission.

35089. Were you still not sure of a good recovery on the 31st August?—Yes.

35090. (Chairman.) Do you mean by that that you thought it was possible he might die from the effects of these injuries?—No, not die, but the urethra was still ruptured. It had not joined up.

35091. (Earl Russell.) You have no knowledge of what happened to him or what he did after he left the hospital for the convalescent home?—No, except he has been twice to the out patient department.

35092. Do you know anything about that?—He is not under my care there.

35093. You have ascertained by inquiry?—Yes, I have heard.

35094. Could you tell us the dates at which he paid his visits there?—No, I am afraid I could not. I tried to find the notes before I came, but they were mislaid.

35095. Do you know anything about any other visitors he had while he was at the hospital?—No, I do not know at all.

35096. You could not say who else was admitted to see him?—No.

35097. But the taking of a statement from a patient in that condition would be regarded as rather serious I suppose. They would require your consent before they would allow anyone to worry him about a statement?—Yes, certainly, and they did have my consent.

35098. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Into what door of the hospital first of all would a case like this be admitted. It is what you call an accident case, is it not, that requires immediate attention?—Yes.

35099. Into which door would such a case be admitted?—Into the front door in the Whitechapel Road.

35100. Into what does that lead?—It leads into the entrance hall, and then into the receiving room.

35101. Are patients brought in in that way, kept in the entrance hall for any time?—No, in the receiving room.

35102. They are taken at once into the receiving room?—Yes.

35103. Who is the first person who takes a note of the entrance of such a case. Is it the doorkeeper?—I believe the porter at the door in the road is supposed to make a note of the time they arrive.

35104. In the road, before the patient enters any door of the hospital. There is a lodge there?—Yes.

35105. (Mr. Whitmore.) Is the porter in the lodge?—Yes.

35106. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) And there are gates to the Whitechapel Road?—Yes.

35107. So that those gates have to be opened at this hour of the morning?—They are usually open all night, but no case can come in without the man seeing it. He sits at the window there.

35108. He speaks to those bringing persons in, and inquires something about it, and makes a note in his book?—And rings the bell for the porter at the front door to be prepared for it.

35109. And among other notes he should make in his book is a note of the time?—I am not quite sure whether he is meant to do that, but I think he does. I will find that out.

35110. Then getting into the entrance hall is there anyone there who makes a note, or is the case taken straight into the receiving room?—It is taken straight into the receiving room.

35111. Who there makes a note?—There is a nurse on duty in the receiving room.

35112. Has she a book there?—I do not know whether she has.

35113. Does she make any note of the time or other particulars?—I do not know about that.

35114. At any rate there is a nurse there in charge?—Yes.

35115. You spoke of an admission book, and an admission card?—Yes.

35116-7. Are they made out after the patient has been examined?—Yes.

35118. Who examined the patient and where?—The patient is examined in the receiving room by the medical man whose turn it is to take the night duty. We all take it in turns.

35119. You gave the name of the gentleman who was on night duty?—Yes—Dr. Woods.

35120. Would he make any note at all as to the time?—No, he is called out of bed, and has to come down and see the case, and examine it and he admits it, and then comes up to my room, and tells me about it, because it was admitted under me.

35121. His presence there is for the purpose first of all of seeing whether the case is one for admission?—Yes.

35122. Then is the case taken to a bed first, or is it dressed, or what happens?—The patient is first undressed in the receiving room as far as it is necessary.

35123. For examination?—Yes, and then taken on a couch or a wheeled chair into the ward with his clothes just drawn on again as far as necessary.

35124. And then if any dressing is required, is that done in bed, or is it done in the receiving room?—If any dressing is required, it is done in the receiving room—just a preliminary dressing, but if any other is required after he has got to bed, a note is sent into the ward to tell the sister what to do.

35125. Which is first made, the entry in the admission book? Is that the first entry as to admission or is the admission card made out before the entry is made in the admission book?—They are both made at the same time.

35126. It does not matter which is made first?—The admission card is actually written first, but it is entered in the book straight away.

35127. Before it is parted with?—Yes, before the patient has entered the ward.

Dr. W. B. Billinghurst

21 Feb. 1907.

35128. Does that card go with the patient to the ward?—Yes.

35129. Upon that admission card among other things would be the name of the patient?—Yes.

35130. Who is the person? I think you said it was the nurse?—The nurse writes it at night, and the clerk in the day-time.

35131. In the receiving room are friends of the patients admitted?—Yes.

35132. So that delay might arise either from the patients or from the friends?—Yes.

35133. In speaking to this patient as you did, I suppose, from time to time, daily or oftener, did you address him as "Pearce"?—Yes.

35134. Did he ever tell you his name was not Pearce?—I do not recollect that.

35135. You have no recollection of his ever telling you his name was not Pearce?—No, 35136. Besides injury to the perineum, was there any other injury?—No.

35137. Was that injury bleeding at all?—No.

35138. Was there any blood of any sort that you saw?—None externally.

35139. No external bleeding at all?—No.

35140. There was the internal bleeding which made the blood humour that you have spoken of?—Yes.

35141. For the purpose of examining the perineum, of course, he would have to be stripped when you examined him at 10 o'clock?—Yes, he was in bed then.

35142. Was he stripped altogether?—He had a night-shirt on.

35143. Did you see any trace of injury on any other part of his body?—No.

35144. None at all?—No.

35145. No bruises on the buttocks, for example?—Yes, but I include that in the perineum injury.

35146. As the result of one kick?—No; I think he must have had more than one.

35147. How many—a great number or a few?—Certainly three.

35148. Bruises about the buttocks?—Yes, there were several bruises.

35149. Did he complain of any injury elsewhere?—No.

35150. Could you see his body about the ribs?—Yes.

35151. Were there any bruises there?—No.

35152. Any bruises on the head?—No.

35153. Any bruises on the legs?—No.

35154. Any bruises on the arms?—No.

35155. Any bruises on the front of his body?—No.

35156. No bruises on his face, or sign of injury to his face at all?—No.

35157. With regard to this injury to the perineum and the urethra, the urethra I think is very near the surface, is it not?—Yes.

35158. Comparatively slight force, if it happens to alight upon that spot, might cause very serious injury?—Yes, but it would not have caused so much as he had, because he had an artery ruptured as well.

35159-60. Where was the artery?—The artery that was ruptured in this case was at least an inch and a half beneath the surface.

35161. Therefore it was straight underneath the urethra?—It was behind the urethra—between the urethra and the rectum.

35162. That was, in your opinion, ruptured by the same violence that had caused the injury to the perineum?—Yes, certainly.

35163. The same blow, kick, or whatever it might be?—Yes.

35164. That you say indicates extreme violence?—Yes.

35165. Even if the parts were fully exposed so as to receive a kick, for example, it must have been extreme violence?—Yes.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Direct violence, you mean.

35166. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Direct violence, coming in contact with some hard substance on that spot. Is that what you mean?—I mean directly applied to the perineum.

35167. Direct contact between some substance and the perineum?—Yes.

35168. That is all you mean by "direct violence"?—Yes.

35169. Not violence occurring to some other part of the body, and causing a rupture there, which sometimes happens?—It could not have caused it.

35170. This is direct violence?—Yes.

35171. That is what you mean by "direct violence"?—Yes.

35172. Sitting down violently upon a stone in the road, or falling down violently with that part of the body on a stone in the road—could that cause it?—It could not cause it unless it was a wedge-shaped stone which went between the legs.

35173. Unless the man had straddled out his legs in some way?—No, he could not have done it in that way, because there are two bones on each side which would strike the stone.

35174. The two pelvic bones?—Yes.

35176. It must have been something which came up?—Yes.

35176. Assuming there was something which came up to the pelvic bones, would sitting down on a hard thing such as a stone cause those injuries?—Yes.

35177. They might have been the cause of it?—Yes, possibly.

35178. I am speaking both of the injury to the urethra and the ruptured artery?—Yes.

35179. One knows that injuries to the urethra are quite common and very easily happen in riding when you are thrown from the saddle. That is a very common injury to the perineum and urethra, but not, I think, to the artery?—Yes, but not so violent as this.

35180. But falling violently on a stone like that might cause it?—Yes.

35181. The only injuries you saw, apart from these, were kicks?—And bruises.

35182. I am assuming bruises such as might have been caused by kicks?—Yes.

35183. Were they of a very violent nature?—No.

35184. Ordinary bruises?—Yes.

35185. Which, I suppose, at the London Hospital you see very often?—Yes.

35186. Do you know whether inquiries were made by Inspector Hewison with regard to the case of a man named Gamble about the 22nd or 23rd November? Do you know whether inquiries were made of your housekeeper as to whether you could trace the case of a man who had been violently assaulted by a policeman, and whose name was said to be Gamble? Did you hear anything of those inquiries?—No, I did not.

35187. (Earl Russell.) I understand these bruises on the buttocks could not have been caused by sitting violently even on a wedge-shaped stone?—No.

35188. If, as Mr. Muir suggests, the injuries were caused to the urethra or artery in that way, some separate violence would have been required for the bruises on the buttocks?—Yes.

35189. Comparing the injury which you actually found here to the urethra and to the artery with the sort of injury caused by the pommel of a saddle, or even sitting violently on a wedge-shaped stone, do I understand you to say that the extent and roughness of the injury was not quite consistent with any one single thing being done of that sort?—No.

35190. The whole thing suggests kicking, does it?—Yes.

35191. It is more consistent with that than with anything else?—Just so.

35192. (Chairman.) Can you tell me the name of the night nurse on the morning of the 21st August?—No, but I could find it out.

35193. Will you find it out for us?—Yes.

35194. I shall be much obliged if you will. Will you also send us the name of the house porter and the name of the front door porter, and, in order perhaps to save trouble to your employés at the hospital, could you see yourself whether there are any entries in the books there?—I will.

35195. Thank you. Dr. Woods might have made some entry, might he not?—No, he would not have written anything.

35196. The night nurse would, and you think did write something. Would she write anything before she writes the entry in the admission book?—I do not know about that; it never concerns us at all.

35197. What ought to have happened in this case, and what I daresay did happen, was that the nurse was in the room when these people arrived?—Undoubtedly.

35198. She would inquire what was the matter, I suppose?—Yes.

35199. Would she then send for the surgeon who was in attendance for the night, and who was probably in bed?—Yes, he was in bed. We take turns in being called up at night. The usual practice is when a case comes in the nurse finds out whether it is very urgent or not, and, if it is not, she would probably keep the case a short time to see if anyone else came in.

35200. To see if any other patient came in?—Yes. Sometimes they keep them half an hour.

35201. In this case the man would have been in great pain, and she would have sent at once, would she not?—Yes.

35202. And Dr. Woods was on the premises?—Yes.

35203. You think if matters took their normal course in this case after a few minutes of conversation and observation the nurse would have sent for Dr. Woods and he would have come down?—Yes.

35204. In a few minutes, in fact?—Yes, I think so.

35205. Dr. Woods did not make any written entry or anything of that kind?—No.

35206. When it is determined to admit the patient the nurse would make an entry in the book, and make out the card?—Yes. Dr. Woods signs the card.

35207. The signature of the nurse is not enough?—No.

35208. I should like to know to what extent you were yielding to Mr. Muir's suggestion that the rupture of the uretha and of the artery in this case might have been caused by sitting down on something appropriate. Do you think a man himself sitting down suddenly could have sat down with such violence as to produce the injuries in this case. Suppose he did it intentionally, do you think he could have done it?—The usual cause of these injuries is a man having sat down on a fence with legs astride.

35209. If a man were going over a fence and slipped, then his weight coming against the fence might have caused that injury?—Yes.

35210. If a man were going over an ordinary wall, do you think it might be caused by that?—No, I do not think so.

35211. It must have been something very small coming in contact with the perineum at the right place?—Yes, and his whole weight on the top of it. Dr. W. B. Billinghurst. 21 Feb. 1907.

35212. (Mr. Whitmore.) If a man came down on a railing, would that cause it?—Yes, certainly.

35213. (Chairman.) I do not know whether you were in Court when the witnesses were saying what they saw. I will take what Gamble himself said: "The police-constable came up again and followed us. Then we came in sight of a police-sergeant and another constable. Then he" (that is, the first constable) "began pushing me about, evidently expecting me to strike him. As I did not, he knocked me down and started kicking me. He lifted me up, and I tried to run. I did not feel the effects of what he had done. Then he knocked me down again and kicked me again worse than before." Do you think, taking that story to be true, it might account for the injuries you observed?—Yes, I do.

35214. Then Gamble said he walked along a litt l way, and then he said, "I felt that my injuries were all the time swelling between the legs." Would that be the sensation caused by injuries of that kind?—No. Probably the bleeding was continuous and increasing. That actually happened.

35215. You mean the extravasation of blood was going on forming into humour as you mentioned, and he would feel that, would he not, for a little time?—Yes. That actually happened after he came into the hospital, and that is why the operation was undertaken.

35216. Do you think there was no swelling at all pretty soon after the injury was received?—Yes, there was a great deal of swelling when he arrived, but at first it was taken to be ordinary bruising.

35217. He said, "I felt that my injuries were all the time swelling between the legs." Is that the sort of feeling he would have after an injury of such a kind as you saw caused by kicking?—Yes, it is a very good description.

35218. (Mr. Dickinson.) He said he did tell you that the injury had been caused by an unprovoked attack by a police-constable. Can you remember when he told you that?—He told me that on the day of the 21st and afterwards.

35219. I suppose on the 21st he was in a state of collapse?—In the morning he was in a painful condition.

35220. Do you remember whether he saw anybody on that day?—No.

35221. Would he have been allowed to see a visitor that day?—Yes.

35222. He would have been well enough?—Yes.

35223. What I want to know is, did he complain about this injury?—He actually told Dr. Woods that.

THIRTY-SEVENTH DAY.

Thursday, February 28th 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), Secretary.
J. F. Waley, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Assistant Secretary).

Mrs. Annie Franks, sworn.

35224. (Earl Russell.) Your name is Annie Franks?—Yes.

35225. Do you live at 28, Spelman Street, and are you married?—Yes. Mrs. A. Franks. 28 Feb. 1907.

Mrs. A. Franks.

28 Feb. 1907.

35226. On the 21st August last, in the middle of the night, did you notice anything unusual?—I was asleep, and I heard an unusual noise.

35227. What sort of noise?—I heard someone groaning very much, so I went to the window and opened it.

35228. Where does your window look out—into Spelman Street?—Yes, just facing. When I opened the window I saw a figure lying there, and over him was standing a policeman, and when I looked I saw him kicking him.

35229. Was the policeman kicking him when you first saw him?—Yes.

35230. You are quite sure it was a policeman that you saw?—Oh, yes, certain.

35231. About how far from your window was the policeman?—From about here to where you are standing.

35232. No further than that?—No.

35233. Did you hear the policeman say anything?—I heard the man say to the policeman "Will you let me alone?" and the policeman said, "I will give you some more if you do not get up and go away."

35234. Did you hear any other conversation?—No, I did not hear any more, because when the policeman saw me looking out he soon went away. He turned away so I could not get the chance to see him.

35235. Whereabouts was the policeman kicking the man?—In the stomach. I noticed that because the man was lying down on the area.

35236. Was the man lying on his back or face?—I could not notice that properly, because the policeman was standing covering him like.

35237. Did the man move off before the policeman or did the policeman move off before the man?—The policeman went off when he saw me looking, and I went and looked out, and the man tried his best to walk away. He staggered away a little, and I went in.

35238. Which direction did the man walk off in?—Down Spelman Street towards Hanbury Street. It leads into Hanbury Street.

35239. Is that in the same direction as Chicksand Street or the opposite direction?—The opposite direction. If he walked straight down Hanbury Street it would lead him into Whitechapel.

35240. You did not see anything more about it or hear anything more?—No, I did not hear anything until I was sent for to come here.

35241. Whereabouts is No. 28, Spelman Street with regard to Chicksand Street?—It is about a second's walk from Chicksand Street.

35242. Could you tell us how many yards it is about from the corner of Chicksand Street?—I could not tell you exactly. There are three or four houses from Chicksand Street to 28, Spelman Street.

35243. (Mr. Dickinson.) Can we locate that upon the plan? Do you understand a plan?—Yes. (Plan handed to the witness.)

35244. Here is Chicksand Street and there is Spelman Street, and there is Heneage Street. Can you mark where your house is?—This is Spelman Street just opposite Heneage Street. It is three houses from the corner of Heneage Street and Chicksand Street. (Marking on the plan.)

35245. It is between Heneage Street and Chicksand Street?—Yes, there are only three houses.

35246. Then you have marked it in the wrong place?—It is between the two.

35247. Just mark where the door of your house is. Supposing you go down Chicksand Street, you turn to the left along Spelman Street. If you go down Chicksand Street and turn to the left along Spelman Street where do you get to your door?—Here. (Pointing.)

35248. From Chicksand Street you get to your house before Heneage Street?—Yes.

35249. How many houses are there between Chicksand Street and Heneage Street?—Only about three or four. It is a small street.

35250. (Earl Russell.) Were you able to see the policeman so that you would know him again or not?—No, I could not. His back was turned towards the man.

35251. You could not identify him if you saw him again?—No, I could not.

35252. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you occupy the whole house or a part of it only?—Only a part of it—the upstairs rooms.

35253. Do you mean by that the top floor?—Yes, there is only one floor to the house; there is my window and one downstairs.

35254. You would be on the first floor, as it were?—Yes.

35255. Have you a family?—No.

35256. What does your husband do?—He goes out to work. He is a bootmaker.

35257. Was he at home that night?—Yes, he was at home. He heard the noise, but he would not go to the window because he had a cold.

35258. Do you remember what day of the week it was?—I am not certain. I fancy it was Tuesday or Wednesday, but I am not certain of the day. It is such a long time ago.

35259. How soon after this occurrence happened did anybody speak to you about it?—A good while after, I think.

35260. Did you speak to anybody about it?—No, only when I got round to mother, who lives round the corner. I told her about it. I said I could not sleep because I heard such a noise, and I told mother about it.

35261. Where does your mother live?—Just round the corner in Chicksand Street.

35262. When did you tell your mother?—The next morning when I went round. It upset me so, and I could not help telling her.

35263. Did you think the policeman was behaving very badly?—The way the man was going I think he did.

35264. But you made no complaint to anybody except that you told your mother?—No, I did not.

35265. Did you tell your husband?—I did tell him, because he heard it.

35266. You told him?—Yes. When I went in he said "What is the matter?" I said "There is a policeman kicking a man," because I wanted him to call out to the policeman why he would not let the man alone, but he would not, because my husband said "You had better not say anything; it will cause a disturbance in the night."

35267. But neither you nor your husband made any complaint to anybody?—No, we made no complaint.

35268. You told us that you told your mother, but that was in connection with the fact that you had been woke up in the night?—Yes.

35269. You were not complaining to your mother about the policeman?—No. I said the policeman seemed to be spiteful because he was kicking the man. I did remark to mother about the policeman.

35270. Quite so, but that was rather in explanation of why you had been kept awake?—I do not know about that. I felt sorry for the man, so I told mother about it.

35271. How soon after the occurrence did anybody speak to you about it or you speak to anybody except your mother?—It was a good while. A gentleman came round and asked me about it a long while after.

35272. About how long after?—I think it was about two months. I am not certain.

35273. Can you remember at all?—I think it was about two months after.

35274. Did the gentleman tell you who he was?—He did not tell me, only he said that he was told I was looking through the window and I saw everything. I said "Yes, I did."

35275. Did you make a statement to him?—Yes.

35276. I ask for that.

(Earl Russell.) Certainly.

(Chairman.) Is the original statement here?

(Earl Russell.) I think so. (Document produced.)

35277. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Look at that and see if that is your signature. (Handing document to witness)?—Yes, this is, I think, the first one when the man came to me.

35278. Did you make more than one statement?—No.

35279. Only one?—Only one, but there is the wrong time.

35280. Never mind about the time for a moment. Did you sign that?—Yes.

35281. Where was that statement taken—in your house?—No; I was round at mother's place at the time when the gentleman came round. Somebody sent him round to mother's.

35282. Did he write that statement out in your mother's house?—Yes.

35283. Did he write it out from what you told him?—Yes.

35284. I will read what it says here. "Annie Franks states: 'I am married, and live at 28, Spelman Street.'" Did you tell him that?—Yes.

35285. "About 4.30 a.m. on the 21st August, 1906, I was awakened by a noise of groaning in the street." Did you tell him that?—Yes, I did.

35286. Then did you tell him it was 4.30?—I did not know. He must have mistaken the time. It was between half-past two and three.

35287. I am not now asking you to remember about it. I am asking you what you told the man. I read it out to you a moment ago, and asked you if that was what you told the gentleman?—I did tell him, but I do not think I told him it was half-past four.

35288. You do not suggest he invented it, do you?—I do not know.

35289. Have you any doubt you told him it was half-past four?—I have a doubt. I do not think I did tell him it was half-past four.

35290. Do you know at all what time it was—do not guess at it?—I do know. It was between half-past two and three.

35291. What makes you say that?—Because I know. I looked at the clock.

35292. When?—When I went in back from the window.

35293. Have you got a clock in your room?—Yes.

35294. Was it not very dark?—It was dark.

35295. How did you see the clock?—I lighted the gas when I went to look out of the window to see what time it was. I made a small light with the gas. I thought you meant it was dark in the street.

35296. Yes, I did mean it was dark in the street. Did you light the gas in your room before you looked out?—Yes, I did.

35297. Was your clock right?—Yes, as far as I know. My husband puts it right to go to work.

35298. Have you always thought it was between half-past two and three?—Yes, I always thought it was that time.

35299. Did you tell the gentleman what time it happened?—I did tell him.

35300. You have no doubt at all, when he was sitting there taking your statement, you told him the time it happened?—Yes, I did tell him.

35301. And somehow or another he has got down here 4.30?—I cannot make that out.

35302. But he read it over to you, when he had written it, before you signed it?—He did read it over, and I told him it was earlier, but he said—I cannot remember exactly what he said—"All right; you will state that again." I said, "I have not got a doubt about the time," so he did not say any more, and he copied it down.

35303. Do you mean to say you told the gentleman that the statement he had taken down was wrong?—The statement was right, except the time.

35304. You told him that?—Yes, I did tell him.

35305. You mean to say he did not alter it?—No, he did not alter it, because I remarked to him about the time, and I told him at once about the time.

35306. What did he say?—He said, "Never mind; it does not matter." I told the gentleman last week it was the wrong time.

35307. Never mind what you told him last week. You told the gentleman that it was the wrong time, and he said, "Never mind, it does not matter"?—Yes.

35308. You have been here several times, have you not, waiting?—This is the third time.

35309. During the time you have been here, have you heard any discussion or anybody speaking about the time this happened?—No, I have not.

35310. Have you not?—No.

35311. Have you spoken to any of the people who have been called as witnesses?—I do not know them.

35312. Have you spoken to any of them?—Speaking down here; not anything else.

35313. Speaking down here; but they have spoken about this case to you, have they not?—They have not said anything about it, because I come up myself of a morning, and I don't know the people.

35314. You have been standing about in this passage with the people who have come here to give evidence?—Yes, I have had to stand with them.

35315. Have you not spoken to them about this case?—No.

35316. Not at all?—No.

35317. Have you spoken to this gentleman here (Mr. Timewell) about the case?—No; only I told him the time was wrong. He has altered it.

35318. Do you suggest to these gentlemen that you have not heard in the course of this case that there is a doubt about what time this happened?—I do not know. This is my own suggestion, because as soon as the gentleman told me I said, "Will you alter the time, please? It is the wrong time."

35319. Now I will read on. "I was awakened by a noise of groaning in the street. I went to the window, and saw a man lying on the ground under a window opposite." Do you mean by that, that that was the same side of the street as your house, or on the opposite side?—On the opposite side of the street.

35320. Where is the nearest gas lamp?—There is not a gas lamp—only on the other side of Chicksand Street.

35321. There is no gas lamp in your street at all?—No, there is not.

35322. The nearest gas lamp is on the other side of Chicksand Street?—Yes, in the corner of Chicksand Street.

35323. Does that gas lamp throw any light in the street opposite your house?—No.

35324. So that the place was really quite dark?—Yes.

35325. Could you see whether it was a man or a woman lying on the ground, for instance?—I could see it was a man, because I waited till he got up.

35326. Then, of course, when he got up you saw it was a man. But could you see while the figure was on the ground whether it was a man or a woman?—Yes, I could, because I saw his hat or cap, or whatever it was, lying there.

35327. Which was it?—I don't know which it was. I know I saw a man bareheaded, and that is why I could see it.

35328. Do you suggest it was light enough?—From my window, because I lighted the gas. I could see a little.

35329. But the gas in your window would not throw any light on the other side of the street?—Yes it does, because it is near—just a little.

35330. Is this street of ordinary width?—It is a very narrow street.

35331. But your room is on the first floor?—Yes.

35332. Is the gas in your room in the back part of your room?—No; just in the middle of the room.

35333. How many windows have you got?—Only one.

35334. Did you pull the blind up, or look from behind the blind?—I opened the window, and pulled the curtains away so that I could open the window properly.

35335. Have you got curtains thrown across the window?—No; loose curtains hanging, and I pulled them away.

Mrs. A. Franks.

28 Feb. 1907.

35336. Do you mean you drew them back, or pushed them aside?—I pushed them aside.

35337. Then, I suppose, you yourself got between the curtains and the window?—Yes; I stood on the sofa and looked out.

35338. You got between the window and the curtains?—Yes.

35339. Then the curtains would fall back again behind you?—No, I pushed them back; they would not fall back.

35340. You pushed them aside, and went and looked out, and then the curtains would fall back again?—They were loose.

35341. You did not push them back?—No; if I pulled them back they could rest on the sofa.

35342. I ask you again, do you suggest to these gentlemen that the light from your gas in the middle of the room, with the curtains in that position, would throw any appreciable light on the pavement the other side of the street?—No, not much; just a little.

35343. Was it light enough for you to see the other side of the road and to see that it was the figure of a man lying there?—Yes, I am perfectly sure it was a man.

35344. Then it must have been getting daylight?—Just a little.

35345. Does not that suggest to you that the time you gave to this gentleman was the right time?—If it was half-past 4 it would be quite daylight, and I could have seen plainly. It was in the summer, and at that time it is quite light.

35346. Then you say "A policeman was standing over him and speaking to him as though to drive him away"?—Yes.

35347. Had the policeman got his back to you?—Yes, he had got his back to me and standing against the man.

35348. Was the policeman standing in the roadway or n the pavement?—No, quite next to the man.

35349. In the roadway?—No, on the pavement—on the area.

35350. Had he got a great-coat on?—I did not notice. I don't suppose he would have it, being in the summer.

35351. But do you remember?—I cannot remember.

35352. Had he got a helmet on?—Yes.

35353. Did you hear anything the policeman said?—I only heard the policeman say, "Get up, or else I will give you some more." That is all I heard him say.

35354. Was it your impression that the policeman wanted the man to get up?—Yes, he did want him to get up. According to the pain the man was in he could not get up, I don't think.

35355. Had the man got his face to you or his back to you?—I could not see because the policeman was standing over him.

35356. You could not see whether the man had got his face to you or his back to you?—No.

35357. You are quite sure of that?—Yes.

35358. Do you mean by that that it was not light enough, because the policeman would not cover the whole of the man. The policeman had got his back to you, and according to you the man was lying along the pavement?—Yes.

35359. Do you suggest you could not see whether the man's face was to you or his back, because of the policeman?—No, I could not.

35360. That is because it was dark?—Because it was dark.

35361. So you really do not know now whether the man's face was towards you or his back?—No.

35362. The next statement you make is, "Then I saw the policeman kick the man in the stomach"?—Yes.

35363. How came you to say that if you do not know whether the man's face was towards you or his back?—Because I saw the policeman kick him; because I heard the man saying to him, "Let me alone."

35364. That would not tell you where he kicked the man?—I could see the parts of the legs were the other end, and that is where I saw the policeman kick him.

35365. If you saw the policeman kick him by his head it would not be kicking him in his stomach?—I could see his head this way, and where I saw his feet lying I could see the policeman kick him.

35366. You have told me positively you could not say and did not know whether his face was towards you or his back?—No, I could not say that.

35367. How can you tell whether the policeman was kicking him in the stomach or anywhere else?—Because I saw the policeman was kicking him in that part.

35368. But it may have been his back if he was lying with his back towards you. I ask you is it possible for you to say whether the policeman was kicking him in his stomach or any other part of him?—I thought it was in the stomach.

35369. But that was a mere thought. You have no ground for thinking it?—No, because it was where his legs were lying, and that is what made me think it was in the stomach.

35370. If it was so dark that you could not tell whether the man's face was towards you or his back, how could you tell whether the policeman was kicking him or not?—Because I saw him kicking him.

35371. What did you see?—I saw the policeman kicking him, and as he was kicking him so I heard the man screaming. So I knew he was kicking him.

35372. Now you have told us for the first time that the man screamed?—Yes.

35373. Do you mean he screamed?—First I heard him groaning, and then when the policeman was kicking him the man was screaming.

35374. Have you said that before to anybody?—I only told the man that I saw the policeman kicking, and the man was groaning, because he did not ask me any more. I said I would tell the rest if I was asked.

35375. You say that the man got up?—Yes.

35376. Which way did he go?—Towards Hanbury-street down Spelman Street.

35377. He went away from Chicksand Street?—Yes.

35378. Which way did the policeman go?—The policeman went on the other side through a court. There is a court next to my door facing where this man was lying, and he went through the court there.

35379. Have you been asked to try and identify the policeman?—No.

35380. Not by anybody?—No.

35381. Have you heard of any attempt being made to identify the policeman?—I have not. I never heard anything only when I came up to Court here last week. I have not seen anybody or heard anything only from that gentleman who came that time to me.

35382. Have you heard of anybody going to the police-station to try and identify the policeman as he came out?—I think I heard it here in the Court last week.

35383. About somebody going to the police-station to try and identify the man?—Yes, I overheard it.

35384. Who did you hear speaking?—One of the men and a woman.

35385. You mean the woman Ethel Griffiths?—Yes.

35386. Was it one of the men who has been called?—I heard them speaking.

35387. What did you hear them say?—I heard them say that they waited for this policeman and they saw his number. They waited to see whether he got on the same beat.

35388. When did they do that?—I don't know; I think the next night.

35389. I understand you to say you have never been asked to?—No, I have not.

35390. When you say you heard this, do you mean in this room or outside in the passage?—Outside—not in this room.

35391. Did you join in the conversation?—No, I had nothing to join in, because I did not know anything about it.

35392. Did you think that the policeman was savagely kicking this man, or did you think he was merely trying to push him to get up?—I think he treated him very badly.

35393. He was really savagely attacking him?—Yes.

35394. How came you and your husband not to complain about it?—What is the good of my complaining about it? Who do I have to go to and complain about it? My husband goes to work and I go to work. My time is occupied.

35395. Whatever the reason is you, in fact, made no complaint to anybody except telling your mother?—No.

35396. Do you know at all how it was that a gentleman afterwards came round to see you?—I don't know how he got to know, but when he came round I was at mother's place, and he said he had been told I was looking through the window and saw it. I said to him, "Who told you?" but he did not tell me who told him. I was surprised how he knew.

35397. Did you tell him that this happened in Spelman Street?—Yes—it could not be otherwise, because that is where I live.

35398. You cannot give the date at all when you say that he came and took the statement from you?—I cannot remember.

35399. It is quite plain that this occurrence that you are speaking about took place round the corner from Chicksand Street and in Spelman Street?—Yes.

35400. Nobody standing in Osborn Place could have seen what happened?—No.

35401. You are quite sure of that?—They could not see, because it is the other end of Brick Lane.

35402. It is round the corner?—Yes.

35403. So that nobody standing in Osborn Place or anywhere in the top part of Chicksand Street could possibly see what happened?—No, they could not see at all.

35404. (Earl Russell.) I understand you to say that you were able to see which end of the man was his head and which was his feet?—Yes.

35405. You are quite sure which end was his feet and which end was his head?—Yes.

35406. When you say the constable was kicking him in his stomach, do you mean that you know it was exactly there, or what do you mean exactly?—I could not see exactly the place, but I saw him kicking towards where his legs were.

35407. Towards the end of his legs near his feet or towards the middle of his body?—In the middle of his body.

35408. You are fairly sure, are you, that the time must have been between half-past two and three?—I am quite positive.

35409. Your husband woke up when you went to the window?—Yes.

35410. Altogether—quite awake?—Yes, he heard it, but he could not go to the window; he had a cold.

35411. What did he hear?—He only heard the man groaning, and when I came back he said, "What was it?" and I said it was a policeman kicking a man.

35412. You told that at once as you went back to bed?—Yes.

35413. You told your mother the very next day?—Yes, I did tell mother that.

35414. Did you know this man George Gamble before?—No.

35415. Have you seen him since?—I only saw him last week when he came up here.

35416. Not before you came to this Court?—No.

35417. Did you know the woman Ethel Griffiths before?—Oh, no.

35418. Have you seen her since?—Only when she came to the Court. I did not know anybody.

35419. You had not had any previous acquaintance with these people?—No.

35420. You do not know how it was that the gentleman who came to see you heard that you knew about it?—No, I was quite stunned when he came round to see me.

35421. You are on quite good terms yourself with the police?—I am not on good terms with them—I have nothing to do with the police.

35422. And they have nothing to do with you?—No, I do not get in their way. I have no cause for it.

35423. (Chairman.) How long have you and your husband lived at 28, Spelman Street?—About two years.

35424. Have you witnessed any occurrences of a similar kind to this before the 21st August?—No, this is the first time.

35425. No row in the street at all?—No, it is a very quiet street.

35426. And no disturbance or occurrence of the kind after the 21st August?—No.

35427. You told us that your husband had a cold. Had he been lying in bed all the day before or had he been about his work as usual?—He had not stopped away from work.

35428. Had he gone to bed earlier than usual?—Yes, a little bit earlier.

35429. About what time did he go to bed?—About 10 o'clock.

35430. You went to bed too then?—Yes, I generally go to bed early.

35431. Did anything occur to awake you before you heard this groaning in the street?—No, nothing at all.

35432. You think it was the noise in the street that awoke you?—The noise of this man woke me.

35433. I suppose that when you were awoke you had no idea what time it was?—Not as soon as I awoke, but afterwards I looked at the clock.

35434. But apart from looking at the clock, when you were awakened in bed and you heard groaning outside, you did not know whether it was early morning or what time it was?—I knew it was not early in the morning because it would have been light.

35435. But you had curtains?—I mean daylight.

35436. Were your blinds down?—Yes, the blinds were down, but when I lifted the blinds I could see it was dark. I did not know the time before I looked.

35437. What kind of curtains are they?—Muslin curtains that you can see through.

35438. Not fixed up curtains to keep out the light?—No.

35439. If the day had broken, you would have seen it?—Yes.

35440. I understand that when you were thus awakened you lit the gas?—Yes.

35441. You took your time—you did not rush to the window?—I lighted the gas in a second, and then I directly went because I could not just see. There were some things in the way, and I should have to light the gas to get to the window, because there was a table that I might have fallen over.

35442. If you hear a disturbance of that kind a few seconds might make all the difference in giving an alarm?—I could not rush to the window, because there were some things in the way, and I had to light the gas.

35443. You had to light the gas, and you went as quickly as you could to the window?—Yes.

35444. As far as the aspect of the street was concerned, it might have been midnight, or 1 o'clock, or 2 o'clock, or 3 o'clock?—It might have been, but when I went back I took notice of the time.

35445. As far as you could see by looking into the street it might have been midnight, or 1 o'clock, or 2 o'clock, or 3 o'clock?—Yes.

35446. There was nothing about the street that could tell you the time?—No, it was very quiet.

35447. You are positive the day had not broken?—I am quite positive.

35448. There was no sign of daylight?—No.

35449. When did you look at the clock?—When I went back to bed.

35450. Why did you do that. Was it simply a kind of instinct that made you look at it, because you thought it was just as well to see what time it was before you went back to bed, or did you want to fix the time?—No, I generally look at the time two or three times in the night.

Mrs. A. Franks.
28 Feb. 1907.

35451. Did it occur to you at the time that some inquiry might be made into the matter, or you might be asked about it?—No, I never thought of that.

35452. You never thought you would have anything to do with the matter?—I never thought that anybody would see me look through the window at that time of night.

35453. You raised the window?—Yes. There was nobody about only the policeman and the man. I did not see anybody else.

35454. You did not see anybody looking from any other window?—No, I did not see anybody, and that is what made me surprised.

35455. Was there anybody else in the street besides this other man?—No, I believe nobody, only opposite, underneath the area, there was an old man, and he was looking through the window. He was the only one I saw.

35456. An old man was looking?—Yes, he is up here.

35457. Does he live in this street, too?—He lives just where this took place—it was underneath his window.

35458. The other side of the street from you?—Yes.

35459. Do I understand that you did mention this to your mother the next day because it upset you a bit?—Yes, it certainly did.

35460. Did you not speak to Mr. Rubenstein, the old gentleman opposite?—I did not know him to speak to. I did not know the man, although I live in the same street. I never knew him to speak to, or any of them in the street.

35461. You have told us that you thought the policeman was kicking the man savagely and behaving badly—you assented to both those descriptions. Did you not think it was your duty to report to somebody or to make some inquiries of somebody as to whether there had been an assault?—I did not think so, because I went to work and did not take any further notice of it.

35462. Your husband did not do so also, I understand, and he did not tell you to do anything?—No.

35463. You mentioned the occurrence to your mother, and then, I understand from you that you did not speak to anybody at all about it, but about two months afterwards a gentleman came to ask you to make a statement?—Yes.

35464. I still do not quite understand how you came to sign the statement with the time "4.30" in it?—I do not know myself because I told the gentleman if it was half-past 4 it would be daylight, and I am certain it was not daylight, and I know it was not half-past 4, because I looked at the clock when I went back. I do not know how he came to put down half-past 4.

35465. Why did you sign it if he would not alter the 4.30?—I did not know it was so important. I have never had a case like that before, and I did not know it was as important as that.

35466. Is that really the first time you have had to make any statement of the kind before any court?—Yes, the first time.

35467. (Mr. Dickinson.) Can you tell me how you fix the day in your mind that this happened? The gentleman came to see you two months afterwards?—I did exactly the date.

35468. What enables you to fix this particular day in your mind? Have you any reason?—I did not fix the day, only the gentleman told me that he was told it was the 21st August. I told him I could not say exactly the date.

35469. He told you he was told it was the 21st August?—Yes.

35470. Did you think whether that agreed with your recollection?—Yes, because it was a couple of weeks after the August Bank Holiday.

35471. The August Bank Holiday was when?—About the 5th.

35472. You can remember that?—Yes, I know it was in August.

35473. Did you happen to notice what time it became daylight at that time of year. Are you in the habit of getting up early enough to know that?—No, but sometimes I awake, and in the summer it is light about 4 o'clock or between 4 and half-past.

35474. Was there any kind of light in the street when you looked out? Could you see the end of the street, for instance?—No, I could see the corner of Chicksand Street, because they are all near each other.

35475. I suppose at the corner of Chicksand Street there is a lamp?—Yes

35476. That is round the corner?—Yes, just at the corner.

35477. Is that light in your street?—In my street, but at the corner.

35478. You can see the lamp from your window?—Yes, I can see the lamp, but it is the other side of Chicksand Street.

35479. On the pavement of your street. Can anybody in your street see the lamp?—Yes.

35480. Is there a lamp on the left-hand side, too?—No, there is only one lamp.

35481. I mean the other way along the street?—No, I do not think so.

35482. You told us you think it was on a Wednesday. Have you any means of recollecting?—I cannot recollect the day, but I know it was either Tuesday or Wednesday.

35483. Has anybody told you it was one of those two days?—No.

35484. Did the gentleman who told you it was the 21st August tell you what day of the week it was?—No, he did not tell me what day of the week it was.

35485. To-day is the first time you have said you thought it was Tuesday or Wednesday?—Yes, I cannot recollect, as it is such a long time back.

35486. Do you know the Jewish schools near you?—There are the free schools in Bell Lane, and there is the Board School in Chicksand Street.

35487. Is that Brick Lane?—That is near Osborn Place.

35488. Osborn Place is part of Chicksand Street?—Yes, it is the same street.

35489. Then the school would be about half-way between Spelman Street and Brick Lane?—Yes.

35490. Have you never seen any occurrence like this since you have been in London at all?—No, never.

35491. It is the only time you have ever seen anything like it?—Yes.

35492. (Earl Russell.) Did you see the next morning anything on the pavement where this struggle had taken place?—No, I did not look.

(Earl Russell.) May I put George Gamble back into the box for a minute? I am told there is a question he was not asked.

(Chairman.) Yes, you may if you wish, but the only thing is he may have to be recalled on other matters, and perhaps it would be better to wait till then.

(Earl Russell.) Very well, sir. I now call Isaac Rubenstein. This man cannot speak English, but I am told the last witness, Mrs. Franks, can interpret.

(Chairman.) Then Mrs. Franks had better be sworn as interpreter.

(Mrs. Annie Franks sworn as interpreter.)

ISAAC RUBENSTEIN, sworn (the oath being interpreted to him), examined through the interpreter.

I. Rubenstein.

35493. (Earl Russell.) Do you live at 25, Spelman Street?—Yes.

35494. Are you a shoemaker by trade?—Yes.

35495. How old are you?—85.

35496. Do you remember anything happening in your street some time in August?—I was asleep, and I heard a noise, and I woke up.

35497. And then?—I looked through my window, and I saw a man lying on the area, and I saw the policeman next to him there, and I saw people standing there. I could not see plainly what he was doing with him. I cannot see properly.

35498. Where was the man when you saw him? Was he standing up or lying down?—On the area.

35499. Did you see him before he was lying down?—No, only when I was woke up.

35500. Could you see the policeman doing anything?—I could not see. I only saw it was a policeman.

35501. Did you hear the man say or do anything?—Yes, I heard the man groan and cry.

35502. Did you hear any words used?—I was on the second floor, and I could not hear.

35503. Did you look on until the policeman and the man separated?—I soon went in.

35504. Before they were separated?—I went in soon after that. I did not wait till they went away.

35505. Did you see anybody else looking out of the window in Spelman Street?—Without my glasses I cannot see, so I could not see plainly.

35506. Are you quite sure it was a policeman?—Yes, I could see by his hat it was a policeman.

35507. Would you know him again or not?—I cannot see plainly, so I could not see the policeman.

35508. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What time in the night do you think it was?—I cannot say the time properly. It was about 2 o'clock.

35509. Do you know what time it was in the morning that you looked out?—No.

35510. Was it light enough for you to see what was going on in the street?—The only light that I could see was from a lamp at the corner of the street.

35511. Was there any daylight?—A little.

35512. Do you mean by that that the day was just breaking?—I went back directly. I did not take particular notice.

35513. How many people do you think there were in the street under your window?—I think there were a couple of people, but that is according to my eyesight. I do not know how many there were.

35514. Do you mean two more besides the man and the policeman, or different altogether?—My daughter-in-law saw it as well, and she has gone to America.

33515. How many people did you see? Was there a crowd of people there?—Being an old man I could not see plainly. I did not want to take much notice, and I went in. That is all I saw.

35516. When you told these gentlemen just now, "I saw a man lying on the area, and I saw a police-constable, and I saw some people standing there"—is that right that you saw the man lying on the area, and the police-constable and some people standing there?—I did see the man and the policeman, and a couple of people besides. I live on the top floor, so I could not see it very well.

35517. Were any of the people shouting?—No; I only heard the man crying; that is all.

35518. Are you sure it was a policeman?—Yes, I am quite certain it was a policeman.

35519. And I understand you do not know why the man was groaning?—I thought it was a fire when I heard the man scream, and I only went to look, and saw the policeman, and went back.

35520. Do you mean the noise you heard was the sort of noise you hear when people are shouting "Fire"?—I could not make out what noise it was; only I heard groans, and thought there might be a fire in the house or in the street, so I just looked through the window, and that is what I saw.

35521. Who was it came and asked you to give evidence here?—A gentleman came to me, and I could not speak English, so a girl spoke for me to this gentleman in my room.

35522. Did you tell the girl that you did not know anything about it?—I told the girl what to tell this gentleman to write down, and the gentleman wrote it down.

35523. Did you tell the girl that you did not know anything about it?—I told the girl, and the girl interpreted it to this gentleman what I had to say. She was a little girl.

35524. Did you tell the little girl to tell the gentleman that you did not know anything about it?—No. I only told the girl what she should tell the gentleman to write down. That is all I told her.

35525. Not many days ago, did you go to the police station in Whitechapel?—Yes, I did go, and I asked if I did not come here would they fine me. That is what I went to ask.

I. Rubenstein. 28 Feb. 1907.

35526. Is this the gentleman you saw (Inspector Wright)?—I saw him at Commercial Street.

35527. Did you take somebody with you to interpret?—I took a friend of mine with me to interpret.

35528. Did you tell the Inspector that the woman had come to tell you that you must go before the Royal Commission?—I told the Inspector that I had got a letter to come here.

35529. Did you want to know whether you would be obliged to go?—Yes, that is why I went to the station.

35530. Did you tell the Inspector that a woman had been to see you to ask you what you knew about it, and then the woman told you what you had got to say? Is that what you told the Inspector?—I never saw a woman. I only want to tell the truth.

35531. That is not an answer to the question. Did you tell the Inspector that a woman had come to ask you what you knew about it?—I do not know anything.

35532. But you must know this. Did you tell the Inspector that a woman had come and asked you what you knew about it?

(Interpreter.) I have asked him that, and he says, "No."

35533. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Will you ask him that again? (Question repeated to the witness.)—I never said anything; I never saw the woman.

35534. Did you tell the Inspector that?

(Chairman.) (To the Interpreter.) Tell him as clearly as you can to answer Mr. Bankes' question, yes or no. (Question repeated to the witness.)

(Interpreter.) He says he does not know of anything. He will not answer the question, and he says he does not know.

35535. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You must know this. Did you tell the Inspector that a woman had been to see you to ask you what you knew about it?—I can swear I never said that a woman came to me. I never saw the woman before my eyes.

(Chairman.) I think I did catch that he said something about his daughter-in-law.

(Interpreter.) His daughter-in-law also saw this happen, and she has gone to America, and she gave her statement.

(Chairman.) But, with reference to what he said to the Inspector, I thought I caught part of his answer, and thought he mentioned his daughter to the Inspector.

(Interpreter.) He says he told the Inspector he had a letter from America, and his daughter-in-law inquired after the policeman and how he had got on with the case. He has got that letter here.

(Earl Russell.) My learned friend says he does not object to that letter being put in.

35536. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We will see what it is in a moment. (To the witness.) You told us just now that when the gentleman came for your statement you told a woman what you knew about it, and she interpreted it to the gentleman. Who was that woman who interpreted your statement to the gentleman?

(Interpreter.) He says it was the girl.

35537. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Who was it?—A girl who lives downstairs in the same house. I could not speak, and I had her up to speak for me.

(Mr Eldon Bankes.) (To the Interpreter.) You have made him understand, have you, that I suggest that he told the Inspector that a woman had come and asked him what he knew about it, and he said he knew nothing?

(Interpreter.) Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I want to know this: Did he tell the Inspector that the woman had told him what to say in the court?

(Earl Russell.) There is a proof in this case of a sort which is not signed by this witness, and there is no evidence it was read over to him, and there is no interpretation of the girl downstairs.

I. Rubenstein. 28 Feb. 1907.

(Interpreter.) He denies everything. He says he does not know anything about it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We may as well see the statement he did make. Have you the original statement that was interpreted?

(Mr. Dickinson.) Before you get to that, I want to ask whether he went alone to the police station or went with anybody else?

(Interpreter.) He told me he went with another man to speak for him to the Inspector.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I want to know who it was.

(Interpreter.) He brought this man up with him here to speak for him last week.

(Mr. Dickinson.) What is his name?—Isaac Litthenstein.

(Chairman.) That is the case. A man of that name did come up.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, he was here last week. Was he the man who went with this witness to the police station?

(Interpreter.) Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Did this witness understand what the Inspector asked him?

(Interpreter.) He says he did not understand what the Inspector said. He only asked the Inspector whether if he did not come here he would be fined.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I ask for the statement that was interpreted by the girl to the gentleman who came for it. Earl Russell says there is no statement signed by this man. I do not suppose there is, but I want the statement that was taken from him through the evidence that he understood its contents, and as he is not bound by it in any way, I think it would be fairer that it should not be put in.

(Chairman.) I think it does not matter at all whether it is put in or not. I think Mr. Bankes had better see it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I should like to see the original document that was taken. I am only trying to get at the facts.

(Earl Russell.) If the Commission think it ought to be put in I should like to point out that if it reflects upon anybody it reflects upon the gentleman who took it. The man who did not have it read over to him, and did not sign it, and cannot speak English, cannot be taken to be bound by it.

(Chairman.) I am not saying what my opinion about it is, nor have I determined whether it is worth while that the document should be put on the notes, but I think Mr. Bankes should see it. (The document was produced.)

35538. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Have you told to-day all you saw?—Yes.

35539. Are you quite sure that when you first looked out of the window the man was lying in the street?—Yes, I saw it at once as soon as I opened the window.

35540. You are quite sure he was lying in the street when you first looked out of the window?—Yes.

35541. Did you tell the gentleman who came that you saw a man running into your street from Chicksand Street followed by a policeman?—No, I did not tell him that.

(Chairman.) That is not signed by him, and it is not even proved it was written in his presence.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is entirely for you, but these statements have been before you throughout, and I think I should have an opportunity now of showing that they are not taken in the ordinary way in which statements are taken.

(Chairman.) I think you have seen all we have seen, or nearly all.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am not saying I have not seen them

(Chairman.) If that statement had been signed by Mr. Rubenstein I could understand you making a point and cross-examining upon it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am not complaining, but these matters are put before you. Of course, latterly in the last few days I have seen all these statements, but I did not see the earlier ones. If this is put before you as the statement of a witness it is quite plain that this is not this particular witness's statement.

(Chairman.) It does not appear to have been taken down in his presence as far as I know.

35542. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) (To the witness.) You told the gentleman, as I understand, what you saw, and that was interpreted by the girl downstairs?—I saw him write it, but I do not know what he wrote.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Of course, Sir, it is entirely for you.

(Chairman.) With a witness of this kind, and a young girl trying to interpret, I should have thought it was very difficult to take a proof.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is entirely for you, Sir; but there is a statement that he saw a man running into the street, and he says he never saw that, and there is not a thing about a policeman kicking him.

(Chairman.) It does not seem to me to reflect on the witness.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not say it does.

(Chairman.) I quite follow your point.

(Mr. Dickinson.) We shall only deal with what is said in this Court.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I quite understand that.

35543. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where did you see the two people standing?—I saw more than two people.

35544. Where were they?—I saw some people in the street.

35545. But were they close to the policeman or not?—On the other side a little way down they were standing.

(Chairman.) Did you put your mark to a document? I understand that you cannot read or write, but we have received that communication purporting to come from you. (Producing document.)

(Interpreter.) Is this when a gentleman wrote a letter?

(Chairman.) Tell the witness the Commission have received from Mr. Gordon that document which I am showing to him. Mr. Gordon sent us that document. Ask him whether he knows Mr. Gordon, a member of the London County Council.

(Witness.) Yes. I called to see Mr. Gordon about a different matter, and at the same time I showed him the letter, and I have never heard any more about it, and Mr. Gordon must have sent it.

(Chairman.) Did he make that mark?

(Interpreter.) He says he never made a mark.

35546. (Chairman.) But Mr. Gordon has written to us saying, "I write the enclosed letter at the request of Isaac Rubenstein, and certify that the statements made are to the best of my knowledge true in every particular.—Yours faithfully, H. H. Gordon." Did you put this mark to this document?—Mr. Gordon did not show me the paper at all to sign.

35547. You never put your mark to it?—No. I can tell Mr. Gordon himself I never signed this.

35548. Can you write your name?—I cannot write at all.

35549. That confirms what Mr. Leslie, the Secretary, says, that you are not able to write your name. Did not Mr. Gordon read you this letter: "Sir,—I have received a letter dated 1st February, 1907, asking me to appear before your Royal Commission and give evidence. The letter must have been sent to me by mistake, as I know nothing about the police, and have had no dealings with them. I trust you will excuse me not attending personally to say this, as I am an ailing old man, 85 years of age, unable to speak English, and this letter is written for me.—Yours obediently"?

(Interpreter.) Was that a letter written by Mr. Gordon?

(Chairman.) Yes. "The mark of Isaac Rubenstein. H. H. Gordon."

(Witness.) I went myself to Mr. Gordon. I did not write a letter at all.

35550. Did not you ask Mr. Gordon to write to the Commission?—I showed Mr. Gordon that letter with the subpœna that I got, and Mr. Gordon perhaps copied it from there. I showed Mr. Gordon the letter that I got from the Commission.

35551. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where did you see Mr. Gordon?—In Leman Street.

35552. Did you see Mr. Gordon write down anything?—He went away into the other room, and I did not see him any more.

35553. (Chairman.) Do you suggest that Mr. Gordon wrote that letter without your consent?—I had a loan, and they gave me imprisonment for ten days for not paying it, so I went to see Mr. Gordon about it, and I must have showed him the letter, and Mr. Gordon copied it himself. That is all I can make of it.

35554. Mr. Gordon acted on his own behalf?—Yes.

(Mr. Cockle.) May I ask a question?

(Chairman.) Yes. But do you suggest that Gordon wrote that letter without authority?

(Mr. Cockle.) No, I know nothing about it. I do not suggest that at all, but there is no reference to this occurrence.

(Chairman.) Mr. Gordon also writes to us. That is a letter from Mr. Gordon to us, enclosing that letter, which I understand he wrote. I. Rubenstein. 28 Feb. 1907.

(Mr. Cockle.) There is no reference to this particular inquiry or to this particular transaction.

(Chairman.) That is so; but I suppose it refers to our subpœna; it refers to the summons from this Commission.

(Mr. Cockle.) Yes. May I ask the witness one question?

(Chairman.) Yes.

35555. (Mr. Cockle.) (To the witness.) When you were asked to come to this inquiry, did you know that what happened upon that particular night was in question, and that that was to be inquired into? Did you know when you were summoned here that it was upon that particular matter which occurred on that night?—The same gentleman came afterwards and told me that I had to come up here.

JAMES HARTNETT, sworn.

35556. (Mr. Cockle.) You live at 2, Osborn-place, I believe?—I did live there. J. Hartnett.

35557. When was that?—When this affair happened.

35558. At what date?—On the 21st August.

35559. What are you?—A waterside labourer.

35560. You have mentioned the date. Do you remember anything that happened on that date?—Yes. On the Tuesday morning between 3 and 4 o'clock I heard a woman screaming, and a man halloaing; I looked out of the window, and I saw a constable kicking this man Gamble.

35561. You saw a constable and Gamble. Did you distinguish them?—I did not see the constable's face, but there was a sergeant there as well as a woman.

35562. A sergeant as well as a constable?—Yes.

35563. You have no doubt about that?—No.

35564. Did you see who the man was?—No.

35565. Will you tell us exactly what happened?—I was woke up out of a sleep. I heard this woman screaming and the man halloaing. I opened the window and looked out. I saw the man on the ground, and the constable was telling him to get up. He said, "Get up and face me like a man."

35566. Did you hear anything else?—The man said, "Don't kill me; I have done nothing," or words to that effect.

35567. Did you see on what part of the body he was being kicked?—Yes, on the lower part of the back of his body as he was getting up.

35568. Did you not see him kicked while he was lying down?—No, only as he was getting up.

35569. Did the sergeant say anything?—Yes, he told the constable to leave him alone; he had done enough to him.

35570. Were you there until they separated?—Yes. I was looking out of the window all the time. In the meantime, when the sergeant told the constable he had done enough to him, the man made a bit of a run down the street, and the woman tried to follow, but the sergeant got into the middle of the road and barred her way. He said, "There is enough trouble without your going." He told the woman to go the other way.

35571. Is that all you saw that night?—That is all.

35572. Did you see anything the next morning?—I saw a lot of blood smeared all over the pavement outside where this man was lying down.

35573. Was it the same spot?—Yes.

35574. Could you identify the sergeant or the policeman?—I could not identify the policeman, but I have got a slight idea of the sergeant, as I saw his face when he was out in the middle of the road barring the woman's way.

(Mr. Cockle.) I do not know whether, with regard to the identification of the sergeant, the officers might be brought in.

(Chairman.) Yes. Let the officers in attendance come in. I suppose the sergeant has got his coat on.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, they have been about the Court for three or four days.

(Four sergeants were brought into court.)

35575. (Chairman.) Do you recognise any one of those sergeants?—This second one looks like the sergeant.

35576. (Mr. Cockle.) At which end?—At this end.

35577. 5 H?—Yes, that is the one.

35578. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You say you are a waterside labourer?—Yes.

35579. Does that mean you are in regular work or not?—No—casual work. I am almost certain to be at work every time I am there—every time I show up for labour.

35580. Do you mean by that you do not often show up?—Yes, I was at work on Monday and Tuesday, and I should have been at work yesterday, but I was not sure whether the Commission was going to sit. I lost a day yesterday.

35581. Where do you live now?—2, Victoria Home, Whitechapel Road.

35582. What is your number?—77 I believe the number is.

35583. That is where Gamble lives, is it?—No, not to my knowledge.

35584. You were living at 2, Osborn Place at the time you saw this happen?—Yes.

35585. On which side of the street is that? Is that on the same side as the school, or the other side?—On the other side; there is a girl's school, I believe, right facing the boys' school.

35586. Is it on your right hand side as you go from Brick Lane, or your left hand side?—On the left hand side.

35587. And how many houses down?—The first next to the public-house. The public-house is at the corner. It is the next house.

35588. (Chairman.) What is the name of the public-house?—The "Bell."

35589. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Was it a lodging house where you were living?—Yes.

35590. A common lodging house, is it?—Yes.

35591. On what floor were you sleeping?—On the first floor.

35592. Was it a room shared by a number of other men?—Six men, I believe.

35593. Did the window look out to the street?—Yes, right over the spot where the constable was kicking the man.

35594. Were there other men in the room besides you that night?—Yes.

35595. Was the room full?—Yes, I believe it was.

35596. Did anyone get up besides you?—Yes, another man.

35597. Is he here?—Yes, he is a witness.

35598. What is his name?—Brager, I believe.

J. Hartnett.
28 Feb. 1907.

35599. What time do you think it was?—Between three and four, as near as I could guess! I would not be certain.

35600. Was day breaking?—It might have been, but it seemed a bit dark to me. It is so long ago I hardly remember now whether it was day breaking or not. The lamps were alight.

35601. But your belief is now that it was between 3 and 4 o'clock?—Yes.

35602. Have you any particular reason for fixing the time?—By the time I went to bed. I lay abed a long time, and I was woke up after I had been asleep a little while.

35603. What time did you go to bed?—1 o'clock.

35604. You lay awake a long time, did you?—Yes.

35605. Do you know how long you lay awake?—I should say very nearly an hour.

35606. When you looked out of the window was there a crowd of people there?—No.

35607. Nobody at all?—There were only the constable, the sergeant, the man who was getting kicked, and a woman; that was all I could see.

35608. Did you continue to look out of the window until the man ran away?—Yes.

35609. Until it was all over?—Yes.

35610. Did anybody come up before it was all over?—No.

35611. Nobody at all?—No.

35612. Could you have seen them if there had been anybody there?—Yes.

35613. Have you seen that boy, Wiltshire, about the Court since?—Yes, one of the witnesses.

35614. Did you see him there?—No, I cannot say that I did.

35615. Could he have been there without your seeing him; I mean under your window?—No.

35616. Wiltshire has told us that the sergeant was engaged in keeping the crowd back?—There was no crowd at all—four persons, that is all.

35617. Either you or Wiltshire must be wrong about this?—I am certain.

35618. You say that you are quite certain that there was nobody at all there except these four people from the beginning to the end?—Yes, that is all I saw.

35619. I mean, you could have seen them if they had been there?—Yes.

35620. Was the man on the ground, according to you, when you opened the window?—Yes, lying flat down on his stomach.

35621. He would be quite close to you?—Yes, I was looking over like this (illustrating). I was on the first floor.

35622. You are not able to recognise the policeman, I understand?—No, because I did not see his face. His back was to me.

35623. Then he had his back towards your house, had he?—He was standing like sideways against the house.

35624. Now with regard to the sergeant. Did you know the sergeant before that night?—No.

35625. Had you ever seen him before?—No, not to my knowledge.

35626. Did you ever see him afterwards until you came to this Court?—No.

35627. You have seen several sergeants about this Court, have you not, while you have been waiting to give evidence?—Yes.

35628. Have you been thinking to yourself that one of those sergeants must have been the man who was there?—No, I was certain of the man I picked out.

35629. When?—Just now.

35630. But you have seen him outside before?—Yes, that is right.

35631. Did you form an opinion as to whether he was the man when you saw him outside?—It came to my knowledge directly I saw him.

35632. When did you first see him?—The first day I was up here, last Wednesday.

35633. Have you spoken to your friends about it as to whether you could recognise the sergeant?—No.

35634. Have you not?—No.

35635. Not a word?—No.

35636. You are quite sure?—Yes.

35637. Did you tell your friends you thought you could recognise the sergeant?—I formed my own idea.

35638. Did you tell your friend Brager that you could recognise the sergeant?—Not that I know of.

35639. Are you sure you did not?—I am not positively sure, but I do not think I did.

35640. Have you spoken to anyone else since you have been here as to whether you could recognise the sergeant?—No.

35641. Did this gentleman ask you whether you could recognise the sergeant?—Who—Gamble?

35642. Yes, Gamble, or Mr. Timewell; did they ask you since you have been here whether you could recognise the sergeant?—No.

35643 Not a word?—No.

35644. Who first asked you what you knew about it?—It was a gentleman down there, I think it was a week afterwards, inquiring whether anyone saw this trouble.

35645. A week afterwards?—I think it was just over a week afterwards, and a man told me about it.

35646. A man told you that somebody was inquiring?—Yes—whether anyone saw this, and this man knew that I saw it because I told him. He told me that this gentleman would be down the next day; that was a fortnight after. On a Saturday afternoon I saw the gentleman, who took my statement down.

35647. Where did he take it?—In a public-house.

35648. What is the name of the public-house?—I do not know the name of it; it is at the corner of Spelman Street.

35649. How came you to go to the public-house? Were you told he was there?—Yes.

35650. So you went to meet him?—Yes, when I came home from work on Saturday afternoon.

35651. Did he write down what you had got to say?—Yes.

35652. Did you sign it?—I signed my name.

35653. Did he give you anything for making the statement?—No.

35654. No drinks, nor anything?—No.

35655. Nothing at all?—We paid for drinks ourselves; and a couple of people were in there as well.

35656. Who were they?—The man who told me that the agent was there waiting for me.

35657. What was his name?—A man of the name of Hayes.

35658. It was Hayes who told you he was looking about to find somebody who had seen it?—Yes.

35659. It was Hayes who told you where to find the agent?—Yes.

35660. And it was Hayes who stood the drinks?—No, I paid for some as well.

35661. Who else was there giving statements besides you—anybody?—Only myself. I went in a private room with this man, or the tap-room you may call it.

35662. Just look at this (handing statement). Is that your statement. If you turn it over you will see your signature is at the bottom?—Yes.

35663. Was that written out from what you told the gentleman at the time?—Yes.

35664. At that time did you know Gamble by name?—No.

35665. Have you heard his name since?—Yes, up at the Court.

35666. Did you ever know he was called Pearce?—No.

35667. Have you ever heard him called Pearce?—No; only what I saw in the paper.

35668. You say this: "I reside at 2, Osborn Place. About 3.30 a.m. on Sunday"—the gentleman had first of all written and then he scratched it out and put "Tuesday." Did you tell him you thought it was a Sunday?—No.

35669. You say here: "The woman tried to follow him, but the sergeant said, 'Don't you follow that man; you have caused enough disturbance.'" Is that what the sergeant said?—Yes.

35670. Are you sure?—To the best of my recollection.

35671. Do you recollect, or do you not recollect, what the sergeant said?—I recollect. They are the words he used.

35672. Those are the words, are they? The sergeant said to the woman: "You have caused enough disturbance." Is that it?—Or "Don't make any more disturbance."

35673. "She said, 'Do you know what—that man followed me from Whitechapel Road and wanted a short time'"?—Yes, those are the words she used.

35674. Was she saying that of Gamble, or of whom?—I suppose she was speaking of Gamble, the man knocked about.

35675. You thought she was speaking of Gamble when she said that?—Yes.

35676. And you understood from what she said that she was complaining about Gamble. Is that right?—It seemed like it from the way she was speaking.

35677. That is what you meant, was it?—Yes.

35678. "The sergeant said, 'I know nothing about that; you go away'"?—Yes.

35679. Did you understand that the woman was complaining about what Gamble had done?—Yes, that is what I did understand.

35680. As far as you could understand the row the woman was complaining to the police about Gamble?—Yes, that he followed her; that is all.

35681. Are you sure about this blood on the pavement?—Yes, the next morning it was all smeared all over the pavement right on the spot where the man was lying.

35682. Did you see any blood on the man's face?—No, I did not see his face.

35683. Is it your recollection that it was about a week after then you made the statement?—It was a fortnight afterwards.

35684. Have you any means of fixing the date?—It was on a Saturday; I cannot recollect the date.

35685. But you think a fortnight, do you?—Yes. On a Saturday afternoon I made the statement.

35686. (Mr. Cockle.) You say you were under the impression that she was complaining of Gamble when she said the man followed her?—Yes, that is what she did say.

35687. Did the woman take any part in this? Did she urge the constable or protest?—She was protesting. She was saying, "Don't kill the man," or words to that effect, to the best of my recollection.

35688. (Chairman.) Was the man Brager, who lived in the same room as you, with you at the time?—No.

35689. Were you a friend of his in any way?—No, I do not know that I ever spoke to him until that morning when it was going on.

35690. He got up and went to the window at the same time that you did?—No, it was some time after. It was two or three minutes after, I believe.

35691. You stood at the window, as I understand it, until the man got up and ran away?—Yes.

35692. You saw the man get up from the ground and go away. He went towards Chicksand Street, I understand?—Yes.

35693. Then the other man got up and went to the window, according to your view. Where did you go to—back to bed?—Yes, after it was all over—after the constable followed the man down towards Chicksand Street.

35694. Then you say that next morning you noticed the condition of the pavement and saw there was blood on the pavement; it was smeared over, I think you said?—Yes.

35695. Did you make any complaint to anybody about the disturbance in the street?—There were a lot of people talking about it.

35696. The next morning?—They heard halloaing, and that sort of thing. They did not look out of the window, and they did not see it; they were in other rooms.

35697. Did you have breakfast together at this lodging-house?—No. J. Hartnett. 28 Feb. 1907.

35698. Then when do you say people were talking about it?—The next morning, when I got up.

35699. Do you mean the other men in your room were talking about it? Is that so?—And other men in other rooms.

35700. Did you talk to them about it?—Yes, I said I saw it.

35701. But you did nothing upon that—you did not go to the police-station and report it, or do anything of that kind?—No.

35702. Did you speak about the occurrence to anybody between that day, later in the morning on the same day, and the time that you went to the public-house—when Hayes told you to go to the public-house?—Yes, once or twice.

35703. But it was all in the way of gossip; it was all in the way of mere conversation, I suppose?—That is all.

35704. Who is Hayes?—He is a man I have known for a number of years working down by the waterside, the same as myself.

35705. When was it, do you think, that he first said to you that the gentleman wanted to take your evidence, or words to that effect?—Just over a week afterwards.

35706. Then it was some days before the Saturday on which you actually went?—Yes, the first time the gentleman came down.

35707. Hayes had not seen anything of the occurrence, had he?—No.

35708. How came he to mix himself up in the matter at all?—Because he was standing outside when this gentleman came down inquiring whether anyone had seen it.

35709. Does Hayes live in Osborn Place?—He was living in the next house.

35710. Then Hayes coming into the matter was purely accidental, was it?—Yes.

35711. He had heard that some gentleman was inquiring for you?—Yes.

35712. How could the gentleman ever come to know anything about your name?—I expect Hayes told him a man of the name of Hartnett.

35713. Hayes told him?—Yes.

35714. You had conversed with Hayes about this occurrence?—Yes, before this gentleman came down.

35715. I understood from your answer a moment or two ago that Hayes found a gentleman inquiring for you?—No, inquiring for witnesses.

35716. Inquiring for witnesses in general?—Yes.

35717. Then he appears to have mentioned to the gentleman: "I know Hartnett; he saw something of it." Something of that kind must have passed between them?—The first time this gentleman came down—Hayes told me about this gentleman coming down, I said, "If you see him again you can tell him of me, for I saw it."

35718. You told us you did not know Gamble at all before?—No, the first time I ever saw him was up at the court last Wednesday. I did not know the man who was injured until they told me.

35719. You did not see the man's face at all on the morning when you were looking out of the window?—No.

35720. Did you recognise the woman Ethel Griffiths?—Yes. I knew her, and I knew the voice before I opened the window—the way she was holloaing.

35721. Had you spoken to her before?—No.

35722. But you had seen her before?—She used the public-house that I used myself.

35723. She used to frequent the Bell, did she?—Yes.

35724. But you are not a friend of hers at all?—No.

35725. Had you ever spoken to her at all before?—No, only since I have been up to this court.

35726. (Mr. Dickinson.) Let me exactly understand where your lodging-house is. What is the name of the lodging-house you were living in?—Mr. Argent is the owner of it.

J. Hartnett.
28 Feb. 1907.

35727. It is the one exactly next to the "Bell" public-house?—Yes.

35728. Was it just opposite to you that you saw this happening?—Right under the window.

35729. In front of the house?—Yes.

35730. Did you see the man get up?—Yes, I saw the man get up, and as he was getting up I saw the constable kick him.

35731. Where did he go to?—He went down the street.

35732. Towards Chicksand Street?—Yes.

35733. What did the constable do?—I saw him follow him.

35734. Did you see anything after that?—No.

35735. How far did you watch them go down?—Until they got by a kind of bend opposite the school.

35736. How was it you did not see them any longer?—I could not see them any longer out of the window.

35737. Where was the woman standing when you saw this happening?—Out in the middle of the road against the sergeant—about four or five yards away.

35738. Could you see Brick Lane from your window?—Yes.

35739. Were there any people standing in Brick Lane?—No, not that I know of.

GEORGE BRAGER, sworn.

G. Brager.

35740. (Mr. Cockle.) What are you?—A dock labourer.

35741. Do you live at 1, Osborn Place?—Yes.

35742. That is where you are living now?—Yes.

35743. Were you living there last August?—Yes.

35744. Do you remember anything that happened towards the latter part of the month?—About four o'clock in the morning ———

35745. When was that?—The 21st August. I awoke, and I heard a man holloaing out "Let me alone."

35746. You awoke?—I awoke.

35747. You heard what?—A man holloaing out "Let me alone." I looked out of the window, and I saw two constables standing over a man.

35748. Two constables?—One constable and one a sergeant.

35749. What did you hear?—I heard one say: "Get up and face me like a man."

35750. Where was the man; in what position was he?—The man was on the ground.

35751. Lying down?—He was not lying down; he was just getting up on his hands and knees.

35752. Tell us exactly what happened?—The constable said "Go on," and the man ran down the street, and he ran after him. I could not see any more of them.

35753. The constable went after him?—Went after him.

35754. Did the sergeant say anything?—I did not hear the sergeant say anything.

35755. You did not?—Not to my recollection.

35756. Was anyone else there?—I saw a woman.

35757. What was she doing?—She was not doing anything.

35758. Was she saying anything?—No.

35759. Tell us exactly how the constable was treating the man. Do you say he was kicking him?—I did not say he was kicking him.

35760. Did you not say so?—No.

35761. Just tell us what the constable was doing?—The two constables were standing over a man when I looked out of the window, and I heard the constable say "Get up and face me like a man." The man stood up, and the constable said "Go on," and he ran away, and the constable ran after him—not the sergeant, but the constable.

35762. You did not see anything done?—No, I never saw anything done.

35763. What woke you then?—The holloaing.

35764. Who was holloaing?—Why, the man.

35765. What kind of holloaing was it?—"Oh, let me alone, let me alone." That is all I could hear.

35766. It was not the holloaing of a drunken man?—No.

(Chairman.) This witness does not carry the case materially further.

(Mr. Cockle.) No, but it is corroboration.

(Chairman.) Yes, in a sense he confirms the last witness, because the last witness said he went to the window after the man had gone off. This is the man who was in the same room with the last witness.

35767. (Mr. Cockle.) You were in the same room with the last witness?—Yes, with the last man, Hartnett.

35768. You both go to the window at the same time?—No.

35769. Who went first?—Hartnett went first.

35770. When you got up the man was getting up, you say?—He was getting up.

35771. Could you identify either of these men or the sergeant?—I have an idea of the constable, but not the sergeant.

35772. Do you think you could identify the constable?—I have an idea.

(Chairman.) We might have them in, please.

(Nine constables were brought into Court.)

(Witness.) It was the fourth one from the left.

35773. (Chairman.) From your left?—Yes.

35774. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did you see his number?—207.

35775. (Mr. Cockle.) Did you look at the place the next morning?—No, I did not.

35776. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) How long after this happened did you make any statement?—I should think it was just on a fortnight.

35777. How came you to make a statement?—I was standing at the corner of the street when I heard a man talking about it. I said, "Well, I saw it."

35778. Do you know who the man was who was talking about it?—Yes.

35779. What is his name?—His name is Hayes.

35780. After that Did Hayes ask you to go and make a statement?—No; he said there had been a gentleman down inquiring about it. I said, "If the gentleman comes round, you know where I live, and can find me and tell me."

35781. How long after did the gentleman come down?—About eight or nine days.

35782. Did you make a statement on the same day as Hartnett?—No, I do not think I did.

35783. Where did you make your statement?—I made mine in Chicksand Street, at a public-house.

35784. Was Hayes there?—No.

35785. Did anybody give you any drink or anything?—No; I had one glass of mild and bitter.

35786. Was that paid for by somebody?—Yes.

35787. Who paid for it?—The gentleman I was talking to.

35788. The gentleman who took the statement?—The gentleman who took the statement.

35789. Are you in regular work now?—No; a casual labourer.

35790. Are you a good deal of your time out of work?—No, I am not much out of work. I am here, there, and everywhere—all over the shop.

35791. Are you able to get plenty of work, or are you sometimes out of work for some time?—I am out of work sometimes three or four days a week.

35792. Did I understand you to say that after this took place the man ran away?—The man ran away.

35793. There is no doubt about that—that he actually ran?—Yes, he did run.

35794. Did he seem to run at a good pace?—No, he did not seem to run at a good pace.

35795. But he ran?—He ran the best way he could.

35796. Do you say the constable ran after him?—The constable ran after him.

35797. Had you seen that constable you identified just now about that neighbourhood before this occurrence?—I have seen him since the occurrence.

35798. About the neighbourhood?—About the neighbourhood.

35799. I suppose there has been talk about the neighbourhood as to whether this was the man who did it?—No.

35800. Have you not spoken to anybody about it?—I have not.

35801. Spoken to nobody?—I have not said anything to anybody about it.

35802. Had you seen this constable to recognise him before the gentleman came and took your statement?—I have seen him in Brick Lane.

35803. But had you seen him before you made the statement to the gentleman? I mean, between the time that this occurrence happened and the time the gentleman took your statement, had you seen this constable?—I could not say.

35804. When first did you see him to recognise that that was the man?—About a month after, I should reckon.

35805. Where did you see him?—I saw him by Hanbury Street.

35806. Were you alone?—I was alone, by myself.

35807. Have you seen him about this court while you have been waiting to give evidence?—I have seen him come downstairs while I have been sitting down there.

35808. You have seen him about this building?—Yes.

35809. How many times have you seen him?—Only once or twice this morning.

35810. How many times have you been here yourself?—Three times.

35811. Have you not seen him every time you have been here?—Yes, I have seen him.

35812. Every time you have been here you have seen this man?—Yes.

35813. Have you spoken to anybody about him?—I have not.

35814. Did you speak to Hartnett about him?—No.

35815. Are you sure?—No, I have not said anything to Hartnett about him.

35816. Nothing at all?—No.

G. Brager.

28 Feb. 1907.

35817. Have you spoken to Hartnett about the sergeant?—No; I have not spoken to him about the sergeant, because I did not know the sergeant.

35818. Did Hartnett speak to you about the sergeant?—Yes; he said he thought he knew him.

35819. Hartnett did speak to you about the sergeant, and that is while you have been waiting about here?—Yes.

35820. When Hartnett spoke to you about the sergeant, did you not speak to him about the constable?—I might have spoken about him, but I do not recollect.

35821. Think. Were not you and Hartnett talking about whether any of the policemen you saw about the passage were the ones you had seen?—Yes.

35822. You and Hartnett were speaking as to whether some of the constables you had seen about the passage were the men. Is not that so?—Would you mind asking me that question again?

35823. Have not you and Hartnett been talking together as to whether any one of the policemen you saw about the passage was the man who you say did it?—Yes.

35824. You thought that one of these men must be the man who is said to have done it?—Yes.

35825. Did you know his number when you came here?—Yes.

35826. You knew his number?—I knew his number—207.

35827. Who told you that?—I saw it for myself.

35828. There is no difficulty about recognising a man if he has "207" on his collar?—I could pick him out of a hundred.

35829. So when you said that you could identify him you knew quite well it was 207?—I knew it.

(Chairman.) Dr. Billinghurst has been good enough to write to us in accordance with his promise to make inquiries as to the hour at which Gamble arrived at the hospital. I do not think it is sufficiently important to put Dr. Billinghurst to the trouble of attending here to-day, so that I will read the letter, which can go upon the notes. "To the President of the Police Commission.—Dear Sir,—With reference to the case of George Gamble, I find a note was made by the lodge porter that he entered the hospital gates at 4.45 a.m. on August 21st last. The time, 6.5 a.m., given in my evidence last week was that at which his name was entered in the hospital register after his admission to the ward?—Your obedient servant, Walter B. Billinghurst."

WILLIAM HUGHES, sworn.

35830. (Mr Cockle.) Is your name William Hughes?—Yes.

W. Hughes.

35831. Do you live at No. 1, Osborn Place?—Yes.

35832. You have lived there some months, I think?—Yes.

35833. Were you there last August?—Yes.

35834. Do you remember anything that happened in August?—Yes.

35835. Can you tell us what date?—The 21st, I think it was.

35836. What time?—Between half-past 3 and 4; I could not exactly tell the time.

35837. What happened?—I heard a scream, and I looked out of the window, and I saw a constable hit a man and knock him down.

35838. Were you in bed at the time?—Yes.

35839. What awoke you? Were you awake or asleep?—I woke up when I heard the screams.

35840. How many men did you see?—One man and two constables, or one constable and a sergeant.

35841. Did you see anyone else there?—No, I did not see anyone else.

35842. Tell us exactly what you saw happen?—I saw the constable strike the man and knock him down.

35843. Was he standing then?—Yes, and then the man got up again and he knocked him down again. When the man got up the third time he ran down the street, and the constable ran after him and caught him up beside the school, and then the constable kicked him between the legs.

35844. How far off was that?—100 yards from where I live.

35845. Did you see the constable kick him then?—Yes.

35846. Outside your house you only speak of blows?—Yes.

35847. Was there anything else you saw then?—No.

35848. Is this the same house as Harnett lives in? This is No. 1, is it?—Yes.

35849. The other is No. 2?—Yes. It is like one house divided into two—No. 1 and No. 2.

35850. Could you identify either of these policemen?—Yes. I know the constable, but I could not recognise the sergeant.

35851. Could you recognise the constable?—Yes.

W. Hughes. 28 Feb. 1907.

35852. (Chairman.) Have you seen the constable since?—Yes, I met him a month before it happened, and I saw him a month after it happened at the corner of Hanbury Street.

35853. Hanbury Street is quite near Osborn Place?—Yes.

35854. Have you seen him about this Court at all?—Yes.

35855. You have?—Yes.

35856. Then you know his number, I suppose?—Yes.

(Chairman.) I do not know that there is any particular object in going through the form of having all the constables in.

(Mr. Cockle.) Perhaps not, unless their numbers are altered.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, their numbers have not been altered.

(Chairman.) The witness admits he knows the number of the constable whom he identifies as being the constable in Osborn Place on the 21st August.

(Mr. Cockle.) He identifies the man who bears the number 207.

(Chairman.) I think 207 had better come in. It is no good getting all the constables in and asking the witness whether he can pick him out of a number of men.

35857. (Mr. Cockle.) No. Is there a man named Bill Horne here?—He was here, but where he has gone I cannot tell you.

35858. He was the manager, but you do not know where he is?—No.

(Police-constable 207 H called into Court.)

35859. (Chairman.) Is that the constable that you saw a month before the occurrence?—Yes.

35860. Where did you see him a month before the occurrence?—I saw him round Brick Lane.

35861. And you saw him a month after this occurrence?—Yes, at the corner of Hanbury Street.

35862. Do you say he is the same man whom you saw in Osborn Place on the day in question?—Yes.

(The police-constable withdrew.)

35863. (Mr. Eldon. Bankes.) What do you work at?—I am a paper seller.

35864. Do you know Wiltshire?—Yes, I know him by sight, but I don't know exactly his name.

35865. How long have you lived at Osborn Place?—I have been there three years.

35866. It is the same house, is it not, that Brager lives in?—I could not tell you the names of those who live there.

35867. But you have seen the two men who are here as witnesses, Harnett and Brager? They live in the same house?—They did live there, but I do not know that they live there now.

35868. (Chairman.) You recognise two of the men you have seen as witnesses here as being men who live in this house?—Yes.

35869. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you say that Brager does not live there now?—No, not that I know of. There are a lot of strangers, and you don't know who are there and who are not.

35870. I am talking of men you do know. Harnett you say lived there at one time, but he has left?—Yes.

35871. Do you say the same about Brager—that he lived there at one time but he has left?—I could not tell you whether he has left or whether he is there now.

35872. On which floor did you sleep?—The second floor front.

35873. How many other people sleep in the same room?—There are six in my room.

35874. Besides you?—Five besides me.

35875. Had you gone to bed this night?—Yes.

35876. Had you been to sleep?—Yes, I went to sleep afterwards, and I was up again at half past six.

35877. Had you been to sleep before you went to the window to look out?—I was dozing off to sleep; I was not asleep properly.

35878. You say you heard something in the street?—Yes.

35879. Was it a man or a woman?—A man.

35880. Could you hear any words or only a shout?—I could not hear the words. I only heard the man shout.

35881. Did you get up and look out of the window at once?—Yes.

35882. Is your bed close to the window?—Yes.

35883. Could you see out of the window without getting out of your bed?—No.

35884. You had to get out of bed?—Yes.

35885. And then you looked out of the window, and you think it was between half past three and four?—I could not exactly tell the time.

35886. That is what you think it was?—Yes.

35887. Was there any daylight? Was the daylight beginning to break?—It was not very daylight. It was just breaking.

35888. The day was breaking?—Yes.

35889. Could you see quite well into the street?—I could see all right.

35890. Was it light enough to see across the street?—Yes, because the lamps were alight.

35891. Is there a lamp in that street at all, or is it at the corner of Brick Lane?—There is an electric light at Brick Lane and a lamp outside my house where I am living, and there is a lamp opposite the school.

35892. Is the lamp opposite your house on the same side of the street or the other side?—This side of the street.

35893. The same side as your house?—Yes.

35894. Was that alight at the time?—Yes.

35895. How many people were there in the street when you looked out?—I reckon there were about two dozen of them.

35896. Two dozen in the street when you looked out?—When I saw the mob round the man I reckon there were about two dozen. I could not exactly count them.

35897. You think there was a regular crowd there then?—Yes.

35898. Do you feel sure about that?—Yes.

35899. Do you think you saw the beginning of whatever happened?—No, I never saw the beginning of it.

35900. But you saw the man knocked down, did you not?—Yes, I saw the man knocked down.

35901. The man was standing on his feet when you saw him?—Yes, and the constable hit him and knocked him down.

35902. So that according to you you looked out soon enough to see the man knocked down?—Yes.

35903. Was that in front of your house?—Yes.

35904. Just in front?—Yes, near this lamp.

35905. And do you say that at that time when the man was knocked down there were two dozen people there?—There might have been more or there might have been less.

35906. There was a crowd?—There was a crowd round the man.

35907. Is it a common thing for rows to occur just at that place?—I could not say, Sir.

35908. How many have you seen there—a good many, have you not?—A decent few.

35909. Should you think in the three years you have been there you have seen twenty?—I have seen over a thousand.

35910. One thousand rows?—Yes.

35911. I mean at this particular place?—No.

35912. I am speaking of this particular place. I know there are a great many rows in that neighbourhood, but I mean the particular place where you saw this row happen. Have you seen twenty in the three years you have been there?—No, this is the first one I have seen.

35913. What did you mean by telling me you had seen a decent many in this place?—I have seen a decent few people.

35914. I was asking you about rows?—I can't answer for rows.

35915. Let me ask you again. I think you said just now you had seen one thousand rows?—There are always rows and fights round Brick Lane.

35916. And when you were speaking of one thousand you were speaking of one thousand rows and not one thousand people?—I reckon it is over one thousand.

35917. You reckon you have seen over one thousand rows?—Especially when Saturday night comes—there are nothing but rows and fights there.

35918. It is a very difficult place for the police to look after, is it not?—It is in one way.

35919. Now about this particular place. Have you not seen rows frequently at this particular place at the corner of Osborn Place and Brick Lane?—I have seen a few, but I have not seen many.

35920. Now we have got back to "a few." Just now you said a decent many?—I did not know what you meant at first.

35921. I am speaking about this place. You think you have seen twenty at this particular place in the three years?—Yes.

35922. There is nothing uncommon in there being a row there?—No.

35923. Have you ever jumped out of bed before to see what was going on?—No.

35924. This is the first time you have ever done that?—Yes, when I heard the man screaming and holloaing out I jumped out of bed to see what was the matter.

35925. You have heard people doing the same thing before when there have been rows there, have you not?—When there has been a row there the police always used to be there to hunch them out of it.

35926. When you first heard the noise was there anything to suggest to you that it was not an ordinary row?—No.

35927. If you have seen one thousand I do not see why you should get out of bed to see this one?—Perhaps I might have been asleep when the other rows occurred.

35928. But you have seen one thousand. You must have seen those when you were awake?—I have seen them when I have been walking through the streets coming home from the City.

35929. Was there anything you heard that led you to think there was anything unusual going on?—No.

35930. However, you did get out of bed, and then you saw a crowd of people there?—Yes.

35931. Did you see anybody you knew amongst the crowd?—No.

35932. Nobody at all. Was the crowd there before the man was knocked down the first time?—I could not answer for that.

35933. They were there before you saw the man knocked down?—Yes.

35934. What were they doing?—They were standing looking.

35935. Did you see the woman?—I saw her outside the Bell public-house, at the top of the street.

35936. Was she standing some way away then?—Yes.

35937. What made you notice her?—When I looked up the street I saw her standing there.

35938. That was some yards away from where this was going on?—Yes.

35939. Opposite the Bell?—Yes.

35940. Did you know the woman?—No, I only knew her by sight.

35941. Did you know her by name?—No.

35942. Did you know she was called "Ethel"?—No, not till last Wednesday.

35943. Was she standing by herself?—Yes.

35944. Not doing anything and not saying anything?—No.

35945. Did you hear her shout out at all?—No.

35946. Are you sure you saw a sergeant there?—I don't know whether it was a sergeant or a constable. I could not swear to him.

35947. You could not swear whether it was a constable or a sergeant?—No.

35948. You mean to say all you can say is that, according to your view, there were two policemen there?—Yes.

35949. And whether they were two constables or a constable and a sergeant you cannot say?—No. I know I can recognise the constable, but I could not recognise the other person who was there.

35950. And, as I understand, all you saw happen in front of your house was you saw the policeman knock the man down twice with his fist?—Yes.

35951. You did not see him kick the man at all in front of the house?—No.

35952. You are sure of that?—Yes.

35953. Quite sure?—Yes.

35954. You never saw any kicking till after the man ran away?—No.

35955. You are quite sure?—Yes.

35956. Did you make a statement to somebody as to what had happened?—The gentleman came up and asked me if I had seen it. I could not say "No," so I had to say "Yes."

35957. How long after it happened did the gentleman come?—About a month afterwards, I reckon.

35958. Had you heard anything about a gentleman being about taking statements?—No, not before the gentleman came up to me.

35959. How did he know you?—I suppose somebody else told him my name.

35960. Where did he come to?—I was up Flower and Dean Street, and he came and tapped me on the shoulder, and said, "Is your name Hughes?" I said, "Yes, sir." He said, "Did you see that case that happened?" and I said, "Yes, sir."

35961. Which case?—This man that got knocked about.

35962. Did he describe it?—Yes.

35963. What did he say?—He asked me to tell him what I saw so that he could write it down.

35964. How did you know which case he was talking about?—There was only one man who got knocked about by the police that I knew of.

35965. This is the only man you ever heard of being hurt by being knocked about by the police?—Yes.

35966. So you understood him to mean this case?—Yes.

35967. Then where did you go with him?—He took me in the White House, in Flower and Dean Street.

35968. Is that a lodging-house?—Yes.

35969. Was anyone else there, too?—No, only me and this gentleman together.

35970. Did you see Wiltshire there?—He was standing at the door.

35971. Did you see Ethel Griffiths there?—She was standing at the door.

35972. Did you speak to either of them?—No.

35973. And then you went in and made a statement?—Yes.

35974. Did the man write it down in your presence, or was it written before?—He wrote it down as I was telling him.

35975. Did you sign it?—Yes.

35976. Did he read it over to you?—No.

35977. He did not read it over to you?—No.

35978. Did you read it yourself before you signed it?—I could not read.

35979. But he wrote it down in the room when you were there?—Yes.

35980. You are quite sure, are you, that until the man ran away you never saw the constable kick him?—Yes.

35981. Quite sure?—Yes.

35982. Let me read you the statement, and let me ask you how this came to be made. "William Hughes, 1, Osborn Place, states: About 4 a.m., on 21st August, 1906, I was looking out of the front window at the address I have given." Did you tell him that?—Yes.

W. Hughes 28 Feb. 1907.

35983. Did you tell him you were looking out of the front window, or did you tell him you got up when you heard a noise?—I said I got out of my bed, opened the window, and looked out of the window.

35984. "I saw a man standing on the pavement beneath the window, and a constable who I can identify walked up to him and struck him in the face"?—Yes.

35985. Did you tell him at that time you could identify the constable?—I could not exactly see his number at first.

35986. Did you tell the gentleman on that day that you could identify him.—Yes.

35987. Did you know his number then?—No, not at first. When he knocked the man down he was bending over him, and then when he got up I could see his number when he was under the gas.

35988. You knew his number?—Yes, when he got up.

35989. Did you tell the gentlemen what his number was?—No.

35990. I will read that passage again—"and the constable who I can identify walked up to him and struck him in the face, and then knocked him down and kicked him several times. The man cried out as though he was hurt; the man got up on his feet and ran away as far as the school a short distance away." Did you tell him that?—Yes.

35991. But that was not true, was it?—It is true what I saw.

35992. You have told me three times you are sure the constable did not kick him before he ran away?—When he caught him by the school then he kicked him.

35993. But you told the gentleman this: "The constable who I can identify walked up to him and struck him in the face, and then knocked him down and kicked him several times. The man cried out as though he was hurt; the man got up on his feet and ran away as far as the school, a short distance away. The constable followed him, caught up with him and knocked him down again. He was on the pavement, and the constable kicked him in the private parts"?—Yes.

35994. How came you to tell this gentleman that you saw the constable kick him in front of your house?—I never told the gentleman the constable kicked him in front of the house. I told him he kicked him outside the school.

35995. Did the man run away?—Yes.

35996. Did he run at a good pace?—He ran from the lodging-house.

35997. Did he run pretty fast?—No, he could not run pretty fast.

35998. Did he seem to run all right?—He did not run very fast. He ran all right.

35999. Not very fast, but all right?—Yes.

36000. He did not seem lame?—No.

36001. He seemed as if he could run all right?—Yes.

36002. Before we come to what you saw happened afterwards did you hear the other constable say anything?—No.

36003. Did you see Ethel Griffiths trying to follow the man?—No.

36004. Could you have seen that if she had tried to do it?—Yes.

36005. Are you sure she did not?—No.

36006. You are quite sure?—Yes.

36007. Are you sure that she stood at the top of the street opposite the Bell the whole time?—When I saw the man run down as far as the corner, and I saw the constable kicking him I came in and shut the window and never saw any more.

36008. Until the man did run away and get right down to the school are you sure that Ethel Griffiths stood up by the Bell?—Yes.

36009. Without moving?—Yes.

36010. Now you say the man ran away. Could you see the school from your window?—Yes.

36011. Quite well?—Yes.

36012. Did you see the constable knock the man down there?—Yes, he kicked him between the legs.

36013. Did you see the man knocked down on to the ground?—Yes.

36014. Are you quite sure about that?—Yes, he knocked him down by the lamp opposite the school.

36015. That would be a considerable way down Osborn Place in Chicksand Street?—Yes.

36016. You know where Spelman Street crosses Chicksand Street?—Yes.

36017. It would be some little way before you got to Spelman Street?—Yes.

36018. Are you quite sure that the constable knocked him down and kicked him opposite the school in Chicksand Street after he had run away from opposite your lodging-house?—Yes.

36019. You are quite sure?—Yes.

36020. I see that you say in your statement that when he ran away "The constable caught up with him and knocked him down again. He was on the pavement, and the constable kicked him in the private parts." Did you tell the gentleman that?—Yes.

36021. Do you suggest to the chairman of the Commission that from your window you could see the part of the man that was kicked by the constable at that distance?—I could not see exactly what part, but he kicked him between the legs.

36022. Then you say you did see that at that distance?—Yes. If the lamp had not been there I should not have seen it at all. The lamp was there and that is how I saw it.

36023. How many yards do you think it would be from your lodging-house?—I should think it is 100 yards.

36024. You are seriously suggesting that you could see the particular part of the man that was kicked at a distance of 100 yards at that time?—Yes.

36025. Did he kick him in front or behind?—In the front as he caught the man.

36026. But the man was running away with his back to the constable?—As he caught him the man turned round.

36027. Do you say the man turned round and faced the constable, and the constable then kicked him in the front?—Yes.

36028. You saw that?—Yes.

36029. Did you go to bed again after this?—Yes.

36030. (Mr. Cockle.) Can you make it a little clearer why you got out of bed to look at this row when you have never done it before?—I have not done it exactly, but I have done it once or twice before.

36031. Why did you get out of bed on this occasion?—Because I heard the man scream outside the door.

36032. Was it only an ordinary scream?—An ordinary scream, just the same as I should have screamed if I was hurt.

36033. Can you describe the scream a little more?—No, I could not.

36034. Was it the scream of a man frightened or not?—I could not say whether the man was frightened or not.

36035. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I asked you whether you went to bed again after this happened?—And I said, Yes.

36036. Did you stay in bed?—Yes.

36037. I am not sure whether it was suggested that you went to the hospital?—No, it was not me.

36038. You did not go?—No.

36039. I think Ethel Griffiths said you went to the hospital?—It was Joseph Wiltshire and another fellow who went to the hospital—so Joseph Wiltshire told me. I did not go to the hospital at all.

36040. (Chairman.) Do you know the name of the person or the boy who went with Wiltshire to the hospital?—No, I could not tell you.

36041. You heard that somebody else had gone with him?—Yes, but he never told me any names.

36042. You were not the mate who got the clothes?—No.

36043. How old are you?—Nineteen.

36044. Have you been to school?—Yes.

36045. I think you said you could not write?—Yes; I have not been to school much.

36046. When did you leave school?—It got pulled down in Moorfield Square at the bottom of Liverpool Street, and I have not been to school since.

36047. What age was it that you left school?—Fourteen.

36048. Do you mean to say you could not write at all?—I could only write my own name.

36049. How have you been earning your living since?—Papers.

36050. I see you are living at this lodging-house. Is your father and mother alive?—My father and brother are there.

36051. At the same lodging house?—Yes.

36052. Were they in the same room?—No.

36053. When you say you earn your living by papers, does that mean that you do like Wiltshire, go into the City and sell papers?—Yes.

36054. And then you make your way back to this lodging house?—Yes. I go out at 10 o'clock in the morning and I am home at the latest by 11 at night. I come home and pay my lodging, and then have something to eat, and then go upstairs to bed, and by the time I get to bed it is about a quarter to twelve.

36055. Do you think you had got to bed on this occasion about a quarter to twelve?—Yes. I was in bed a long while before this case happened.

36056. Had you been to sleep before?—I could not go to sleep. I was dozing off asleep.

36057. Is that something unusual, or do you generally sleep well after being so many hours in the open air?—I generally sleep well.

36058. What day of the week was this according to your recollection that this row took place?—I could not tell you; I forget now.

36059. You told Mr. Cockle that it was the 21st August?—Yes.

36060. How do you know that?—Because I was up with papers and I could see. I have got the time table indoors of the 21st August.

36061. I daresay if you saw this disturbance as you say (I do not say that you did not) you could quite easily find out then and there what day it was and the month, but as I understand from your answer to Mr. Bankes, you went back to bed again?—Yes, certainly.

36062. Nearly a month had passed by before the gentleman came and tapped you on the shoulder and took you into the lodging house?—Yes, I was going into the City when he stopped me in Flower and Dean Street.

36063. A month after?—Yes, it might have been longer than a month.

36064. How did you know when he spoke to you that it was the 21st August?—It was the 21st August when it happened.

36065. But how did you know that?—Because I saw it in the time table.

36066. What time table do you mean?—The almanac that is hanging up in the kitchen of the lodging house.

36067. You did not say a word to me about going and looking at the almanac to fix the date or anything of that kind. Had you gone to look at the almanac for the purpose of finding out what day it was before you saw the gentleman?—No.

36068. Then I do not understand how the almanac helps you. Did the gentleman ask you what date it was?—No—I forget now whether he asked me. I thought the case was all over.

36069. You appear to have allowed him to put the 21st August in the statement he was writing down. Was anything said between you and him about the date?—No. He asked me when it was, and I said the 21st August.

36070. He asked you?—Yes.

36071. And you said the 21st August?—Yes.

36072. What made you say the 21st August a month afterwards?—Because I could see it on the almanac.

36073. You were at the White house when he asked you that question. The almanac was in the kitchen at your lodging house?—But I saw it before I came out of the kitchen and went to the White house.

36074. Did you go back to your lodging house?—No—before I came out of the kitchen

36075. What did you see on the almanac before you came out of the kitchen?—Only the 21st August.

36076.—That was the only date on the almanac?—That was not the only date. There were other dates beside that.

36077. This was a month after the 21st August that I am talking about?—I forget now, Sir.

36078. Just think what you have been telling us. First, you have given us an account of what you saw—that you had not been sleeping very well, and you heard a man scream, and you went to the window?—Yes.

36079. And you went back to bed?—Certainly.

36080. And nobody speaks to you, as I understand, until about a month afterwards?—It might have been two weeks afterwards when the gentleman came up and spoke to me.

36081. It might have been two weeks, but never mind that. Some time after the occurrence somebody taps you on the shoulder?—A gentleman.

36082. And you go with him to the White House, as I understand it?—Yes, I was standing outside the White House when he saw me.

36083. Then he took you into it?—Yes.

36084. Then he asked on what date this thing took place, as I understand—the row you have seen. Did he ask you anything about dates?—I forget now what he did ask me.

36085. How did the 21st August come to be written down in the statement that you signed?—I looked at the almanac before I came out of the kitchen, and it was the 21st August when it happened.

36086. But when you left the kitchen you had not met the gentleman?—When I left the kitchen I met the gentleman, but not on the same day.

36087. You told me a few minutes ago that you were near the White House when the gentleman tapped you on the shoulder?—Yes, in Flower and Dean Street.

36088. That I quite follow. Then you went straight to the White House with him, I understand?—Yes, he called me in there, and told me to go in there.

36089. Was that the first time you had seen him?—Yes.

36090. Then I do not understand how the 21st August came into the statement, unless he suggested it to you?—He might have told me, but I forget now what he did tell me.

36091. What did you mean by saying you had been to look at the almanac?—I always did look at the almanac before I came out in the morning.

36092. Very likely—to find out what day it is you are going out on?—I might go out some day, and not come home again.

36093. I do not see why, when you looked at the almanac, you should see nothing but the 21st August?—The other sheet that was on there was torn down.

36094. That is still less reason why you should see the 21st August continually staring at you. Is that the best explanation that you can give how the 21st came into the statement? Do not think I am hostile to you, or am trying to catch you. I only want to know how you got this 21st August fixed in your mind. You signed your statement, as I understand?—Yes, I signed it at the bottom of the sheet.

36095. Did the gentleman read it over to you?—He might have done, and he might not. I could not exactly remember.

36096. He might have read it, and he might not. I know that; but that is telling me nothing. Just think. Did he not read over to you what he had written?—No; I am sure he never read it to me.

36097. Then you signed something, but you did not know what it was?—No; I signed my name. He told me to sign my name, and, of course, I signed my name.

36098. Why did you do that to something you never heard read. It might have been a confession that you had committed murder?—It might.

36099. Do not you think it was a very silly thing to do?—I did not know who the gentleman was. That was the first time I saw him.

36100. That is all the more reason for not signing your name to the document that he gave you?—Yes.

W. Hughes.
28 Feb. 1907.

36101. Why did you do it?—I did not know whether I was doing right or doing wrong.

36102. Whatever may be the truth about the statement, you say that you have given us a full account of what you saw when you went to the window?—I can only tell you what I saw.

36103. How long were you at the window, do you think?—About a quarter of an hour, or it might have been 10 minutes; between 10 minutes and a quarter of an hour. I should have stopped there longer, only the other lodgers in the room were kicking up a row, and they pulled me in and shut the window because they could not get any sleep.

36104. Was your father in the same room?—No.

36105. That is what you meant by saying in your statement or saying to the gentleman that you were pulled away from the window by other lodgers?—Yes.

36106. Did you open the window?—Yes.

36107. It was one of those windows that open up?—Yes.

36108. Then you were pulled away, and then you went back to bed?—Yes.

36109. Had you known Wiltshire at all before?—No; I have seen him, but I did not know his name was Wiltshire.

36110. Did you know Griffiths at all before?—No; the first time I saw her was last Wednesday.

36111. How do you think the gentleman came to fix on you and tap you on the shoulder?—I suppose one of them must have told him.

36112. But who can have told him?—That is what I want to find out.

36113. Had you been talking about this thing at all to people?—No.

36114. Then you must have been taken quite by surprise when the gentleman tapped you on the shoulder and said "Come along with me"?—I did not know who he was.

36115. Did you know what he had come about at all?—No, not until he told me.

36116. Of course you did not know until he told you, but when you went to the White House?—Yes.

36117. What did he tell you you were to come for?—He said "Do you know anything about this case?" I said "What case is that?" He said "That case of the man that was knocked about." I said "Yes." He said "Your name is Hughes?" I said "Yes." Then I told him my name and address.

36118. Who could have told him about that?—I do not know.

36119. It seemed to be very wonderful, did it not?—Yes.

36120. You must have been talking about it?—No.

(Mr. Cockle.) I understand that that is the last witness we have here. I think Lord Russell wished to put one question to Gamble himself.

(Chairman.) We propose to summon the doctor who first of all saw Gamble at the hospital, and also the nurse, but they cannot be here to-day. You do not know of any further witnesses?

(Mr. Cockle.) No, there were one or two others, but we have not been able to get them here. I do not know whether they can be called on another occasion.

(Mr. Eldon. Bankes.) May I ask that the original statement of this witness may be handed in?

(Chairman.) Yes, I think it is important in this case.

(Mr. Cockle.) Certainly.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) And that old man's statement, I ask that that should be put in too.

(Mr. Cockle.) The old man's statement is not signed.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, it is not signed.

36121. (Chairman.) No, but I think we had better have it. (The original statements were handed in.) I wish you could give some explanation of how you came to go to the White House. At present it seems to me very wonderful?—The gentleman took me in the White House.

36122. You were living in the neighbourhood, and you had seen something of this row, but what I cannot make out is how the gentleman came to know anything about you?—I cannot make it out. It must have been someone down the street who told him.

36123. Clearly.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I ask Gamble one question?

(Chairman.) Yes.

GEORGE GAMBLE, recalled.

G. Gamble

36124. (Mr. Cockle.) You have been in Court all the time?—Yes.

36125. One or two witnesses, I believe, have spoken to blood on the pavement?—Yes.

36126. Can you give any explanation of that?—Yes, it came from my nose.

36127. Did your nose bleed much?—Yes, it does at times; it bled once or twice while I was in the hospital.

36128. Do you know why it bled on that occasion?—No, unless it was one of the blows, or whether it was when I fell on the pavement I could not say.

36129. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Had you a handkerchief with you that night?—I am sure I could not say. I really could not say.

36130. Have you ever mentioned to anybody before that your nose bled?—I mentioned it to the doctor at the time. The doctor in the hospital asked me once when it came on. He said "Does your nose bleed?" and I said "Yes, at times."

36131. I want to ask you one or two other questions. Can you give us the name of the man who waited outside for your clothes?—No, I cannot.

36132. (Chairman.) Who went with you to the hospital, do you say? We know you were ill, and that someone was accompanying you. Who helped you to the hospital?—There was one woman and a young man. Whether there was another man I could not say, but I fancy there was. But I really cannot say.

36133. Now, think of Mr. Bankes' last question.

36134. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did you find your clothes when you came out of the hospital?—No.

36135. Have you never seen your clothes?—Never seen them since.

36136. Have you asked for them?—Yes, I have.

36137. Did somebody sign at the hospital for your clothes?—Yes.

36138. Who did?—I could not say who it was. One of the young fellows—one who took me in, I suppose.

(Chairman.) Wiltshire signed for them, according to his statement.

36139. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you say you have never seen them or heard of them since?—No, I have not. I made inquiries when I came back from the Convalescent Home, and they said they were not there.

36140. Who said they were not there?—Down at the Home.

36141. Who is the caretaker at the Home?—There is the deputy.

36142. Do you know a man who is known by the name of "Ginger Jack"?—Yes.

36143. Who is "Ginger Jack"?—He is one of the porters there.

36144. One of the porters at the Victoria Home, is he?—Yes.

36145. Have you ever seen him about with Ethel Griffiths?—I could not say. He might have been.

36146. Have you ever seen him about with Ethel Griffiths?—I have seen him going about, of course.

36147. But have you seen him about with Ethel Griffiths?—Yes, I have.

36148. You have seen him about with Ethel Griffiths?—Yes.

36149. You know a man named "Ginger Jack," and you have seen him about with Ethel Griffiths, have you?—At different times.

36150. Were you ever a porter at this Home yourself?—No.

36151. Never?—No.

36152. I want to ask you about one other matter, and that is this: What name are you known by at the place where you work?—Gamble.

36153. When you were laid up in this way did you send any message or did you write any letter to your employers?—I had my foreman come to see me—one of them (the under foreman), and I told him how this occurred.

36154. How did the foreman know where you were?—I wrote to him and he came to see me; in fact, my head foreman said, "You had better go and see the man, because you do not know what has happened."

36155. To whom did you write?—I could not say whether it was Mr. Sayers or to the head foreman, but I think it was to Mr. Sayers I wrote.

36156. Did you sign your name as Pearce?—I was in there as Pearce.

36157. Did you write from the hospital?—I am sure I could not say. I might have done.

36158. Think. I want to know what you told your firm about what had happened to you?—I could not recollect really. I told this foreman how it occurred.

36159. That was after the man came?—Yes.

36160. You say he came because you wrote to him?—Yes.

36161. First of all, did you write to your foreman as Pearce?—Certainly.

36162. How would he know where that letter came from unless you worked as Pearce?—Because I told him otherwise.

36163. In the letter?—Yes, and put my own name as well.

36164. In the letter?—Yes, as far as I can remember. I could not say.

36165. Did you tell him in the letter what had happened to you?—I am sure I could not say, but I know I told Mr. Sayers how it occurred.

36166. (Chairman.) Did you know that your clothes had been taken away from the hospital?—Yes, the nurse told me afterwards.

36167. The nurse told you?—Yes, she said it was the rule to send them away.

36168. You remember Wiltshire being in the reception room with you?—Yes, the young man I had with me; and there was another young man; he went up the ward.

36169. He came up the ward?—Yes.

36170. Do you not remember talking to him at all in the ward?—No, I know I asked the nurse. I said, "Did my clothes go?" and she said, "Yes, the young man took them."

36171. Before that happened you had a conversation with Wiltshire about your clothes?—I am sure I could not say; I might have done.

36172. Of course you might have done. Do you not know that Wiltshire has said he did have a conversation with you?—I think he was talking to me on and off all the way to the hospital.

36173. I am talking about what took place when you got into the ward?—I am sure I could not say.

36174. Were you present in court when Wiltshire was examined?—Yes.

36175. Do you not remember that Wiltshire spoke to a conversation with you about your clothes?—Yes. He asked me if he should take them.

36176. Then you did talk to him about your clothes?—Yes.

36177. Did you not say, "Yes, give my clothes to my mate outside"?—No, I had no mate—in fact, I never mixed among anyone there.

36178. Are you suggesting that Wiltshire spoke falsely when he said that?—He might have meant the other young man was my mate.

36179. You heard Wiltshire say, "I was surprised at this, because I had not noticed anyone come in with us." Did you hear Wiltshire say that?—Yes, I heard him say that, but I had no mate.

36180. "I took the clothes outside." You heard him say that?—Yes.

36181. And he said he gave them to a man outside whom he had not noticed before?—Yes.

36182. Did that strike you as strange?—I think there was another one went up to the hospital with us.

36183. When the matter of the clothes was mentioned to you, and you had the conversation with Wiltshire, you saw Wiltshire take your clothes?—Yes.

36184. What was he going to do with them?—To take them to the other young fellow who lived down at the Home; I suppose he meant the other man would give them to the night porter.

36185. He said that you said, "Give them to my mate outside"?—No, I never said that.

36186. He said, "I gave him the bundle"?—Yes.

36187. And he said he had a blue and white necktie, brown boots, and a velvet cap. Do you know any friend of yours dressed like that?—No, I have no friend; it was only a man who stayed there, and stopped at the Home; I thought he would take them down to the Home.

36188. Do you mean to say you told Wiltshire to take your clothes back to the Home?—I told him to give them to this young man who was staying at the Home. Wiltshire did not stay at the Home.

36189. I am thinking of what was taking place in the ward. Wiltshire was in the ward with you?—Yes.

36190. He took your bundle of clothes?—Yes.

36191. You knew that?—Yes.

36192. Did you give him any instructions about the clothes at all?—I said "Give them to that young fellow who stops at the Home, and he will give them to the night porter."

36193. "That young fellow stops at the Home, take them to him." There were a score of men stopping there?—This was a young man who came up with me to the hospital.

36194. Wiltshire said no one came?—Yes. I am certain someone else came.

36195. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Who was it?—I did not know his name; he was a stranger.

36196. You say he was stopping at the Home?—Yes, but I did not know his name; I could not say what his name was.

36197. (Chairman.) Is there not some official at the Home?—Yes, the night porter—that is who I told him to take them and give them to. He did not receive them.

36198. "Take them to that young man at the hall" is not taking them to the night porter. The man you meant he thought was a man accompanying you to the hospital?—I always thought there was a man who came up with me to the hospital—a second man. They would not let them all in the ward.

36199. That is all you can tell us; that is all you can suggest?—That is all I can suggest. I told him to take them down and give them to him.

36200. Wiltshire said positively you said "Give them to the man outside."

36201. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There is one other matter I want to ask you a question about. Ethel Griffiths has said that she came to the hospital several times while you were there?—About twice or three times.

36202. Did she ever bring anything for you when she came?—She brought a bit of fruit.

36203. Did she do that every time she came?—No, not every time, but once or twice; I could not say. I never took notice of that.

36204. I think she told us she came six or eight times, but I am speaking from memory?—No, she did not.

(Chairman.) She might have gone there and inquired and not gone in.

G. Gamble. 28 Feb. 1907.

36205. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I could not say. However, she brought you fruit on more than one occasion?—Once or twice, I could not say.

(Chairman.) I think we must now adjourn before we take the police evidence.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Will Ethel Griffiths be present on the next occasion?

(Chairman.) If you wish to have her here we will summon her again. If you desire her to come she shall again be subpœnaed.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you please. There is one thing I want to mention. Is there any objection to our making inquiries of Gamble's employers? I feel myself that this is a case where every investigation should be made, and I should not think of having inquiries made having regard to the circumstances under which the name was disclosed without your permission. Of course the inquiries would only be made in a proper manner.

(Chairman.) I should like to think over that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I want to ascertain, if I can—I tell you frankly—what account Gamble gave of this accident.

(Chairman.) I will let you know on Monday morning. It may be that we might ask Gamble's employer or the foreman to come.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That will meet my purpose entirely.

(Chairman.) Perhaps that would be the most satisfactory way of doing it, but we will let you know.

(Mr. Cockle.) Ethel Griffiths is here now, I understand.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I would sooner she came on the next occasion.

THIRTY-EIGHTH DAY.

Monday, 4th March 1907.

PRESENT

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. F. WALEY, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Assistant Secretary).
CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).

WILLIAM FEWELL, sworn.

W. Fewell. 4 Mar. 1907.

36206. (Chairman.) You are a porter at the London Hospital?—I am the night lodge porter.

36207. Does that mean that you are always at work at night there, or sometimes by night and sometimes by day?—Always, for 21 years.

36208. At night?—Yes, I go on at 10 o'clock at night, and I am off at seven in the morning.

36209. Is it your duty to observe who goes into the hospital, or who is brought into the hospital?—Yes, I have to enter into my book whether it is medical, surgical, or accident after 10 o'clock, when I go on duty.

36210. Are the gates shut at 10?—No, the gates are practically always open, because there are so many cases coming in—perhaps 30, 40, or 50 a night.

36211. It is your duty to observe who is going in, and to check the people who are going in?—Yes.

36212. If you have any doubt that they are going in on proper business you stop them?—Yes, and ask them where they are going to.

36213. You do not enter everything in your book, do you?—Yes, everything.

36214. Everybody who goes in?—If there is a patient on the dangerous list I take the names of those and what ward they are going to—friends of so-and-so to visit such-and-such a ward. Then perhaps an accident follows on, or a medical case—child, or medical case—woman, or a surgical case—man, or a surgical case—woman, as the case may be.

36215. You were on duty on the 21st August last year?—Yes.

36216. Have you got your book here?—Yes (producing book).

36217. Is George Gamble in Court? (George Gamble stood forward.) Do you remember that man coming?—No, I could not recollect—to save my life, I could not.

36218. You may refresh your memory by looking at your book?—Dr. Billinghurst spoke to me about this case, and asked me whether I remembered the case. I said I could not remember it, so I fetched my note book in front of him in the lodge, and I said, "I see I have an accident booked in at 4.45—man." That is all. There is no cross against it, and no remark made against it.

36219. You did not take the name of the injured man?—No. They do that upstairs in the receiving room.

36220. That we have gathered from Dr. Billinghurst, but in the natural course of events you would not take the name of the injured man arriving at the hospital?—No.

36221. You find the entry in your book on the morning of the 21st "Accident—man—4.45?"—Yes.

36222. Is that the only accident that you have entered on that morning?—At that time. There were several accidents during the night. I have not counted them, but there are a lot of minor things that come in, both medical and surgical.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Just look down that page and tell us what accidents there are.

36223. (Chairman.) Is that entry "Accident—man" the only entry of that kind you have got on that morning?—After 12 o'clock I have got one at 1.15, but that is a woman.

36224. (Mr. Dickinson.) Just read the words in your book?—"1.15—accident—woman." Then there is a list of the medical cases. You do not want that read.

36225. (Chairman.) What do you mean by a medical case?—Internal—medical. Surgical and accidental are different.

36226. You mean out-patients that come into the hospital?—No; they are perhaps bad in the chest, or they have got the stomach ache, or head ache, or the heart ache. I put that down as medical.

36227. You can pass those. There is no other accident entered until I come to 4.45, and that is the last.

36228. You have an accident at 1.15?—Yes.

36229. Read the entry?—"1.15—accident—woman." She came in probably with a cut head or a cut hand or a cut finger. Any little thing they come in with.

36230. Then the next accident you have got entered is "Accident—man—4.45?"—Yes.

36231. Had you any conversation with the "Accident" man who came in at 4.45?—I cannot remember any definite conversation, only I suppose I asked him what was the matter, or probably he told me before the doctor," and then I say, "What is the matter?" Sometimes they come in and say "I want to see the doctor—accident," or perhaps they say "I want to see the doctor," and then I say, "What is the matter," and they say "Accident."

36232. You have no recollection of any particular conversation with regard to that particular case?—No. I do not remember him remarking anything to me. I might have said, "What is the matter?" or he might have said to me, "Accident—I want to see the doctor." Sometimes they come in and say, "I want to see the doctor," and I have to see what is the matter, and they are impudent, and they say, "You are not a doctor." It is all according to the class of people they are. I have to convey to them that I have to know the particulars, because of entering them, and then they will have the politeness to say, "I have the stomach ache or head ache," but that is only a certain class of people. That is how they treat me.

36233. Let me put it to you negatively. No man came to the hospital, so far as you can recollect, on that night, suffering from an accident which is not put down in your book?—No. I make a little cross against a case, but it does not follow that it is going to be a private inquiry, but simply for the hospital's sake. Oftentimes people come in and they are the worse for drink; they have a cut hand or a cut head, and they go upstairs to see the doctor, and perhaps they will come back again without being attended to, and go out and say, "I have been waiting here half an hour," and perhaps they have only been waiting five minutes. They go away and refuse to wait. In a case like that I generally put a cross against it, in case there should be an inquiry.

36234. So the fact that there is no cross against that "Accident—man—4.45," shows that the man was attended to?—Yes.

36235. That he waited and was attended to?—Yes, and there was nothing special about it.

36236. (Mr. Dickinson.) Have you any record of people going out of the hospital?—I have when they come in with accidents and I see they are going out in exactly the same way that they went in. I generally stop them and say, "You have not seen the doctor yet, you have not been attended to," and then perhaps they will say, "I have been waiting here now all this long while—half an hour," but otherwise I do not say anything to them. W. Fewell. 4 Mar. 1907.

36237. You do not put down a record of people who pass out?—No.

36238. You can tell us nothing about the people who went in with him and then came out?—No, I cannot.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask any questions, Earl Russell?

36239. (Earl Russell.) There is one question I would suggest, and that is whether the entry is to the nearest five minutes or to the next quarter of an hour—how accurate is the time?—I am certain it is within two or three minutes—quite certain.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask any questions, Mr. Bankes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, sir.

GEORGE PLUMB, sworn.

(Witness.) May I ask that my name should be kept out of the papers. I should like it.

(Chairman.) I do not think that can be done. Your name will come into the papers, if it does come into the papers, in a perfectly honourable way.

(Witness.) I am not speaking on my own behalf. I do not know whether my firm would care to have me mixed up with a matter like this.

(Chairman.) You are not mixed up with it; you are discharging a public duty which you are compelled to do by law.

(Witness.) That is the way you look at it. Perhaps they may look at it in another way. Then, very well, Sir; I do not personally mind.

36240. (Chairman.) I shall have to ask you who you are employed by. I understand you are employed by Messrs. George Trollope and Sons?—Yes.

36241. They are very eminent builders, are they not?—That is for the public to judge.

36242. I cannot see that it will do any damage to them to know one of their foremen has come here to discharge what is obviously his public duty?—If you rule it so, I have nothing further to say.

36243. You are a foreman?—I am managing foreman of the decorative department of Messrs. George Trollope and Sons.

36244. You have been asked to come here by the Commission, have you not?—Yes. G. Plumb.

36245. Do you see the man here—Gamble?—Yes.

36246. He has been employed by your firm?—Yes.

36247. How long have you known him?—I have known him twelve months—I think it is to-day. I could not tell you positively, but I think that is sufficiently near.

36248. The exact date is quite irrelevant. Was it to you he came for work?—He was recommended to the firm, or the firm had a letter written to them asking them to give employment to the bearer, as he was the son of one of this lady's employés, and this lady, being a client of the firm's residing in Belgrave Square, sent the letter on to the firm. The firm in the usual way, as it is my duty to employ and discharge men, passed the letter on to me, telling me if I could do anything they would be glad, as they would like to oblige their client. I saw the man and engaged him.

36249. You understood from them, I suppose, that the lady had recommended Gamble to you because he had been employed on an estate in which she was interested?—He was the son of one of her employés, and he came to London, and was unfortunate in not getting employment.

36250. But I may take it that Gamble was very highly recommended to the firm?—Yes. I will give you

G. Plumb.

1 Mar. 1907.

the lady's name, if you want it. She resides in Belgrave Square, and that is sufficient.

36251. Being highly recommended, you saw Gamble?—Yes.

36252. In what capacity was he engaged?—As a labourer in the painting department.

36253. When did he commence working for you?—I believe twelve months ago to-day.

36254. That would be March 4th?—Yes, about that date.

36255. Until the time of this occurrence of the 24th August he worked for the firm?—Yes.

36256. What opinion did you form of his character during the time?—It was very satisfactory, or I should not have kept him.

36257. That, I suppose, means he was a sober and industrious man?—Perfectly so. I had the impression that if he drank it was a very, very trifling amount—in fact, I considered he was an abstainer, or next to it. I judge men by their appearance when I see them at different times, and I form a good or bad opinion about them. We have sent him errands, and always found him go there and back in the time that a man would have to be quick to get there and back in. He never loitered in any way.

36258. Was he perfectly regular in attending to his work?—I do not think during the whole of the time up to this accident that he had lost any time wilfully. There are times when we stop a man, but of his own choice I do not think he had lost any time. In fact, I am sure he has not.

36259. We now come to the 21st August, when he did not come. Was he expected to come to work on the 21st?—He was expected to be there on the 21st. He worked on the 18th, which, I think, was a Saturday, which is the beginning of our week, and on the 20th he was there, and on the 21st he was not there, and we did not know what had become of him.

36260. Did you make any effort to find him?—No, none whatever. I did not know in which direction to look for him, and we do not concern ourselves with one man among the many that we employ.

36261. Do you keep the addresses of the persons in your employment?—Yes, we have the addresses of the majority of the men, but in the event of a man stopping, and it is a frequent occurrence, we take no notice.

36262. It did not seem to be a frequent occurrence in Gamble's case?—He had not stopped away before.

36263. When did his absence first attract your attention?—I knew he was not in, because it is part of my practice and duty to look through and see if everyone is there and keeping to their time. If a man stops away I question him, and I made up my mind when Gamble returned to ask him where he had been the day before. But he did not come in, and I got a card from the hospital.

36264. Was that a postcard?—A postcard, simply saying that George Gamble had been brought in there suffering from injuries, and wished the nurse to acquaint me with the fact. I got that on the Wednesday morning.

36265. Have you kept that postcard?—No. I kept it up to the end of the year, and after the turn of the year we destroyed a lot of things.

36266. You destroyed that postcard with other things at the end of the year?—Yes.

36267. Will you tell us, as near as you recollect, what were the terms of the postcard—the exact words?—As near as possible she said that George Gamble had been brought in here suffering from severe injuries, and he wished her to write to me and tell me where he was.

36268. That was from the London Hospital?—Yes.

36269. Do you remember the date of the postcard?—I feel sure it was on the Wednesday morning.

36270. That would be the 22nd August?—Yes, that was the morning after the day of his absence.

36271. You are sure that his name was given on the postcard?—Positive. I should not have recognised him by any other name.

36272. What is the next that you know of the matter?—Really, the next thing was that I happened to know a nurse in the London Hospital, and wrote her asking if she could give me particulars of the accident, which she did privately.

36273. The postcard was not signed?—It was only signed by the ward nurse, but I forget her name. I really did not take a lot of notice of it at the time.

36274. You wrote to a nurse who you knew?—Yes.

36275. What was the result of that?—She went along and made inquiries, and in a private sort of way she said the man was very badly hurt, and said he had been kicked by a policeman.

36276. Did she write to you?—She wrote to me.

36277. Was it a letter?—Yes.

36278. Have you got the letter?—No, I destroyed that at the same time as the other things. The reason I wrote was because I thought the man might have got in there through his own fault in some way, and had I found out that he had been in a drunken brawl or something of that kind I should have discharged him.

36279. Can you recollect the terms of the letter?—No; she told me that she had made inquiries, and she told me that the man was lying there very severely hurt, and would have to undergo an operation, and claimed to have been kicked by a policeman. That was all I knew until later on in the week.

36280. How long after the postcard had been received by you was the letter received?—I should say about two days. I wrote off the same night, and I think I got a reply by the next post. It might have been on the Thursday or Friday; it was in the same week certainly.

36281. Did you go to the hospital at all?—No.

36282. Who did go to the hospital?—I asked one of his mates to go along and see him, and find out what he could about him.

36283. What was the mate's name?—Sayers.

36284. Did Sayers go?—Yes, and came back and reported to me the same as what I had already learned, that he was lying there and was hurt, and claimed to have been hurt by a policeman.

36285. What happened further?—Nothing beyond that when he left the convalescent home, he came and saw me to see if the job was still open, and if he could start work.

36286. The firm have given him work?—Yes, I have given him a start, and he is still at work.

36287. He is only able to do light work?—I could not put him to do a lot of things that he did before. He would have to have lifted heavy weights, and I have now put him on a job he will be better able to do. I see a marked difference in him. He does not walk as well as he used to do, and he used to go out window cleaning.

36288. Did Gamble write to you at all?—I think he did.

36289. To you?—No, I do not think he wrote to me except at the close, but I am not quite sure. I would not say. I do not think he did.

36290. You recollect very well about the postcard and about the nurse's letter?—I have no recollection of receiving a letter from him. I have a clerk who would open all correspondence which is directed to me, and that which is important he would save for me, and what is not important he would not save for me. Such an unimportant matter as a man writing to come back to work we should not notice. We employ a large number of men, and a man being away from his work and writing to say he is able to come back happens very frequently.

36291. Did your clerk see the postcard and the letter that you received from the nurse?—Yes, he was actually the one who destroyed them.

36292. He knew you were in communication with the people in the hospital about Gamble?—Not with the people exactly.

36293. Oh, yes?—No, we only had the postcard from the nurse, and the other matter I considered was a private matter between my friend and myself.

36294. Did your clerk open it?—My clerk saw it. He felt interested, and I showed it to him, and he had it in his possession until a short time ago.

36295. What is the state of your memory with regard to a letter from Gamble? Do I understand that you think Gamble did write to you?—I do not think he did. That is my impression.

36296. You say he may have done so, and your clerk may have looked at it and thought it was of no importance?—I do not think he has written to me personally. That is my impression.

36297. Did he write to the firm?—No, he would not write to the firm. The firm would not know him. This man I have mentioned visited him pretty well every week—in fact, I am sure pretty well every week, and he was bringing reports between the hospital and myself.

36298. You mean the man Sayers?—Yes.

36299. At any rate, whether Gamble wrote to you or not, you do not recollect seeing any letter from him?—No, I do not think he has written to me personally.

36300. Did you have any conversation with Gamble about this when he came back?—Not a great deal. He came back in December.

36301. Can you give me the date?—I can give it to you if you will allow me to refer to a paper which I have taken from the books. (After referring.) I think he came back on the 14th or 15th December. He started back to work on the 15th December, but the day before, he had seen my clerk and told him he was then thought able to work, and did he think he might come on. The clerk told him he might come in the morning and see me. I am not at Grosvenor Works after half-past nine in the morning, but I am there from half-past six to half-past nine. He came in and reported himself to me on the Saturday, and I said, "You can go to work."

36302. Was that on the Monday?—On the Saturday.

36303. That would be December 15th?—Yes.

36304. Did you have any conversation with him as to the cause of his absence?—I already knew. I did not go worrying the man.

36305. It does not follow because you knew you did not have a conversation about it?—I did not want to do it. I have something else to do.

36306. That is all that you can tell us about the matter?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask any questions, Earl Russell.

(Earl Russell.) I have no question to ask, Sir.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask any question, Mr. Bankes?

36307. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you please, Sir. (To the Witness.) Did Gamble engage with you under the name of Gamble?—Yes.

36308. And the lady who wrote of him wrote of him as Gamble, I do not understand that the lady knew him personally, but he was a son of an employé of her's?—That was what the letter implied.

36309. Did you know he had been out of work?—Judging him by his appearance I should say he was very hard up indeed.

36310. Have you ever heard the name of Pearce in connection with him?—No.

36311. Not until this inquiry?—I have not heard of it now, except that Sayers came to me after he had to see the man, and he said, "By some mistake or other they have got him by the name of Pearce," and when he asked Gamble why it was, he said he could only explain it in this way, that when he was in his semi-delirium or unconsciousness he thought they were asking him who did it, and he said "Police."

36312. Did you know where Gamble lived?—Not exactly; in fact, I did not know his address.

36313. Did you know he lived, for instance, in Whitechapel?—I knew when I engaged him he lived down at the East End, because he gave me an address there, and I am not quite sure whether it was a Rowton lodging-house or not, but it was one of those places.

36314. While he was working for you you did not know he continued to live in those parts?—No. He very seldom had a job off the works, and I did not take the trouble about him that I should have taken about a man who I was sending to gentlemen's houses. In fact, his condition when he came to me was one of downright hardupedness, he had no soles to his boots, and I was obliged to keep him about the works. If it had not been for the recommendation of the lady I should not have employed him.

36315. He appeared to be utterly destitute, did he?—Yes.

36316. Now I understand you wrote to a nurse who you knew in the hospital in order to find out how it was he came to be there?—Yes.

36317. I suppose that if you had found out he had got into any trouble through any fault of his own you would not have taken him back?—No.

36318. That was the object of your enquiry?—It was simply to satisfy me of the rights of the case.

36319. When the answer came back that he had been injured by the police you were satised?—I wondered why he was out so late at night, and the only thing that I have said to him since he came back is, "You brought it on yourself by being out in the street so late."

36320. I think I understood you to tell the Chairman you have had these letters from the hospital in your possession up till quite recently?—My clerk takes possession of all my correspondence. It is what we call "Official Correspondence" in the office, and he had it in his desk, and when I asked him about it he said, "I was cleaning out a lot of rubbish a very little while ago, and I got rid of them; I did not consider them important."

36321. How long ago?—I do not think it is more than a couple of months ago, but he can come here to tell you about it if you wish.

36322. Did you know anything about Gamble's case going before the Royal Commission?—No. I knew nothing about it until I heard about a fortnight ago that he had been away. Someone had been in for him and asked him to come up here.

36323. That was the first you heard of it?—That was the first I heard of it, and then I heard it through my clerk.

36324. (Chairman.) Am I to understand that when you heard that Gamble had been injured by the police you considered he had been guilty of anything wrong himself, or that the police had been guilty of something wrong?—I was not in a position to form an opinion. When I heard it had occurred so late at night I thought it was so very unwise to be out so late at night as that in such a rough part.

36325. I gather that your conclusion was that Gamble was not much in fault, at any rate, if it was simply the indiscretion of being out late at night?—I did not consider he was in fault at all, or I would not have employed him.

36326. Then you thought he had been unfairly treated by the police—knocked about improperly?—Certainly.

36327. Did you not help him to get any redress for so unusual an action as that on the part of the police?—No. I felt sorry for the man, but I was not able to help him in a public sort of way. What I did, I did in a private way. I gave him his job back again, and I have made things as light for him as I can. That is the only help I could give him as far as I could judge.

36328. Is Sayers here?—No.

36329. Is Sayers available to-day? Could you send him over here?—He is in Golden Square, but he could be got here if you would like him.

36330. He seems to have seen Gamble in the hospital, and perhaps it would be more satisfactory if we hear his account of what Gamble then said?—I think he could be got here by 3 o'clock.

36331. Will he come without a summons?—Oh, yes, if I tell him he is to come along he will come along. We will pay him for his time.

36332. I understand that the ward nurse is not now at the London Hospital?—But the nurse who wrote me the letter is still at the London Hospital.

36333. What is her name?—Nurse Ing.

(Chairman.) The nurse who received Gamble in the receiving room of the hospital is now engaged actually nursing a patient in the country at this moment. I do not know that it will be necessary for us to summon her, but if we think it is necessary we will do so.

G. Plumb.
4 Mar. 1907.

Now, with regard to the police concerned, I do not know whether you have any witnesses to call, Mr. Bankes?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) All the police are here who can throw any light on this matter. If it would be of any assistance to the Commission, I will examine them in the ordinary way.

(Chairman.) We are quite willing to take it into our own hands. We know pretty well who we shall like to have. Who, for instance, is the chief constable in this Division H?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have here Sub-Divisional Hewison. He will tell you all about the beats.

(Chairman.) He can tell us all about the beats and the organisation of the Force in that division?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Earl Russell.) May I ask the Commission if it is not proposed to call Dr. Woods?

(Chairman.) Yes, but he cannot be here till this afternoon.

(Earl Russell.) I only mentioned the matter so that it should not be overlooked.

(Chairman.) Then perhaps Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison had better be called.

Sub-Divisional Inspector JOSEPH HEWISON, sworn.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

36334. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you Sub-Divisional Inspector of the H Division?—Yes.

36335. How long have you been in the Police?—23½ years.

36336. How long in the H Division?—A little over five years.

36337. Can you tell us how this district is divided into beats, and how the beats are allocated? (Plan handed to the witness.) You have seen that plan?—Yes.

36338. Does that accurately show in different colours the separate beats occupied by different constables on the night of the 21st August?—Yes, in that section.

36339. There are two sections marked there, one on each side of Brick Lane?—There is part of another here.

36340. There are all the sections in the neighbourhood of Brick Lane?—Yes.

36341. I think you have had prepared, have you not, a statement showing what each constable was doing that night with regard to any one of those sections?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Before you get to that I want to get upon the shorthand notes the proper description of this plan. What shall we call this plan? Shall we call it the beat plan?

36342. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is a sectional plan, is it not?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Then I will mark it "Sectional plan."

36343. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you please, Sir. Whose duty is it to post the constables on the different beats?—It is the duty of the sergeant when he parades the men of a night. First of all, I arrange the duties every month; I make out the roster; that is submitted to the superintendent for his approval, and the constables take that duty as far as possible for the whole of that month. But there are certain variations made in consequence of men being away and relieved from duty and that sort of thing, which the sergeant makes arrangements for.

36344. Are the men paraded before they go out on duty?—Oh, yes; they are paraded by the inspector.

36345. Are they then told on that particular night to which section they have got to go?—Yes, and they are posted to their beat before they go out.

36346. Does the sergeant go round with them and actually put each man on his beat?—He marches them on to their ground.

36347. Is any constable allowed to leave the beat to which he is posted during the time he is on it?—No, not unless he has some special reason for doing so.

36348. What is the duty of the sergeant with reference to the men on their beats?—His duty is to visit them as frequently as possible, and see that they are performing their duty properly.

36349. Take this particular district in the immediate neighbourhood of Brick Lane, I suppose it is the south side, the Osborn Place side. Take the portion between Vallance Road and Brick Lane. There are five beats shown there, are there not?—There are eleven beats shown there.

36350. But take the ones immediately round there. We will begin at Vallance Road. Do you know the beat that contains Underwood Street and Pelham Street?—Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) The first map is much clearer.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, it is much clearer for this immediate vicinity.

36351. We will just take the portion between Brick Lane and Vallance Road, and in the immediate vicinity of Osborn Place?—Yes.

36352. Take Osborn Place. I think that divides two beats, does it?—Yes.

36353. On the smaller sectional plan the one beat is marked red and the other is marked blue?—Yes.

(Chairman.) That other plan we have not in formally. That is why I was asking that the map should be identified on the shorthand note. What I have here now is a sectional plan, and that shows these beats.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, it does. Mr. Dickinson has very justly remarked that the smaller plan shows the immediate vicinity more plainly. Which would the Commission prefer to work upon?

(Chairman.) I do not think it matters for the moment, so long as we keep the two maps distinct. The reason is, the colouring of the beats is given differently on the two maps.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I should think, unless you desire to refer to the bigger one, it will be better to use the smaller one.

(Chairman.) Very well; we will call it the Spelman Street plan.

36354. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Now take the beat marked red. Do you see that?—Yes.

36355. Would that be one separate beat?—No, there are 2½ beats there.

36356. What beats would those be. Just identify them?—Beats No. 2 and No. 4.

(Chairman.) The beats do not correspond on these two plans.

(Mr. Eldon Banks.) No, and I will tell you why. We coloured them separately on the larger one, but we have coloured them on the smaller area (the plan in Spelman Street), with reference to the duty of a particular constable. On the night in question the policeman had been taking two beats, and the red represents beats No. 2 and No. 4. Therefore it is coloured red for your convenience to show where that particular policeman had to go that night. The other plan is marked showing each particular beat separately, without reference to what policeman was on it.

(Mr. Dickinson.) On one of the maps it is called No. 4, and on the other it is called No. 9, and not 2.

(Chairman.) No. 9 beat is marked green here, but it is all marked the same. No. 4 and No. 9 are marked in the same red colouring on the Spelman Street plan.

(Mr. Dickinson.) What is the number of the beat as between Hanbury Street and Spelman Street?

(The Witness.) That would be No. 9.

(Mr. Dickinson.) This portion coloured pink is No. 4 and No. 9.

36357. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, it is No. 4 and part of No. 9. Now take the blue, which is the next one. Is that beat 3 and part of beat 2?—Yes, that would be so.

36358. Now take the green one. That is beat 1, and the other half of beat 2?—Yes.

36359. Then we will take the brown one. Those are beats 10 and 11?—Yes.

36360. The uncoloured one on this plan is 8½ and 9?—That is right.

36361. Now who would be the sergeant or sergeants in charge of those beats on that night?—Sergeant 5—Sheedy.

36362. Do these beats constitute a section?—Yes.

36363. Would Sheedy's duty on that night be confined to this section, or would he have any duties elsewhere?—No, he would be confined to that section only.

36364. What time would he go on duty on that section that evening?—At 10 o'clock till 6 o'clock in the morning.

36365. I suppose the different constables might vary a little, but they would be the general hours—would they—from 10 o'clock till 6 o'clock?—Yes. There were several variations during the night I see on that section.

36366. But those would be the general hours of duty?—Yes, those would be the general hours of duty.

36367. Take Ashford, for instance. Does your return show what time he went on, and what time he went off?—It shows he went on at 10 o'clock, and went off at 5.

36368. Was there any reason for his coming off at 5?—Yes, he was relieved for the reading of the general orders. Once a month they attend for the reading of the general orders, and they have an hour off for it; they are relieved for an hour; and he went off for that.

36369. (Chairman.) Somebody else was put in his place?—Yes.

36370. (Mr. Dickinson.) At what hour is that—5 o'clock?—5 o'clock.

36371. (Mr. Eldon Banks.) So that he was actually on duty that night on these beats from 10 o'clock till 5 o'clock?—That is so.

36372. Would it be a breach of his duty and a breach of discipline to leave that beat except for some special reason?—Yes.

36373. Would that be a breach of duty and a breach of discipline for which, if he were found out, he would be punished?—Yes.

36374. Do you know how long Ashford has been in the force?—I think it is about seven years. I am not quite certain of that.

36375. He will tell us when he comes.

(Mr. Eldon Banks.) I do not know whether I am entitled to ask this question. I was going to ask the witness what Ashford's character has been.

(Chairman.) Yes; I think before this tribunal that is right.

36376. (Mr. Eldon Banks.) What has Ashford's character been during the time you have known him?—His character has been exemplary.

36377. Has he got a clean sheet?—Yes.

36378. Is he an efficient officer?—Yes.

36379. Is he married, do you know?—Yes.

36380. With regard to Sergeant Sheedy, what kind of an officer is he?—I have found him a very good officer. He has only been there a short time—I think only about nine months—but I have always found him perform his duties very satisfactorily.

36381. Do you mean he has only been in that division for how many months?—In that division for about nine months. That is right.

36382. Where did he come from, do you know?—He came from the C Division.

36383. Do you mean nine months now, or nine months in August he had been in your division?—No, I mean nine months now. I think it is about that time.

36384. So he had only been there quite a short time when this occurrence happened?—That would be all.

36385. Now as to Frost and Jarvis, who are men posted to beats in the immediate vicinity. What character do they bear as officers?—Very good.

(Chairman.) I suppose they would keep in this division, as we know they do in the C Division, what are called defaulters' sheets?

(Witness.) Yes.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

4 Mar. 1907.

(Chairman.) Perhaps, Mr. Bankes, you will let us have the sheets of all the officers whose names are mentioned?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes). Certainly. I have had a statement prepared showing the detailed duty of every man in both sections on either side of Brick Lane, and I will hand it to the Commissioners (handing).

(Chairman.) From where is this document taken? We do not raise a question of admissibility about it, but it may be important to know exactly where it comes from.

36386. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. I will ask the witness about it. You have a copy of that in front of you, have you not?—Yes.

36387. From what book would that return be taken?—This would be taken from the sergeant's state. That is a statement made of where the constables performed their duty during that night.

36388. (Chairman.) Is it not rather a statement of where they ought to have performed their duty?—That is so.

36389. You do not mean to say that that is a report drawn up afterwards, which affirms that these men did actually perform their duties on that night at this place?—This has been drawn up afterwards, but these statements are made out at the time.

36390. That is taken from a book which shows what the arrangements for the night were?—No; they are not entered in a book. These are the actual arrangements that were made that night.

36391. Is that the original?—Yes.

36392. In whose handwriting is it?—That is in the handwriting of the sergeant.

36393. What sergeant is that?—Sheedy.

36394. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you mean arrangement were made before they went on the beats?—Yes.

36395. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It only purports to be that. They are the arrangements made for that night, and, of course, he, going round, would see that the men were posted at the places where he told them to go?—Yes.

36396. And if he found a man off his beat, or doing anything wrong, would it be his duty to report it?—Certainly.

(Chairman.) You are going to call the sergeant.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) (To the witness.) Then you can look at it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That coincides with a fuller plan, containing the details of both sections.

36397. (Chairman.) Ashford's section appears to be entirely on the right-hand side of Brick Lane from the plan—on the east side?—That is so.

36398. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) In addition to the sergeant who patrols the section, are there any superior officers who go round during those hours of duty?—Yes, the Inspector goes round.

36399. Who would the Inspector be on this section, that night?—I think it was the station-sergeant that night who was out.

36400. What is his name?—Anderson.

36401. I think if you will look at the return there you will find that Duffin was on duty from ten till two?—Yes, he was the acting-Inspector.

36402. And Anderson from two till six?—That is right.

36403. What would their duties be exactly?—Their duties would be to visit the constables as far as they possibly could, and also to meet the sergeants on the various sections, and receive any reports from them they might have to give.

36404. Over what area would those men's duties extend?—That would be the whole of the sub-division.

36405. Does that include a considerable area?—Yes, it does—nearly three-quarters of a square mile.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

4 Mar. 1907.

36406. (Chairman.) Can you tell us about the sub-division of this Division H?—I only know with reference to my own.

36407. How many sub-divisions are there?—There are four in that division.

36408. What is the number of this sub-division that you are concerned with?—There is no number to it. It is called Commercial Street.

36409. Commercial Street sub-division?—Yes.

36410. (Mr. Eldon. Bankes.) Is it a very rough district?—Yes, it is.

36411. Did any complaint ever reach the station of anything that occurred on that night?—No.

36412. Was the first time that you had heard of any alleged wrong-doing the letter from the solicitors which you have heard read to the Commissioners?—Yes.

36413. (Chairman.) Was that the first you had heard, either directly or indirectly, of this affair?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Those are all the questions that occur to me.

36414. (Earl Russell.) A portion of Spelman Street would be in the area patrolled by Constable 207, Ashford?—Yes, a small portion of it—about 50 yards.

36415. And Hanbury Street also would be one of its boundaries?—Yes.

36416. Can you tell me how far it is from the corner of the green and the brown of Spelman Street down the rest of Spelman Street to Chicksand Street?—I should saw it was 70 or 80 yards—about that.

(Chairman.) The plan is drawn to scale, or it purports to be drawn to scale.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We will get it for you; we will scale it for you.

(Chairman.) What was the distance you asked for—from what point?

(Earl Russell.) From the edge of the brown-and-green beat in Spelman Street, down the rest of Spelman Street as far as Chicksand Street.

(Chairman.) As the crow flies, and not allowing for the bend in the road, it is somewhere about 150 yards, I think. It is a little longer if you make allowance for the bend in the road.

(Earl Russell.) Yes; it appears to be between 150 and 200 yards.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is about 150 yards if you take a straight line.

36417. (Earl Russell.) It would be rather less than that from the corner of Spelman Street and Chicksand Street to Brick Lane, or to that portion which includes Brick Lane?—Yes, I think it would.

(Chairman.) As nearly as possible, it would be 150 yards.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Just a little over.

36418. (Earl Russell.) Do you see in Spelman Street where it is marked P.C. 104, Masterman, on special duty?—Yes.

36419. Do you know whether that constable was fixed at one point there?—Yes, he was.

36420. Was he there during the whole of this period from 10 p.m. till 6 a.m.?—Yes.

36421. And he would not be allowed to move about. He was on fixed point, was he?—Yes.

36422. (Chairman.) It says here, "Special duty." That is not the same as fixed point duty?—There is a baker's shop there, and he was put on at this baker's shop in consequence of a strike, so he should have remained at that particular spot the whole of the night.

36423. (Earl Russell.) At any rate, within sight of that corner?—Yes.

36424. He had nothing to do with patrolling?—No; he was put specially on that baker's shop.

36425. Do you know what cases were brought into the police station that night from this district, if any, or what charges there were during these hours?—No, I could not tell you offhand.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We have not got the necessary books here, but they shall be here.

(Chairman.) Yes. Obviously they are books which should be here. It is very material for us to see what charges were taken that night, because, as we know from the other cases, it is the duty of a constable who makes a charge to leave the beat, and conduct the prisoner to the police station.

36426. (Earl Russell.) I may take it in that way. You cannot tell me whether Taylor, Jarvis, or Frost brought any charges to the station that night?—No, I could not tell you.

36427. Or Ashford?—Ashford did not, I know.

(Chairman.) And, of course, I should like to see the Occurrence Book for that night, for we also know, if the Regulations are complied with, that if a constable leaves his beat an explanation of his leaving his beat ought to be entered in the Occurrence Book.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

36428. (Earl Russell.) About leaving the beat, supposing Ashford, 207, was doing his duty properly, and was of opinion that these two people, Gamble and Ethel Griffiths, were disorderly, or were going to be disorderly, and he had not made up his mind whether he ought to take them into custody or not, would he be justified in following them off his beat?—No; not unless they were walking along quarrelling, or anything of that sort.

36429. That is exactly what I mean?—He would be justified.

36430. Supposing there had been loud talking and quarrelling, which looked as if it might develop into a row?—He would be justified in going a short distance.

36431. If there was a dispute going on in loud voices, and he met another constable, that would be sufficient explanation, would it?—Yes, that would be a sufficient explanation.

36432. Am I right in saying that another constable of the same rank would not be entitled to ask him for an explanation of why he was off his beat?—No, that is not usual.

36433. Sergeant Sheedy would be the proper person to ask for an explanation?—Yes.

36434. Would it be the duty of Jarvis or Frost, if they saw Ashford on their beat, to make a report of it?—No, it would not be their duty.

36435. Only Sergeant Sheedy?—It would be the constable's duty to make a report if he left his own beat, and also Sergeant Sheedy's.

36436. Are you well acquainted with the streets and the houses in this neighbourhood?—Yes.

36437. Do you recollect a witness, Mrs. Franks, who said that she looked out of a window in Spelman Street?—Yes.

36438. Are you acquainted with that house?—Yes, I know just about where it is situated. It is No. 28, I think.

36439. Is it correct to say it is about three doors from the corner?—It would be about that.

36440. Looking out of the window there, I suppose you could see that end of Spelman Street and just a portion of Chicksand Street where Spelman Street runs into it?—Yes; Spelman Street crosses Chicksand Street.

36441. Do you know of your own knowledge whether Mr. Rubenstein lives opposite?—I do not know of my own knowledge, but I believe he does.

36442. We have the position of the Bell public-house. That is at the corner of Brick Lane and Osborn Place?—Yes.

36443. Where is the common lodging-house that has been spoken of in Osborn Place?—It joins it.

36444. On the same side?—Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I think, Lord Russell, we understand all about this.

(Earl Russell.) Very well. I do not know whether you have succeeded in identifying the schools.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Yes.

(Earl Russell.) You spoke about Station-sergeant Anderson, who would be on duty from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m. He would be out patrolling from two to six?—He was in charge of the station from ten till two.

36445. But from two to 6 a.m. it would be his duty to inspect this very large sub-division?—Yes.

36446. It is nearly three-quarters of a square mile?—It is nearly three-quarters of a square mile.

36447. I suppose it would occupy nearly all his time to get round once, would it not?—Yes.

36448. What was the area that Sheedy covered? Is it only what is on this plan?—Yes. That is rather a smaller section than the others. It would not be quite a quarter, I think.

36449. Do you know how often the sergeant ought to visit the constables on their beats during the eight hours?—Yes; he ought to visit the constables at least once every two hours.

36450. Altogether, three or four times?—About four or five times during the night.

36451. He takes them out and posts them there, and then goes round to visit them?—He posts them before they go out. The men are all posted before they leave the station.

36452. But he posts them in the street, does he not?

(Chairman.) He marches them?—He marches them.

36453. As he comes to the corner of the beat he drops one, and then goes on again?—Yes.

36454. (Earl Russell.) Is there any report made by the sergeant who does that as to the number of times he has inspected them during the night?—No.

36455. He does not make any written report. Supposing he found a man off his beat, he would report that, I suppose?—He should do. He should report a man for being off his beat.

36456. If he found a man off his beat, taking a charge to the station, would he report that?—That would be recorded on the sergeant's statement—that he had been absent from his beat for a certain time.

36457. I think you told us that the sergeant's statement was made up before the men went out?—He makes it out before he goes off duty.

36458. May I have a look at the original? (The document was handed to the learned Counsel.) This document is made up by Sergeant Sheedy?—Before he goes off duty in the morning.

36459. And this would report what he found that night?—That is the report of the state of his section. That should show all the variations that occurred on his section on that night.

36460. This is in Sergeant Sheedy's own handwriting?—Yes.

36461. And it refers only to that one night?—To that one night.

36462. Can you tell me why the beats in it under the "Remarks" column are stated in this way:—"Beats from 10 till 12 night," then "from 12 to 1 a.m.," and then "from 1 to 2 a.m."?—Yes. Men are taken off there for other duties. I think one man was put on a point for a short time, and that shows the man that covered his beat while he was away.

36463. "From 2 to 5 a.m., as posted"?—Yes.

36464. That refers to the earlier part of the sheet, does it?—Yes.

36465. That is the only part of the report that is made out by Sergeant Sheedy, is it? The rest of the paper you have put in is made out by a different sergeant?—No; he makes the whole of this out.

36466. But you put more in the first report. You put in his section also?—That is made out by another sergeant.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

4 Mar. 1906.

36467. If a sergeant saw a man on the ground, and a policeman appeared to have pushed him down, would it be his duty to report that, if the man were allowed to get up and go off?—Certainly.

36468. He ought to report that he had done that?—Yes; if he knew it, certainly he ought to report it.

36469. And that the man had been allowed to go away without being charged?—I understood you to mean if he saw the constable push the man down.

36470. Yes, that is it?—Yes, certainly he should report it; he should report the constable for doing it.

36471. The constable would then have to make a report, I suppose, at once?—Yes.

36472. If the sergeant thought the man had been much injured, and allowed him to go away——?—If he saw it, he should report it.

36473. He would be guilty of an offence if he did not report it?—Yes.

36474. He is not allowed to exercise his own judgment?—No.

36475. So that if it is true that Sergeant Sheedy saw this man on the ground, and let him get up and go away, and thought no more would be heard of it, he would have committed an offence?—Yes, if he knew that the reason of his being on the ground was an assault committed by the constable, certainly.

36476. I mean whether the assault was a serious one or not. Even if he thought it was not serious, he would still have done wrong?—Yes, he would still have done wrong in not reporting it.

36477. Sergeant Sheedy had only been two or three months in this division when that happened?—At that time, to the best of my recollection; I am not quite certain of the date he came to the division, but I think it is about nine months.

36478. Have you in your experience known a sergeant ever to report an ordinary constable for assaulting a member of the public?—Yes.

36479. You have known them to make reports of that sort?—Yes.

36480. Often?—No.

36481. Tell me about these lodging-houses. Would there be many people in the street as late as between two and three o'clock?—Yes. In that district you will find generally several people in the streets.

36482. In Brick Lane?—Yes.

36483. And not so many in the smaller streets off Brick Lane?—No; there may have been a number there, and there may not have been many, but there are usually people about these streets all night.

36484. And a certain amount of loud talking late at night?—There are a good many quarrels in that immediate district.

36485. Do you have a number of cases of drunk and disorderly in that district?—Yes.

36486. So that the police are kept very busy?—Yes, it is very busy about there.

Dr. Robert Stanton Woods, sworn.

36487. (Chairman.) What are your qualifications?—M.B., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P.

36488. In August last you were, and I think at the present time are, house surgeon at the London Hospital?—No. In August last I was house physician, but at the present moment I am not. I am receiving-room officer.

36489. Do you remember the 21st August last being called up?—Yes.

36490. About what time was it that you were called?—That I cannot say. It was between five and six o'clock; that is all I know.

36491. What were you summoned for?—To see a patient in the receiving-room.

36492. You were sleeping on the premises?—Yes.

Dr. R. S. Woods.

36493. And you were summoned to see a patient in the receiving-room between five and six in the morning?—Yes.

36494. Do you see him in court now?—I could not swear to him.

36495. Let Gamble stand forward. Do you recognise that man?—Not to swear to. I may say I only saw him for about half an hour.

36496. In the receiving-room?—Yes; and then treated him in the wards until the house surgeon could see him.

36497. It was not your duty as house physician to attend to a surgical case?—No. The arrangement is that in routine we have what are called nights up. It was my night up, and this man was sufficiently bad to take in, so I admitted him, and I went up to see the house surgeon, and asked him if he would like me to treat him for the time being.

Dr. B. S. Woods.

4 Mar. 1907.

36498. Was it your duty to attend in the receiving-room in regard to a surgical case?—He was not attended in the receiving-room. He was admitted directly.

36499. It was your duty, if called upon, to go into the receiving-room and examine anybody who was there?—It was my duty to go into the receiving-room; it was my night up.

36500. What did you do when you got to the receiving-room?—I examined the patient, and admitted him at once to the wards.

36501. Then you went and saw the house surgeon?—Yes; and described the case to him, and asked him if he would like me to treat him for the time being till he got up, and he said, "Yes."

36502. Did you attend to the patient?—Yes.

36503. Was anything said about his name? Would that come under your notice?—No.

36504. Was there a wound, or what did you notice about him?—There was a large blood swelling between the buttocks and the perineum.

36505. What did you do?—I gave him some morphia, and prescribed a cooling lotion for the perineum, and passed a catheter.

36506. Did you report to the house surgeon?—Yes.

36507. And that was the only time at which you attended Gamble?—That was all.

36508. Was he conscious when you first saw him?—Yes.

36509. And conscious in the ward?—Yes.

36510. Did you have any conversation with him?—In the receiving-room I had.

36511. What did he tell you in the receiving-room?—He said that during the night he had been in company with a woman; that a police-constable had come up, and, to the best of my recollection, there had been some dispute with regard to the woman, and the police-constable had knocked him down and kicked him. That is all I remember.

36512. You had no conversation with him afterwards?—Nothing further.

36513. (Mr. Dickinson.) Were there other injuries on him than that one you have mentioned?—No, none, as far as I saw.

36514. You examined him, I suppose?—Not all over.

36515. You examined that part?—Yes.

36516. You would have known whether there were other kicks?—I should have known whether there were any other kicks on that part of the body, but I certainly did not examine him all over.

36517. You say there were not?—There were no other kicks on that part of the body, so far as I saw.

36518. Was it consistent with a kick?—Quite.

36519. Could it have been caused, in your opinion, in any other way?—It could have been caused by any extreme violence in that region.

36520. Not by falling down?—In the street do you mean?

36521. Yes?—No; I do not think so.

36522. (Mr. Whitmore.) As supplementary to that last question, could it have been caused by a fall on some sharp point?—I take it if he had fallen sufficiently violently on a sharp point there would have been some abrasion of the skin.

36523. (Chairman.) There was, in fact, no abrasion?—No.

36524. (Mr. Whitmore.) There was no other mark of violence except in this particular place?—I did not examine the whole body.

36525. He did not complain of any?—No.

36526. (Mr. Dickinson.) Dr. Billinghurst was asked about bruises on the buttocks, and he said yes, there were several bruises?—All I can say is that I do not remember having seen any.

(Chairman.) Dr. Billinghurst undoubtedly said that. Have you any question to ask, Mr. Bankes?

36527. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If you please, Sir. Have you told us all you remember that the man said to you?—I have.

36528. You do not remember anything else he said?—No.

36529. Did he say anything about when it had occurred, do you remember?—No. I do not say he did not say it, but I do not remember.

36530. Do you remember whether there were any marks of blood about his face?—I cannot remember.

36531. (Chairman.) How long after he came to the hospital was it before you saw him?—I do not know. I know I saw him between five and six, but, as a matter of fact, I went down to the porter's lodge at the gate, where he sometimes takes the names. It is not an official list. He had not got this man's name, but he had an entry of a man who had been admitted with injuries at a quarter to five that morning. The time when he was admitted to the wards only means the time when the admission ticket is filled into the book, but, as a matter of fact, in a serious case, of course, the patient does not wait for the admission ticket to be entered into the book, but is sent to the wards at once.

36532. Was that done in this case?—I do not remember. That is the duty of the nurse in the receiving-room. I sent him to the wards, and the porters took him to the wards.

36533. You saw him in the receiving-room between five and six o'clock. That you are clear about?—Yes.

36534. We have been told that there was a man admitted at 4.45, and there seems very little doubt that that man was Gamble. How long was it after you had seen him in the receiving-room that you saw the house surgeon? Did you go at once to the house surgeon?—At once.

36535. Within a few minutes?—Yes; he was sleeping on the premises.

36536. Then the conversation with the house surgeon cannot have been long?—No, it was not.

36537. Only a few minutes?—Only a few minutes.

36538. Did you go back at once to the receiving-room?—No. The patient was in the ward. I went back to the ward at once.

36539. Only a very few minutes can have elapsed from the time you first saw him and said he had better be received and taken to the ward, and your finding him in the ward?—A very short time.

36540. (Mr. Whitmore.) Could you form any opinion as to what length of time had elapsed between the time when the injury was inflicted and the time when you examined him—I mean approximately?—I could not say beyond this—that I should say it was at least half an hour.

36541. (Chairman.) You judged that from the swelling of the perineum?—From the extent of the swelling.

36542. It must have been more than half an hour before you saw him?—In my opinion, it must have been at least half an hour.

36543. (Mr. Whitmore.) Could you put the other duration of time at the maximum?—No, I could not, I am afraid.

36544. (Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose you did not see this man after that occasion?—Not after that morning.

36545. You are sure that he told you a kick had been inflicted by a policeman?—I am quite sure.

36546. Can you give me any reason why you remember that?—Yes; it was a very bad injury, and was quite an unusual story. I had never heard the same story in the receiving-room before.

36547. (Chairman.) You say that you noticed no bruises on the buttocks. I suppose it takes some time for a bruise to develop, does it not, after a kick or other means by which it is caused?—Yes.

36548. The house surgeon did not see him till some time had elapsed after your attendance on him—not until 10 o'clock?—No; not until 10 o'clock, at least.

(Earl Russell.) May I ask a question, Sir?

(Chairman.) Certainly.

36549. (Earl Russell.) Did you notice his condition as to sobriety? Do you remember that, or not?—To the best of my recollection, he was sober.

36550. Your immediate concern was to relieve the pain and relieve the swelling?—No, not to relieve the swelling; to relieve the pain.

36551. And to draw off the water?—Yes.

36552. Mr. Whitmore asked you a question I was wishing to ask you, about the length of time that had elapsed. Can you give any indication of the maximum time? Could it have been as much as two hours before you saw him that the injuries were inflicted?—It could.

36553. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Can you tell me at what stage in the hospital routine the man is asked his name?—Just before admission. He comes into the receiving-room, and is seen first. He is not asked his name then; but if he is to be admitted to the wards he is always asked his name at that stage just before he is admitted to the wards.

Dr. R. S. Woods.

4 Mar. 1907.

36554. He would, then, be asked his name very shortly after you saw him?—Yes.

36555. I suppose you saw him, gave an order for his admission to the ward, and then went yourself to the house surgeon?—Yes.

36556. He must have been asked his name within a minute or two of your going up to the house surgeon?—I should say, at the outside, within five minutes.

36557. Was he in a condition then that he understood what was said to him, and in a position to give his name, from what you saw?—Mentally he was quite clear, as far as I could see.

36558. You were asked with reference to the time that might elapse before bruises would appear. Supposing the man had been violently kicked on the buttocks, say, at one o'clock or at half-past one, would you expect the bruise to appear by the time you saw him, at five?—Yes.

Sub-Divisional Inspector JOSEPH HEWISON, recalled.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We have the Charge Book and the Occurrence Book here now, Sir. (Books produced, and handed in.)

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

36559. (Chairman.) Before I look at those books I want to know a little more about your position and the organisation of this division. You are the Sub-Divisional Inspector?—Yes.

36560. How many Divisional Inspectors are there in the H Division?—Twenty-five Divisional Inspectors, I think, and four Sub-Divisional Inspectors.

36561. Under what Superintendent are you?—Superintendent Malvaney.

36562. Who is the Chief Constable over the district?—The Chief Constable is Captain Dean.

36563. Who was the Inspector in charge on the 21st August from ten to six?—There was no Inspector out that night.

36563-4. Who was the Inspector in charge of the police station?—There was no Inspector; there was a station sergeant.

36565. He was acting as Inspector?—Yes.

36566. What is his name?—Anderson. He always is acting as Inspector.

(Earl Russell.) That is only until 2 a.m.

36567. (Chairman.) That was until 2 a.m., I understand?—Yes.

36568. Who then took his place?—Sergeant Duffin.

36569. Then I understand it was Sergeant Sheedy, 5 H, who was in charge of Section 2?—Yes.

36570. When were the men who were assigned to that section paraded on that night?—At a quarter to ten.

36571. That is the usual time?—That is the usual time.

36572. And who was the sergeant who paraded them or inspected them on parade?—The station sergeant.

36573. Do you mean Sergeant Anderson?—Yes.

36574. Sergeant Anderson inspected the men intended for Section 2 alone, or all the men?—He inspected the whole of the men. He inspected the whole of the relief before it went out, and the whole of the night duty.

36575. Not only Section 1?—No; he inspected the whole of the four sections before they went out on duty.

36576. That would be a quarter to ten?—Yes.

36577. What does that inspection consist of?—He takes the strength of the men from their sergeants, and he inspects the relief to see that they are all sober and clean, and that they have been properly posted to their duties.

36578. Does the section sergeant simply by word of mouth tell the Inspector what men are consigned to each beat in each section?—Yes. They give in the strength of the various sections, and then they are equalled. Possibly there may be more men off one section than on another, and the men are equalled and then the sergeant of that particular section posts the men with their particular beat or beats for the night.

36579. But when the men are on parade—that is to say, when they are in the place in which they are to be paraded at a quarter to ten—I understand that all the constables are in attendance?—Yes.

36580. And the four sergeants would be in attendance?—Yes.

36581. Then the Inspector comes from his office, and he goes through what I suppose is called an inspection and parade, or some term of that kind?—Yes.

36582. Does each sergeant hand him a list of the men under him?—Not where they are posted.

36583. Does he hand him a list of the men who are there on that particular night duty?—Yes.

36584. In writing?—It is entered in a book. It is put on a slate first, and then it is entered in the Duty Book. The numbers are not entered, but the number of men is entered, and all the variations. When a man is on leave or sick his number is given in, and the actual number of men present. Say there were 10 on a section, the number "10" would be put in—that is 10 men, not the actual number.

36585. There is a kind of roll call at each station?—Yes.

36586. And the names of the men are entered on the roll in respect of the different sections?—Yes.

36587. Take Section 2 here. On the right the name of the sergeant would appear, and the names of the men who were available or who were under him for that section?—For that month.

36588. That is done every month?—Yes.

36589. There is a kind of roll call every month?—No; the dates are altered. The men on night duty change over to day duty, and the men on day duty change over to night duty. The whole of the duties are altered.

36590. I quite understand; but it is your duty to make the roll at the end of each month?—Yes.

36591. Is the roll made up in writing?—Oh, yes.

36592-3. A complete roll for the month of the men for the four sections?—Yes.

36594. Have you got the roll for the month of August here?—I have not got it, but it is at the station.

36595. When you talk of the month, is that done on the first of every month—does it go by the calendar month?—No; the duties change on the first Monday in each month. For instance, they change to-day.

36596. The month you go by is the calendar month?—Yes.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison

4 Mar. 1907.

36597. But, taking the month of August, you make the changes on the first Monday in August?—Yes.

36598. Can you get me the full roll for last August?—I am afraid I could not now. They are not kept. They are all entered in a book, and I could get you the book.

36599. Are they copied into a book?—Yes.

36600. Then, as I understand, on Monday, the 4th August, you made up a roll showing the name of the sergeant for each section for the month?—The number.

36601. Do you mean the police numbers, or so many men?—The police numbers.

36602. In these documents you enter the men by their numbers?—Yes.

36603. The number of the sergeant is given?—Yes.

36604. And then the number of men assigned to him for the section?—Yes, the whole of the number assigned to his section.

36605. Showing which men are to be on night duty and which on day duty?—That is correct.

36606. They would be entered some time after the first Monday in August, in a book?—Yes.

36607. What do you call that book?—We call it the Details of Constables' Duty.

36608. I should like to see that book for August.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It shall be got, Sir.

36609. (Chairman.) Then the result of that organisation is that there is a sergeant posted in a particular section?—Yes.

36610. And it was Sergeant 5 H who was posted on Section No. 2 for this month of August?—Yes.

36611. Then Sergeant Anderson, for instance, on the night of the 21st August, at quarter to ten would know from this book all the men who were under the charge of Sergeant 5 H?—Yes.

36612. Are all those men paraded at a quarter to ten?—They are all paraded except those who are on leave or who have been at Sessions, or anything of that kind.

36613. They all have to attend at a quarter to ten, even though they have done duty during the day?—Oh, no, they would not be required to attend at a quarter to ten. If they have completed their tour of duty they would not parade again at ten o'clock.

36614. The only men on section 2 who would be paraded at a quarter to ten would be men who had not done their turn of duty?—Yes, that is correct.

36615. And men who are on leave would not be expected to attend?—No.

36616. Who gives the leave?—I do. That is also arranged by a roster that is made out.

36617. And the names of the men on leave would be entered in a book, I take it?—Yes, they would be entered in the duty book.

36618. In the same book?—No, not in the same book, in another book—the duty book.

36619. How often is the duty book changed. Is a new duty book made up every month?—No, it is used until it is used up. There is a page used every day.

36620. The duty book would show all the constables who are on leave on the 20th August?—Yes.

36621. And on the 21st August?—Yes.

36622. At a quarter to ten on the 20th August you would expect in the parade room to have Sergeant 5 H and all the men not on leave or who had not done a turn of duty who belonged to that section 2?—Yes.

36623. They would all be there at a quarter to ten?—Yes.

36624. When Sergeant Anderson, who was the acting Inspector, came down to parade the men what actually took place. What ought he to have done?—He inspected the reliefs.

36625. You say he inspected the reliefs; but what do you mean by "reliefs"?—He inspects the men who are on parade.

36626. Who are to go on duty?—Yes, and he reads the orders and informations to them—persons wanted, persons missing, and that kind of thing.

36627. You have used the words "He inspects them." What do you mean by "inspects them"?—He walks round to see that they are all sober and in proper condition to go out on duty.

36628. That is to say, his duty is to do actually what the word "inspect" means in ordinary language?—Yes.

36629. When he has done that he reads the various regulations and gives them some information that may be useful on matters as to which information is required?—Yes.

36630. Does the sergeant hand him then a list in writing of the number of men he has got there belonging to section 2?—He gives it to him on the slate; it is first put down on the slate.

36631. The sergeant puts down the names of all the men?—The numbers.

36632. The numbers of all the men who are in attendance and who are to go out on duty?—He puts down the actual numbers. Supposing there are eleven men on the section. If three of those are on leave he would give in the actual number of those men who are away, and he would say he had seven present. He gives in the total number of the men he has got present there.

36633. That is all he gives—the total number?—Yes.

36634. And the Inspector does not ask anything as to what beats the men are going on?—He asks the sergeant if he has posted them all. They are all posted on the beats. There is no list handed in of the men who have actually gone on the beats till the morning.

36635. Then all the Inspector does is to say "Sergeant, have you posted the men on their beats"?—Yes.

36636. And the sergeant answers "Yes," if he has done so?—It should be done in the Inspector's presence.

36637. How does he post them—by calling one out and saying "Your beat is No. 1, or No. 2"?—Yes, that is right. He calls out the numbers. For instance, "435, you take No. 2 beat," and so on.

36638. Does he keep no note of what he says?—Oh, yes, he keeps a note for his own purpose, to make his slate up.

36639. A note in writing?—Yes.

36640. Then the sergeant has at a quarter to ten a note in writing of the beats on which he posts the men?—Just a rough note of his own, that is all.

36641. A rough note of his own, I daresay, but he has it, in fact?—Oh, yes; he must do so, or else he would not know where his men had gone.

36642. Where does he make that note—in a book, or on a loose sheet of paper?—On a loose sheet of paper.

36643. So that, if a constable at 3 o'clock is found by a sergeant in a particular street, what is the evidence, supposing a dispute takes place between them, and the sergeant says "Constable, you are off your beat." "No, I am not, Sir; you told me No. 2 beat, and I am on No. 2 beat." "No," says the sergeant, "I said No. 4 beat." How is a dispute of that kind dealt with?—A dispute of that kind may arise, but it is very unlikely. I never heard of it in my experience arising. The men are distinctly posted to their beats. There may be a mistake of that kind arise. It is possible.

36644. Take this very beat. I see here "Beat 1, 2, and 3, 110; beat 1 x ½ of 2." Supposing at a quarter to ten at night a sergeant came up to you and said "Your beat is 1 x ½ of 2," and then quite hurriedly he says to another man "Your beat is 4 x 9"?—If a mistake of that kind did arise it could not go on for any length of time, because the sergeant marches the whole of these men to their beats, so that a mistake of that kind could not very well arise, or else there would be two men going on one beat.

36645. That might be so, but supposing the men should change their beats afterwards, or some irregularity took place, what check has the sergeant on it?—He has got his own check. He posted the men, and it would be his duty, if he found another man off a beat and on another one——

36646. It would be only his recollection still. He would say "I left you on beat No. 2," and the man would say "No, you did not"?—I do not think that could arise. The sergeant marches the men right on to their section, and if by accident that did happen, that he misunderstood him——

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

4 Mar. 1907

36647. We will take it so, that he marches them off to the various beats and leaves them there, and we will suppose that he recollects where he left them very well; but still it does not follow that in the act of posting them after what had taken place at a quarter to ten he might not make a mistake and drop one man at the wrong beat unintentionally, and another man at another beat?—A mistake of that kind could arise.

36648. And there is no documentary evidence by which it could be checked?—There would not be in that case.

36649. Does he keep the rough note?—Then he makes his slate out. He is never required to produce it. This is a detail of the duties of his section. This is the only note that is made.

36650. But that note is made after six in the morning?—Yes, he could not very well make it up at ten at night, because he would not know possibly what variations he might have to make during the night.

36651. I quite agree, but you could make up a document at a quarter to ten, and preserve the document, which would show what the intention was at a quarter to ten?—That could be done. The daily poster is always complied with as far as possible. If a man is posted to a beat for a month he goes there. It is only where men are on leave, and that kind of thing, that variations are made.

36652. Now you are telling me something new. Do you mean at the beginning of the month a man is not only posted on the section, but he is posted to a beat as well?—Yes, every man in the sub-division has his duties detailed to him at the beginning of the month.

36653. By whom?—By me.

36654. That is exactly what you did not tell me?—I thought you understood when I told you I made out a roster.

36655. I understood you to say that it was the sergeant's work to say what each man in the section should do on any particular night?—He would make the variations. For instance, he might cover a man's ground who was away. He might detail another man to take it, but I arrange the whole of the details of the sub-division once a month, and detail the exact place where every man should go.

36656. Is there any book showing that?—Yes, the "Details of Constables' Duty Book."

36657. I can now see some reason for your not having a list written out at a quarter to ten, because unless some variation is made by the sergeant you know exactly which beat a particular constable is on?—Yes.

36658. You would find him out from your monthly roster?—Yes, we would find out any variation.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am told it is not a note made out, but it is hung up in the charge room, so that every constable can see it.

36659. (Chairman.) Is that so?—Yes, it is hung up there for the information of all.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I understand that this map we have got, with the names of the constables on, represents the beat which these men ought to be on every day in that month.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Not quite, Sir.

(Chairman.) That is what I was leading up to.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Not on the smaller one, because, if you remember, there is more than one beat there. For instance, on this night there must have been some men off duty or on leave, and consequently this man would be called upon to take two beats instead of one. The other map on which there are individual beats, I expect, you will find corresponds to the roster.

36660. (To the Witness.) There would be men posted to each one of those beats?—Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) That part of it we have not got.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It shall be here, but we did not know that you wanted it.

(Mr. Dickinson.) It is important.

36661. (Chairman.) When I look at the smaller map I see on the same beat No. 11, P.C. 207, Ashford. Would the fact that Ashford had been told off for the month to No. 11 beat appear in this roster?—Yes; or No. 10. I would not be certain which of those two beats it would be.

36662. I am not asking you to pledge your recollection, but I am trying to discover the system.

36663. (Mr. Dickinson.) It would be one of the two?—I believe so, but it would not be necessarily.

36664. (Chairman.) Not necessarily, because I understand if someone from the section is on leave the sergeant might say to Ashford, "You go on this other duty to-night"?—Quite so. That is exactly what does happen. He is responsible that no part of the ground is left unprotected.

36665. So sometimes you are short-handed?—Yes, sometimes we are.

36666. For instance, I notice with regard to the second section, in what you call the sergeant's state, there are only 7 constables out on that night?—That is very likely. There are the men away on annual leave during the summer, and that makes us rather short.

36667. But there are 11 beats?—Yes, and 11 men are posted to those beats at the commencement of the month.

36668. And the intention, I gather, is that there should be a man for each beat?—There should be one.

36669. Therefore it does come to what I was saying, that on this night of the 21st August you were working short-handed on that section if you only had 7 men when you ought to have had 11?—Yes. I suppose they were all short-handed. The other sections would be similar.

36670. Can you get us the duty book?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you want it now, Sir?

(Chairman.) Yes. How long would it take to get the duty book?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We should have to go to Commercial Street.

36671. (Mr. Dickinson.) Cannot you get by telephone or otherwise the information as to these beats? As I understand there is a rota in the station for the whole month?—Yes.

36672. On that rota there is a particular man's name put on beat No. 9 or beat No. 10?—His number.

36673. You have information in the office that can tell us exactly what beats a man was on every night in that section every day of that month?—Oh, yes; we can get that from the sergeant's states.

36674. You also have a statement which shows you the men who ought to be on a beat?—Yes.

36675. That is in the detail book?—Yes.

36676 (Mr. Whitmore.) And the roster is hung up in the charge room?—Yes, for the information of anybody.

36677. Anybody can see who was the constable who, ordinarily speaking, should be on duty on the particular night during that month?—Yes; it is hung up there for the information of all the men concerned.

36678. (Chairman.) I was asking you certain questions with a view to knowing what ought to have been done and what your system was rather than asking you particular details as to this night. We have got up to this point, at any rate, that at a quarter to ten, at the parade, the sergeant gives the final instructions to the men under him as to where they are to be posted for that night?—Yes.

36679. And of that he keeps a rough note?—Yes.

36680. Having made the rough note he marches all of them off, and deposits each man at a convenient point on his beat, one after the other?—That is right.

36681. When there is only one man left he leaves him on his beat?—Yes.

36682. He has done what is called posting his men?—Yes.

36683. What is the sergeant's duty after that?—His duty is to visit them as frequently as possible, and see that they are paying attention to their duty, and take any report from them that they may have to give him.

36684. He is also in general charge of the section?—That is so.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

4 Mar. 1907.

36685. He is not supposed to go back to the station?—No, he is supposed to remain there till he marches his section in again in the morning.

36686. He, like the rest of them, is on duty until 6 a.m.?—Yes.

36687. He walks in whatever way he likes as long as he does not leave the section?—Yes.

36688. It would be a breach of duty for a sergeant to leave his section just as it is a breach of duty on the part of a constable to leave his beat?—Quite so.

36689. Of course, he goes to the assistance of a constable if he hears a whistle from any constable?—Oh, yes.

36690. And he, himself, I suppose, may arrest anybody who is drunk and disorderly, for instance?—Oh, yes.

36691. He has all the rights, and is charged with all the duties of an ordinary constable?—Yes.

36692. Except that he is not confined to a particular beat?—No; he is confined to a particular section.

36693. And among other things it is his duty to keep on visiting the other beats in the section in order to see whether the constables are on duty?—Quite right.

36694. Where they ought to be?—Yes.

36695. Then, I suppose, if there is any breach of regulations or breach of duty on the part of a constable, it is his duty to report it afterwards?—Yes.

36696. The night having passed, and 6 o'clock having come, does this sergeant go back to the station?—He remains there until the day duty relief comes out, and then he marches his section back in a similar way.

36697. He picks them up, and they go back on the march?—Yes.

36698. Formally?—Yes.

36699. Then you have a regular system of relief much on the military plan?—Yes, it is much on the military plan.

36700. When the sergeant gets back with his men to the station he dismisses them, I suppose?—No; the Inspector in charge of the station dismisses them.

36701. Then the acting sergeant, Anderson in this case, would inspect again at 6 o'clock?—Yes, and dismiss the men.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Not Anderson.

36702. (Chairman.) The man who relieved Anderson—Duffin in that case it would have been?—No, it would have been the Inspector who came on at 6 in the morning.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think it would be Duffin who saw them out.

36703. (Chairman.) I should have thought that Duffin would have done it?—No, it would be the Inspector who dismissed the men at 6 o'clock. If there was an Inspector out he would dismiss the men. In this case Sergeant Anderson was out, and he should have dismissed them. He is senior officer.

(Chairman.) But we have it that he went off duty at 2, and that Sergeant Duffin took his place.

36704. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He left the station and went out?—He came in again at 6 o'clock.

36705. (Chairman.) Then Sergeant Anderson would have dismissed the men?—He would have dismissed them at 6 o'clock.

36706. He was acting Inspector?—He took the place of the Inspector. He is permanently employed as such.

36707. He has not the grade of Inspector, but he acts as such?—Yes.

36708. When the Inspector has dismissed the sergeants and their men, the sergeants have to make up their states?—The sergeants make up their states.

36709. And the state of Sergeant Sheedy for the morning of the 21st August has been put in. That is the one, the original of which you have?—Yes.

36710. What check is there on the accuracy of the sergeant's state when he says, for instance, "1, 2, and 3, P.C. 110, 10 p.m. to 1 a.m."—that is three hours that P.C. 110 was on beats 1, 2, and 3. What check is there on the sergeant's statement?—There would be no check on that.

36711. Is he supposed to keep a note in any book of a thing of that kind?—No, there is no record kept except this. This is the official record.

36712. Does the sergeant make it up from his own memory of the events of the night?—Yes, from the rough notes that he may make.

36713. He may make notes?—Oh, yes.

36714. For instance, the duty of P.C. 110 is not by any means easy to remember?—No. He would make a note of any variation he made for the purpose of making up his state.

36715. "1, 2, and 3, P.C. 110, 10 p.m. to 1 a.m." Then "1 x ½ of 2; P.C. 110, 1 a.m. to 5 a.m." Then there is something I do not quite understand: "1—10; ½.2, P.C. 110, 5 a.m. to 6 a.m."?—Yes.

36716. Is it supposed that a sergeant fills in information of that kind at 6 o'clock in the morning from his memory only?—He can make a rough note of his own.

36717. Is he not directed to enter these variations in some note book?—No, there is no note book kept for that purpose.

36718. It seems to me it is rather easy to make a mistake, is it not?—It is easy to make a mistake, but the way the duty is performed I have never known one to be made.

36719. The next is: "110, beats 1, 2, and 3, 10 p.m. to 1 a.m."?—Probably he would make a rough note of that, and put that in his state when he went off in the morning.

36720. Then "200, beats 3 x ½ of 2, 1 a.m. to 6 a.m."?—Yes.

36721. There are five variations in regard to three beats on this very night?—Yes; that often happens.

36722. I am only bringing the matter to your notice in order to see whether there is any way of checking the sergeant's recollection of these things?—No, there is no way of checking them.

36723. So that, if somebody says that Constable 110 was on beat 9 at 10.30, there is nothing to check his statement?—No, we should have to rely on this record.

36724. There is nothing at all to check this record except the sergeant's recollection?—Unless the sergeant carries a book with him for that purpose I fail to see how any other arrangements can be made.

36725. I am putting to you that if anything unpleasant happens during the night, it is not difficult for the sergeant to make up such a state as might be more dangerous to one version of the transaction than another version?—Of course, if he did that, and it was discovered, he would have to put up with the consequences.

36726. I know; but it is easy to discover it?—It might be, from the patrolling officer visiting the man; he would know where he saw him. He probably would not have a recollection of that some days afterwards, because there is no record kept.

36727. That is exactly what I am putting to you?—We should have to rely on the state. With regard to that, I have not to my knowledge discovered one wrong—not as regards the actual posting of the men.

36728. What does an entry like this mean: "Off at 5 a.m. for monthly orders"?—He is granted one hour off. Once a month the whole of the night duty men have to assemble for one hour for instruction. Once a month the whole of the night duty men have to assemble at the station for one hour, and an Inspector instructs them in their duties and the regulations of the Service.

36729. That means, does it, that a man goes back to the station an hour earlier than he otherwise would?—Yes; he goes generally on Wednesday, and when the men go there they remain there, and they receive one hour's instruction from one of the Inspectors.

36730. That happened to P.C. 207 on this very night?—Yes.

36731. After he had been told by the sergeant to go to the station at 5 o'clock?—Yes. For that hour he was engaged at the station he would have that time off some time during the month, as he could be spared.

36732. It is entered here "Off duty at 5 a.m. for monthly orders"?—Yes.

36733. The sergeant probably saw P.C. 207 at 5 o'clock, and told him he could go to the station for monthly orders?—He would probably tell him that beforehand. He has to ask the Inspector.

36734. I suppose that explains something about P.C. 202. I see that from 12 midnight to 5 a.m. P.C. 202 was taking beats 6, 11, and ½ of 9. He was put on to beat 11 because P.C. 207 went off?—Yes.

36735. Is that the meaning of that?—That is the meaning of that.

36736. (Mr. Dickinson.) This is the one with the details?—Yes, that is the one made up from it; it contains the variations in more precise form.

36737. (Chairman.) "Visit to H." I do not quite follow this?—That is a visit to the Section House. The officer in charge of the station during his tour of duty has to visit the Section House to see that everything is quite in proper order.

36738. What is the Section House?—That is where the single men live.

36739. Does that apply to this page?—No. Those are men who go out to fixed point; the others are entered in the book there.

36740. Is there a fixed point man near the Bell public-house?—Yes.

36741. At the corner of Brick Lane and Osborn Place?—Yes; that is beat No. 11.

36742. Show me where the man's name is?—There is the number of 11 beat—Hanbury Street.

36743. That is 290. Are those the numbers of the police constables?—Yes, and this is the time—from 9 to 1.

36744. Then they are not there during the night at all?—No, only from 9 at night to 1 the next morning.

(Chairman.) Have you the charge sheet there?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, it is here. (The charge sheet was handed to the Commissioners.)

36745. (Chairman.) Do you find in the charge book which you have got before you any charge made by constables who were in No. 2 section on the morning of the 21st?—No, there are none taken here.

36746. We know the numbers of the men. Was any charge made by any of the following numbers—110?—No.

36747. 200?—No.

36748. 124?—No.

36749. 180?—No.

36750. 129?—No.

36751. 202?—No.

36752. 207?—No.

36753. You do not find a single charge there?—No.

36754. You can tell me something about this station perhaps. This has nothing to do with this particular case. How many men do you have in attendance outside the police station?—One patrols outside. There are three men kept on reserve, but there is only one who patrols in front of the station.

36755. Is there one patrolling in front of the station always?—Yes.

36756. At all hours?—Yes.

36757. And you never find it necessary to put two on?—No.

36758. (Mr. Dickinson.) I do not quite understand about these monthly orders. When did this con-constable have an hour to go for monthly orders? The entry here is: "P.C. 207, off at 5 a.m." on this particular day "for monthly orders?—Yes, as a rule, they attend monthly orders on the first Wednesday in each month.

36759. This was a Tuesday?—Yes. Then, you see, they have their time off. The men have their time off as they can be spared, so that it is possible that, although he attended the monthly reading of the orders on the first Wednesday in the month, he may not have had his time off for it for several days.

36760. Then it does not mean that on this day he attended the reading of monthly orders?—No.

36761. It means because he had been there on some other occasion he was allowed to go away an hour earlier?—Yes.

36762. Then when he goes away an hour earlier he does not turn up at the inspection at 6 o'clock?—No, but he has to go to the station and report himself to the officer in charge there.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

4 Mar. 1907.

36763. Would there be any entry of that?—No, there would be no entry of that.

36764. (Chairman.) The sergeant gives him leave of absence and treats the hour as being in lieu of the hour for monthly orders?—Yes.

36766. (Chairman.) Supposing the sergeant and police-constable 207 met, we will say at 4.45, the sergeant might say to him, "I give you leave to go at 5 o'clock this morning, and I will enter it up as in lieu of the hour for attending for monthly orders"?—The sergeant could not very well do that, because, first of all, if a man has any time due to him he has to ask the Inspector for relief before they go at all. At night, or before any of them go out, they tell the Inspector that they have got an hour or two hours due for going to the police court, or something of that kind, and the Inspector gives the sergeant directions to relieve them at a certain hour if they can be spared.

36767. (Mr. Dickinson.) Has that been done on an occasion like this?—It might have been done.

36768. The Chairman puts to you that at a quarter to 5 the sergeant might go to the constable and tell him he might go away, but you say he would not do so unless he had authority from the Inspector beforehand?—Yes, and in this case it would be Station-sergeant Anderson.

36769. Would that authority be entered in any book?—No.

36770. Would there be any book which shows that an hour was due to the man?—Only the record.

36771. Would that show that the man had an hour due to him?—They know who is present at the reading of monthly orders. The whole of the night duty men have to parade for that. They know exactly who is entitled to the time.

36772. That is in existence now?—Yes.

36773. Can you tell me whether this particular police-constable had an hour due to him on that occasion?—I could not say, but the Inspector who read the orders would know.

36774. There would be a record, would there, on the 21st August, 1906? Is there any record which shows that this man had an hour off duty?—No, there is no record to show that. There is a record that the monthly orders are read to the night-duty men, and the whole of the men that would not be actually engaged would be present.

36775. But there must have been some note somewhere that this man had an hour due to him?—Only the sergeant's statement.

36776. (Chairman.) Supposing they met a few minutes before 5, and the sergeant said to him, "Well, 207 H, I will give you leave to go away, and put it down as one of the hours due to you," would it be P.C. 207's duty to go at once and report himself to the station, or would he report himself at 6 o'clock?—He would go at once.

36777. And then it would be the sergeant's duty to make some provision for the beat left unoccupied?—Yes.

36778. It appears from this that the duty was, in this case, done by putting on P.C. 110?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) P.C. 110 and P.C. 202.

36779. (Mr. Dickinson.) You cannot help us as to what reason there was for this constable being allowed to go away an hour before his proper time?—That is the only reason.

36780. I want to know one other thing. These beats are all provided according to the streets; the street is the boundary line?—Yes.

36781. Where the street is the boundary line how do the policemen patrol it?—They generally break up and they take the right-hand side.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

4 Mar. 1907.

36782. They both patrol the boundary of the street?—Yes.

36783. Therefore it would be the duty of the constable who was in charge of this beat, the boundary of which was Hanbury Street, to patrol half of Hanbury Street?—Yes, that would be the boundary line.

36784. With regard to a constable going off a beat, supposing a policeman sees a row going on on his beat, and the men who are making the row move off his beat, is it his duty or not to follow them up and take care that there is no breach of the peace?—It would be if he thought there was going to be a breach of the peace; it would be his duty to go and see that there was no breach of the peace committed.

36785. Then it is not an absolute rule that a policeman is not to go off his beat?—No; he should not go off his beat unless there was some special reason for going off, and that would be considered a special reason.

36786. Has he to report it to anybody?—If he goes off his beat he should report that he was absent to so many minutes.

36787. Ought he to put that down in his notebook?—Yes.

36788. Anything that draws him off his beat?—Anything that draws him off his beat should be reported.

36789. (Chairman.) The exact words are, "Constables may leave their beats to act in cases of fire, accident, or other emergencies, but are to return to them as soon as possible"?—That would be considered——

36790. An emergency?—Yes.

36791. (Mr. Dickinson.) If a policeman thought there would be a probability of his being justified in taking up a man for quarrelling with a woman, would he be justified in following those people for five or ten minutes away from his beat?—It all depends on the nature of the quarrel. As a rule, if he finds people go away, it would not be his duty to follow them up, if they were going away quietly; but, on the other hand, if he thought it was going to arise again, then it would be his duty to see that they went.

36792. (Chairman.) If he met the constable on the other beat he would probably hand over the control of the people to him?—I expect the two of them would go to it.

36793. (Mr. Dickinson.) There would be a duty to tell the sergeant that he had done that?—Yes.

36794. The sergeant would be round, of course?—Yes. unless he has to leave his beat for ten minutes or a quarter of an hour.

CHARLES SAYERS, sworn.

C. Sayers.

36795. (Chairman.) You are an under-foreman of Messrs. Trollope and Sons, I understand?—Yes.

36796. Mr. Plumb told us this morning he would ask you to step across to us, in order that you might tell us what you can about this matter of Gamble?—Yes.

36797. How did you come into the matter at all?—I happened to be working in the shop when I saw Mr. Plumb, the foreman, and he asked me where I lived? Did I live anywhere near the London Hospital? I said I did live near the hospital; at least, I passed it on my way home in the evening. He said: "Would it be troubling you to call there, as one of my men has met with an accident?" I said: "Certainly, I will, sir; I will call on Sunday." I think this was on the Wednesday when he told me.

36798. On the Wednesday he first told you?—Yes. I promised Mr. Plumb I would call and see him on Sunday; but on Friday he said to me: "Sayers, I hear that Gamble is very dangerously ill. Would it be troubling you to call before Sunday? I said: "I will call this evening," and I did call on Friday evening. That was the first time I called.

36799. That would be the Friday after Gamble had ceased attending at his work?—Yes.

36800. That would be, therefore, Friday the 24th?—Yes, the 24th I think it was.

36801. You went to the hospital?—I went to the hospital. I saw the nurse, and I asked to see Gamble. I asked to see the nurse first, and the nurse said: "You will have to wait a few minutes, for he has been under an operation," and I did wait for, I think, about a quarter of an hour. I said, "Could you tell me the cause of his accident at all?" She said. "Well, I do not know exactly what it is; he has certainly met with a very severe accident." After a time, when I did see Gamble, he explained to me how he met with the accident. I said, "Did you get run over, or how did you meet with the accident?" He said, "No; I have been ill-treated by the police." "Oh, indeed," I said. "By the police?" He said, "Yes." I asked him where it happened, and I forget where he told me, but in the district of Whitechapel I understood him to say it was. I said, "What time did it occur?" He said, "Oh, it was rather late in the evening." I said, "Were you sober?" He said, "Yes, I was perfectly sober." I said, "Were you alone? Probably you may have been attacked by some roughs, or somebody." He said, "Oh, no; I was not. I was followed by a constable," and he said the constable said to him, "Don't you think it is time you were home?" He said, "I made the remark that I was going home," and the constable said, "Get out of this as soon as you can." He said he followed him through two or three streets, or several streets, until he came to another constable and sergeant on duty, and when he got to the sergeant and the other constable on duty, he did not only tell him to get out of it, but ill-used him—struck him, or knocked him down, or something of that sort. He said after he got up, or tried to get up, he knocked him down again and kicked him. He said after he had kicked him he was left in the road. I asked him how he got to the hospital. He told me he could scarcely recollect how he did get there. I asked him whether he could tell me what time he arrived at the hospital. He said, "No, I cannot; I cannot tell you what time it was." I promised to go in and see him again. The nurse asked me not to say much to him, as he was very dangerously ill at the time, and told me I could go at any time to see him. He was on the dangerous list, and I used to go in of an evening on several occasions, and on Sundays. I think that is all he told me on that occasion about how the accident occurred. I used to visit him afterwards on Sundays, and so forth. I do not know that I can tell you anything much more than that.

36802. Did you come in contact at all with him as a workman?—Very little. He came round to collect the time-sheets; that is all I knew about the man.

36803. So far as you know, he was a sober and good workman?—So far as I know.

36804. (Mr. Whitmore.) Did you know him by the name of Gamble at the hospital when you went to see him?—Yes; the nurse said, "There is some mistake; he is in in the name of Pearce." I did not question him the first time I was there why he should be in in the name of Pearce, because he was too ill to say much.

36805. But after that, did you ask him?—After that, I asked him the reason why he should go in the name of Pearce. He said, "I really do not know exactly myself." He said, I believe, "When they asked me my name, I was under the impression they were asking me how the accident occurred, and I told them, 'Police,' and they took it that I said 'Pearce.'" He said, "I did not tell them my name was Pearce. At any rate, my name will be Pearce on the books while I am in the hospital."

36806. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Have you told us all that Gamble told you the first time you went there, as far as you remember?—I think so; as far as I remember.

36807. Did he tell you anything about his having been with a woman?—No, he did not.

36808. He did not mention that at all?—No; I asked him if he was by himself, and he said, "Yes."

(Chairman.) Lord Russell, does anything occur to you to ask the witness?

36809. (Earl Russell.) Did you tell him you came from his foreman?—Yes.

36810. And that you were going to report to his foreman?—Yes, I did.

C. Sayers.
4 Mar. 1907.

Sub-Divisional Inspector HEWISON, recalled.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

36811. (Chairman). There is one topic I omitted to ask you about. It appears that a letter was written by the solicitors, Messrs. Radford and Frankland, to the Commissioner of Police at Scotland Yard. You heard about that?—Yes.

36812. Reports were called for, I think?—Yes.

36813. It was you who took the report of P.C. Ashford, 207?—That is right.

36814. I see that you yourself, on the 29th November, made a report?—Yes.

36815. Which is covered, I see, by Superintendent Mahony?—Yes.

36816. Had you heard of this accident, or occurrence, call it what you like, before the time the reports were called for?—No, the first time that I knew of the matter was when I had the solicitor's letter sent to me through the Commissioner, and I was directed to make inquiry.

36817. Before that you had heard no gossip, rumour, or report about a man lying in the hospital who alleged that he had been injured by the police?—Nothing whatever.

36818. When you got instructions to make a report what inquiries did you make?—First of all I asked the constables, and I directed the constable to make out a report.

36819. Which constable?—207.

36820. Why? Is he mentioned in the letter?—Yes.

36821. You are quite right, he was mentioned in the letter from the solicitors?—Yes. He absolutely denied all knowledge of it. Then I made inquiries of four or five shopkeepers that were in that portion of Spelman Street that was on his beat. I asked them if they had heard any disturbance, or if they were woke up by any disturbance in the morning, and they said they had heard nothing, and they knew nothing at all about it; they did not remember being woke up in the morning. Then I went to the London Hospital, and with one of the night porters we searched the books, but we could not find the name of Gamble there at all, so we came to the conclusion he was not in that hospital. It did not say in the letter what hospital he was in.

36822. No, but did not you find "Accident—man—4.45"?—Of course, I had no knowledge that that referred to this case.

36823. I know you had no knowledge of it, and I do not suppose you were acting exactly like a detective, but seeing that the solicitors alleged that somebody had been injured by the police on this occasion, and that the Commissioner of Police sent to you to make inquiry, I should have thought you would have made more minute inquiry than merely asking whether a man of the name of Gamble was in the hospital?—We searched the books to see if we could find the name. I did not go to the porter's lodge; I went into the hospital, and we searched the records there.

36824. (Mr. Whitmore.) Would you ask for a man called Gamble?—Yes.

36825. (Chairman.) I am not in the least suggesting that the error on your part was not a natural one; you might go and say, "Is there a man called Gamble here," and the answer would be that there was no such man as Gamble there?—Yes. I came to the conclusion then that that was not the hospital he was in. I made the inquiry as thoroughly as I could at the time; in fact, I really never closed the inquiry.

36826. The letter does not mention any particular hospital?—It does not give the names or addresses of either Gamble or the woman Griffiths.

36827. But we have had here the house surgeon, Dr. Billinghurst; he knew that the man alleged that the injury was caused by the police. We have also had Dr. Woods, the physician, here, and he also knew that the man alleged that the injury was caused by the police, and we are informed that the nurse knew that as well?—Yes, but I did not see any others of the staff. The usual practice in making inquiries is to find out the man and then to go to the steward's office and find out the doctor he is under, and then you go to the doctor and get information; otherwise you do not get information. If the man's name had been entered on the register I should have got the information.

36828. Any child could have got it if it had been on the register. Here was a case of sufficient importance to justify the Commissioner of Police in asking you to make a report about it, and, as far as I understand, you contented yourself with the most obvious inquiry; you went to the nearest hospital and said, "Is there a man named Gamble here"?—I knew nowhere else to go; the letter gave no addresses or anything. I thought I had made the inquiry as complete as I could on the information given to me.

36829. Was your state of mind this, that the occurrence was altogether a trumped-up thing, and that no man had been injured at all that night?—No, that was not exactly it, but I certainly came to the conclusion that he was not in the London Hospital.

(Earl Russell.) The letter does give the name of the woman.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, but not the address.

36830. (Chairman.) A copy of Messrs. Radford and Frankland's letter was sent to you, as I understand?—Yes, the original letter.

36831. The letter there says: "The facts are shortly as follows:—On the 21st of August in this year, in Spelman Street, Whitechapel, George Gamble was speaking to a woman named Ethel Griffiths at about 4 a.m., when, after some conversation, the constable knocked George Gamble down and kicked him several times while on the ground," and then they give a description of him. Did you try to find out the woman Ethel Griffiths?—I did try to find out, but no one seemed to know her—not at that time—and I did not know where to go and look for her.

36832. As a matter of fact, you know now she was living in Flower and Dean Street, and had been on the streets for some years?—Yes, I know that now.

36833. Does it pass the powers of even an ordinary person to discover Ethel Griffiths if he had really tried to do so?—I did try to discover her, but there is a very large number of women about there, and unless you know where to go to find a person there you may hunt for any length of time before you find that person out. I could not find her out.

36834. You did not even go to the Bell public-house and sit down. I do not know whether you yourself would do it. I do not know whether it is part of your duty, but did you instruct any officer to go and sit down some evening in the Bell public-house, for instance, and to make judicious inquiries as to Ethel Griffiths?—No.

36835. What did you do in order to try to discover Ethel Griffiths?—I asked some of the men if any of them knew of such a person, and they said no, they did not. Many of them might have known her by sight.

36836. As I gather, you thought you were not to act as a detective, but you were to make a report by inquiring from the constables, and so on?—Yes.

36837. You simply went to the hospital, and you could find out nothing about it on the information given, and you thought your duty was over?—Yes.

36838. At any rate, so far as you know the Commissioner of Police has never heard, and did not do anything subsequently to your report?—No.

36839. He was quite content with your report?—Yes, apparently so. I did suggest in my report that I might be allowed to see the solicitors to get further information.

36840. I was just going to read to you the last paragraph: "I would respectfully suggest that the solicitors might be asked to furnish Gamble's address, so that he could be seen with a view to his statement being taken and the nature of the alleged assault inquired into." That seems to me, if I may say so, a very proper paragraph for you to have inserted in your report. So far as you know that was not acted upon?—No; I did not receive any further instructions.

Sub-Divisional Inspector J. Hewison.

4 Mar. 1907.

36841. (Mr. Dickinson.) You tell us that you made some inquiries in Spelman Street?—Yes, at that part where the constable's beat goes.

36842. Do I understand that Spelman Street runs across Hanbury Street?—Yes.

36843. So that there is a little piece of Spelman Street that is in No. 10 beat?—Yes. That is between Hanbury Street and Pelham Street.

36844. You inquired in that piece?—Yes.

36845. You did not inquire in any other part of Spelman Street?—I did not; I did not expect that this would occur 200 or 300 yards from that part.

36846. You only inquired in that portion of Spelman Street which was in this man's beat?—That is right.

36847. (Chairman.) Have you had any communication at all made to you with regard to the matter by the Commissioner or by anybody from Scotland Yard?—No.

36848. Do you know whether they adopted your suggestion or not?—I could not say.

36849. Were you surprised that they did not?—I thought it was strange that I did not hear more about it.

36850. Do you know that Mr. Bathurst wrote a letter on behalf of the Commissioner of Police?—Yes; I beg your pardon. That was sent back to me some time afterwards.

36851. This is a letter of the 8th December to Messrs. Radford and Frankland: "Gentlemen,—With reference to your letter of the 23rd ultimo, I am directed by the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to acquaint you that the P.C. referred to denies having seen or assaulted your client, and nothing is known to the police of the incident"?—I could not find out anything.

36852. Does it not strike you as rather odd that they should not have adopted your suggestion and asked for Gamble's address, so that you might have gone to see Gamble if he was at the address given?—I certainly thought it was a bit strange, but many times the suggestions we make are not acted upon.

36853. (Earl Russell.) Might I suggest one question, or perhaps you would ask it, and that is, if he asked at the hospital whether, on the 21st August, a man had been brought in who had suffered injuries from kicking, because I notice in his report he says he made careful inquiries?—I asked if there had been any case of a man named Gamble admitted who alleged he had been knocked about by a policeman on, I think, the 20th August.

36854. (Mr. Whitmore.) You did not find any record there of a man having been kicked?—No, there was no record there in any of the books to the effect that a man had been kicked by a policeman; I could not find anything.

(Chairman.) You did not see the house surgeon, or any of the higher officers, did you?

(The Witness.) No.

(Chairman.) We are anxious to have the details of the constables' duty book.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. Is there anything else you require?

(Chairman.) We should like to have a copy of what has been called the roster.

(Mr Eldon Bankes.) I do not know that I can get the actual one, but we could get the current roster.

(Chairman.) We want the one for August.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It will be in the book, but the actual thing that was hung up, I suppose, has not been preserved.

(Mr. Dickinson.) We had better have the Sergeant's state that we have heard of, and I think we ought to have it for each day.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The state for August.

(Chairman.) The one made on the first Monday in August. That is in the book, I understand.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) With regard to the Sergeant's state, we will produce all of them. Do you want the occurrence book or the charge book again?

(Chairman.) The occurrence book can, I think, be left with us; it is not the one in actual use.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Do you want the charge book to be left here?

(Chairman.) No, I do not think so; I think we may take what the Inspector said, that there was no charge.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There is no charge.

(Chairman.) I imagine it, now being March, and this occurrence having taken place in August, the note-books of P.C. 207 and of the sergeant would have been returned, filed, and kept.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) They can be produced. I do not know whether they are in use now.

(Chairman.) They can hardly be in use after six months. Perhaps they have them with them now. If so, we should like to have them handed in before they are called.

(The note-books were handed in to the Commissioners.)

THIRTY-NINTH DAY.

Tuesday, 5th March 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).

WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).

CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at Law).

J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).

J. F. WALEY, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Assistant Secretary).

5 Mar. 1907.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have got the books here now, Sir, that you asked for.

(Chairman.) Have you got the Details of Duty Book?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have got that, but I am sorry to say that Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison is not here this morning. I hope you will excuse him, but he is obliged to go up for his examination for promotion. I thought you would not mind. Inspector Wright, who knows all the details, is here. Of course, Inspector Hewison will come at any subsequent occasion, if you should want to ask him any particular question. (Books handed to the Commis- sioners, and examined by them.) You will find, Sir, there is a separate heading for each month, and on that page there are the details of the night duty for two sections—the first section night duty, and the second section night duty. You see the number of the beats marked there, and you see against the number of the beats the constable's number. If you will compare that with the sergeants' states, you will see exactly how the men were actually posted that night as compared with the duties assigned to them, assuming there had been the full strength available. (Sergeants' states handed to the Commissioners, and examined by them.) There were seven constables available to do the eleven men's duty. Shall I read them through to you? The first on the sergeants' states is 110. His fixed duty, according to the roster, was beat 3, and that night he gets to begin with Nos. 1, 2, and 3.

(Mr. Dickinson.) What does "From 2 to 5 a.m. as posted" mean?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you referring to the states?

(Mr. Dickinson.) Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It means as posted at 10 o'clock.

(Mr. Whitmore.) By the sergeant?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. The next one, 200, was not on his assigned beat because, owing to the lack of men, he could not be; but 200 was assigned to No. 9 beat, and on that night he got No. 3 and half of 2.

(Chairman.) From the states, P.C. 200 is on No. 11 point.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes; he was posted to 3 and half of 2, and he remained there from 10 to 10.30. Then he went on point No. 11 from 10.30 to 1. You know where point 11 is. The point is not continued there after 1 o'clock. Then he comes back to No. 3 and half of 2 for the rest of his duty. Then if you take the next constable, P.C. 124, his beat for the month is No. 4, and he takes his own beat and Nos. 8 and 9.

(Chairman). Nos. 4, 8, and 9, from 10 o'clock to midnight.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, and then from 12 to 6 he takes Nos. 4 and half of 9.

(Chairman.) From 12 to 1 a.m., it says here, he takes No. 4 and half of 9. Then from 1 to 2 he takes No. 4 and half of 9. Then from 2 o'clock to 5 o'clock as posted. That means he reverts to the position as at 10 o'clock.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. Then P.C. 108 is the next constable. His assigned beat is No. 7, and he take Nos. 5, 6, and 7 from 10 to 2, and from 2 o'clock to 6 o'clock he takes No. 5. Then the next constable is P.C. 129, and his assigned beat is No. 5, and he is posted to Nos. 6 and 7. Then he has a patrol on the first section from 10 to 2.

(Chairman.) According to the state, 196 patrolled in Vallance Road from 10 to 6. 196 ought to have been on beat 8.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) According to the sergeants' state, he patrolled Vallance Road on night duty from 10 p.m. to 6 a.m.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I look at the state?

(Chairman.) I cannot find 196 on the beat at all that night.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, he would not be on the beat, because the patrol is separate from the beat.

(Chairman.) That is what I am pointing out. Therefore, there were only six left, apparently, for the beats.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am told that the parade takes place independently for the patrols and the beats. My copy is not the same as yours with regard to the state.

(Chairman.) I have got the original state. You had better look at that. I think you have got the copy which was handed to me, and which was a kind of précis of the actual state.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, that is so, Sir. I do not think there is any time with regard to the patrols.

(Chairman.) It is in the column headed "10 to 6."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes; but under "Patrol," and, as a matter of fact, the patrols' times are not 10 to 6; they are from 5 in the afternoon to 1 a.m. 5 Mar., 1907.

(Chairman). And then from 1 a.m. onwards to what time?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) They go off then, because they have done their duty then.

(Chairman.) Then on this night, after 1 a.m., there was nobody patrolling Vallance Road.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Only the beat man.

(Chairman.) That reduces the number of beat men for the eleven beats to six on this night.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, there were seven independently. You see, according to the sergeants' states, there are seven men, independently of P.C. 196, who are on the beats.

(Chairman.) Seven on the beats; one reserve and five patrols.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. There are seven men on the beats who have nothing to do with the patrols.

(Chairman.) I am taking the state now. It says there were seven men on the beat; one was on reserve and five were on patrol. That makes a total strength of 13. The authorised strength of the section is one police sergeant and 15 police constables—total, 16.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I can account for them all. There were some on leave. I have got the book here accounting for them all.

(Chairman.) There were two on leave.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes; I can tell you what they were doing. There were seven on beats, and one on reserve—that is eight. There were two on leave, and one was not on duty that night because he had been to the police-court—it is all entered in the book—and there were four patrols. That makes the fifteen.

(Chairman.) The sergeants' state says, "Patrol night duty, five."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is not accurate.

(Chairman.) One of the five was not actually then on duty that night, because he had been relieved in consequence of attending at a police-court.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) But, at any rate, what clearly appears is that after 1 a.m. there would be nobody on patrol either in Vallance Road, or anywhere in the section.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am told that these patrols are in the busiest thoroughfares, where there is considerable traffic, and so forth, which ceases at 1 o'clock or thereabouts, and these men are on this patrol duty for this special time from 5 till 1.

(Chairman.) I understand. I think that is probably quite a proper system. I am not attacking the organisation in the least, but the result is that there were only eight men on the beats in Section 2 at work—the sergeant and seven others.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is so, Sir.

(Chairman.) After 1 a.m. There ought to have been then four more, because there were eleven beats.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, that is assuming, of course, that each beat wanted a man on this particular night. The beats are fixed by the Commissioner.

(Chairman.) I am going by this roster, which is posted up. A man is given to every beat, according to that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes; but of course, in the exigencies of the service, some men are sometimes away. The whole of the Metropolis is parcelled out into these beats by the Commissioner. They cannot be altered, except by his consent, and no doubt the men are assigned to the various divisions having reference to the beats, but with the knowledge that some men have to be away from different causes, and consequently there will not be a man for every beat.

(Chairman.) We shall hear more about it, I daresay, from the station sergeant, or somebody.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. Now I have got the other book which perhaps you would like to see at this point. I think the top column shows Anderson's and Duffin's duties. (Book handed to the Commissioners, and examined by them.)

(Chairman.) "Details of duties, Monday, 20th

5 Mar. 1907.

August, 1906," and the other page shows the distribution of duties.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think it is the left-hand page, that is the one you want. I think the first heading from the first departments, if I may call it so, of the page shows the duties of Duffin and Anderson with regard to this section, the times at which they were on duty in the station, and the times at which they were on duty on patrol.

(Chairman.) Yes. "Sergeant Duffin from 10 to 2"?—or is it Inspector Duffin?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He is the acting-sergeant.

(Chairman.) From 10 to 2.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He is patrolling.

(Chairman.) Then sergeant, Acting-Inspector, Anderson from 2 to 6 patrolling.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Then in the next column, Duffin was the remaining hours of his duty at the station.

(Chairman.) Then "Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison on duty at 9 a.m., engaged general duties at station, patrolling and making inquiries till 2.15 p.m., and from 4 to 10.15 p.m." Then "Place of Inspector receiving sergeants' reports."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is made before the patrol comes out. The acting-sergeant fixes the place and times at which he proposes to meet the different sergeants, and he enters that before he goes out, and he gives each sergeant a note of the arrangement which he has made, and he expects to meet the sergeants at the time he has assigned to meet them at a particular place.

(Chairman.) "Hour and place of Inspector receiving sergeants' reports, Section 2, Carter Street, 12.30 a.m., Section 2, Hanbury Street, 4.30 a.m."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is Sheedy.

(Chairman.) That means that Sergeant 5H would meet the Inspector at those hours?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, he is told before he goes out that the Inspector will be there to meet him at that hour.

(Chairman.) That is Monday morning?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) We had better look at Tuesday. "Tuesday, Section 2, 11.35 p.m., Fostick Place 3.35 a.m." Who would be the Inspector then? What Inspector would be referred to?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The signatures are there.

(Chairman.) Acting-Inspector Duffin signs the one column, and Acting-Inspector Anderson the other?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) They sign as sergeants.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) They are sergeants acting as Inspectors.

(Chairman.) They are station sergeants, that is their grade, but these two men are acting as Inspectors.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) They are really sergeants, but they are Acting-Inspectors.

(Chairman.) Yes, that is so, but they sign as sergeants.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) "11.35 p.m.," and the date at the top of the page is 21st August. Primâ facie, therefore, the 11.35 p.m. is the 11.35 on the 21st August?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, because the duties begin at 10; it is night duty.

(Chairman.) Quite so, that is an hour and a half after the duty had commenced on Tuesday, the 21st August.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Chairman.) Then in the same line in the next column there is No. 2. "Fostick Place, 3.35 a.m." that is really 3.35 on the 22nd August?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is so, and I am told that they vary the hours at which they visit the sergeants on their respective beats in order that the man may not know when to expect them. The sergeant knows before he goes out where he has to meet him, but the men do not know.

(Chairman.) But it is rather odd. I have no doubt it works out quite rightly, but taking the 20th day of August, which is the page I first looked at, I find 12.30 a.m. and the place of meeting at Carter Street. That must be 12.30 a.m. on the 21st August.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, in the morning of the 21st. The Monday duty as entered in that sheet begins at 10 p.m.

(Mr. Dickinson.) On what day?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) On the Monday. That is the entry of the night duty on the Monday begining at 10 p.m.

(Chairman.) Then the "a.m." there is carried on the next day?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, it is the entry of the night duty made by a man who knows it runs from 10 a.m. on the Monday night until 6 a.m. on the Tuesday morning.

(Chairman.) It ought to be called really the 21st. It ought to be put "Monday-Tuesday, 21st August."

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, but the way the book is kept they enter it as of the day on which the duty began.

(Chairman.) Yes, and the whole duty described here begins at 10 p.m. on Monday, the 20th.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) That is so.

(Chairman.) It leads to some ambiguity, because the very first line is "Wright, Inspector, 6 a.m. to 10 a.m." That means 6 to 10 on the Monday morning. Then when you come down to the hour and place of inspection the 12.30 a.m. does not mean 12.30 a.m. on the Monday but 12.30 a.m. on the Tuesday.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I cannot say without looking at the book.

(Chairman.) Look at the book and see. I daresay it works out all right, but you see the difficulty Mr. Dickinson and I are in in following it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Inspector Wright will explain it to you if you would like to ask him about it.

(Chairman.) Perhaps it would be best to call him. Look first of all at the top—Monday, 20th August. The very first line you find is "Wright, 6 a.m. to 10 a.m." That means 6 o'clock on the morning of the Monday. Now go down to the next block, so to speak, on the page, and there you will find "Carter Street, 12.35." Does it mean 12.35 on August 20th, or 12.35 a.m. on Tuesday, the 21st?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) On the Tuesday morning. It contains the information about the whole 24 hours. I will call Inspector Wright.

(Chairman.) I think we will postpone his examination at present. I only want the books explained at present. Perhaps you would call Sergeant Sheedy.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The next witness I propose to call, if it suits you, Sir, would be Sergeant Anderson. I have had this made out in case you wish to see it. (Handing document to the Commissioners.) It is not a copy really, but it is a specimen of the roster as it would have been made out for that month of August. That is the thing that is hung up. The original has been destroyed, and it is wrongly headed as a copy. It was marked as a copy to show it was not the original, but it is re-made up in the same way as the original would be made up.

(Chairman.) From these books.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. That is the thing that is hung up that everybody sees.

(Chairman.) So that making allowances for some small blunders, this is what was put up at the station house on the 21st August?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

Sergeant ALBERT ANDERSON, 41 H, sworn.

Sergeant A. Anderson.

36855. Are you a sergeant stationed in the H Division?—I am a station sergeant.

36856. How long have you been in the Force?—Nineteen years next month.

36857. Were you on night duty in the month of August of last year?—Yes.

36858. With whom did you share the night duty?—Sergeant Duffin.

(Chairman.) Mr. Bankes, you will give facilities to the officers of the Commission to copy the pages from these books. We do not wish to keep the books, but we shall have extracts from them printed.

36859. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly, Sir. (To the witness.) Were your hours of duty from 10 to 6?—Yes.

36860. That would be 10 on the Monday night to 6 on the Tuesday morning?—Yes.

36861. Would half your time be spent in the station and half patrolling?—Yes.

36862. On the Monday night, the 21st, were your hours at the station from 10 to 2?—Yes.

36863. From two till six patrolling?—Yes.

36864. Was it part of your duty to inspect the men before they went out on relief at 10 o'clock?—Yes.

36865. And did you do that on that night?—I did.

36866. What does the inspection consist of?—The men are fallen in in the different sections, the four sections, and their appointments and books are all inspected, and it is seen if the men are in proper order to go on duty. After that the information and the police orders and telegrams or anything urgent that may be required are read to the men before they go out.

36867. (Chairman.) You would look, for instance, to see if each had got his lamp?—Yes, Sir—all his appointments.

36868. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Does the sergeant of each section report to you the number of men that he has available for duty?—Yes.

36869. Is any entry of that made at the time?—Yes.

36870. Where is it entered?—In the Duty Book.

36871. But before it is entered in the Duty Book?—The sergeant who is entering up the strength of the night duty makes it up on a slate, and it is afterwards copied into the Duty Book by one of the officers on night duty.

36872. Before the sergeants go out do you tell them where the appointments to meet them by the Inspectors that night are?—We write a note stating the place and time the sergeants are to be met by us during the night and hand it to the sergeant. Nobody else knows it only the sergeant and ourselves, and afterwards that note is placed in the Duty Book before I go out patrolling, so that if any superior officer would wish to find me or want to know where I was during the night I could easily be found.

36873. (Chairman.) Is that note that you give to the sergeant in writing?—In writing.

36874. A note in writing to each sergeant, giving the time and the place of your coming to meet him?—That is right.

36875. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Will you look at the Duty Book. (Book handed to the Witness.) Does that show what you were doing that night, and what Sergeant Duffin was doing?—Yes.

36876. And at what time are those entries made?—At 10 o'clock.

36877. (Chairman.) Ten o'clock in the morning?—At night when we parade the night duty.

36878. The first column of all?—Oh, no.

36879. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I was asking you about the top column. At what time were those entries made?—Inspector Wright is booking out the patrol from six in the morning to ten in the morning.

36880. In whose handwriting is that entry?—Inspector Wright's.

36881. Does each man make the entry there in his handwriting?—Yes.

36882. There are two entries there in your handwriting?—Yes.

36883. Read what the entries are relating to yourself?—"In charge of the station, Anderson, station sergeant, from 10 p.m. to 2 a.m. Patrolling, Anderson, station sergeant, 2 a.m. to 6 a.m."

36884. At what time would you make those entries with reference to yourself?—When I am patrolling I make them at 10 o'clock. If I go out patrolling at 10 I should sign just at 10, and if I go out at two, I should sign just at two.

36885. There are two entries there, one with reference to your duty in the station. At what time did you make that?—At 10 o'clock, when I took charge of the station.

36886. What time did you make the entry with reference to patrolling?—Two o'clock.

36887. Before you go out?—Yes.

36888. Now take the second set of entries next. Those are the times at which the Inspector will meet the sergeants?—These are the times that I wrote on the paper for the sergeants to meet me during the night.

36889. So far as you are concerned, are any of these entries in your handwriting?—They are all in my handwriting. These are all my points.

36890. (Chairman.) Not Sergeant Duffin's?—No, these are my own visits.

36891. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) At what time would you make those entries?—Before I went out at two.

36892. Would those entries correspond with the papers which you have given to the sergeants showing the times at which you would meet them?—Yes.

36893. Do your duties extend over the whole section?—Yes.

36894. That is the four sections?—The whole of the sub-division.

36895. That includes the four sections?—Yes.

36896. So that statement which you wrote there would refer to appointments with four different sergeants?—It would cover the whole sub-division.

36897. Are those points distant some considerable distance one from the other?—Yes.

36898. How would you spend the rest of your time when you were not engaged in meeting the sergeants at those particular points?—It is our duty to visit as many men as we can, and to patrol as much of the district as possible, to see that everything is all right.

36899. Does one of those entries there refer to an appointment to meet Sergeant Sheedy?—Yes.

36900. And at what time and at what place?—No. 2 section, Hanbury Street, 4.30 a.m.

36901. Hanbury Street leads out of Brick Lane, does it not?—It is about the centre of Brick Lane.

36902. And not very far from Osborn Place?—No, about three or four turnings, I think.

36903. Did you in fact meet Sergeant Sheedy at that time and place?—Yes.

36904. Did you receive any report from him?—No, no report whatever.

36905. (Mr. Whitmore.) That means that nothing of importance had occurred?—That is right—nothing of importance.

36906. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) In the state the statement is "correct." Would that mean that everything was reported at all right?—Yes.

36907. Is that the way in which it is entered?—Yes.

36908. If nothing occurs the report is "correct"?—Yes. If any thing had occurred it would have been placed on the back of that state.

36909. On that night did you patrol any portion of this section?—Yes.

36910. Do you remember whether you visited any particular part of it?—I could not say that.

36911. You cannot remember?—No.

36912. Can you remember seeing any particular officer that night?—No.

36913. There is nothing to call your attention to having seen any particular officer, or having gone into any particular part?—There is only one point, and that is that one constable is posted to where there had been a strike.

36914. Did you go there?—I may have gone there; I think I must have seen that man, because he was specially posted there.

36915. You do not remember?—I do not remember.

36916. There was nothing that night to call your special attention to anything on this section?—No.

36917. Did anybody make any complaint to you with reference to anything that had occurred in that section that night?—No.

36918. Or did you hear anything, or overhear any-

Sergeant A. Anderson.

5 Mar. 1907.

thing, about any assault having taken place by any constable during that night?—No.

36919. When did you first hear anything about it?—Some time in November, I think it was.

36920. Did you hear of a letter being written by a firm of solicitors to the Commissioner?—Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison asked me about it some time in November. I could not say the date.

36921. The first person you heard anything about it from was Inspector Hewison?—Yes, owing to the letter being written.

36922. Now I will go back to the book. The next column in the book, I think, contains the details of how various men in the section were employed?—Yes, I posted them in and signed the book as parading the four sections.

36923. That shows the strength actually on duty that night?—Yes.

36924. And it accounts for the men who were away?—Yes.

36925. Does that show there were actually on duty one sergeant and seven men on beats?—Yes.

36926. Four men on patrols and one man on special duty, and two men on leave. Would you read it out in the order in which they come?—There were seven men posted to beats; Constable 457 was on reserve, that is, at the station. He filled the place of somebody who was away. Police-constable 163 was on annual leave; Police-constable 93 was on fortnightly leave. Police-constable 187 attended at the police court; he would be a recruit, and he would be attending the police court during the day, and he would be shown the patrol at night, that is to cover where he was—patrol and police court. Then four men were posted to patrol, Police-constables 196, 164, 18 HR, and 23 HR. That accounted for one sergeant and fifteen men total.

36927. And that is the total strength of the section?—Yes.

36928. (Chairman.) How about the man on special duty opposite the baker's shop?—That is Police-constable 104.

36929. Was he one of the men on patrol, then?—Yes, 104 was posted at the baker's shop.

36930. He is not mentioned in the sergeant's state as being so posted. He is not put under the head of "Patrol," but he is entered simply as "102 Hanbury Street—strike—104"?—Special duty.

36931. There is no mention of special duty here?—Special patrol that would be.

36932. It does not say so. The entry of five on patrol was really correct if you call that patrol?—The man was at the police court, Police-constable 187, and that would make the five.

36933. "Attending police court, 187"?—Yes.

36934. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) But what does that entry mean—had he been to the police court during the day?—He had been to the police court during the day, and his number had to be accounted for in the night duty strength.

36935. But would he be on duty at all that night, or would he be excused duty?—He would be excused, because he was a recruit learning his duties.

36936. (Earl Russell.) In connection with this relief that you inspect at 10 o'clock, at what hour do the men parade for inspection?—Quarter to 10.

36937. What hour are they marched from the station?—Ten o'clock exactly, or as near as possible, 10 o'clock.

36938. How long does the reading of the orders, special notices, and so on, take?—Fifteen minutes.

36939. That is the whole time?—That is the full time.

36940. It is that particular time that I am asking about. You said you read out the orders and notices of people missing and so on. How long does that take?—That takes nearly a quarter of an hour. The men fall in at a quarter to 10, and we go through the inspection and read telegrams and other things till 10 o'clock, and then they are marched out.

36941. And the reading alone takes nearly a quarter of an hour?—Yes.

36942. How many men were there paraded at a quarter to ten on this night, roughly?—Thirty-eight constables.

36943. So that it does not leave you time for any minute inspection of any individuals?—Oh, yes, we look at every individual.

36944. You walk round and look at them carefully?—We walk round in the front and at the back of them, and also inspect the whole of their appointments, that is, their pocket books, truncheons, whistles and other articles.

36945. You have time for that?—Yes.

36946. You told Mr. Bankes that you did, in fact, meet Sergeant Sheedy at 4.30 at Hanbury Street?—Yes.

36947. I want to know how you know that. Did you make a note of it or anything?—I am entered there as meeting him at 4.30.

36948. Your entry here is that you intended to meet him at 4.30?—I did meet him. If I had not met him I should have stated so here, and the sergeant also would have put on his slate, "Not met." If anything had occurred to me, the case of a fire, or anything of that sort, so that I could not have got there to meet Sergeant Sheedy, that would have been entered here, "Not met," and the same on the sergeant's state.

36949. The entry is made in advance, and if anything happens to make it incorrect, you make a note against it?—When I come off at 6 o'clock, if I do not meet Sergeant Sheedy I should have made an entry of it.

36950. What makes you say you must have met him. Is it because there is no note against it that you did not?—Yes.

36951. If Sergeant Sheedy had been intending to report a constable for assaulting a member of the public, he ought to have done it when you met him at 4.30?—Yes.

36952. But if he had made up his mind not to report the constable, he would not have reported him then or at any other time?—I should not have known anything about it if he did not.

36953. And you in fact did not know anything about it?—No.

36954. (Chairman.) As I understand, sergeant, the entry in that book about the time and the place of the meeting of various sergeants in your district is made before you go out upon patrolling duty?—Yes.

36955. You give a written note to each of the sergeants giving him the rendezvous at a time and place?—Yes.

36956. Have you got any of those notes. Can you give me a specimen?—No, I could not. We generally write it on a piece of rough paper, "time and place," and then the sergeant takes that from my note and puts it on his state when he comes in in the morning.

36957. But does he write down in his note book?—No.

36958. He has got a note-book, because we have had a specimen of them here. Does not he put it down in his note book?—No.

36959. You simply give it on a loose piece of paper and the sergeant takes it?—Yes.

36960. What would you have written to Sergeant Sheedy on this day?—On the slip of paper I handed to Sergeant Sheedy I wrote, "Carter Street, 12.30 a.m., Hanbury Street, 4.30 a.m."

36961. But I thought from 10 o'clock to 2 you were at the station, and went out from 2 to 6?—Yes, but I was in charge of the district this night. I was the officer in charge of the sub-division, and it is my duty to write out the points for everyone under me that night. At the time I was station sergeant, and Sergeant Duffin is only a section sergeant.

36962. But, as a matter of fact, you were at the station, as I understand it, were not you, at 12.35?—That is right.

36963. I thought you told Mr. Bankes that you had met the sergeants at the places which were mentioned in the book?—Yes, those places in my own handwriting.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The other places are for Duffin to meet.

36964. (Chairman.) Then looking at that entry your recollection is that you met Sergeant Sheedy in Hanbury Street at 4.30 a.m.?—Yes.

36965. Are you certain you gave him a note?—Yes.

36966. What did you write on the note that you gave Sergeant Sheedy?—On his note was "Carter Street, 12.30, Hanbury Street, 4.30."

36967. That is not very definite, is it? Hanbury Street is a good long street?—Yes. I can explain that.

36968. Perhaps you will, then?—Whatever street we mention in our points, it is always an arrangement with the officers that the sergeants should meet at the nearest part of that street to the police station.

36969. Where is the police station in reference to that plan which had been produced? Is it outside the area of that plan?—No.

36970. Perhaps you will mark it on that plan with a big "S." (The witness did so.) I see the station is in Commercial Street, not far from the corner of Pearl Street?—It is right opposite the corner of Pearl Street.

36971. Then Hanbury Street runs into Commercial Street?—Yes.

36972. And runs all the way from Commercial Street to Vallance Road?—Yes.

36973. What is the length of that, roughly?—I could not tell you. It is a very long street, and it runs nearly the full extent of our sub-division.

36974. It seems to cover the whole section?—Yes, it nearly covers the sub-division.

36975. Then the sergeant was to meet you at the nearest point in Hanbury Street?—On the second section.

36976. The nearest point to the station?—Yes.

36977. That is, the corner at which Hanbury Street crosses Brick Lane?—Yes. The other portion of Hanbury Street is on the first section.

36978. I make it about 250 yards from the corner of Hanbury Street to the public-house. Would that be about the distance?—I don't know where the "Bell" public-house is.

36979. The corner of Osborn Place and Brick Lane?—Yes, I should think that would be about the distance.

36980. What do you make it, Mr. Eldon Bankes? (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) (After measuring.) 250 yards.

36981. (Chairman.) That is what I made it with a pencil. That seems to be about right?—Yes.

36982. Where is Carter Street?—Carter Street is the next turning to Hanbury Street in Brick Lane.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is marked on the small plan—Hanbury Street, Pelham Street, Carter Street.

36983. (Chairman.) Where was the sergeant to meet Sergeant Duffin at 12.30, according to that note?—At Carter Street.

36984. Carter Street runs into Brick Lane?—Yes.

36985. It would be at the corner of Carter Street and Brick Lane?—Yes.

36986. Following your rule that would be the point nearest Commercial Street?—Yes.

36987. It is parallel with Hanbury Street, only a little to the north. It is the next street but one to Hanbury Street, and runs into Brick Lane. I dare say we shall see Sergeant Duffin, and he will tell us about that meeting. You made no note of any meeting with the sergeant on that morning, I gather?—Only my official entry here.

36988. That was not an entry of the meeting, but an entry of the intention to meet?—Yes.

36989. Beside that there is nothing in writing to show that you did, in fact, meet the sergeant?—No.

36990. Have you any definite recollection of meeting him?—No.

36991. Was there anything that attracted your attention on this night?—No, I can only refer to the Occurrence Book, and there is nothing there that would take me off duty.

36992. Then I understand your mind is practically a blank. Apart from the entry, you do not recollect this?

36993. (Mr. Whitmore.) I think you said if you had not met him, and if that had not occurred which you said was going to occur, there would have been a specific entry?—Yes.

36994. (Chairman.) That is quite right. As a matter of fact, I have got the state here, and Sergeant Sheedy chronicles the meeting quite properly, but I only want to know whether your recollection of the meeting is entirely dependent upon the documentary evidence before you or not?—That is so.

36995. You assume from the fact that the entries are what they are, and that no other entry is made that you must have met him?—That is right.

36995. On the sheet we have got these words, "P.C. 207 off 5 a.m. on M. Orders." We are told that means monthly orders?—Yes.

36997. Just explain to me exactly what you understand from that entry?—When the men parade for duty at 10, if they have any time due to them for anything—it does not matter what it is; police court or anything else—they have to ask the senior officer parading night duty for that time off, if they can be spared.

36998. That would be yourself in this case?—That is myself.

36999. That really amounts to this, that you owed, so to speak, an hour to P.C. 207?—Yes.

37000. So that if he asked to be off on one of the 8 hours on this occasion you would consider whether you would give him leave or not. If you thought proper you would give him the hour?—Yes.

37001. I suppose police constables often ask for such—I will not call them indulgencies, but payments of debts?—Yes, that is right, Sir—payments of debts.

37002. Where is the book in which you enter the fact that you have given leave for a man to be off duty for an hour or two hours on a particular night?—That is only recorded on the sergeant's state. If a man asks for time off I would tell the sergeant who was responsible for him, during that tour of duty, that he could go off at 5 o'clock, or whatever it was, and then the sergeant would record it, or should record it on his state.

37003. But supposing the sergeant does record it, and you say you have no recollection of it, by what document are you able to check the sergeant's statement?—As regards these monthly orders, each of the constables have to attend monthly orders, and they attend the first Wednesday in every month, and when they attend an entry is made in the Occurrence Book to the effect that the night-duty relief has attended the monthly orders.

37004. Will you show that to me. I have looked through the Occurrence Book, but my investigation has not been exhaustive. Where in the Occurrence Book is there any entry about P.C. 207 having an hour due to him?—His number would not be mentioned. The entry is of the monthly orders being read to the night duty, and Ashford being one of the night duty, would be included in that duty.

37005. Let me see how we stand, quite apart from books for the present. On the sergeant's state I find the entry which I have read to you, "P.C. 207 off 5 a.m. for monthly orders"?—Yes.

3706. It would have been quite irregular, as I understand, for the sergeant, of his own motion, to give him that leave?—Certainly.

37007. The sergeant would have been exceeding his authority if he gave him leave?—Yes.

37008. Then looking at the sergeant's state you infer that 207 H must have asked you to give him that leave off on that morning?—Yes.

37009. Where would that appear in any book? Do you recollect that he actually did so, at this distance of time?—No, I could not recollect.

37010. How would you check the sergeant's entry? Supposing the sergeant came and said, "I am perfectly certain that 207 told me that the Inspector did give him off that morning," and he said he assumed it was so, how would you check the statement?—I have no other check only that entry on the sergeant's state.

37011. The entry on the sergeant's state is no check at all?—The states are checked the following morning and initialled by the officers.

37012. You go over the sergeant's states the next morning?—I do not.

37013. Who would then?—Another officer would who

Sergeant A. Anderson.

5 Mar. 1907.

would enter it. You find the initials on the bottom corner somewhere on the front page.

37014. I find "J. A." there, or "J. H."?—"J. H."—that is Mr. Hewison.

37015. But Mr. Hewison would not have been present when you gave leave to 207 H to take an hour off?—He was not present. He has nothing to do with it; he could come with the night duty certainly, but I do not think he was present.

37016. How does Inspector Hewison know whether or not you had given permission to P.C. 207 to go off at 5 o'clock?—He does not know, only the authority is given to me to give the constable an hour off if he is entitled to it.

37017. I quite follow that, but how does Inspector Hewison know that you have given that authority or not?—He does not know.

37018. Then why does he pass this sheet as correct upon the statement of the sergeant only. I am only asking for information. It may be quite right?—The Sub-divisional Inspector checks the states as to the duties of the men the previous day, and I don't suppose he knows anything about that hour because he would not be present when the monthly orders were read.

37019. Then when Sub-divisional Inspector Hewison signed this, he would not in the ordinary state of things make any inquiry of you as to whether you had given P.C. 207 an hour off?—No

37020. Does he ever make that sort of enquiry?—Sometimes, if he thinks right. Sometimes he asks about the different constables going off, and what for.

37021. If his attention is directed in any special way to something in the State that requires information, he asks for it?—Yes, anything particularly.

37022. But in the absence of something on the State itself that would look suspicious, Inspector Hewison would not go and make any enquiries of you about the matter?—No.

37023. So that it really does come back to that, that if a sergeant chose to state "P.C. 207 off 5 a.m.," that there is no document in existence that will check the accuracy of that statement?—There is no check.

37024. No document?—No.

37025. When P.C. 207 went off, assuming that he did, as I suppose he did, go off at 5 a.m., is it his duty to go back to the station to report himself?—He would go, in this instance, to the station, and report himself to Sergeant Duffin.

37026. Sergeant Duffin would be there then?—Yes.

37027. At 5 a.m. you are still out patrolling?—Yes.

37028. And Sergeant Duffin would be at the station?—Yes.

37029. Would Sergeant Duffin make any entry anywhere of the P.C. reporting himself when he arrived at 5 or five minutes past?—No.

37030. How is that?—It is not the practice.

37031. But the regulation says: "Officers in charge of stations are to enter in the Occurrence Book at the expiration of their tour of duty a list of constables who have been taken from their beats for any purpose, and for however short a time." Would it be your duty, then, if it is not Sergeant Duffin's duty, to make an entry of whether P.C. 207 arrived at the station and reported himself as off duty? If it was not Sergeant Duffin's duty to make an entry somewhere, was it not your duty when you came back?—No, Sir, not in that case. That note refers to constables being called away from their beats to things that happen in the street.

37032. You say that is the way you construe it?—If they go off duty for any purpose for time due to them, the only check we have is the sergeant's State. The sergeant responsible for that man enters the relief on the back of the Statement. That is the official document for the constables.

37033. So that if a sergeant and a police constable were in collusion for any purpose, the superior officer might easily be deceived?—I don't think that would occur.

37034. I hope it does not. But supposing it did occur. You know the evidence here is that the sergeant had been observing P.C. 207 maltreating a man—whether rightly or wrongly, at any rate, the evidence is the sergeant was a witness of a certain occurrence. If the sergeant was desirous of shielding the police constable, and it was desirable to get the police constable off home, as far as I can see, the sergeant would say to him: "You go off, and report yourself off duty, and I will enter in the State that you are off for monthly orders"?—Yes.

37035. I am putting to you that might occur as far as I can see?—That could occur, but when the constable got to the station he would tell the officer who gave him permission to go off. He could not go off without the sergeant's permission.

37036. Then, as I understand, you were not there. He told Sergeant Duffin that Sergeant Anderson had given him permission?—That is me.

37037. But there is nothing in writing to show that?—There is nothing in writing.

37038. Off goes P.C. 207 where he likes, and then the next thing is the sergeant makes up the State at 6 a.m., and makes this entry?—Yes.

37039. It is not laid before you, but it goes to Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison?—Yes.

37040. And he passes it?—Yes.

37041. You told me he passes it as a matter of course unless his suspicion is excited by something on the State itself?—He checks it when necessary.

37042. The checking of the number would not enlighten him on the question of whether P.C. 207 obtained his permission to go at 10 o'clock at night to go off at 5 o'clock?—No, the responsibility is placed in the senior officer of each relief.

37043. That means that a great deal of responsibility is thrown on the sergeant, does it not?—Yes.

37044. Therefore that gives him the opportunity, if he likes, of shielding an erring officer, if he likes?—If he likes. But this night I was the senior officer in charge of the night duty, and there was no other station sergeant or inspector; all the others were either sergeants or acting-sergeants.

37045. But Sergeant Duffin was acting virtually as acting-sergeant the other part of the time?—Yes.

37046. His duties that night were exactly what your own would have been?—He would take instructions from me.

37047. That I understand, but when you were away from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m. his duties at the police station were precisely the same as yours would have been if you had been there?—Yes.

37048. What they had been from 10 till 2 a.m.?—Yes.

37049. Will you look at the Occurrence Book, or perhaps I had better ask you a question. There is no entry in the Occurrence Book as to any variations of beat on that night. You explain that by saying the regulation does not apply to variations of beat made by a sergeant's order?—Only when it is on the State. That is my own entry of the monthly orders being read to the constables.

37050. I still do not quite understand (I daresay it is my own fault) how and why an hour was due to P.C. 207?—Of course, the men on night duty are out all night, to 6 a.m., and when they are called out for special instruction and for monthly orders—they are generally called about 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and they are called from their beds—they are allowed an hour off by the Commissioner.

37051. Then you make an entry in the Occurrence Book?—Yes.

37052. I will just read this that it may go on the shorthand note. This was the occasion on which P.C. 207 was present?—He was present.

37053-4. "I beg to report having read the superintendent's memo.'s, ex-memo.'s, and the general orders, and explained same to the night duty relief from 3 to 4 p.m., 8th inst. Correct.—Anderson, Station Sergeant"?—That is right.

37055. Are those constables who go to this instruction recruits?—No, the whole of the men.

37056. It applies to the whole of the men?—To the whole of the night duty men.

37057. What is the necessity for that?—There are special memoranda sent out from Scotland Yard and by the superintendent each week, with different variations in their duty, and to instruct constables as to exactly what has taken place, so that they will know how to act.

37058. Things not contained in the White Book?—That is so. They come into the White Book afterwards.

37059. Very often they are in the next edition, I suppose?—Yes.

37060. Would a new County Council's bye-law, for instance, be mentioned?—First of all, when the bye-law came out it would come out as a memorandum, and afterwards it would come out as a regulation, and be printed in the White Book.

37061. So that when there is a new bye-law which gives power to constables, that is one of the things you would instruct the men about on the monthly orders business?—Yes.

37062. Is there any note anywhere which shows that 207 H was present on August 8?—There is no note, only that he is included there. That entry includes the whole of the night duty men; that means the sergeants and the constables.

37063. Supposing on this occasion when they were paraded, before they went out on the morning of the 21st, one of the constables, 207 H, say, says to you: "I should like to have leave in respect of the hour due to me," how would you know whether you had given him the hour before?—The sergeants know. The sergeant appointed to his section would know. I should know; if he asked for the hour a second time in that month I should recollect it.

37064. Why? You have to recollect so many things. Thirty-eight men were paraded that night, you say, and it was all done in fifteen minutes?—Thirty-eight to forty men. If a constable were to ask for leave off a second time that month I should remember it.

37065. It would be all a chance whether your memory was pretty fresh about the matter, and not greatly charged about other things, would it not?—I do not think that would occur.

37066. At any rate, there is nothing in writing about the matter?—No; only on the Sergeant's State.

37067. The Sergeant's state is not made up till the next morning. You mean, if 207 H had had his hour some days after the 8th August it would appear on the State?—Yes.

37068. On the former state?—Yes.

37069. But you do not have time to look back to all that in fifteen minutes?—No.

37070. It seems to me that you would have to crowd a good deal into fifteen minutes. You have to examine the men's appointments, their lamps, truncheons, gloves, and overcoats?—Yes; the men's general appearance.

37071. Thirty-eight men?—Of course, it could easily be found out whether that man had the hour a second time that month, because the whole of the night duty State could be produced for that month. If he went off any other time during that month for that same hour it would be recorded on the state.

37071*. Have you looked at the state to ascertain that?—No.

37072. Perhaps you might do that when you get back to the station, and see if 207 H had been given an hour on any other day since the 8th August?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We have them here.

(The Witness.) He would only get one hour that month for that monthly order.

37073. (Mr. Dickinson.) Will you tell me what 207 H was doing on Tuesday?—It is on the state for Tuesday, the 21st.

37074. (Chairman.) There appears to be another constable of the name of Ashford?—Yes; that is 207's brother. His number is 27 H reserve, and I think he has got about double the service.

37075. (Mr. Dickinson.) Can you tell me what 207 H was doing on Tuesday?—207 on the 21st (that is the following night) was posted to 10 and 11 beats.

37076. When a police constable has an ordinary row with a man in the East End, and he is troubled with a drunken man, would it be his duty to report that to you?—No. If he was drunk and disorderly in the street, and the constable interfered and got the people away quietly, there would be nothing to report unless he was posted to a point where he might be called away some distance.

37077. Supposing a man is troublesome, and the policeman has to struggle with him, and the particular sergeant sees him, would it be his duty to report it to you?—Not in an ordinary way. If a man was drunk and riotous, and the constable had to take hold of him to assist him, and said, "Come along; get out of it; get away home," or anything of that sort, and he went home, there would be nothing to report.

37078. The sergeant met you at half-past four?—Yes.

37079. According to the story, the sergeant had seen this struggle going on. If it had been an ordinary struggle he would not have reported it to you?—No.

37080. If he had seen the policeman give the man a blow, he would report it to you?—Certainly. A constable has no right to assault anyone. It is the sergeant's duty, if he sees it, to bring it to my notice that night, and report it.

37081. I suppose the same thing would apply if he saw the constable kick him?—Certainly.

37082. It would be his duty to report it to you when he met you in the street?—Yes.

37083. What were you doing all that time between two and six?—Visiting in the various parts of the subdivision, patrolling as many streets as possible.

37084. Do you patrol in the same way as a rule?—No. We vary the patrols every night, so that the constables are unaware which way we are coming or which way we are going.

37085. Can you give me any idea as to the direction in which you went on that particular night?—Yes, by my entry.

37086. Tell me?—I only presume by the way my points are laid. When I left the station I went into High Street, Shoreditch, along by Shoreditch Church, and Hackney Road.

37087. That is on the other side of the railway?—Yes. I met the sergeant on the third section first. That is Bethnal Green section.

37088. What time did you meet him?—I met him at 2.45.

37089. Then what happened?—That would be Sergeant 19. Then I left him and I went from there to Gibraltar Walk. That is in the Bethnal Green Road, near the Post-office. I should patrol all round Bethnal Green and round to Vallance Road.

37090. At what time did you get there?—At 3.30. Then I worked my way on to the second section, and met Sergeant Sheedy at Hanbury Street at 4.30. From there I should patrol round the neighbourhood of Spitalfields, and round Spitalfields Market, and round the top end of Shoreditch, near the Police Station, and get there at six o'clock.

37091. Sergeant Sheedy knew you would be at Hanbury Street?—At 4.30.

37092. I presume he knew you would not have got there before?—No. I may have got there at four o'clock.

37093. You told him you would meet him at 4.30?—Yes. Or I may have got there at half-past two, or half-past three, or any time I liked.

37094. Is it usual for you to get there at other times?—No; I might meet him there. He would not expect to see me there until half-past four, but I might go through there four or five times if I wished.

37095. He would know you had the other side of the railway to do first?—No; he would not.

37096. He would have no knowledge of what you were doing or where you might turn up?—No. The sergeant on the section only knows.

37097. (Chairman.) The sergeant on the section only knows by the note you have given him?—Referring to himself.

37098. But another sergeant might tell him, I suppose?—If the sergeant had met him he might know.

37099. Would it be a breach of duty for them to exchange that confidence?—No; I do not think it would be.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not know whether you would like to ask this witness about the character of these two men.

37100. (Chairman.) We receive character evidence on this inquiry. A very good character was given by Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison to them. What do you say about the character of 207 H and Sergeant 5 H?—Sergeant 5 H has only been in our district a short time. During the time he has been there he has been a very good sergeant and very reliable. Ashford is a very reliable officer. I have only been in that district three years, but I believe he is a very reliable officer. I do not think there has been any complaint.

37101. (Mr. Dickinson.) Where did he come from?—I believe he was a constable in Westminster, at Cannon Row.

37102. In the C Division?—No; in the A Division.

37103. He got promoted?—Yes.

37104. (Mr. Whitmore.) Ashford is a married man, is he not?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did you ask where Sheedy came from? I think Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison told us he came from the C Divison.

37105. (Chairman.) Yes, but nothing was said about whether he was promoted?—I think Sheedy did most of his constable's time at Westminster.

37106. (Mr. Dickinson.) You answered me that he was promoted to your Division?—I could not answer that.

37107. He was a constable, and he was promoted to sergeant?—I think just before he was promoted he was transferred from the A to the C Division.

P.S. Charles Duffin, 81 N, sworn.

P.S. C. Duffin.

37108. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) How many years' service have you had in the force?—About 16½ years.

37109. How long in the H Division?—3½ years.

37110. What rank did you hold in August of last year?—Section Sergeant.

37111. Have you since been promoted?—Yes.

37112. What are you now?—Station Sergeant.

37113. Were you sharing night duty with the last witness in August?—I was.

37114. Does the book there correctly record how you shared your duty on that Monday with the last witness?—Yes.

37115. The book states that you had to meet Sergeant Sheedy that night at what time?—At Carter Street at 12.30 a.m.

37116. Did you meet him?—Undoubtedly I did. I do not recollect it. There would have been an entry there if I had not met him.

37117. Have you any particular recollection of the events of that night?—None whatever.

37118. Did anyone make any report to you, or did you ever hear anybody on that night speak of an assault having taken place by a policeman?—No.

37119. When first did you hear anything about an alleged assault by a policeman in this section?—I never heard a word about it until I read the acount of these proceedings in the papers.

37120. You are not now in the H Division?—No.

37121. You are in the N Division?—I am in the N Division.

37122. When were you transferred?—I was transferred on the 12th November.

37123. (Chairman.) What was your number?—6 in the H Division.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) And he is now N 81.

37124. (Earl Russell.) You were in charge of the station from 2 a.m. to 6 a.m.?—Yes.

37125. Have you any note of whether 207 H, Ashford, reported to you before he went off duty?—No.

37126. Are there no means at all by which you can tell us whether he did in fact report to you at 5 in the morning or not?—No, I could not tell you at all. He would report off to me if he went off.

37127. He should do?—Yes.

37128. But you are not able to tell us whether in fact he did?—No.

37129. Would there be any note to show whether he did?—There is only the sergeant's record. That is the only record there is as regards men going off.

37130. (Mr. Dickinson.) When did you leave this particular place?—On the 12th November.

37131. The Inspector never asked you anything about your recollection of what happened?—No, I did not hear anything about it until I read about it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) With reference to your last question, you will remember this man was in the station from 2 till 6, and the complaint was of an assault at 4, so that he would not have been patrolling at that time.

(Mr. Dickinson.) He would have been in the station.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Exactly. I should have thought he was the first person to go to for information.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) About what happened in the street?

(Mr. Dickinson.) To find out whether there had been any report. This is the acting Inspector to whom the constables had to report on going off duty.

37132. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. If any report had been made to you——?—I should have entered it.

37133. It would have been in the Occurrence Book?—Yes.

37134. (Chairman.) I understood from Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison that he inquired of Station-Sergeant Anderson, and did not inquire of you apparently?—I should have told Sergeant Anderson about it, and I should also have made an entry in the Occurrence Book.

37135. When were you transferred?—On the 12th November I went away.

37136. On the 12th November you were transferred to the N Division?—Yes.

37137. We know these inquiries were made after the letter of the 25th November.

P.S. Thomas Sheedy, 5 H, sworn.

P.S. T. Sheedy.

37138. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are a sergeant, I think, attached to the H Division?—Yes.

37139. And your number is H 5?—Yes.

37140. How long have you been in the force?—Thirteen years come May.

37141. To which division were you first attached?—The A Division.

37142. That is at Westminster?—Yes.

37143. How long did you remain there?—Ten years.

37144. Were you then removed to the C Division?—Yes.

37145. I think the date of your promotion was the 23rd June, 1906. Is that the date?—Yes.

37146. Were you then removed to the H Division on promotion?—Yes.

37147. Were you attached to the H Division from the 23rd June, 1906?—Yes.

37148. Were you promoted and transferred at the same time?—You come out on Saturday, and you go on the Monday following.

37149. Were you on night duty during the month of August, 1906?—Yes.

37150. Were you in charge of No. 2 section on Monday, the 20th August?—Yes.

37151. Did you parade with your men at quarter to 10 that night?—Yes.

37152. Did you give Sergeant Anderson the statement as to the number of men you had available?—Yes.

37153. Was that entered on the state?—Yes.

37154. Did Sergeant Anderson give you instructions as to where you would meet him that night?—Yes.

37155. In what form did he give that?—On a small piece of paper.

37156. Did you have that with you?—Yes.

37157. Do you remember where it was?—Yes.

37158. Where?—I met Sergeant Anderson at the corner of Hanbury Street and Brick Lane.

37159. At what time?—4.30.

37160. After the men had been paraded did you march them out to post them?—Yes.

37161. Did you place the men according as you afterwards returned them, on your state?—Yes.

37162. Were your hours of duty from 10 to 6?—Yes.

37163. Did you remain on duty that night during those hours?—Yes.

37164. How did you occupy yourself during that night?—By patrolling the section.

37165. (Chairman.) Section 2?—Yes.

37166. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did you meet the acting-Sergeant or acting-Inspector Duffin that night?—Yes.

37167. Where did you meet him?—Carter Street and Brick Lane.

37168. Do you remember the time you met him?—Yes.

37169. What time?—Half-past 12.

37170. Was that according to instructions which had been given to you before you went out?—Yes.

37171. Did you see anything of Anderson or Duffin that night, as far as you remember, except on those two occasions?—No.

37172. Did anything occur on your section that night to which your attention was specially directed?—Nothing specially that I am aware of.

37173. How long would it take you to get round the section?—To walk around the outside, I dare say I could walk around in about three-quarters of an hour.

37174. And in the ordinary course, how many times, whilst you were on duty, would you visit each constable?—On an average about four times, I should say.

37175. Have you any special recollection what you did that night with reference to visiting the men?—No.

37176. But in ordinary course you would visit each man about four times?—Yes, about four times.

37177. Did you find any man off his beat that night?—No.

37178. Would it be part of your duty to make a report of that if you had found that a man was off his beat?—Yes, he would do so himself, and I would record it.

37179. Would it be your duty to record the fact if any man had been found off his beat?—Yes.

37180. Did you know either of the persons who has given evidence here. First of all the woman—did you know Ethel Griffiths by sight in August, 1906?—No, I had never seen the woman to my recollection.

37181. Or did you know the man Gamble by sight?—No.

37182. You know Osborn Place, do you?—Yes.

37183. It is said that some time in the morning of Tuesday, Constable 207 knocked Gamble down and kicked him in Osborn Place, and that you were present. Is that so or not?—No.

37184. Did you see anything of the sort on your section?—No, nothing whatever.

37185. It is said that you went up and spoke to them and told the man to get up and face the constable like a man, or words to that effect. Have you ever said anything of the kind?—No.

37186. Did you see 207 anywhere in the vicinity of Osborn Place that night?—No.

37187. Or anywhere off his beat?—No, I did not.

37188. Did you know 207 before you were attached to that division in June?—No.

37189. Had you ever seen him before you joined that division?—Never.

37190. Or spoken to him?—Never.

37191. Are you married?—Yes.

37192. Have you a family?—No.

37193. Where do you live—in the division?—On the division, yes.

37194. Whereabouts?—In Derbyshire Street, Bethnal Green Road.

37195. How far is that from this section?—The nearest point I should say would be about half a mile.

37196. Have you lived there since you joined the division?—I have lived there since September.

37197. How long have you been married?—Since September.

37198. You were married in September after you joined the division?—Yes.

37199. (Chairman.) That was last September?—Last September.

37200. After this alleged occurrence?—Yes, a month after.

37201. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) After you came off duty was it part of your duty to make up the State?—Yes.

37202. Did you truly record what the men under your charge had been doing that night?—Yes.

37203. It is recorded there that 207 went off duty at five o'clock?—Yes.

37204. Did he in fact go off duty?—Yes.

37205. Was that in consequence of permission which had been given that he should do so by Sergeant Anderson after you paraded, or whilst you paraded?—Yes.

37206. When he went off duty did you make provision for some of the other men to take over his beat?—Yes.

37207. You divided his beat to others?—Yes.

37208. And when the time came to go off duty did you take the men back to the station?—Yes.

37209. Have you been in charge of that section since?—Not night duty.

37210. But day duty, have you?—Day duty, yes.

37211. Are the sergeants moved to different sections for night duty. How is it you have not taken charge of this one since?—Because it has not come to my turn since. You are on the first section perhaps six months night duty, and then the next time you go night duty you take the third section, or the fourth section, and so on.

37212. So that you were on night duty on section 2 for the month of August?—Yes.

37213. But it has not come to your turn to take night duty on that section since?—No.

37214. But have you been on the section day duty?—Yes.

37215. When was that, do you remember?—Frequently. It is included in the first section day duty. The first section day duty has the same ground as the first and second night duty.

37216. When first did you hear the suggestion that an assault had been made by a constable in some portion of this section?—I think it was in November, to the best of my recollection.

37217. Who did you hear of it from?—There was an entry put in the Memorandum Book—"Did anyone witness an assault."

37218. What were they to do?—They were to see the Sub-Divisional Inspector.

37219. Was that the first you heard of it?—Yes, that was the first I heard of it. I think it was in November. I am not quite sure.

37220. So far as you are concerned, is there any truth in the suggestion that you witnessed anything in the nature of an assault upon this man by any constable on this night?—None whatever.

37221. (Earl Russell.) You understand the sugges-

P.S. T. Sheedy.
5 Mar. 1907.

tion which the witnesses have made against you at present is that you saw trouble with a policeman amounting to an assault taking place, and did not stop it?—That is so. I have heard so.

37222. And did not report it?—Yes.

37223. You understand that is only a suggestion of a breach of duty. I want you now to remember that you are on your oath, and I want you to answer these questions quite truthfully. Do you say that you never saw on that night Constable Ashford, 207, speaking to a woman, or to Gamble, or having any trouble with them?—No, I did not.

37224. Nothing of the kind happened?—Nothing whatever.

37225. You did not see Ashford having trouble with anyone on that night?—No.

37226. It is not true that when there was a man on the ground you said he had had enough, or anything of that sort?—No, it is not true.

37227. It is not true that you helped up the man from the ground?—It is not.

37228. Or that you kept back Ethel Griffiths while the man and the constable went away?—No; certainly not.

37229. Or that there were people looking on?—No.

37230. Do you know the Bell public-house at the corner of Osborn Place?—I do not know it by name. I know there is a public-house.

37231. Surely you know the public-house is in your division, do you not?—Not by name.

37232. Not by name, after you have been there eight months?—No.

37233. Do you know that there is a lodging-house adjoining it in Osborn Place?—Yes.

37234-5. Who was the deputy of that lodging-house in August?—That I could not say.

37236. A man called Horne?—I could not remember the name. The only thing I do know about the lodging-house is that I had an inquiry as to a missing person. That is the only time I was ever in the lodging-house. I think at that particular time the inquiry was for a person missing of the name of Horne, who had been a deputy lodging-house keeper there. I remember the incident. I do not know what time it was or what month.

37237. But you know a lodging-house is managed by a deputy, as a rule?—Yes.

37238. And you do not know the deputy of this lodging-house by sight?—No.

37239. Nor by name?—No, I do not.

37240. I suggest to you that in August last the deputy was a man named Bill Horne. Cannot you remember that?—No.

37241. And I suggest to you that on the 21st of August you were talking to Horne when he called your attention to this disturbance in the street—in Chicksand Street or Osborn Place?—No such thing.

37242. Did you not talk to any common lodging-house keeper or to anybody of that sort during your turn of duty that night?—No, I did not. I do not know one in the whole of the division.

37243. On the 21st of August you had been not quite two months a sergeant, I think?—That is so.

37244. And not quite two months in this division?—That is so.

37245. If you saw a constable dealing with a man who was creating a disturbance, but who afterwards went away—I mean to say, if a constable were keeping him off from having a fight, or anything of that sort, and the man afterwards went away quietly, you would not think it necessary to report that?—Yes, I should certainly direct the officer to take his name and address. Of course, there are different sorts of squabbles.

37246. Exactly. Supposing a drunken man appeared to be about to put up a fight, and then went away quietly, you would not think it necessary to report that?—No.

37247. Supposing you saw, as you thought, a man and a woman fighting, or going to fight, and a constable succeeded in separating them, and the man went one way and the woman another, you would not think it necessary to report that, would you?—Not in the usual way, if it did not amount to an assault.

37248. You do not report every squabble that takes place between people in Brick Lane?—It depends on themselves. If they go away quietly we do not.

37249. Osborn Place is about 300 yards from where P.C. Ashford ought to have been on duty, is it not?—Yes, I daresay it would be.

37250. Do you remember meeting Sergeant Anderson that night at 12.30, was it, or was it 4.30?—4.30.

37251. And Sergeant Duffin at 12.30?—Yes.

37252. Do you recollect of your own memory that you met them?—No, I cannot particularly recollect meeting them.

37253. What did you mean when you said you remembered meeting them?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not think I asked him if he remembered meeting them.

37254. (Earl Russell.) I beg your pardon. He said "I remember where I met Sergeant Anderson"?—That was by referring to the state.

37255. Exactly. That is what I mean?—In all cases if anything crops up that we do not recollect we look it up.

37256. Then it is not your own memory you are relying on, but you looked at the state?—Yes, to follow where I had been.

37257. I suggest to you that this is the explanation of what happened. I suggest that you thought that this was a disturbance which was not of much account, that you helped a man up, and that when he went away you did not think it necessary to report it?—No such thing.

37258. Do you really say that no such thing ever happened at all?—No such thing that I know of.

37259. Can you remember seeing Constable Ashford that night. I mean of your own recollection?—No, not particularly.

37260. And it is not true that any of these people looked out of the windows, or were in the street, or saw anything of this kind?—No such thing.

37261. Are you often on duty in Brick Lane. I think you said you had been on duty in the daytime?—Yes, I have been there.

37262. You having been on duty, a man like Wiltshire, who sells papers, would see you?—Yes.

37263. If he did not see you from 10 o'clock in the morning until late at night, and if you had not been on night duty, he would not have seen you?—He would see me between six and ten.

37264. But you had not done much night duty on this particular section?—Not on this particular section.

37265. You mean between six and ten at night?—No, in the morning, day duty.

37266. You would be on duty till 10 a.m. in the morning, you mean?—Yes, till ten.

37267. Does the deputy of this lodging-house in Osborn Place generally sit on a chair, or very often sit on a chair at his door?—That I could not say.

37268. Never seen a chair there with a man sitting on it at night?—At night?

37269. Yes?—No. I have seen him lean about.

37270. And you say you were not talking to a man who was sitting on a chair at the door of that house that night?—No, I was not.

37271. Not at all?—No.

37272. That is all you can tell me. You say you know nothing more?—No. I do not know anything about it.

37273. You know nothing about this occurrence?—No.

(Chairman.) You have some recollection, I suppose, of the roster of August last?

37274. Did you look it up in the book at all when you knew you were to come here to give evidence?—I have only looked at the state, first of all, to see whether I was on that particular section that night. I have seen the state.

37275. You have not looked at the book?—Not at the book.

37276. Or at the roster, as it has been called?—No.

37277. Apart from the state, which you yourself, I understand, made up at 6 o'clock on the morning of the 21st of August, you have no note of anything that took place that morning or the night before, as I understand it?—No; that is so.

37278. You do not keep the little slip of paper that was handed to you, giving the place of meeting with the sergeant?—No, we destroy that after we meet the last time—at least, I do.

37279. After you meet the last time?—After the state is made out. I pin it in my helmet, and before I go home I destroy it.

37280. But in this case it would be rather a valuable document to you, because it would show whether you were at the appointed place?—In the event of my not being at the place appointed the sergeant or the acting inspector would wait and ascertain, and I should have to go and report where I was at the time.

37281. I suppose that is so, but you would also put on the back of the state, would you not, that you had not met the sergeant?—Yes.

37282. If, in fact, you had not met him?—Yes.

37283. If there is a controversy between you, you would have that little paper to refer to, I suppose?—Yes.

37284. You say that is destroyed when the state is made or passed by the Sub-divisional Inspector. You do not keep that?—No.

37285. When you paraded the men of your section at 9.45 on the 20th August (we have the fact that you did so) did you state to any of them at all as to where they were to be posted that night?—Yes. I speak to them individually and tell each man.

37286. At 9.45?—At 9.45.

37287. When they are on parade?—When they are on parade.

37288. Whilst the inspection is going on?—Yes.

37289. Is that so?—When the men fall in we take their numbers.

37290. You take the numbers of the men on your section?—The numbers of the P.C.'s on that section. We then go upstairs to regulate the men. I may be on the second section, and there may be four men more on my section than what there are on the next section; then we divide the men. I should probably have to turn two men over to equalise the sections.

37291. Why. The whole thing is determined by the roster. There were 11 beats in your second section that night, and a constable was assigned to each beat?—Yes, but probably some of those men were doing something else. They may have been at the police court.

37292. We know exactly from your state what the condition of things was?—Yes.

37293. And you had really only 7 men available for beat duty that night?—Yes.

37294. Do you mean to say that you might have taken men from another section if you had asked for them?—Except that I was much shorter than the other section, you will find.

37295. I find on the state that your whole strength was 16?—Yes.

37296. And you ought to have had 11 men available for beat duty. There were 11 beats?—Yes.

37297. According to the roster, you ought to have assigned a man to each beat?—Yes.

37298. Whereas, as a matter of fact, you had only 7 available?—Yes.

37299. You knew that by 9.45, I suppose?—Yes.

37300. Had you seen any of the men before the inspection began at 9.45?—No. They fall in at 9.45; we then see our strength, and then we call the numbers over and see who is present.

37301. Do you call the numbers over in the presence of the Inspector or the police-sergeant?—Yes.

37302. Which?—Whoever the parading officer is.

37303. You are not the parading officer in that case?—No, except for my own particular section.

37304. What is the first thing you do when the men have fallen in? They know they belong to your section, do they not?—Yes.

37305. It is all done on the first Monday in August, we are told?—Yes.

37306. The men fall in properly?—Yes.

37307. They know you are their sergeant?—Yes.

37308. What happens when the men fall in?—You call the numbers over to see who are present.

37309. You do?—Yes, on my section.

37310. Not the parading officer?—No, the sergeant.

37311. Is that done at 9.45 or before 9.45?—At 9.45.

37312. In the presence of the parading officer?—Yes.

37313. After you have got the numbers of those in attendance, do you give them any instructions, or what happens then?—Not for a moment, till we see how the other sections are. Perhaps there may be men belonging to other sections who are taken away for some other duties; we then equalise the reliefs or the sections.

37314. You equalise them?—Yes. Probably I may have 11 men working on my section and another section may only have six men.

37315. Do you hand over men?—Yes, I hand over men.

37316. How came it that no men were handed over to you that night, then?—They are all accounted for.

37317. I am not saying they are not. You did not want more men?—I could not say.

37318. You had 7 men to do the work which was assigned on Monday, 1st August, to 11 men. That is perfectly clear?—Yes.

37319. (Mr. Whitmore.) How many men were available from the other sections that night? Do you remember that?—I could not say, except I looked at the duty book.

37320. (Chairman.) At any rate, you did not get any men from the other sections that night, if your state is accurate? This is your state. You can look at it (handing)?—If I got any men from other sections they would be marked there.

37321. There is nothing of the kind suggested there. Does anything at all pass between you and the men before you march them out to go on duty at 10 o'clock?—After the sections are equalised we then post them to their beats where they are going.

37322. You say, "After the sections are equalised," but it is perfectly clear the sections were not equalised from the numbers I have before me. Your section remained where it did. You had nothing but the men who ought to have belonged to your section?—Yes.

37323. According to the roster of the first Monday in August?—Yes.

37324. There was nothing done on that night in the way of relieving the section, as far as you were concerned?—Probably there may not have been.

37325. Was there? If there was it ought to appear in your state?—If I lent any men or received any men it would be on my state.

37326. Why are you in doubt at all?—I could not speak as regards whether I received any or lent any that night.

37327. The state would not show you?—Yes, the state would show me.

37328. I mentioned that a moment ago?—I was just reckoning up the men; I did not know for the moment what the strength was on that particular night.

37329. I am only trying to ascertain what took place on this night, and I offered you your state to refresh your memory. Then, after looking at the state you go back and talk about equalising the sections. What has equalising the sections to do with it?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There may be an equalising of the sections the other way.

37330. (Chairman.) I have not asked him anything about taking away a man from him that night or bringing him another man?—You see 15 men here. I am supposed to see that all are shown. There are seven of my men working on beats. There is a P.C. at Hanbury Street, there is one at the police court, there is one on reserve, there is one at Vallance Road patrol, there is one at High Street, Shoreditch, patrol,

P.S. T. Sheedy.

5 Mar. 1907.

there is one at Commercial Street, Shoreditch, there is one on a fortnight's leave, and there is another on annual leave, which makes up the 15.

37331. We know all that, because we have had that elaborately explained to us, but I am only putting a very simple question to you. What do you do when the men are paraded at 9.45? They fall in, you say?—Yes.

37332. You keep going back to something about equalising sections. Was there any equalising of sections?—No, not in that case; I see I have not received any or given any away.

37333. Then we come back to where I thought we were all the time. No man was added to you or taken from you in the parade-room?—No, there was not.

37334. Did you give any instructions to the men before you marched them off at 10 o'clock?—Yes, but nothing further than telling them what beats they were posted to.

37335. Why should you tell them what beats they were posted to? They would see that from the Roster?—No. You would probably find according to the Roster some man was posted on 8 beat, and probably he would have to go on 10 beat, and take two beats.

37336. I think that is very likely to be the case. For instance, 207 knew his beat was No. 11 if he looked at the Roster?—Yes.

37337. But on this night, although that was the case, he would not be in the least surprised to be told to go to some other beat?—No.

37338. If you said before you left at 10 o'clock to 207, "I have only seven men for the beat to-night. You are to go to No. 4 and half of something else," he would obey you?—Yes.

37339. You gave the men instructions before 10 o'clock, and I think you must have given some special instructions, as you had only seven men for eleven beats?—Yes.

37340. You gave them by word of mouth, I suppose?—Yes.

37341. They have no note before leaving the station of what you have told them to do?—No note.

37342. No?—There is only the rough piece of paper.

37343. Before you leave the station?—Yes.

37344. All this is done in the fifteen minutes which is given for inspection and parade?—Yes.

37345. About that rough piece of paper, is it written out before 9.45, or when the men parade?—About the time when the men fall in. We are there perhaps ten minutes before the men fall in, we get this ready, and mark them up, 1, 2, 3.

37346. You get a piece of paper, and write down the instructions for the night on that?—Yes.

37347. Do you take that with you when you march them off?—Yes.

37348. Do you keep it at all?—I keep it in the event of not being able to remember it. As a rule, we remember it after the first night or two. We can remember if there is any man changed from one beat. We know by continually patrolling where the men are without referring to this paper.

37349. Then do you think, as you had only seven men that night, you wrote down something on a piece of paper before you went out at 10 o'clock with the men?—I would do so.

37350. You would do it. Do you mean you actually recollect doing it every night during August?—Every night.

37351. What kind of paper do you write it on? You have a note-book, for instance?—Slips of paper—ordinary slips.

37352. You have a note-book supplied to you?—Yes.

37353. Why do you not make the note in the note-book which is given to you as sergeant, instead of doing it on loose slips of paper?—It has not actually got anything to do with the practical notes that you usually put in note-books. We do not utilise our note-books for that purpose.

37354. But that rough piece of paper is very useful to you the next morning, is it not, for making up your State?—Yes, we really make the State from it.

37355. When the rough piece of paper is destroyed, if any question arises as to the accuracy of your State, there is no document by which it can be checked in the least, is there?—We never destroy the paper till we make the State out. Sometimes there are different variations. Probably in the course of a night a man may be taken off his beat for some purpose, he may be detained, or he may be assaulted, which necessitates him being taken off his beat. In that case we would have to cover up his beat.

37356. Supposing on the rough piece of paper you had posted, say, P.C. 20 to Beat 3, and in the course of the night you changed him, for some reason or other, to Beat 5, when you made up your State you might not chronicle that, and you might, if you liked, say that he had been on Beat 5 all the time, whereas in fact he had only been on Beat 5 part of the time?—That would be put in the Remarks.

37357. It ought to be put in the Remarks?—Yes.

37358. If you did that, and the constable shut his mouth, nobody could detect it?—That is hardly likely.

37359. I will accept that at present from you; but suppose you did such a thing, how could your superior officer detect it?—I do not know, I am sure—he could not practically do so, because the superior officer goes over the States and initials them, but all the variations which occur during the night are put on paper, as I do; and after you put the turns down on the respective beats where they have been, then you put also the variations in the Remarks column, if they have been changed.

37360. When Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison looked at this State of yours, did he ask for the rough piece of paper you have talked of?—No.

37361. Then if there was some variation between the rough piece of paper and this he did not know of it?—No.

37362. Except that possibly he knew it was your practice to keep it?—He takes that as a true State. It would be all against us in the event of our not having this man on a particular beat. There may be something turn up—a door may be found open, or something of that sort—and you immediately turn up the state to see who was the man on that beat.

37363. Do you mean that during the night you make entries on this piece of paper?—Yes, if there is any variation.

37364. There were a good many variations this night, were there not?—There are on night duty, as a rule. There are some streets where we have to send a man till 2 o'clock, and others from 11 till 1, and different patrols that way can cover their beats in the meantime, and they fall back on their beats at 2 o'clock, or whatever the case may be.

37365. "Beats from 10 till 12 night, P.C. 110, 1 and half of 3"?—Yes.

37366. "P.C. 124, 1, 4, 8, and 9"?—Yes.

37367. "P.C. 180, 5, 6, and 7 Beats"?—Yes.

37368. Do you mean when these changes of beat take place that you actually enter them out at night, wherever you are?—Yes.

37369. Do you mean at the same time?—Yes, at the same time at which they occur.

37370. But the beats are different the one from the other. I do not quite see how you do it at the same time?—We always know where to find a man by working the opposite way. We can see them in a very short time.

37371. When 10 o'clock came, for instance, did you go and tell P.C., "You must now take half of 3"?—Yes.

37372. P.C. 110, according to the correct arrangements, had No. 3 Beat?—Yes.

37373. That was his beat?—Yes.

37374. Did you tell him he was to have Beat 1 as well?—Yes.

37375. When did you tell him that?—At 10 o'clock.

37376. That was when you began?—Yes.

37377. From 12 till 1, I find, P.C. 110 is on Beats 1, 2, and 3?—Yes.

37378. When did you tell him he had to take up Beat 2? Will you just look at that, and see?—Yes.

37379. (Chairman.) Then I understand from you that on this occasion no man was lent by you and no man was received by you from any other section?—That is so, Sir.

37380. That is what I infer from your State?—Yes.

37381. When you march off your men at 10 o'clock from Commercial Street Station how do you march them down—what direction do you take?—I take a south direction, down Commercial Street.

37382. Do you always follow the same route?—Yes.

37383. Whether you have eleven men with you or whether you have six men with you?—Just the same.

37384. Which of them do you first drop? You march down Commercial Street. Do you turn into Hanbury Street?—Yes.

37385. Do you drop a man there?—That depends. Probably there may be a man who is marching out with me who may have to go up to Flower and Dean Street, and in that case, when I arrive in Brick Lane, at the point of Hanbury Street and Brick Lane, if there is a man on one beat he will fall to the left, and 2, 3, and 4 beats will go to the right, and also the man in Flower and Dean Street and also Montague Street.

37386. You do not go by the number of the beats?—Oh, yes.

37387. Do you march to No. 1 beat first?—You see the beats break up there altogether the moment you enter Brick Lane from Hanbury Street.

37388. I see, No. 1 beat, where you march them to the point, at which Hanbury Street crosses Brick Lane, if you turn to the left you get to beat No. 1?—Yes.

37389. Do you march them all up?—The man would fall out there, and go down there on the left.

37390. Then he comes to No. 1 beat?—Yes.

37391. Then Hanbury Street passes through No. 2 beat?—Yes.

37392. And the man on No. 2 beat would drop off there?—Yes.

37393. Then you drop the men off as you proceed?—Yes.

37394. And 207, I see, on this occasion, had No. 11 beat?—Yes, I marched with him all the way.

37395. No. 11 beat is towards the latter part of Hanbury Street, before it comes to Vallance Road?—Yes.

37396. Am I to understand from this State that you left 207 H on No. 11 beat?—Yes.

37397. You would get there a few minutes after 10, I suppose?—Shortly after 10. As a rule the clock is striking 10.

37398. Did you leave him on No. 11 beat?—On No. 11 beat.

37399. On No. 11 only?—Yes, at the corner. That month I marched, as a rule, up with them, 207 going on the low beats towards Vallance Road, and I also had 104 going on the bakers' strike, and as a rule the men on the other beats on the right.

37400. The man on strike duty you would drop before you got to No. 11 beat?—Yes, as a rule I left off there.

37401. Where?—At that point, near the bakers' strike, as Ashford's, 207, beat commenced there?—

37402. That is, No. 10?—Yes, he had Nos. 10 and 11.

37403. I thought I asked you only a moment ago whether you dropped him at No. 11 on that night, and whether No. 11 was his beat?—He had the two beats. In that case I dropped him on No. 10, where I left off the man on the strike duty at the point of Spelman Street and Hanbury Street. As a rule the man who was on day duty remained there. The man who was on day duty never left that place till we got down there. I then asked him if anything had transpired.

37404. Then No. 10 and No. 11 beat adjoin one another?—Yes.

37405. So that you would drop P.C. 207 in Hanbury Street, and then turn off from Hanbury Street to get to his No. 10 beat?—Yes.

37406. He also had No. 11 beat?—Yes.

37407. And No. 11 beat extends right to Vallance Road?—Yes.

37408. Then it is quite possible that at 12.30 he might have been met in Vallance Road by somebody?—Oh, yes, he may have been.

37409. Did you give him any instructions as to the particular way in which he was to go round his beat?—Oh, yes.

37410. Did you give them in writing or by word of mouth?—There is a general order on the matter as to the way the beats are to be worked.

37411. I have got the General Order here, but it does not say anything about any particular street?—No, but all the beats are worked in the same way.

37412. How do you mean they are all worked in the same way. I know that the constables have to walk their beats at the rate of 2½ miles an hour, and on night duty on the inside of the pavement, and so on, but is it not in the discretion of the constable who is going on his beat as to what direction he takes?—Oh no. He may only work it in the proper way, except we have got instructions from the parading officer to work it differently.

37413. If you drop 207 at the corner, where you say when you came to No. 10 beat, Spelman Street, he is equally on his beat if he walked straight along Hanbury Street?—Yes, but he would be working the opposite way.

37414. How do you mean?—He would be working to the left.

37415. They tell him to work to the left?—He is not supposed to work to the left. He works to the right.

37416. If he works to the right he would go along Hanbury Street?—No. He has only got the one side of Hanbury Street, that is the left side, going down Hanbury Street.

37417. But when you get up Spelman Street, on one side is Hanbury Street, and there is No. 9 beat, and on the other side there is No. 10 beat?—Yes.

37418. When you drop P.C. 207 what road does he go up then?—He goes up Spelman Street.

37419. To the left?—He turns on the left really, but he works Spelman Street to the right.

37419*. On the right hand?—On the right hand of Spelman Street.

37420. Would he go right to the end of his beat on the outside of it?—He would take the outside most probably.

37421. In that case he would get into Buxton Street?—Yes.

37422. And still keeping to the right he gets into Vallance Road?—Yes.

37423. Then he walks down Vallance Road till he gets to Hanbury Street?—Yes.

37424. Then he would keep the houses on his right parts?—Yes.

37425. And then walk along Hanbury Street till he comes to the schools?—Yes.

37426. Does not he go through the cross streets at all?—Oh, yes, of course he works the inner streets as he comes to them. He works to the inside.

37427. When he works in Spelman Street he comes to a street called Pelham Street?—Yes.

37428. Pelham Street divides No. 10 beat into two parts?—Yes.

37429. Does he walk along Pelham Street?—Yes.

37430. When he gets to the end of Pelham Street, if he works to the right he has to turn down into Deal Street?—Yes.

37431. Then keeping to the right he comes back into Hanbury Street?—Yes, he would not work the whole of that, for if he did he would work right to the point in Hanbury Street, and then cross over the road, and work the inner part of the other side, which would bring him on the right hand of Pelham Street again?

37432. And then he would walk back into Spelman Street, or a continuation of it?—Yes.

37433. Then he walks up and gets into Buxton Street?—Yes.

37434. You mean that they are the general instructions given to him?—Yes.

37435. So if he follows the general instructions of walking to the right, he needs no more specific direction than that?—No. If we see him walking in any other way we tell him.

37436. As far as I can make out, P.C. 207 was walking these two beats the whole night until 5 o'clock, when he went off duty?—Yes.

37437. You did not give him the half of any other beat, or there was no variation during the night at all?—No variation in his two beats at all.

37438. Then I think I may infer from that that he might have been in Vallance Road at half-past 12, or half-past 1, or half-past 2, or half-past 3?—Yes.

37439. He might have been?—He might have been.

37440. It is stated by Ethel Griffiths that she met him in Vallance Road, or close by Vallance Road?—Vallance Road.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Hanbury Street.

37441. (Chairman.) In Hanbury Street, near Vallance Road. How many times do you think in the eight hours, or it would be seven hours in this case, supposing nothing happened to take him off his beat, would he go round his beat. You know the beat well, I take it?—I do. He might go five or six times.

37442. Do you know where the schools are in Hanbury street?—Yes.

37443. They are not far from Vallance Road?—No.

37444. Supposing you drop him at Spelman Street at a quarter-past 10, or ten minutes past 10, that would be about the time, would it not—it would take you about ten minutes to get there from the station?—Yes, about that time.

37445. It would be about ten minutes?—Not as a rule—about five minutes I should say.

37446. About five minutes past 10 you drop him there?—Yes.

37447. How long would it take him to work round to the schools in Hanbury Street, do you think?—That depends. Probably he might have something to keep him, such as doors being found open, and probably he might on making inquiries at a particular door find someone was working there.

37448. If he found any door open or anything of that kind that might delay him?—It would do so. He would satisfy himself that all was correct.

37449. It would be his duty then to enter that in his notebook?—Not when men were working late and gave satisfactory accounts.

37450. He would not necessarily enter every incident in his notebook?—Oh, no. He would satisfy himself that everything was correct.

37451. Then supposing that nothing, such as a call of fire or an arrest, or any prolonged investigation of the condition of the particular houses took place, what do you estimate as the time that would be taken in working from where you dropped him, round to the schools in Hanbury Street?—I should say about a little over half an hour—35 minutes perhaps.

37452. That would be practically finishing his beat, would it not, except for the length of Hanbury Street, from the schools to Spelman Street?—Yes, or he may have left that portion and King Edward Street unworked. Probably he may have come down Spelman Street worked to a point into Hanbury Street, and back again, and probably he may have left a portion of that which sometimes in some cases where we think there are men at work we do not touch if there are lights burning, but we call the second time round.

37453. That I understand, but it would take about half an hour?—Yes, about half an hour I should say in the ordinary way.

37454. And that is nearly finishing the beat?—Yes.

37455. He is seven hours on that beat on that occasion. He might do the beat in that case fourteen times, might he not, or twelve times?—He might go twelve times providing there is nothing that occurs.

37456. You told me only five or six?—As a rule with being stopped in various ways. Anything may prevent him, for instance, replying to questions put to him.

37457. You are rather inclined to think in practice it would take him about an hour, or perhaps a little over, to do the beat in the ordinary course?—Yes, I should say so, taking one round with another.

37458. So far as I can make out, if anyone says he was at the schools in Hanbury Street near Vallance Road at half-past 12 there is nothing that you know of to prevent that being true?—No.

37459. So, again, if it is said "I met him at the schools in Hanbury Street at 3.15," there is nothing in this state or in what you know about the arrangements to prevent that being true?—Nothing.

37460. Then with regard to yourself, would there be anything improbable in your being in Osborn Place near the public-house or in Brick Lane near the public-house at half-past 3 in the morning?—No, there is nothing to prevent me from being there.

37461. We know that at half-past 4 you were to be at Hanbury Street?—Yes.

37462. At the corner of Hanbury Street and Brick Lane?—Yes.

37463. It is quite possible therefore that you were in Osborn Place at half-past 3?—Yes, I may have been.

37464. You might have been there at half-past 2?—Yes.

37465. Or half-past 12 for the matter of that?—No.

37466. Why not?—Because I was in Carter Street at half-past 12.

37467. But apart from the appointment at Carter Street at half-past 12, and the appointment at Hanbury Street at half-past 4, it is quite possible that you were in Osborn Place at almost any other time?—Any other time between the times—oh, yes.

37468. Are you prepared to say that you were in fact not there between 3 and half-past 3?—No, I am not prepared to say that, Sir.

37469. Do you work your patrol in any particular way?—According to how we probably may find the men. I may see a police constable when I just begin go on his beat, and in that case he reports to me "All correct," or if there is anything to report he reports it. I may then work on another beat, and in all probability I might have to go right round the extent of that man's beat before I saw him. Again, going round that man's beat I may see another man on the opposite beat. There is no particular way to work.

37470. You have had experience in other divisions, have you not?—Yes.

37471. Is this a more difficult division than others? Are there more disturbances here at night, and are people out later?—Oh, yes.

37472. Very late?—Yes.

37473. One of the witnesses told us he had seen a great many rows, disturbances, assaults, and so on, in the neighbourhood. Is that your experience?—I have experienced more assaults and that kind of thing since I went down to the H Division than I have in the whole lot of my time in the West End.

37474. Would it be an unusual circumstance for you to go through a night without coming across anything in the nature of a disturbance?—Yes, it would be an extraordinary sort of night if nothing transpired. It may be small and practically nothing.

37475. Some drunken people about?—Yes, and some little collection of people.

37476. Some crowd somewhere?—Yes.

37477. Do you enter anything in your notebook when you observe it that would not lead to a charge or an arrest?—No, in that case we do not enter anything. We may come across a crowd of people, and they do not know themselves what they are looking at. I have very often found that.

37478. Supposing the crowd were gathered round two people who were fighting, and when they saw you the fight ceased, and you did not think it was necessary to take anybody into custody, would you enter that in your notebook?—Oh, no.

37479. You would exercise your discretion as to whether it was worth while and proper to make an arrest?—Yes.

37480. And if the fighting ceased, and the men went off, you would not enter anything?—No.

37481. And if you found a constable having an altercation with a man, and the constable did not arrest the man, or did not appeal to you, and the man made off, you would not enter that up, I suppose?—It chiefly depends on the nature of it. On my first arrival I should ascertain what was the matter or what was the reason of the crowd. Then the explanation of the constable would satisfy me as to whether there was anything unusual in the matter.

37482. But supposing the man got up and went away and the constable was left there and he made no charge, and the constable followed the man with the intention of his getting back to his beat. Would you think that was a very unusual circumstance?—I should be guided chiefly by what I saw myself.

37483. You sometimes do meet the constables off their beats, I suppose?—Very rarely. They may cross the road in some cases.

37484. That may be to follow a man, or it may be to get a drunken man home if he does not think there is disorder enough to justify his arrest; the constable may be following a man to tell him to get home, and he might almost, without knowing it himself, get a little bit further than he ought to from his beat?—If he got any distance at all he would record it. We would not ask for a report from a police constable if he was merely across the road, because sometimes we would go up one side of the street and we see a crowd on the other side of the street, and then we go to satisfy ourselves as to what is the matter, and if there is anything, we restore peace and get the people dispersed and there is an end of the matter.

37485. Do you say if you did see a constable standing near a man on the ground and you came up, and you saw his number, even if he did not appeal to you but simply went as soon as you came up, and the man went off, too, when you came up, would you feel it incumbent on you to follow the constable?—I should demand an explanation from him.

37486. Would you follow him and ask for an explanation?—Certainly. If I saw a man lying on the ground I should want to know whether the man was hurt, in the first instance, or how he came to be there.

37487. But supposing you saw him on the ground and the man got up and ran away and the constable followed him?—As a rule, you can generally find out. Suppose a man has accidentally fallen down. In that case, when a man falls down and there is likely to be any injury, we make it our duty to ask him if he will come to the hospital.

37488. Then do you say there was nothing of the kind on this 21st August?—Nothing, that I can remember, Sir.

37489. Do you think you might have forgotten it?—Oh, no, it is not likely I should have forgotten a case of the like that has occurred.

37490. From what you say there are a good many disturbances here, and unless you are applied to, or unless there is something very unusual, you say you might pass it by without entering it in your note book, let alone make a report?—I do not think it is likely.

37491. Have you got the sergeant's report sheet? (Document handed to the Chairman.) Did I understand you to say you had been promoted to this division?—Yes.

37492. Not transferred?—No, promoted.

37493. Not transferred upon being reprimanded?—No.

37494. The first division you were in was Westminster, was it not?—Yes.

37495. You were transferred from Westminster to this division, were you not?—Yes.

37496. That was after a reprimand, was it not?—Yes.

37497. But you say that notwithstanding that, that the transfer from the C Division to the H Division was a promotion?—On promotion.

37498. That is to say you were a police-constable when you were in the C Division, and you were promoted to be a sergeant and transferred on being promoted to the H Division?—Yes.

37499. (Mr. Dickinson.) I want to get from you where you were stationed in those months of July, August, September, October, and November. Can you tell me from this book? Do you understand this book sufficiently?—I have never seen this book.

37500. In July you were on night duty in Section 1?—No, I would not be on night duty in July except on a particular day which may extend to another week.

37501. "First section night duty, July," and at the bottom of that is put "Sergeant No. 5." Is that correct? Were you stationed on Section 1 during the month of July?—That would be day duty.

37502. No, it is night duty here?—I was on day duty in July. We do not do two months together night duty.

37503. In August you are put down as being on night duty in Section 2?—Yes, that is so.

37504. You cannot tell me what you were doing in July?—It would be day duty in July.

37505. You are put down as doing night duty here. Here is Section 2—day duty?——

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There is 5 H and 5 HR.

37506. (Mr. Dickinson.) Yes, but this is 5 H. Here it is day duty, Section 2, in September. Is that correct?—Yes.

37507. And in November, day duty, Section No. 1; I see you are put down here. Were you on day duty in November?—Yes.

37508. That means you are walking about in the day time?—Yes.

37509. Then in October, where would you be?—I should be on night duty again.

37510. Where are you in this book? This is October, and this is the night duty?—It perhaps refers to a particular section.

37511. That is the first section and the second. Were you on another section?—I should not be on the second. This particular month I should be on the third.

37512. Do you, as a rule, have the same constables with you always?—Oh, no, Sir.

37513. There is no rule about that?—No.

37514. You vary?—Yes.

37515. (Chairman.) From month to month?—Yes.

37516. (Mr. Dickinson.) But in the month you have the same constables?—In the same month.

37517. (Chairman.) That is not quite accurate, is it, according to what you have told me. There is such a thing as lending men, and receiving men?—We may have one or two men.

37518. I find on this very 21st August, that Police-constable 200, who, according to the roster, belonged to you, was lent to No. 1 Section for night duty?—That may be.

37519. If you look at the state of the other sergeant, Section 1 sergeant, for the 21st August, you will find the man was on night duty with him that night?—Yes, I should have lent that man to him.

37520. (Mr. Dickinson.) One question about how this constable walks along his beat. In Hanbury Street, if I understand you aright, he would always walk along Hanbury Street from Vallance Road towards Brick Lane?—That is so.

37521. He would never walk in the other direction?—No.

37522. And would he always walk on one side of the road or the other?—Oh, yes. The other side of the road is another beat.

37523. He would always walk on his right?—Yes.

37524. Do you know Hanbury Street?—Yes.

37525. Do you know the chapel there?—Yes.

37526. Where is the chapel?—On the opposite side.

37527. That is the chapel by King Edward Street?—Yes.

37528. (Chairman.) His proper position in the street would be on the other side of the chapel?—Yes.

Police-constable EDWIN ASHFORD, 207 H, sworn.

P.C. E. Ashford.

5 Mar. 1907.

37529. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you No. 207, attached to the H Division?—Yes.

37530. How long have you been in the Force?—Six years last October.

37531. Have you always been in the H Division?—Yes.

37532. Are you married?—Yes.

37533. How long have you been married?—Six years the 18th of last March.

37534. Have you got any family?—One little boy.

37535. How old?—Five years old.

37536. Are you living with your wife?—Yes.

37537. Where do you live?—52, Huntingdon Villas, Bethnal Green Road.

37538. How long have you been living there?—Just over four years.

37539. How far away is that from this section in which you were posted on this Monday night in August last?—About 25 minutes' walk.

37540. I think you have got a clean sheet?—Yes.

37541. I will hand that in. (Handing in document.) Do you remember being paraded for duty on Monday night, the 20th August last year?—Yes.

37542. Was any time due to you for having been present at the reading of orders?—Yes, one hour.

37543. Did you ask to be allowed that hour that night?—Yes.

37544. Who did you ask?—The officer parading us on night duty.

37545. Who would that be?—Station Sergeant Anderson.

37546. Was the hour granted you?—Yes.

37547. Were you told which hour it would be?—I would come off at 5.

37548. Were you told at the time which hour it would be, or is it always the last hour?—Always the last hour.

37549. So that when you were told you would get your hour you knew it would be from 5 to 6?—Yes.

37550. Did you go off duty at 5 o'clock?—Yes.

37551. And where did you go to then?—Home.

37552. Did you go straight home?—Yes.

37553. Did you report yourself to the station before going home?—Yes.

37624. Why did you refuse?—(No answer.)

37625. Why did you refuse all further conversation?—Because it looked like a letter, and I did not want to read her letters.

37626. Delicacy of feeling. Is that what you mean? You did not want to read a private letter?—I did not want to know her business.

37627. Who is Dick Paine?—(No answer.)

37670. Did you see him the day before?—I do not remember.

P.C. E Ashford.

5 Mar. 1907.

with a message to Ethel Griffiths about this case?—No.

37674. You say you did not?—No.

(Chairman.) You did not tell Paine to send a message to Ethel Griffiths?

(Earl Russell.) That is what I understand.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) By "Ginger Jack."

37675. (Earl Russell.) Or at all?—No.

37676. You say you never spoke to Paine about this case?—No.

37677. Do you know a woman named Lily James?—No.

37678. By sight do you know her?—I do not know.

37679. Do you know that woman by sight. (Lily James stood up in Court)?—I have seen her in Commercial Street several times.

37680. I suggest to you that in September last you had a conversation with Ethel Griffiths about Gamble?—No.

37681. Let me tell you what Ethel Griffiths said. Ethel Griffiths said she spoke to you before Christmas.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) A week before Christmas.

37682. (Earl Russell.) A week or a fortnight before Christmas, on a Sunday morning, when you were on duty in Brick Lane?—No.

37683. Do you remember whether you were, in fact, on duty in Brick Lane on the Sunday morning before Christmas?—I do not remember.

37684. At about 12 o'clock midday, near a public-house called The Cranes?—No.

37685. And that she told you she had made a statement about this case, and you said, "What did you do that for? He told me he was a married man, and he told me I was not to recognise him if anything should occur." Did you have any conversation with her?—No.

37686. Did you tell her not to recognise you?—No.

37687. I suggest to you that at the same time that Ethel Griffiths was speaking to you this woman, Lily James, was present, between 12 and 1 o'clock in the day time?—No.

37688. Do you say it never happened?—No.

37689. And you had no conversation with her. Did you ask Ethel Griffiths how the young man was getting on in the hospital?—No.

37690. Did you say, "Keep your tongue between your teeth"?—No.

37691. Nothing of that sort ever happened?—No.

37692. Now, about the other conversation. Were you on duty in a street outside the Carpenter's Arms last Sunday week, I think it was?—Last Sunday week?

37693. (Chairman.) Where were you on duty last Sunday week, I think it was?—Last Sunday week?

37693*. (Earl Russell.) It was on the Sunday previous to the 20th February, according to the evidence. It was on Sunday fortnight, the 17th February?—Yes.

37696. And the Carpenter's Arms was on your beat?—Yes.

37696*. Ethel Griffiths says you asked her what she was going to do?—No.

37699. Nothing of the sort happened?—No.

37700. Did you see Ethel Griffiths at all that night?—No, I did not.

37701. The Monday night on which you say you saw her was the Monday night after that. Was it Monday night, the 18th February?—Yes.

37702. And you say at the same place, at the corner of Lolesworth Street and Wentworth Street?—Yes.

37703. Are you sure, when you say Monday night, you do not mean Sunday night and early Monday morning?—I am quite positive.

37704. Do you say it was before or after closing time when you saw her on the Monday night?—Half-past 12, closing time, or rather Tuesday morning.

37705. Just exactly closing time?—As near as I could say half-past 12; I could not say to a minute.

37706. When do you say you first heard of this kicking, and of this injury to Gamble?—When I heard of it in the paper, the "Daily Telegraph."

37707. In the newspaper?—Yes.

37708. Do you mean that was the first time you ever heard that Gamble said a policeman had kicked him. That is what I am asking you?—On the 25th November, when I was called upon to report.

37709. You heard there had been a letter written about it?—Yes.

37710. And you made a report?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) Will you give me the report?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes (handing.)

(Secretary.) "Commercial Street Station, H Division, November 25, 1906.—With reference to Report called for re alleged assault on Charles Gamlett on August 21, 1906, I beg to report being on 10 and 11 beats, second section, night duty, which includes a part of Spelman Street, on the above date. I do not know the man who has complained; I did not see him, neither did I assault him or know anything of the occurrence.—Edwin Ashford, P.C. 207 H." That is counter-signed by J. Hewison, S.D. Inspector, and J. Mulvaney, Superintendent.

37711. (Earl Russell.) That is what you say now?—Yes.

37712. Were you also spoken to verbally about it by the sub-divisional inspector?—When he read the letter, and asked me if I knew anything about it, I said no.

37713. Just that and nothing more? Did he read over to you the letter the solicitors had written?—He read a letter, but I did not know who had written it.

37714. So that you knew the injury was a serious one which was alleged?—I do not know anything about that.

37715. But you knew what was in the solicitors' letter?—I do not remember.

37716. Was the letter read over to you?—Yes.

37717. The solicitors' letter was?—I do not know whether it was the solicitors' letter or what.

37718. I will read it to you now, and you can tell me whether you have heard it before: "We have just been instructed in the case of George Gamble, and we think it right to lay the facts before you, in order that the facts may be investigated by the authorities. Our client has been in hospital since the assault complained of, and is not yet recovered, but it is proposed to issue process against the police constable complained of as soon as he is able to attend." Was that read over to you?—Yes.

37719. "The facts are shortly as follows:—On the 21st August in this year, in Spelman Street, Whitechapel, George Gamble was speaking to a woman named Ethel Griffiths at about 4 a.m., when after some conversation the constable knocked George Gamble down, and kicked him several times while on the ground. The constable is stated to be aged about 30, with a ginger moustache, and to be No. 207 H. George Gamble, in consequence of these injuries, was taken to the hospital, where he has since been an in-patient." Was all that read over to you?—I do not remember all that: it may have been.

37720. You do not remember whether the whole letter was read over to you?—No.

37721. But you knew the injuries were serious that complaint was made about?—I do not remember.

37722. Did you not take much interest in it?—No.

37723. You were told, I suppose, that your number was given in the letter, were you not?—Yes.

37724. You recognised it might be very serious to you?—I did not know.

37725. You recognised that it might be very serious to you if this charge were proved?—I do not know.

37726. You do not know whether it would be very serious? Is that what you mean?—(No answer.)

37727. Come. You understood you were accused of assaulting a member of the public?—Yes.

37728. And doing him serious injury?—I was accused of it.

37729. And you understood that if it were proved or believed it might be very serious for you, did you not?—Yes.

37730. Then you do not tell me that you did not take enough interest in the matter to pay attention to it?—(No answer.)

37731. What happened next? After you made your Report, did you hear any more about it?—No.

37732. Did you see any other superior officer besides Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison?—No.

37733. When were you next asked about it by your superiors?—Some time last month.

37733*. Whom did you see then?—I saw Inspector Wright.

37734. Did you make any further statement?—I made a statement.

37735. Did you write it yourself, or did you make it verbally?—I think Mr. Hewison wrote the statement made by me.

37736. You do not mean the one that we have just had?—Not my Report.

37737. You think Sub-Divisional Inspector Hewison wrote down your statement?—Yes.

37738. From what you told him?—From what I told him.

37739. Did you sign it afterwards?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) I should like that statement, too.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Of course, you will see that this man stands in a peculiar position. Of course, inquiries have been made with reference to this matter. I have not seen this document myself.

(Chairman.) It appears to have been a document signed by him at the request of his superior officer. It is a document that I think ought to be produced at an inquiry of this kind.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have no objection to producing it at all, but you realise that this man stands in a difficult position.

(Chairman.) We are charged to inquire into the circumstances of cases of this kind, and we have taken up the case. Supposing it were a confession, for instance, I do not see why we should not call for it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have not the slightest objection to handing it to you, but I feel that this man stands, as my friend has reminded him, in a very difficult position. I do not know what proceedings may be taken, or anything of the kind, but I feel bound to ask you to exercise your discretion as to what use shall be made of that statement. I will hand it in, and you will see what it says.

(The Statement was handed to the Commissioners.)

(Chairman.) We have looked at this Statement, and we do not understand what possible reason there can be for your not wanting it to be produced.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have shown it to you in order that you might see it. There is no reason, so far as the investigation of this matter is concerned, why you should not see it, but of course it was taken, for the purpose of investigating into this matter, by the solicitor, and it stands in a peculiar position. I am entirely in your hands. If you think it ought to be produced, let it be produced.

(Chairman.) It is practically what he has told us in the box.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Exactly, and I wished you to see it, in order that you might be convinced that there was no real reason for keeping it back. I am quite willing that any legitimate use should be made of it.

(Chairman.) It is very like the statements that witnesses have made and signed. Earl Russell had them, and you inquired for them.

P.C. E. Ashford.

5 Mar. 1907.

(Earl Russell.) I was going to say that I had much the same objection to handing over proofs.

(Chairman.) It can be read, or handed to Lord Russell.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I make the position clear? Those statements that have been referred to have been made by people who are purely in the position of witnesses, but these men who come here on this charge are really and truly the accused; and, of course, it is going a great deal farther than is the ordinary practice that an accused person should be obliged to produce anything; but for the purpose of investigating the matter I desire to place everything before you, in order that you may satisfy your minds as to what the truth is, and I have placed this statement before you in order that your minds might not be influenced by the fact that it was not produced.

(Chairman.) There is no doubt they are in the position of accused persons, but we have no power to inflict any punishment. We can only record what our opinion is, and we are charged with inquiry.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, but you will bear in mind that hereafter proceedings may be taken against these men (I am not saying whether they will or will not); and then, of course, any of the materials produced here will be available. I am only desirous that you should have the exact position before you, in order that you should exercise your discretion and judgment in the right way. I have produced this document.

(Chairman.) It is entirely in the accused's favour, as far as I can see.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am not saying it is not.

(Earl Russell.) I quite admit that in the case of this particular witness there is a possibility of other proceedings, and if there is anything in it which might lead to the possibility of his being prejudiced I will not press it.

(Chairman.) It appears to me to be a proof taken by the solicitor from him as a witness, and it is exactly what he says in his report. There is no harm in its being read; in fact, it is to the public advantage that it should be read.

(Secretary.) "H, Commercial Street Station, 29th January, 1907. Statement of Edwin Ashford, P.C. 207 H. I paraded for night duty at 9.45 p.m. on the 20th August last, and was posted by P.S. 5 Sheedy to Nos. 10 and 11 beats of the second section, which commences at the corner of Spelman Street and Hanbury Street, taking the right-hand side of Spelman Street to Pelham Street, crossing Pelham Street to Hunt Street to Buxton Street, right-hand side of Buxton Street to Vallance Road, right-hand side of Vallance Road to Hanbury Street, right-hand side of Hanbury Street to Spelman Street (starting point), taking the whole of the interior. I remained on my beats till 5 a.m., when I was relieved for attending the monthly reading of General Orders. I did not assault anyone, and I know nothing whatever of the matter.—Edwin Ashford, P.C. 207 H. Witness, J. Hewison, Sub-divisional Inspector."

37740. (Earl Russell.) Is that all the statement that you made?—Yes.

37741. I suppose you do not remember now everything that you did during that night of the 20th and 21st August?—Yes.

37742. You can remember what happened on your beat?—Yes.

37743. Will you tell me what the incidents of the night were after the sergeant left you at 10 o'clock, or soon after?—Very quiet.

37744. I know, but what did you do, whereabouts did you walk to, which way did you go?—Continued round my beat on the right-hand side in the ordinary way.

37745. That is rather what I meant. You have no special recollection?—No.

37746. You knew you were to be allowed to go at 5 o'clock?—Yes.

37747. Were you allowed to go as soon as it struck 5, or were you to be allowed to leave your beat by the sergeant at 5?—Leave my beat at 5.

P.C. E. Ashford.

5 Mar. 1907.

37748. Without reporting to the sergeant?—Go to the station and report off.

37749. And you did go to the station?—Yes.

37750. What time did you get home?—About a quarter past 5.

37751. I suppose all you had to do at the station was just to report off duty, or something of that sort, and then walk on?—Yes.

37752. No more than that?—No.

37753. Did you go to your lunch just now during the adjournment with Sergeant Sheedy?—No.

37754. Did you not see him during the adjournment?—I saw him, yes.

37755. Did you hear that there was a question about the deputy of the lodging-house near the Bell?—Yes.

37756. He did not tell you that?—No, he never spoke anything at all to me about it.

37757. Perhaps you can tell me who is the deputy of the lodging-house near the Bell. You know the lodging-house near the Bell public-house?—I know there is a lodging-house there, but I do not know the deputy.

37758. You do not know who the deputy was in August?—No, I do not.

37759. Do you know a man named Bill Horne. Do you know if he was the deputy?—No, I do not.

37760. Do you know any man called Bill Horne?—No, I do not.

37761. You say you had seen Ethel Griffiths walking about the streets before August?—Yes.

37762. In pursuit of her calling?—Yes.

37763. Had you ever had occasion to arrest her?—No.

37764. No trouble between you?—No.

37765. Ever spoken to her at all before?—No.

37766. No ill-feeling on either side?—No.

37767. Gamble you had never seen before?—No.

37768. No ill-feeling to him?—No.

37769. He had no reason to have any to you?—No.

37770. Do you know Joseph Wiltshire?—No, I do not.

37771. Do you know Annie Franks—Mrs. Franks?—No, I did not know her until I saw her here in court?

37772. Do you know James Hartnett?—No.

37773. George Brager?—No.

37774. William Hughes?—No, I know the brother of Hughes—the brother to this one.

37775. There has been no unpleasantness between you and any of these people?—No.

37776. No ill-feeling on either side?—No.

37777. If you tell me you know nothing about it I think it is no use taking you through it in detail, but just let me remind you. Ethel Griffiths says you called her on one side and made an improper proposal to her?—No.

37778. When she was walking with Gamble?—No.

37779. She said that she went and told Gamble, and that you followed both of them?—No.

37780. And there was an argument for several yards?—No.

37781. And you then pushed Gamble down and kicked him?—No.

37782. On two different occasions. You deny that anything of the sort ever happened at all?—No.

37783. Then it is no use taking you through all this. All the people who say they saw you kicking him are telling lies?—I know nothing about it.

37784. And never had any conversation with Ethel Griffiths about it?—No.

37785. Nor any conversation with Constable Paine about it?—No.

37785*. (Chairman.) I think you said you did not know Mrs. Franks till you saw her in court. Did I catch your observation aright?—Yes.

37786. Were you in court when Mrs. Franks gave evidence?—When I was brought in. I saw her here at the court, but not in court.

37787. You do not mean you were in court when she was being examined?—No.

37788. You were outside?—I was outside.

37789. You saw her here. Have you ever seen her in Spelman Street or about the neighbourhood at all?—No, I cannot recollect that ever I have.

37790. Or Mr. Rubinstein, who was a witness?—No, I cannot recollect. There are so many Jews about there that it is difficult to recognise them.

37791. I may take it you did not know, at any rate, until this case came up to us for investigation, any of those witnesses?—No.

37792. Except Ethel Griffiths?—That is all.

37793. The extent of your acquaintanceship with Ethel Griffiths was seeing her walking about the streets, I understand?—Yes—not known her by name—only by sight.

37794. Are you sure you did not know her by the name of Ethel or Griffiths, or some name?—No.

37795. She had been there a good long time, she told us, nearly a year, or about a year, walking about?—Never heard her name.

37796. And as far as you know, she was never in trouble?—No.

37797. Then, comparatively for her calling, you might describe her as well-behaved and kind?—Yes.

37798. Not rowdy?—I never had any occasion to interfere.

37799. Have you seen her noisy on any occasion?—I fancy I have seen her a little bit the worse for drink, but no case for police interference.

37800. Then I may take it you knew her by sight pretty well. You seem to have had occasion to see her when she had taken a little drop to drink, and there was no occasion for you to interfere?—I knew her by sight well.

37801. Are you sure you never had any conversation at all with her?—Quite positive.

37802. Except at the time when she came up to you on Sunday fortnight, or Monday evening, I think it was. That was the very first time she came to speak to you?—Yes.

37803. Is this a true account of what took place. I want to know whether my note is correct: "She began by saying 'Can I speak to you'"?—Yes.

37804. I take it she asked you if she could speak to you?—Yes.

37805. "I said yes." She said 'I have a paper here.' I said 'No, I do not want conversation with you.'" What did you mean by saying that immediately after you had told her she might speak to you?—She asked me to read this paper. I said "No, I do not want to read your paper."

37806. Then what did you mean by saying she might speak to you?—I did not know whether she wanted to ask me any question, or anything like that.

37807. Was not that obviously what she was going to do. She said "Look at this paper." Was she not going to ask you for advice?—This paper being a letter I did not read it.

37808. (Mr. Whitmore.) It was not a newspaper?—No. It was a letter which was put in an envelope.

37809. (Chairman.) Here was a woman whom you knew by sight who very courteously asked you if she might speak to you, and you said yes. Then she said "I have a letter here"?—"Will you read it"?

37810. "Will you read it"?—I said so.

37811. Why did you not read it?—I did not want to read other people's letters.

37812. You said she wanted your advice?—I thought she might want me for something else.

37813. For what?—For some other question.

37814. What other question?—I do not know.

37815. You are following what I am putting to you, are you not. Was it not a very natural thing for her when you gave her permission to speak to you to say "Here is a letter, I want you to read it." Evidently she was going to ask you something about it, according to your view?—I do not know.

37816. You had given her permission to speak to you with a view, as you understood, of asking your advice?—Yes.

37817. Why did you stop her. You did not say. "I will not read the letter." You have just told me my note is accurate: "I do not want conversation with you" is what you said?—I believe I said "I do not want to read the letter," or I do not want any conversation with you.

37818. I read my note to you a moment or two ago and asked you if it was accurate, and you said yes. I will read the note again: "She asked me if she could speak to me. I said yes. She said 'I have a paper here,'" and then you added afterwards, "She said will you read it; I said No, I do not want conversation with you"?—I said no.

37819. You did not say "I do not want conversation with you"?—"I do not want anything to do with you."

37820. "I do not want anything to do with you." What had come over you that had determined you, after such a short interview, to say you did not want to have anything to do with her. She had asked permission to speak to you, and you had given it. What made you say "I do not want to have anything to do with you"?—Of course, if we are found talking to women we are liable to be reported for accosting.

37821. Were you afraid that people might suggest if you had been seen speaking to her you had been accosting her; was that in your mind?—Yes.

37822. By that time you knew that one of the charges that were made against you was that you had made an improper overture to that very same woman?—No, not at that time.

37823. On Sunday, the 17th of February?—No, on the 20th.

37824. On Monday I mean before the Wednesday?—No, I never knew anything about that.

37825. Here was a woman, you knew her calling, and you had seen her for nearly a year walking about the streets there?—Knew her by sight.

37826. She asks you to read a paper and you say: "I do not want to have anything to do with you," you yourself having given her permission to speak to you. What is the meaning of it?—Of course I did not want to read anything that was on her paper. I do not know about her business.

37827. Did you form any opinion as to what the paper contained?—No, I did not.

37828. Did you think it was a paper that concerned yourself in any way?—No.

37829. Did you not think that?—No.

37830. It did not flash upon your mind, when she said that, that it might be a summons to come before us?—No.

37831. Then I still ask you why you refused to have any conversation with her. I understand you did not know that she had said anything against you, or was going to say anything against you with regard to this matter of Gamble. You did not know what the contents of the paper were?—No.

37832. Why on earth did you say "I do not want to have anything to do with you," or "I do not want any conversation with you"?—When she asked me to read this paper I said: "No, I do not want to read your paper." I thought she might want to ask some other question. I did not know she wanted me to read any other paper.

37832*. You can read?—Yes.

37833. Did it occur to you that she might not be able to read, and might want you to read it?—No.

37834. What do you think she came up to you for?—I do not know. When she asked me to look at this paper I walked away.

37835. Have you got your note book for August about this?—No.

37836. What has become of it. Has it been handed in in the usual way?—Yes.

37837. Have you got your present notebook?—Yes.

37838. Is it customary for you to keep any record of the number of times you go round your beat?—No.

37839. Or of meeting the sergeant?—No.

37840. You cannot tell, I suppose, after this lapse of time, how many times you went round your beat that morning?—No, I do not remember.

37841. Did anything of any importance at all occur that night, or anything important enough for you to make an entry in your notebook, for instance?—No.

37842. Have you got the notebook here?—Yes. (The notebook was handed to the Commissioners.)

37843. I find on page 29 an entry of September, and on the next page, 30, I find an entry of May 18th. There I find on the other side of the May entry, equally on page 30, September 6th. What is the meaning of the entry "C. Paine" on page 29?—That is a name and address that I had obtained.

37844. Nothing to do with the "Paine" mentioned in this case?—No. An accident, I think it was.

37845. How many times do you think you went over the beat on the 21st August? Or, I will put the question in another way; it may as well be put in a general way. When you are put on 10 and 11 beats, how many times do you think you would, in the course of the seven hours, for it was only seven hours during that day, go over the beat?—About six times.

37846. You have no note, or anything that would indicate where you were at any particular hour?—No.

37847. If I asked you, for instance, whether you were near the school in Hanbury Street, close by Vallance Street, at half-past twelve, could you say you were not there?—I could not say.

37848. You could not say where you were at three o'clock?—No; I could not.

37849. Nor at half-past two?—No.

37850. Did you, after you heard in November of this matter, and were asked to report, and you made your report, try to find out whether any man had been injured at all?—No.

37851. Why not?—It is not my duty to do it as a constable.

37852. It is not your duty as a constable! I should have thought it was, after an allegation of that kind had been made against you. I understand the subdivisional inspector did read the letter from the solicitors to you?—Yes.

37853. Although you may not recollect the contents, you know that you are mentioned there by name, 207 H?—Yes.

37854. You were accused?—Yes.

37855. You also know that Gamble is mentioned by name in the letter?—Yes.

37856. And Ethel Griffiths is also mentioned by name in the letter. When you made the report, if you were speaking the truth, it was quite a proper report for you to make as a constable; but did it not strike you that it would be expedient to make some inquiries in your own interest?—No; because I never knew the man Gamble, neither did I know the name Griffiths.

37857. Had you ever been called upon before on the question of whether you had assaulted somebody?—No. I do not remember that I ever was.

37858. Did you not think it a strange thing that anybody should accuse you of having assaulted a man called Gamble, or any other man?—Yes.

37859. As I understand it, you knew you were entirely innocent?—Yes.

37860. And yet you knew that there was somebody writing to the Commissioner of Police and saying that the man had been much hurt, and that you were accused of having done it, and you contented yourself, as I understand, with making that official report?—Yes.

37861. Do you mean to say that you were not sufficiently interested to go and try and find out who Ethel Griffiths was, and who Gamble was?—No; I did not.

37862. Just think. Was it because you thought it better to let the matter drop altogether, on the chance that nothing more would be heard of it?—No.

37863. You thought they might be in earnest in the matter, and that more might be heard of it?—No; I did not.

37864. Which do you mean? Did you think nothing more would be heard of it after your report?—No.

37865. What did you think?—I did not know what to think. I had never been reported before for having assaulted anyone.

P.C. E. Ashford.

5 Mar. 1907.

37866. The facts were given to you, and the names of the persons concerned, Gamble, and Ethel Griffiths were given to you?—Yes; but there were no addresses, or anything of that.

37867. Did you think it was a matter of pure invention, and that nobody had been kicked by anybody on that night?—I could not say that.

37868. What did you think?—I knew I had not done it, so, of course, I did not trouble any more about it.

37869. You knew you were quite innocent; but people who might be wicked enough to write that letter might be wicked enough to go on and get evidence against you. If people were wicked enough to make a charge against you, it is possible they might be wicked enough to go on with the charge?—Yes; it is quite possible.

37870. Bearing that possibility in mind, do you mean to say you made no inquiries at all, and did not try to find Ethel Griffiths, and did not try to find out who Gamble was?—No.

37871. Did you ask your superior officers to make inquiries?—No.

37872. And point out to them what position you were in?—I think my superior officer, Mr. Hewison, did make inquiries.

37873. He made inquiries, and he made a suggestion which was not acted upon. He wrote back to the Chief Commissioner to say: "You had better ask the solicitor what Gamble's address is." What I cannot understand is why you did not think it incumbent on you to try and find out who Gamble and Griffiths were for your own protection?—(No answer.)

37874. I understand you did absolutely nothing?—No.

37875. And that when Ethel Griffiths came and spoke to you on Monday evening you even did not think it was about this case?—No.

37876. You know now that people were inquiring in or about Osborn Place as to the circumstances under which Gamble had been hurt?—I know now.

37877. Did you not know then?—No; I did not.

37878. That is the only explanation you can give of your not inquiring?—Yes.

37879. (Mr. Dickinson.) When did you first know that there were people inquiring?—I never heard of any inquiries until I was brought up here to the Court.

37880. When did you first hear that there had been inquiries—to-day?—No, when the Commission commenced on the 20th.

37881. Then you heard the evidence given against you?—Yes.

37882. When did you first know that Ethel Griffiths was Ethel Griffiths?—Not until she was called up here.

37883. Had you never heard this woman who had been on the streets for some months called by her christian name?—No.

37884. While you were on your beat that night can you tell us at all where you saw your sergeant?—No. I cannot remember, it is so long ago.

37885. When did Sub-divisional Inspector Hewison first speak to you about this? What did he ask you?—He read this letter, and he asked me if I knew anything about it, and I said no. He gave me a piece of paper, and he said, "You had better make out a report."

37886. Did he ask you whether you knew the names of these people at all?—No.

37887. He did not ask you that?—I cannot remember. He may have done.

37888. Did he tell you anything about Gamble having been in the hospital?—No.

37889. Did you know that they had made inquiries at the hospital?—No.

37890. (Mr. Whitmore.) You first heard that this charge was made in November?—Yes.

37891. Then you made your report?—Yes.

37892. Then the matter hung fire for some time, and you heard nothing about it for some time?—No.

37893. Did you think the case against you had been abandoned?—No, I did not know anything of it.

37894. Did you think if a serious charge was going to be made against you it was the duty of your superior officers to investigate the circumstances?—My superior officer asked me about it.

37895. What I want to know is whether you thought your interests would be properly safeguarded by the action of your superior officers?—Yes.

37897. (Chairman.) There is nothing to prevent you helping them to discover the facts?—I would not be allowed to do that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He would not be allowed to do that. We can call witnesses as to that.

(Mr. Whitmore.) I thought probably it would not be allowed.

(Chairman.) I think it would be more satisfactory if we had some evidence about it. There is certainly nothing, as a matter of law, when a grave charge is made against a man like this, to prevent him going to try to find Ethel Griffiths if he likes.

(The Witness.) You must not do that.

37898. (Mr. Whitmore.) You heard nothing of the matter between November and the middle of February?—No.

(Chairman.) I should like to know what the official view of the duty is.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I ask one question?

(Chairman.) Yes.

37899. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You were called upon for a report with reference to an alleged assault by yourself?—Yes.

37900. You made your report to your superior officer?—Yes.

37901. Rightly or wrongly, do you think it would be right of you to go and make private inquiries for yourself, except upon the orders of your superior officer?—Certainly not.

37902. That was your view of it?—Yes.

(Earl Russell.) I have handed in a statement, but I do not know whether you have had time to look at it. I should like to ask leave to call that witness.

(Chairman.) You put questions founded upon this to the witness.

(Earl Russell.) I did, but we can have direct evidence, I find, of that conversation.

(Chairman.) I will just consult my fellow Commissioners if you will wait a moment.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I want to know the beats at which this constable was posted during those few months from July to November.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, certainly you shall have those. Do you wish to keep the officer's notebook?

(Chairman.) No. Is there any other constable who give evidence as to the events on that particular ...ht that you propose to call?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) They are all available. I think I may be allowed to say this. They have all been interrogated, and none can throw any light upon the occurrence, but you may wish to see them, and they are all here. Some of their beats lay very close to this man's beat. There is also the sergeant who was in charge of the other section which lies on the other side of Brick Lane.

(Chairman.) Section 1?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. Of course, another sergeant would have had charge of the section which included the other pavement of Brick Lane.

(Chairman.) I think it would be more satisfactory if he were called. I think I should like to ask him a question or two.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Certainly.

(Chairman.) I do not think we need have all the constables called.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is entirely for you. We have here a constable whose beat included Osborn Place.

(Chairman.) We might see him.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Is he able to say where he was that night.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, he is not. Nothing was called to his attention. Nobody spoke to any of them.

(Chairman.) I think I should like to see the sergeant on Section 1. What is his name?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Doyle.

(Earl Russell.) May I make one suggestion. There is in the statement which I have handed in a mention of Constable Paine. I think the Commission would probably like the authorities to take a statement from Constable Paine.

P.C. E. Ashford.
5 Mar. 1907.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Instructions have already been given to that effect.

Sergeant ARTHUR DOYLE, H 30, sworn.

Sergeant A. Doyle.

37903. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You are a sergeant of the H Division of the Metropolitan Police?—Yes.

37904. In August last you were in charge of No. 1 Section?—Yes.

37905. Have you got the roster here for that month of August?—I have not it here. It is somewhere here.

37906. You made out what is called a State, I suppose?—Yes.

37907. For the 20th August?—Yes.

37908. That would be the State of the 20th August, which would show what took place on the 21st?—Yes, till 6 a.m.

(Chairman.) Have you that State here?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

37909. (Chairman.) I want you to explain why it was that No. 200 who appears to belong, according to the roster of the 20th August, to another section was with you on that night?—It is quite possible this way. When States were given in at a quarter to 10 I was supposed to have eleven or ten men, as the case may be. There were fifteen men attached to the first section. If I had ten men for beats, that would show me five men short. Probably another section would only be three short. Then one would be sent from that section to mine, which would make me four short, and the second section four short.

37910. Where would that be arranged?—In the station before we went out.

37911. It would be irregular for Sergeant 5 H to hand a man over to you in the course of the night?—That would not be right. That would be done before we went out at 10 o'clock.

37912. Any change of men during the night from one section to another ought not to be done?—No. That takes place before we are marched out, and the men are posted to various beats.

37913. You were in charge of Section 1 on this night in question or on the night and morning in question?—Yes, till 5 a.m., I believe, the following morning.

37914. Would it have been irregular for you as sergeant of the first section to have gone into Osborn Place in Section 2?—Unless I was called there for any particular purpose, an assault, or anything. I should be quite justified then in going.

37915. If you saw a constable kicking another man lying down or anything of that kind?—Certainly, I should go and investigate what it was.

37916. Although it was off your beat?—Yes.

37917. Did you notice anything of that kind on this day in question?—Nothing at all.

(Chairman.) Lily James is the only other witness.

(Earl Russell.) Yes, I think that is the only one. Perhaps you would rather examine her yourself. That is the only proof of her I have got.

(Chairman.) Very well, I will examine her.

LILY JAMES, sworn.

L. James.

37918. (Chairman.) Where do you live?—At Flower and Dean Street.

37919. Are you a married woman?—No, single.

37920. And you are a friend of Ethel Griffiths?—Yes.

37921. I am afraid I must ask you, but do you carry on the same kind of work or business, or call it what you like?—Yes.

37922. Lord Russell has asked us to take your evidence. What is it you want to say about the case?—On a Sunday morning in September me and Ethel Griffiths were walking down Brick Lane between 12 and 1 in the daytime. We saw Constable 207 H. The constable stopped her, and asked her how the young man was. I was by her side. She said he was very bad. The constable said, "What are you going to do?" Ethel Griffiths said, "I do not know. The police-constable then said, "Well, keep your tongue between your teeth, as I am a married man."

37923. Have you seen the constable since?—Yes.

37924. When did you last see him?—I saw him again a fortnight ago on Monday evening.

37925. Have you seen him later than that?—No.

37926. Have you been in Court at all this afternoon?—Yes, I have been in Court this afternoon.

37927. And you have not seen the constable that you heard Ethel Griffiths talking to in September this afternoon?—Yes, I have seen him this afternoon.

37928. 207 H?—Yes.

37929. You have seen him here once since, I understand?—Yes.

37930. For instance, you have seen him this afternoon?—Yes.

37931. That is, I think, what you want to say?—Yes.

37932. How is it you were not here in order to support Ethel Griffiths? Why have you come to-day? Why were you not called before?—I did not know anything about it until the case was going on.

37933. Did Ethel Griffiths ask you to come here?—Yes.

37934. When did she ask you?—She asked me in the week.

37935. This last week?—Yes.

37936. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you sure that it was in September this happened?—Yes, on a Sunday morning.

37937. Why do you fix September?—It was September.

37938. How do you know it was September?—Because it was a good way back. It was not in November, and it was not in December.

37939. You fix September because it was a good way back?—Because it was soon after I heard about the accident.

37940. When did you first hear about the accident?—At the end of August.

37941. Did Ethel Griffiths tell you?—Yes.

37942. Did you know that she had been about a great deal with Gamble?—Yes.

37943. I mean, she had been living with Gamble, had she not?—Yes.

37944. And you knew that quite well as a friend of hers?—Yes.

37945. How long had she lived with Gamble, do you know?—I could not say.

37946. For some time, had she not?—Yes.

37947. I suppose you people sometimes have a man whom you specially prefer?—Yes.

37948. And you knew Gamble was the man that for a time she was preferring to anybody else?—Yes.

L. James.
5 Mar. 1907.

37949. (Chairman.) When you say "living," in answer to Mr. Bankes, do you mean they were living at the same house, as well as being friends and intimates?—Yes; I could not say where they were living; but I knew she had been living with him for some time.

37950. But whether they actually occupied the same house or not, you do not know?—I could not say.

37951. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You mean to say he was her particular fancy man?—Yes.

37952. And they were about together a great deal?—Yes.

37953. You knew that quite well?—Yes.

37954. And you knew they had been in that position the one to the other for some considerable time?—Yes.

37955. And she spoke to you in August about her particular man having been hurt, is that so?—Yes.

37956. Did she tell you she was going to the hospital regularly and taking him fruit and things?—Yes.

37957. And you knew she went to the hospital to see him whenever she could?—Yes.

37958. Then she said he had been hurt?—Yes.

37959. Did she say there had been any row that night?—No, she said she had met him.

37960. Did she tell you how long she had been with him that night?—No.

37961. She did not say anything about that?—No.

37962. Did she say anything about there having been a row between men?—No.

37963. Did she tell you how he had got hurt?—Yes, she told me that she was in Brick Lane speaking to him, and that a constable came and moved her on and knocked him down and kicked him.

37964. You say she said she was in Brick Lane?—Yes.

37965. And that the constable had moved her on?—Yes.

37966. Did she say that harm had happened to the man in Brick Lane?—No, she did not tell me in what road it happened.

37967. But she said the constable had moved her on in Brick Lane?—Yes.

37968. You are quite sure about that?—Yes.

37969. And you think it was some time after this that the conversation took place with the constable. Is that so?—Yes.

37970. Did you know this constable by sight before?—Yes, I know him by sight.

37971. Have you ever spoken to him?—No, I have seen him about.

37972. You have seen him about on duty?—Yes.

37973. Did you know him to speak to, or his name or number?—We give him the nickname of "Ginger."

37974. Everybody knows him in that district as "Ginger"?—Yes.

37975. There is no other red-headed constable about the district, is there?—No.

37976. So that if anybody wanted to pick out a particular constable, they would all be sure about "Ginger." Is that right? I mean he is the one man who has red hair in the whole of the district, is he not?—As far as I know.

37977. And if you wanted to get a lot of people to agree about one man, the best man to take would be "Ginger," would it not?—No.

37978. Is there any other man who is as well known as he?—Yes. Dick Paine is well known.

37979. Has he a peculiar appearance?—No, nothing particular.

37980. Why is he well known?—I do not know why he is more known that the others.

37981. Tell me why you think this happened in September?—Because it was soon after the young man was in the hospital.

37982. It was nowhere near Christmas?—No.

37983. It would be quite wrong to suggest that it was anywhere near Christmas?—Yes.

37984. It was not in the winter-time at all?—No.

37985. Did I understand you to say you never heard anything more about this until a week ago, or within a few days from now?—No.

37986. Then Ethel Griffiths came and asked you to come here, did she?—Yes.

37987. Did she tell you you would receive money for coming?—No.

37988. Nothing about that?—No.

37989. Nothing at all?—No.

37990. Do you expect to receive money for coming?—I do not know. I have never been in a court before.

37991. Do you expect money for coming here?—I do not know, I am sure.

37992. Do you know whether Ethel Griffiths has received anything for coming?—Yes.

37993. She has told you that she has had money?—Yes.

37994. And you expect to be treated the same as she?—No, not at all.

37995. But why should she receive money for coming and you not?—I do not know.

37996. (Chairman.) I understand you have received no summons from the Commission?—No.

37997. You have come here quite voluntarily?—Yes.

37998. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) How many days have you been here?—Only to-day.

37999. Did Ethel Griffiths tell you how much she had received for coming?—Yes.

38000. She told you the amount?—Yes.

38001. Did she tell you that at the same time she asked you to come?—No.

38002. When did she tell you that?—She told me about it last week.

(Chairman.) At any rate, you do not know what amount you are to receive?

(Witness.) No.

(Chairman.) I think it ought to be known publicly that the scale upon which the witnesses are paid is a remarkably low one.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am not suggesting that it is not.

(Chairman.) I believe it is a little lower than at the Sessions.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) But a person's position in life may be such that they may be glad to get even that.

(Chairman.) My observation was not directed to any criticism on your question, but to remove misapprehension on the part of the public.

(Earl Russell.) I think it is only fair that the suggestion made by my learned friend should be put to Gamble, and that he should be asked about their living together.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have.

(Chairman.) I think you took your risk about that in putting in another witness.

(Earl Russell.) Very well, only I am told that Gamble denies it.

FORTIETH DAY.

Tuesday, 26th March 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
RUFUS DANIEL ISAACS, Esq., K.C., M.P.
WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).
J. F. WALEY, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Assistant-Secretary).

P.C. ARTHUR SOER, 204 L, recalled.

P.C. A. Soer. 26 Mar. 1907.

38003. (Chairman.) When did you first enter the police force?—On the 7th March, 1898.

38004. Which division?—The L Division.

38005. And you continued in the L Division down to 1903?—Except the three years I was away in the South African War.

38006. In 1903 the work you were doing in the L Division was the work of an ordinary constable, as I understand?—Yes.

38007. You had never been up to that time engaged on any special work in plain clothes?—No.

38008. Do you remember when in 1903 you were ordered to take up some special work in connection with street bookmaking?—Yes.

38009. What day was that?—I cannot quite remember the date, but it would be in January.

38010. January, 1903?—Yes, as far as I can remember. I am not quite sure of it.

38011. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It was January when you got the order?—Yes.

38012. (Chairman.) Had any other constables in the L Division been engaged on that special work before January, 1903, to your knowledge?—Yes, they had been.

38013. Do you happen to remember their names?—Deed was one.

38014. How long had Deed been engaged upon the special work of trying to put down street bookmaking?—I could not explain much about that, because I was away in the South African War for three years.

38015. Was there anybody else beside Deed who had been employed on that special work?—There were several police officers.

38016. Can you give me their names?—I am afraid I cannot. That would be in the book.

38017. What did the special work consist of?—Keeping observation on bookmakers.

38018. And you were to do that work in plain clothes, I understand?—Yes, we used to do four hours' uniform and four hours' plain clothes duty—keeping observation on street bookmakers.

38019. Is that a technical phrase, "keeping observation on street bookmakers"—in the sense that you knew exactly what your duties were in order to discharge them properly?—Just so.

38020. What does keeping observation on street bookmakers mean?—It means if we know where a bookmakers is standing, we would keep observation.

38021. And arrest him, I suppose?—Arrest him if we saw him commit the offence.

38022. If you saw there was reasonable ground for taking that action?—Yes.

38023. When in the L Division had that system of sending men out in plain clothes to keep observation on street bookmakers come into force?—I could not say.

38024. Before January, 1903, you had not been engaged on that work at all?—I was out a few days in 1902, as far as I remember, but not much.

38025. Did you understand that in your being chosen as one of the officers to do this kind of work in plain clothes you were being chosen as one whom your superiors thought to be unusually fit for the work?—I did so, Sir, and I think I had more arrests during that year than had ever before been made in the streets.

38026. We have got the lists. Am I to understand that you were chosen as being an officer peculiarly fitted for the proper discharge of this special work?—That is what I thought, Sir.

38027. And you took it therefore as a compliment to your position in the force?—Just so.

38028. Am I to understand from that that you had some special knowledge or information about the case of street bookmakers?—No, I had nothing of that description when I started, but of course I had to learn that after they gave me that appointment.

38029. You were to learn it up?—Yes. I knew the dates, of course—what I had to do.

38030. You knew that you were to watch any suspected bookmakers, to try and discover where they carried on their occupation?—Yes.

38031. And to watch them?—Yes.

38032. And if you found that there were reasonable grounds for arresting them, to arrest them?—Yes, just so, Sir.

38033. How did you proceed to qualify yourself for the discharge of that work? I gather that you had no special knowledge before January, 1903, of the system?—It is like this, we have to learn as we go along. We disguise ourselves in different kinds of clothes, and hide ourselves in different ways, and get about under cover the best way we can without being seen. Of course, the bookmakers had several touts in the streets, as they have to the present day.

38034. It is partly detective work?—It is.

38035. And partly the work of a constable?—Yes.

38036. Did you understand how a man like Platt, for instance, carried on his business? Did you know that he had got cards printed, in which the rules of the game, the conditions of the wagers, are printed, and which he gives about to any likely customers?—I cannot say that I ever saw a card that was given out by Mr. Platt.

38037. Did you know that these street bookmakers did have cards?—Oh, yes, every one of them.

38038. And, of course, a card is a necessary part of the business, is it not, because the card contains the conditions upon which the wager is made?—Yes.

38039. Did you know that it was customary for each bookmaker to have what he calls his pitch?—Yes.

P.C. A. Soer. 26 Mar. 1907.

38040. And that on the racing days, during the racing hours, he would take his stand upon the pitch and give opportunities for any person to come and hand him a slip with money?—Yes, he would take up his pitch at a certain time. He might not go there the same time every day.

38041. And you knew that there was a sort of agreement amongst themselves that one man did not invade another man's pitch?—Oh, no, Sir; not that I am aware of.

38042. But what did you mean by saying "his pitch"?—I do not quite understand what you mean, Sir.

38043. I put it to you that you knew that the men issued cards?—Yes.

38044. The issuing of a card in a place like London would be no good at all unless the person who got the card would know where to find the man who is issuing the card?—Certainly.

38045. In other words, that his customer must know where to look for the bookmaker?—Certainly.

38046. Did you not know in January, 1903, or did you not during 1903 become acquainted with the fact that a street bookmaker had what he calls his pitch?—Yes, Sir.

38047. And that the system was for him to go to that pitch on racing days during racing hours?—Yes; but, as I say, he would not go there the same time every day, or if he thought there was anyone after him. He might walk round and take the slips, that is to say, not that he would stand there and allow me to walk up to him and take him, because it was a difficult matter to get at him.

38048. That I quite understand. The moment he was warned that the police were after him, then he might take those precautions, and therefore, though he knew that the police were after him, he still remained and went to the pitch; that would be rather an unusual thing in your view?—He would go to the pitch, certainly; but if he knew that the police were after him he might hide, or he might go to some other spot—a public-house near, or anywhere—because there is no doubt the punters get the tip where the bookmaker is if he does happen to move away and hide up.

38049. I quite follow that, and I think it is extremely likely. Then if a man went to the same pitch day after day—and by going to the same pitch I mean going practically to the same place in the same street, near the same public-house—that would indicate that he thought he was safe from the police, would it not?—Oh, no, I do not think that. He might go to the same pitch, but, as I say, if he thought the police were after him he might hide, might go into a public-house, or he might go up on to Waterloo. He might have someone looking about in the street meeting the punters and saying "Mr. Platt is so-and-so, Waterloo," or they might say "The Hero," or he might have someone on the pitch to draw our attention, to make us believe he was there, but at the same time he was not.

38050. Or he might take a walk?—Yes, there is not the slightest doubt about that.

38051. When did you effect your first arrest in 1903 of anybody?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There is a return, sir, which has been made, and which is before you. The third column shows the names of the officers.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Have you a summary of this showing how many arrests there were altogether, and how many the different officers made?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, sir; but I will have one made out.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I am only asking for convenience, because in looking down the list it looks as if the witness Soer was the one who arrested most.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, sir, it does.

38052. (Chairman.) I find that the first arrest you made was on the 31st January, when you arrested a man called Bourke, or a man going under the name of Bourke?—Yes.

38053. Where was his pitch?—I think it was near the Olive Branch, Waterloo Road. I do not think he was a big bookmaker. I think he used to take a slip or two now and then, as far as I can remember.

38054. He was not a very regular practitioner?—No, I think it was the only time that the man was ever arrested.

38055. The next man you arrested was Thomas Burnett?—Yes.

38056. That was on February 6th?—Yes.

38057. Where did you arrest him?—It would be Hercules Road or thereabouts.

38058. Near what public-house would that be?—I do not know the name of the public-house, but it is a little beerhouse a little way down Hercules Road. It may be somewhere near that.

38059. Then you arrested Burnett again, or Deed arrested him. Do you remember Deed arresting him?—I was with Deed when he was arrested. I do not know whether it would be on that occasion.

38060. Burnett was arrested again on July 8th by P.C. 180 L—that is Deed?—Yes.

38061. Were you with Deed when that arrest was effected?—I could not say for certain. I am not certain on that point.

38062. Burnett was arrested by P.C. Waters again in July. Do you know where Burnett was arrested on these occasions?—I could not say where he was arrested by Sergeant Waters. I suppose it would be Sergeant Waters.

38063. He was arrested once by you, and you have given us the place; then he was arrested again by Deed and again by Waters; that is three times. Do you know whether he was arrested in the same place?—I could not answer for that. That would be Sergeant Waters, of the detective branch, and I could not answer for that; but I think I was with Deed when he was arrested on the second occasion.

38064. On July 8th?—Yes.

38065. I think you told us in your examination in chief that you and Deed generally acted together during these months?—Yes, I think we did.

38066. You think that Burnett was arrested in the same place?—I think it was in Hercules Road.

38067. Did you arrest anybody else more than twice?—Yes, I think so.

38068. Take William Harris. You arrested William Harris on August 6th?—Yes.

38069. Do you remember that?—Yes.

38070. Where did you arrest him?—That would be in Paris Street or Upper Marsh—Paris Street, I should think.

38071. On September 4th you arrested William Harris again?—Yes.

38072. Where was he arrested then?—That would be in the same place, either Paris Street or Upper Marsh. They both lie close together, but his usual pitch was Paris Street.

38073. Platt went under the name of Smith, if I remember rightly?—Yes.

38074. Alfred Smith?—Yes.

38075. Were you with Powell when he arrested Platt or Smith on the 29th May?—Yes.

38076. And that arrest took place on Waterloo Station, did it not?—Robert Street.

38077. And then you arrested Alfred Smith again on August 1st?—Yes.

38078. He was arrested by yourself alone, or, at any rate, you were the charging officer?—Yes, I was the charging officer; but I had another officer in company with me.

38079. Who was with you on that occasion?—P.C. Gunn, 209, I think.

38080. I think that is what was stated in examination in chief. Then Alfred Smith was arrested again by you on the 28th August?—Yes.

38081. Was he arrested in the same place on the 28th August as on the 1st August?—I saw him in the same place, but I arrested him just outside the Hero public-house. He ran there.

38082. That was the time he ran away?—That was the time we had the chase.

38083. But he was carrying on his business in the same place?—Yes.

38084. Then, again, there was a third arrest of Alfred Smith by you?—That would be by Deed, I think.

38085. The 13th October I find that you arrested him?—I think that was Deed.

38086. The 28th August—that was the arrest effected by you?—Yes.

38087. And then he was arrested by you again on the 13th October?—I think that was Deed who arrested him on the 13th October; but, at any rate, I was in company with him.

38088. It was in connection with that arrest that the final difficulty appears to have arisen between Smith and others—Smith and Deed quarrelled?—That does not concern me. I know nothing about that.

38089. You say you had nothing to do with that?—No.

38090. I may take it, then, that on these four occasions Smith was carrying on his business in the same place?—In Robert Street when we arrested him.

38091. And it was therefore your duty, I understand, during these months to keep an observation on bookmakers?—Yes.

38092. Do you know that Smith says that he carried on his business during all these months at the same place, that on racing days he went to Robert Street, for instance, and carried on his business in between the times at which you arrested him?—Yes.

38093. How comes it that he was able to do that and to go to the same pitch day after day if you were keeping an observation upon him?—I had other bookmakers as well as Platt to keep observation upon, and I may have gone to Robert Street, or in that neighbourhood, but I could not see Mr. Platt owing to his touts, who were covering him. He got the signal, perhaps, that we were on the way.

38094. Take the month of June. He was not arrested at all?—I was only out one day in June, and I could not answer for that.

38095. In July he was not arrested at all, according to this return?—No.

38096. Certainly you did not arrest him?—No.

38097. According to the evidence he has given to us he went to that pitch on the racing days in the months of June and July. How comes it, if you and other officers were keeping observation on him, that he was not arrested?—We may have gone there and would not see him.

38098. Did you go in July? You have told me that you were well acquainted with the method adopted by the bookmakers for carrying on their business?—Yes.

38099. And you were specially chosen as a particularly picked officer for the purpose of keeping observation?—Yes.

38100. How comes it that you did not go to Robert Street and see whether Platt was carrying on his business in June and July?—We will drop the month of June, as you say you were not out on duty at all, and take the month of July?—In July I may have gone there on several occasions, but I was not able to see Mr. Platt, which I have done with other bookmakers.

38101. Do you mean to say you went at any day in July to Robert Street to see whether Smith or Platt was carrying on his business? Have you any distinct recollection that you did so?—I have not any distinct recollection when I went. I know I did go there, and I must have seen Platt, but I did not see him doing any betting. Perhaps he knew that I was in the neighbourhood. As I told you before, if Mr. Platt knew I was anywhere about there he would move on to Waterloo Station, or he might move anywhere.

38102. When you went away, say, after the arrest in May you went away, and perhaps you went and observed, as you say, other bookmakers, and having talked, no doubt, to Deed and the other constable who was engaged on the same work, did it not occur to you that Smith was carrying on his business in Robert Street during those days?—Of course I had an idea he was there somewhere, but I could not see him commit the offence. Every time I saw him bet I arrested him.

38103. Then if you had gone there every day and stood there he would have to shift his pitch?—I do not think it would be hardly fair when there were other bookmakers about for me to go and stand there purposely to keep that man away.

38104. Why not?—I should be allowing the other bookmakers to carry on business, because there were several others.

38105. Of course you cannot be everywhere at the same moment, and the blame with regard to the other people carrying on the business would not attach to you, but attach to your superior officers for not putting enough men in plain clothes in the street?—But then if I went to Robert Street, and could not see Platt there I did not think it was much good my stopping there, because he might go up on to Waterloo Station, and he might be taking slips there, or have someone in the street to draw my attention. I should make a move somewhere else. If you do not catch a bookmaker on the spot it is no use standing there waiting for him, or trying to keep the punters away.

38106. Supposing you knew that it was an important racing day like one or two of the days in Ascot week, would you not, from your own knowledge of what was going on in the L Division, know that Smith was very likely to carry on his business somewhere, and probably on the same pitch?—Oh yes, I should think that, of course, but I might go round there and not see him.

38107. What he has told us is that he did carry on his business?—It might be so.

38108. He carried it on during all these weeks, and there were only four arrests, and that the four arrests took place on occasions which were practically agreed upon between one of the Force and himself?—Certainly not with me.

38109. And that his immunity during all these months is explained by your tolerance of him, and, as he says, by his bribing you?—No, I think not.

38110. I put this question to you: What is your explanation of the fact that Platt was carrying on his business during all these weeks without his being arrested by you?—The simple reason is that we did not see him commit the offence.

38111. I gather that you were not present when Deed made the bet with Smith or Platt?—No, I know nothing about the bet whatever.

38112. It was you who arrested Chapman, was it not—the case in which there was an appeal to the Newington Sessions?—I summoned Mr. Chapman, and Deed was in company with me at the time.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I do not know, Sir, whether you would like to have your attention called to the section giving the power of arrest in such cases. It is Section 23 of the Metropolis Streets Act, 30 and 31 Victoria, chapter 134: "Any three or more persons assembled together in any part of a street within the Metropolis for the purpose of betting shall be deemed to be obstructing the street." So they have to see not only the bookmakers but three persons together, the bookmaker and two others, before there is a power of arrest.

(Chairman.) So that you say the mere act of making a bet is not an offence for which a man might be arrested?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, not if the punters came up one at a time.

(Chairman.) There must be obstruction as well?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, there must be three.

(Chairman.) But under the County Council bye-law under which a summons can be taken out that is not the case?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, that is so, Sir.

(Mr. Dickinson.) What is the date of the County Council bye-law?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Somewhere in 1903, I think.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I think it was given as 1903, and that agrees with the increased activity.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) March, 1903. Under the new Act you know that the power of arrest is different.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Does that mean supposing a person was found with slips in his pocket, unless there were two others seen with him, and obstructing and taking part in the proceedings, there could be no arrest?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There could be no arrest.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The betting was not an offence?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) You must see the three together, and then you may arrest, and then you had the chance of finding the slips in the pocket.

P.C. A. Soer.
26 Mar. 1907.

38113. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) With regard to this year 1903 you seem to have gone about a good deal with Deed?—Yes.

38114. And who were the others with whom you went about on this particular duty?—P.C. Gunn 209 and P.C. Powell 203, as he was then. I think that is about all, as far as I remember.

38115. That would be right, then, that you, Powell, Gunn, and Deed were the four who were told off particularly to this duty during that year?—Yes.

38116. Powell was only out about five or six days?—That is all.

38117. A little longer than that, but at all events it was a short time. How long had you known Deed?—I knew Deed at the time I joined the Force myself. I think he was at the same station as I am at the present day.

38118. From 1898?—Yes. I think it was a little later than that that he joined. I am not certain what service he had.

38119. Somewhere about the same period?—Yes.

38120. Did you know anything about Deed making this bet?—Nothing whatever.

38121. When did you first hear of it? You know the bet I am referring to?—Yes; I quite understand the bet you are referring to.

38122. When he came and said he had £2 on?—I think I heard of it a day or two after he was reported. When I heard he was suspended, of course I heard he had been suspended for making a bet with Mr. Platt.

38123. And until that you did not hear anything at all about it?—Nothing whatever.

38124. When did you first hear of it, then?—I do not know whether it was amongst the men on parade or not. I cannot quite remember where it was now. Any way, it was talked of among ourselves.

38125. Had you ever known Deed bet before?—No.

38126. You never heard of his betting?—No.

38127. Why I am asking you is because the bet he made then seems to show some special knowledge of how to make it if he was to be sure to win?—Of course, I do not know anything about Deed's doings, or anything about the bet. I do not know whether he understood betting or not. I cannot say whether the slip was in his handwriting.

38128. You did not see it, as I understand?—No.

38129. You did not know anything about it?—Nothing at all.

38130. I see from this summary which Mr. Muir has just handed me that apparently you made 64 arrests out of 111 during 1903?—Yes.

38131. I see Deed comes next in order. Deed made 16 during the year. Did you ever hear any question about money being taken by police constables during this year in respect of street betting?—No.

38132. Do you mean you never heard of it?—No.

38133. Has it ever been offered to you?—No.

38134. Do you mean that no bookmaker has ever offered money to you?—No.

38135. And nobody on his behalf?—No.

38136. Do you mean you have never heard of such a thing?—No.

38137. Until when?—From what I have seen in the papers and what I have heard here.

38138. I am not asking you about yourself, because I understand what your answer is about that; but do I understand you to say that you have never heard that offers have been made to policemen to take bribes from bookmakers?—No.

38139. Or their having drinks with bookmakers?—No.

38140. Until when?—Until the Commission started. Of course, I have seen cases in the papers.

38141. But just think a little about that. That cannot be right?—I have nothing more to say, only what I have said.

38142. But you had heard something about it before? Did you not hear of the complaints that Platt was making?—It never came to my knowledge after 1903. There was a letter sent complaining about me, and I was called on to report.

38143. I know; but what I was asking you about was whether you had not heard it suggested that you took bribes from bookmakers, and you said you never heard about it till this Commission?—I did at the South London Sessions, when Mr. Platt gave evidence against me there.

38144. That was during the prosecution of Chapman?—Yes; and I also heard of it at the Southwark Police Court. It was put to me by Mr. Conway, the solicitor defending Chapman.

38145. And of course you also heard of it because Platt lodged a complaint. Did you not know that Platt lodged a complaint against you?—He lodged a complaint after the summons was heard at the Southwark Police Court. I had heard about the police, and of course it was said that I had received money and had been reported to the Commissioner of Police, which was all wrong.

38146. You were examined about that; but that did not only apply to you. You knew that?—No, not by the way Mr. Conway put it to me.

38147. Did you think it only referred to you?—It referred to Deed.

38148. And to you?—And to me.

38149. And to the others?—No; I do not think he mentioned anyone else at the police-court. He simply spoke of Deed, and Mr. Conway said, "Are you aware that you have been reported to the Commissioner of Police by bookmakers for receiving bribes?" and my answer was, "Not that I am aware of."

38150. But did you not know that complaints had been made by Mr. Platt about Powell and Gunn?—Not till after that.

38151. Not till after you were asked the question at the police-court? But you did hear of it?—I heard it from Mr. Spencer, when he handed me the letter.

38152. You were called upon to report?—Yes.

38153. That we can fix. Then you did make a report?—I made a report.

38154. That report of yours is dated the 21st November?—Yes.

38155. Do you know the public-house the Two Eagles?—I think the Two Eagles is at the top of Brook Street.

38156. The top of Brook Street—where?—The Kennington Road.

38157. You know the place?—I think that is the place they call the Two Eagles—I am not certain of it.

38158. Have you been in it at all?—I never was in it in my life.

38159. The Hero of Waterloo of course you know?—Oh, yes, I know it well.

38160. Do you know the Pocock?—The Pocock, Westminster Bridge Road?

38161. Francis Street, Westminster Bridge Road?—Yes; that is right, sir.

38162. That is three public-houses I have called your attention to. Have you ever been in any one of them?—I have been in the Pocock once.

38163. Were you in uniform then or not?—I was, Sir—off duty.

38164. You were off duty and you went in?—I did.

38165. Was that with Platt?—No.

38166. Did you see him there?—No.

38167. Did you speak to him?—No. I met Deed at the corner of Francis Street when I was going home. He asked me if I would have a glass of beer, and I said, "Yes, I don't mind." We went down, and we had a glass each, and I left.

38168. That is the only time you have ever been in there?—That is the only time I have ever been in the house.

38169. Now, the Two Eagles. I understand you to say that you have never been in there?—No.

38170. That is the one in Brook Street, Kennington?—That is the one.

38171. Have you ever been in a public-house with Mr. Platt?—Never in my life.

38172. Have you ever seen him in a public-house?—Never.

38173. Have you ever seen Deed with him in a public-house?—No.

38174. Or in his company?—No.

38175. Are you sure of that?—Certain.

38176. You have never seen Deed with him at all?—Never.

38177. At any time?—Only when we have had him in custody.

38178. The Hero of Waterloo—have you been in that house?—No, only when I have been called in, I may say, to put people out. That is the only time.

38179. Called in in discharge of your duty?—Yes.

38180. But have you been inside the Hero of Waterloo with Platt?—No.

38181. Never, at any time?—No. He just dragged me in the door when I arrested him once—that is all.

38182. He dragged you in the door trying to get away?—Yes.

38183. When did you first know Platt?—I heard of him on or about the 28th May, 1903. A person met me in Waterloo Road and told me about him.

38184. That is when you first arrested him in consequence of what somebody told you?—A day or two after I was in company with P.C. Powell, when he was arrested. That is the first time I ever heard of Mr. Platt, and of course a day or two after I saw him—that would be on the 29th May.

38185. That would be after the 29th May, when he was arrested by Powell?—Yes.

38186. When did you see him again after that?—I cannot remember when I saw him. I might have seen him several times about the streets.

38187. When you saw him did you speak to him?—No, I never spoke to Mr. Platt in my life, only when I arrested him.

38188. But you knew him, of course?—Yes, after the 29th.

38189. Then you arrested him, and he was taken to the station, and charged in the name of Smith?—Yes, he gave the name of Smith.

38190. Did you know him as Smith or Platt?—I did not know his name, only by what I was told. They told me his name was Platt, and I thought perhaps that was his betting name.

38191. Who told you his name was Platt?—The person I met in Waterloo Road. I suppose he had one of his cards, or something. That is how he came to know his name.

38192. But he was betting at that time in the name of Platt?—I do not know. I never saw his card. He was charged and simply gave his name and address as Alfred Smith, 28, Oakley Street.

38193. I have got the name he was charged in. When you saw him, after he had been convicted on the first occasion, that is, in May, 1903, you recognised him, of course?—Oh, yes.

38194. And did you keep a look out for him?—When I was out after bookmakers I might have been round. I did go round several times.

38195. How many men do you think there would be betting in this particular division, who you had to look after?—I should think about 15.

38196. There would be 15 pitches?—Yes.

38197. Would they all come out about the same hour?—Oh, no—different times.

38198. Different times of the day?—Yes.

38199. Some men in the morning, and some men in the afternoon?—Some come out very early to meet people. Some of them come out later; some do not come out till after one o'clock, and then they do not always take up their pitch. They walk round.

38200. I do not quite understand how walking round is going to help them in their business, unless the man is walking round somewhere about the same spot?—Somewhere near the spot.

38201. It only means that they do not stand there to receive the slips, but walk about?—They might put up touts when anybody calls, and they would say, "I am So-and-so." It is very difficult for the police to find them like that.

38202. I do not quite understand that. He meets his touts when he arrives?—He might say to his tout, "I am going so-and-so, and if anybody asks you for me, send them up."

38203. He tells his tout where he has gone, and if anybody wants to make a bet, he is to be sent up?—Yes, and they might pass one another in the street, and say, "Alf is so-and-so." It would not be much good for me to stand in Robert Street, and watch for Mr. Platt like that.

38204. You would not expect to find him standing on the same spot?—No.

38205. But he would have to be somewhere round there, would he not?—Yes.

38206. You would expect to find him in the neighbourhood probably plying his trade?—Yes. He might be in Waterloo Station, and I could not touch him there.

38207. Because that is not within your jurisdiction?—It is private property.

38208. We have got a list of the others. There is one man named Noon. Do you know him?—Yes.

38209. He seems to have been arrested pretty often, or rather charged pretty often. This list is a list of persons arrested, I understand.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, Sir, entirely.

38210. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He seems to have been arrested pretty often?—Yes, it may be so.

38211. It certainly appears so from the list. You knew him, of course?—Yes.

38212. Was he in a large way of business, do you know. Did he do much?—I think he took several slips just about there.

38213. Where did he stand?—It would usually be in the Lambeth Palace Road, or he might work into Westminster Road, up to the bridge—just round the square there by St. Thomas's Mansions.

38214. You were asked by the Chairman about the cards that were used. Did you ever see them?—No.

38215. Did you know he had them?—Every bookmaker had a card with the rules on.

38216. Which he would distribute to the persons who were backing with him?—Yes.

38217. When a man made a bet he might get a card if he had not made a bet before?—Yes, if he did not get a card they might explain the rules, I suppose, and then give him the card. There would be no mistake about it then.

38218. But you never saw any card at all?—No.

38219. Did you know he was betting on cards?—I cannot say that for certain, because I never saw cards. It is a thing that would not affect me. I should not trouble much about seeing that.

38220. It would not make any difference, because, if you had seen Mr. Noon you could not do anything unless you found him actually in the act?—That is all, Sir.

38221. Platt never was summoned, I suppose?—No.

38222. Would that be part of your duty to summons a man if you saw him betting?—Yes.

38223. And you did summons some of them?—Yes.

(Chairman.) I gather that the witness was concerned in eight summonses.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes, that is during the year, I suppose—four with Deed and four alone, out of 19 altogether.

(Chairman.) Do you accept those figures? (Handing return to witness.)

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You have no reason to doubt that return?—No.

38223*. I should like you to explain why you summonsed, and why you arrested. Supposing you saw a man betting, taking slips, what would determine you whether you arrested him or whether you summonsed him?—If only one man went up at a time and handed him a slip, there is no power to arrest. You would have to summons him under the County Council bye-law. If a bookmaker stands in the street, and commits an offence under the Metropolis Streets Act of obstruction, and we see him, and he gets away, we have power to summons him then as well.

38224. You summons him if he gets away?—Yes.

38225. But if you can you arrest him when you see him?—Yes.

P.C. A. Soer. 26 Mar. 1907.

38226. And you have made more than one charge on the same day, have you not?—Yes, under the County Council bye-law.

38227. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When you see him, who are the persons obstructing besides himself?—The two men who are betting with him.

38228. You must have two men betting with him?—Yes.

38229. Then your practice was, I suppose, to wait until you see two men bet with him and then arrest him?—That is right.

38230. Of course, if you arrest him, you expect to find the slips on him?—Yes.

38231. You told us that between the 29th of May and the 1st August you did not have any conversation with Platt at all?—Yes.

38232. That is what you said?—Yes.

38233. And during that time had you been trying to catch him?—Oh, yes. Sometimes we go round several times before we make the arrest.

38234. Did you see anybody during that time at all betting with him?—No. I may have seen him a time or two walking with someone.

38235. Did not you see a man called Forbes?—Yes.

38236. What was Forbes?—Mr. Forbes is the man that Platt was working for. He was not working for himself then.

38237. That is during this year?—During 1903.

38238. You saw Forbes betting?—Yes.

38239. From whom was he getting the slips?—He was receiving slips from Mr. Platt, which he had collected in the street, as far as I could see, and while he was taking the slips there was some man who came up and handed some more slips to Forbes. I rushed down the steps and arrested Forbes, and Platt ran away.

38240. That is the incident I am referring to. You saw him betting then, or handing the slips to Forbes?—Yes.

38241. Had you seen him do that before the 9th July?—Handing slips?

38242. Yes?—No. I never saw him do that before.

38243. Did you see Platt again before the 1st August?—I may have seen him.

38244. I do not mean simply in the street, but did you see him do any betting?—No.

38245. Or handing slips?—No.

38246. Or anything of that kind?—No.

38247. You know he says he has been giving you money during all this time?—Yes.

38248. Did he ever give you any money at all?—I never had anything off Platt.

38249. You never had any money at all?—No.

38250. Anything of any kind?—No.

38251. Were you away at one time on sick leave?—I was.

38252. How long?—I think I was sick about seven days.

38253. Do you remember when that was?—At the end of June.

38254. June, 1903?—Yes. I think it was about the 27th that I went on the sick list.

38255. You know Platt has made a statement about that. He says that when you came back again he gave you £2, I think it is, because you had been away on sick leave?—When I came back off sick leave, do you mean?

38256. Yes?—I think he said he gave me £2 while I was on sick leave, if I remember. He said he met me near a public-house. I never saw Platt, and I never had the money from him.

38257. Do you know at all how he knew that you were on sick leave?—I cannot say; I daresay he may have met me, or someone may have told him. It would be quite easy.

38258. You mean that would be known?—Yes, especially anyone the same as myself arresting bookmakers, and in the way we did. They might make inquiries. They might miss us, you see.

38259. But you did not hear of any inquiries being made, did you?—No.

38260. None of your mates told you that he was making inquiry about you?—No. Platt might pass along, or anyone might ask where I was, and they might say, "He is on the sick list." Anyone might say that.

38261. (Chairman.) Do you mean any other constable might say so if he were asked?—He might say so.

38262. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He might be asked what had become of you. Perhaps he would not know who Platt was?—He might say, "Where is Police-constable Soer?" or "204 L." "He is on the sick list."

38263. He might want to know what had become of you?—It might be done quite easy.

38264. Platt says this, and I want to call your particular attention to it. This is what Platt said took place between you and him: "I told him that he could very likely" (that is you) "do with a little bit more," that is, because you were on the sick list at the particular time?—Yes.

38265. "You want more necessaries when you are sick than otherwise"?—I never saw him, and I never had the money. I never saw Platt while I was on sick leave.

38266. Did he ever speak to you about being on sick leave?—No.

38267. Never spoke to you about it?—No; and the place where he said he met me—I should not go that way at all to the doctor.

38268. Where did he say he met you?—I think in his evidence he said he met me near his house.

38269. Near his house?—I think that is what he said.

38270. Have you read this evidence?—I heard what he said.

38271. Do you mean you were in court?—Yes.

38272. Do you mean you have not read it since?—No.

38273. Then you are speaking from recollection now. It is only what you heard in court when he gave his evidence?—That is all.

38274. Did you come here straight from duty?—Yes. I was on Blackfriars Bridge.

38275. You did not know you were to come here until you were sent for?—No.

38276. There are one or two matters that he says that I think you should deal with. He also says that he gave you money at the Two Eagles public-house?—That is what you just spoke about—the £2, I think.

38277. You mean that is the public-house which is not very far from his house. Is that what you mean?—That is the one.

38278. Yes, I think probably that is right. That is the one you never were in?—I was never in the house in my life.

38279. The Pocock, you have told me, is in Francis Street, Westminster Bridge Road?—Yes.

38280. He says that he has been in there with you several times.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I think there is a mistake about the name of the house. The house in Francis Street, I am told, is the Hole in the Wall.

38281. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He called it the Pocock?—I think it is in Lefranc Street. It is my mistake.

38282. I do not know that it is your mistake. It is Platt's mistake, too, if it is so. Then he says this: "I forget whether it is Francis Street or Lefranc Street"?—It is Lefranc Street, Westminster Bridge Road.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) "I am not quite positive," he says; "they have re-named the street." I do not know whether you mean, Mr. Muir, that Platt was wrong about the name. The question I am upon is Platt's evidence.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, this witness is wrong in saying that the Peacock, which is, I believe, the real name of the house, is in Francis Street. It is in Lefranc Street.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In the Westminster Bridge Road.

(Mr. Platt.) Late Francis Street.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I read the passage in the evidence in which it is so stated and in which you gave a different name to the public-house.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) This witness is speaking of a house in the street that is now called Francis Street.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That may be, but the question I am putting to him is very definite, and it does not relate to that house at all that you are referring to.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) This witness says he was in a house in Francis Street.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is outside this matter. I think he said he went in that house when off duty to have a glass of ale.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What I am asking is about a different house.

38283. The Pocock, or it may be the Peacock. It is always referred to as the Pocock here. That is a house in Lefranc Street?—Yes.

38284. You know the house?—Yes.

38285. Which is it—the Pocock or the Peacock?—I think they call it the Peacock.

38286. Do you know that house?—Yes.

38287. Have you been in it?—I have been in it once.

38288. When?—With Deed.

38289. That is the house I was speaking of?—You said the Pocock public-house, Westminster Bridge Road, and I answered yes.

38290. I understood that the suggestion was that there was a mistake about the house?—I do not know about the mistake; I understand the house you mean, but perhaps the other will come out presently.

38291. That may be, but let us deal with one thing at a time. This house, I understood you to say, you had been to once with Deed to have a glass of ale?—Yes.

38292. When you were off duty?—Yes.

38293. Is that the only occasion you have ever been in it?—That is the only occasion I was ever in the house.

38294. What Platt said about it was that he had been in it several times with you?—I have never been in it before in my life or since.

38295. You have never been in it with him, any way?—No.

38296. When you went in were you in plain clothes or in uniform?—I was in uniform; I was just going home, and I met Deed at the corner of the street.

38297. You mean you never went into it in plain clothes at all?—No.

38298. Perhaps you remember Platt's evidence about the first occasion when you and Powell arrested him on the 29th May. Do you remember that?—Yes.

38299. Did you have any conversation with him?—No.

38300. He pleaded guilty?—He pleaded guilty at the police station and at the police court. I never said a word.

38301. Did you attend at the police court when he pleaded guilty?—Yes we were there together.

38302. Then he was fined?—Yes, he was fined.

38303. Then did he go away?—Yes.

38304. Did he have no conversation with you at all?—None whatever.

38305. He says he said to you: "I do not want to give you chaps a lot of trouble." Did he say anything of that kind?—No.

38306. "Here is something for your trouble to-day"?—No.

38307. That is you and Powell?—I never had any conversation with him at all. I simply passed him through the door after he had paid the fine, and never saw any more of him—not that day.

38308. The question I am putting to you is immediately after the first arrest?—Yes.

38309. I understand you to say that was the first time you ever had seen him?—That was the first time I ever saw Mr. Platt, and I do not suppose we should have went then if the person who met me in Waterloo Road had not complained to me about Mr. Platt not having paid him his winnings, £1 6s. That is how I came to find out Mr. Platt.

P.C. A. Soer

38310. That is what led you to making observation?—Yes. The first chance I had I went round and saw him. 26 Mar. 1907.

38311. But up to that time you did not know anything at all about him?—No.

38312. Did you know that there was a bookmaker of that name?—No.

38313. Or of the name of Smith?—No.

38314. Or that there was anyone with a pitch somewhere round about there in Robert Street?—No.

38315. You did not know anything at all about it until you got this complaint?—I knew nothing whatever about it until I met this man.

38316. But you spoke to Powell about it?—Then I spoke to Powell.

38317. I think I did ask you whether you had ever been in the Hero of Waterloo?—Yes.

38318. What is said by Platt is that he used to give you money there. He says he gave you money several times in the Hero of Waterloo public-house?—I never was in the house in my life.

38319. I want to understand how long you have been in the service. You went in it in March, 1898, and you have been in it continuously except during the three years when you went to the South African War. Is that right?—That is right.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I think there is no defaulters' sheet, is there?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, there is. (The defaulters' sheet was handed to the Commissioner.)

38320. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) As far as I can see from it, there is nothing but what is in your favour. You have had a continued advance of pay?—Yes.

38321. I see your pay has continued to advance throughout, every year—1899, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, and 1906?—That is right.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is no entry of any kind against him. It is a clean sheet during the whole of the service.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes; the only entries that there are are with reference to the pay which is deducted when he was with the Army Reserve, and then there is the increase of pay.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is absolutely nothing but what is in his favour.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) They are called "defaulters' sheets," but they contain records of pay.

(Chairman.) They can hardly be called "defaulters' sheets," because the very name seems to imply that there is some misconduct on the part of the officer. In a great many of the sheets that have been handed up there is no default recorded.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) They are called clean sheets.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) They are called "defaulters' sheets" in which there is no default recorded. The only point we want to get clear on the note, and Soer is entitled to have it, is that there is nothing but what is in his favour.

(Chairman.) Acts of bravery, or any special service, are recorded on the sheet.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Whatever there is is in his favour. There is no entry of any kind against him, not even for a trivial offence, during the time he has been in the Force.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You will find on the sheet a record of his absence from sickness.

38322. (Chairman.) What were the dates when you were absent on sick leave in 1903?—I think it was the 27th June. I am not sure of that.

38323. This sheet will give it?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It was from the 27th June to the 5th July.

38324-5. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is right. You were away nine days?—Yes.

38326. (Mr. Dickinson.) I thought you said just now it was the end of May you were on sick leave?—I think not.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He said June.

38327. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you know where Platt

P.C. A. Soer.

26 Mar. 1907.

lives, or lived at that time?—I know now. I did not know then.

38328. When did you first know where he lived?—After the end of 1903, when these allegations were made against me. I heard he lived in Bird Street. That is just off Brook Street.

38329. Do you remember when you made your report to the Inspector about Platt's allegations against you?—Yes.

38330. That was dated the 21st November?—Yes.

38331. When were you asked to make that report?—The time, do you mean?

38332. Yes.—As far as I can remember, it was in the afternoon, but at what time I could not say.

38333. On what date?—The date is on my report.

38334. Then you were not asked to make any report before the 21st November?—No.

38335. Had you had any intimation of these accusations conveyed to you before then?—No.

38336. Platt had made these complaints many months before then?—I did not know anything about it.

38337. You had had no conversation with the Inspector or Superintendent about it until the 21st November?—No.

38338. I see in this table the names of some bookmakers. Do you know George William Rolfe?—Yes.

38339. I believe you arrested him on April 14th, again on May 7th, again on June 19th, again on August 15th, again on October 17th, and again on November 17th?

(Chairman.) And on the 16th September.

38340. (Mr. Dickinson.) Rolfe was arrested by somebody else then. I presume you knew that man well?—Yes.

38341. Where was he carrying on betting transactions?—In York Road, or thereabouts, or Vine Street.

38342. Do you remember the occasions when you arrested him?—Yes.

38343. Was he always in York Road?—He might have been in a side street close to it; I cannot quite remember now. He was not in York Road every time. Sometimes he would come walking up the street—Vine Street, I think it is.

38344. I suppose he was a man who was carrying on betting regularly there?—Yes.

38345. Every day?—Yes.

38346. How was it you could not arrest him more often than that?—Because I did not see him.

38347. You mean you did not see him in the street at all?—I did not see him commit the offence. I may have passed by and seen him there, but did not see him betting. He may have been walking with someone.

38348. When he was brought before the police magistrate did he contest the accusation?—He pleaded guilty at the police station, declined to be searched, and also pleaded guilty every time at the police court.

38349. In all these cases that we have here of your arrests, was there any occasion in which the bookmaker did not plead guilty?—Yes, there were one or two.

38350. Tell us which.—I think Burke pleaded not guilty. I think he got off with a caution.

38351. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The first time you arrested him?—The very first time, and the last; he was only arrested once.

38352. (Mr. Dickinson.) I see a man named Wilson was charged. He was arrested by you?—Yes. He was only arrested once. He keeps a small greengrocer's stall in the Lower Marsh. I saw him take slips in the centre of the road in Lower Marsh. When I arrested him, somehow he got rid of the slips, but I found out after where they went. Of course, when I got to the station he pleaded not guilty and said he would be searched. Of course I searched him, but the slips were gone. He pleaded not guilty at the police court, and the magistrate said there was a doubt, and he gave him the benefit of the doubt; but I found out afterwards he placed the slips underneath the greens in the Lower Marsh on his stall. That is how he got off.

38353. When you say he pleaded guilty and refused to be searched, that is when you took him to the police station?—Yes.

38354. If they refused to plead guilty, then you would search them?—If they plead not guilty, then we search them. They say, "I will be searched."

38355. You mean to say, knowing they have these slips on them, they prefer to plead guilty to being searched?—They necessarily know it is true.

38356. With regard to a man Clements. I see Clements was arrested by you on the 15th April, again on the 30th May, again on the 3rd August, again on the 25th September, and again on the 11th November. You knew him to be a bookmaker?—Yes.

38357. Regularly in business there?—Yes.

38358. He always pleaded guilty?—Yes.

38359. What is it exactly that you say you want to see done in order to justify you in arresting these men? You see them practically every day in the streets, do you not?—Yes, practically every day.

38360. But you say you do not arrest them every day because you do not see them betting?—We should arrest them twice a day if we could see them commit the offence.

38361. What is the offence you wish to see them commit?—To prove that they commit an offence under the Metropolitan Streets Act, and to give us power to arrest, there must be two persons with the bookmaker at the same time.

38362. Do you mean in all these arrests there were two people with the bookmaker at the same time?—Certainly.

38363. You have to see two people with the bookmaker and also see slips pass?—Yes.

38364. With scouts about would you be able to see that happen?—That is how we get our information. Sometimes we get put away on to a number of scouts, and people who are betting with bookmakers. All sorts of signals they get.

38365. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you mean they mislead you?—They tell the bookmaker where we are, and he disappears. He may go to another spot.

38366. (Mr. Dickinson.) Was this man Clements always in the same place?—He used to bet in York Road—just about there.

38367. You say you could not find occasion to arrest them more often than once a month, or twice a month?—No. I arrested them every time I could get hold of them.

38368. That, I understand, is your sole business?—I have to come out for four hours in uniform first. Then I come out for four hours in plain clothes after bookmakers.

38369. (Chairman.) I suppose you know that the Commissioner of Police gives permission to constables to go out on duty for this special purpose in plain clothes?—I get my orders from my Sub-Divisional Inspector.

38370. Was any document in writing given to you?—No, not that I am aware of.

38371. The rule says the employment of police-officers in plain clothes to detect betting and certain other things is not to be permitted, except with the express sanction of the Commissioner. Did you get no document in writing showing that you had permission from the Superintendent, or Chief Constable, or whoever was the authority over you, that you might arrest?—No, only my warrant card; of course that gives me power to arrest.

38372. What is a warrant card?—The card that we get issued to us when we first join the police. We carry that when we are in plain clothes.

38373. The warrant card would not show that any special permission had been given you to arrest in plain clothes?—No. The Sub-Divisional Inspector will explain that.

38374. The officer who gave you permission to go out in plain clothes to effect arrests in this kind of case was the Sub-Divisional Inspector?—Yes.

38375. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) How is it that you made a very larger number of arrests above anybody else during that time. Can you explain it?—I could not say.

38376. I am not suggesting it as anything against you, but rather the other way?—The arrests speak for themselves.

38377. Deed did not leave the Force until October, 1903?—No.

38378. He was suspended. Deed apparently was on this duty with you. Deed only arrested 16 persons, and you arrested 64?—Yes.

(Chairman.) In the course of a longer period.

38379. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Only a period of a further few weeks. It only goes to November, or perhaps it goes to December. December is not a very important month for betting, is it?—No.

38380. Did you have more to do with this duty than either Deed or Gunn, for example?—Yes. I had more to do with street betting than Deed or Powell.

38381. But Gunn?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Gunn was only a few weeks on that duty?—He was the man mostly, but if he was away somewhere else I had someone else working with me.

38382. (Chairman.) You are at work the whole year practically on this matter?—Yes.

38383. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) As I understand it, you were told off on this particular duty for that year?—Not for a year. They did not tell me I was to take it for that year, but they put me out in the streets to arrest the bookmakers; they did not tell me how long I was to keep on it.

38384. I mean during that year you were the person apparently who had most to do with it in your division?—Yes.

38385. With detecting bookmakers and arresting them?—Yes.

38386. Do the number of your arrests in any way affect the pay or the increase of pay that you get?—No, not at all.

38387. Supposing you had been quite unsuccessful, and had arrested nobody?—I should get just the same pay.

38388. You would get just the same increase of pay?—Yes.

38389. Assuming, I suppose, that there is nothing recorded against you?—Yes.

38390. That would affect your pay?—If I was punished of course it might affect my pay.

(Chairman.) Do you want to ask any questions, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Chairman.) I thought you had the opportunity last time?

(Mr. Platt.) No.

(Chairman.) Very well.

38391. (Mr. Platt.) Can you give any reason why with the number of arrests you made in 1903 you had such few summonses to what appears in the other divisions of Police?—I do not know about other divisions of Police, or other police officers. I am here to speak for myself.

38392. Can you give any reason why there should be such few summonses?—I do not know. No reason whatever.

38393. Was it because you had an arrangement with most of those men you arrested?—Certainly not.

38394. How many times did you arrest Durrant, the bookmaker?—I think I arrested that man twice, but it was very little betting Durrant did in the street himself. I think you know as well as I know that Durrant puts men in the streets to take the slips for him.

38395. And he would take more money himself individually than all his men put together?—I do not know that. When I saw him betting I arrested him, and I think it was twice, but I am not sure.

(Chairman.) Durrant was first arrested on the 25th April. On the 8th September Henry Durrant was again arrested by P.C. Soer.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) And then on the 12th November.

(Chairman.) That was by P.S. Cutting.

38396. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He was arrested three times in the year?—This man did not bet himself—he might now and again—but he put men in the streets to take his slips for him.

(Mr. Platt.) I must bring witnesses to refute that evidence. I say the man was betting in the streets every day there was racing in the year 1903.

38397. (Chairman.) What do you say to that, Did Durrant bet every day, so far as you know?—Not every day, so far as I know. When I saw him betting I arrested him.

38398. (Mr. Platt.) Were you ever with him in the Rose and Crown, Collingwood Street?—No, never. The Rose and Crown?

38399. You know it?—No, never in my life. I never was in the house.

38400. Not with Deed?—No, never.

38401. Positive?—Positive—perfectly sure.

38402. In what part of Cornwall Road was Durrant betting when you arrested him?—I think he was at the top of Doon Street, near Basing Street.

38403. It would not be far from where Chapman was betting, would it?—No, it would not be very far. At the time I summoned him I suppose you are alluding to?

38404. No, I am taking the year he was betting. How far apart are the different bookmakers. As you state there were 15 in this Sub-Division that you patrolled?—About that; I think about 15.

38405. How far is Hercules Road from Kennington Road Police Station?—I have not measured it, but I should think about one hundred yards.

38406. How many years had Burnett been betting there?—I could not say; I knew him in 1903. That is all I can speak of.

38407. Not before?—No.

38408. In what year did you join the L Division?—7th March, 1898.

38409. Did you know that his employer was raided at this barber's shop next door to this public-house where you say he was arrested?—I do not know.

39410. Burnett was well known as a book-maker, and Deed worked for him afterwards?—I do not know that.

38411. It was well known that Burnett had been betting for years at this barber's shop, and after he was raided he came outside and betted outside the public-house—adjoining the public-house?—1903 is all I can speak to.

38412. Nine-tenths of the men going off duty would pass that road going to the station to report themselves off duty to the inspector or their sergeant?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that Thomas Burnett?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He was arrested at various times.

(Mr. Platt.) Three times in 1903.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is it suggested that Thomas Burnett was betting for Durrant?

38413. (Mr. Platt.) No. Burnett was betting for himself in 1903 when this officer and others arrested him?—But Burnett had a man there as well as himself, and I think that man was arrested by me once or twice, and Burnett had to pay the fine after.

38414. (Chairman.) What was his name?—I cannot think of his name.

38415. You might look at this list if you would like to refresh your memory. (List was handed to the Witness.)?—I do not remember.

38416. You do not remember who was the agent of Burnett?—I cannot quite remember now. I might think of it presently.

38417. (Mr. Platt.) What is the usual thing for you officers, after leaving the book-maker, after he has been fined, to do?—To pass them out of court.

38418. After leaving the court?—What are we to do with the book-makers?

38419. After leaving the court, what is your further proceeding?—To begin again the next day if we get the chance.

38420. What do you do. Do you go and report yourself off duty at the station?—Yes.

38421. At the time in 1903, what part of West-

P.C. A. Soer.

26 Mar. 1907.

minster was Deed living in?—I think he lived in Campbell's Buildings.

38422. How far is that from the Pocock?—Down at the bottom of the same street.

38423. How often in the course of your duties would you have to meet Deed?—I should have to meet him somewhere, of course.

38424. Where would you meet him?—At all sorts of places.

38425. Where would you leave him?—At the station.

38426. How far is the station from the Pocock Arms?—About one hundred yards, I should say.

38427. It is quite possible when you left you would adjourn to the Pocock Arms to have a refresher?—I do not think so.

38428. You have only been in the Pocock public-house once?—That is all.

38429. Deed lived at the bottom of the street?—Yes.

38430. Do you mean to say you did not have a drink all those four hours. Would you not like to have one when you are off duty. You admit you go in there in uniform when off duty, and have a drink?—Yes.

38431. Is it not possible you went in there in plain clothes and had one?—Certainly not.

38432. Not possible?—I tell you I was never in the house only that once in my life.

38433. I have never met you and Deed there?—Never in my life.

39434. You have never had any jollification there?—It is not likely.

38435. Never gone in one way and come out the other?—No. I hope you have got your witnesses to prove the jollification we had.

38436. You stated in your evidence the last time you were here that you were told of a bookmaker of the name of Platt?—Yes.

38437. Why did you let me put myself down as Smith without asking me any questions?—It does not make any difference to us.

38438. That is the loose way of doing your duty?—On that point it would be.

38439. There are many other ways of being loose on that particular duty?—No, I do not understand what you are referring to. Finish one thing at a time, please.

38440. Who does Robert Street belong to?—To the public, I suppose.

38441. Are you sure?—I suppose so.

38442. Is it private property?—I should not say so.

38443. Would that not be all the more reason why I should give you the moneys I say I have done, so that you should not summon me on private property?—You were not on private property. I had power to arrest you or summon you.

38444. On private property?—It is not private property.

38445. Robert Street is, allow me to tell you. It belongs to the London and South Western Railway Company?—I did not know it.

38446. Why did you not summon me?—I never had a chance to summon you.

38447. Is it not the usual thing for men who are anxious for promotion to undertake the duty of arresting these bookmakers?—I should not think so. If so, I ought to have had promotion three or four years ago.

38448. Were you up for promotion in 1903 in any way?—No.

38449. Was Deed?—In 1903? No; I think I sent in a preliminary in 1904. I do not think I sent in 1903.

38450. Was Deed?—I do not know anything about Deed.

38451. How were you dressed on the day you went to see the doctor?—It is so long ago that I can hardly remember. I was not in uniform. Does it make any difference how I was dressed?

38452. Yes?—What is the point?

38453. What part were you living in then?—I was living in Liverpool Street.

38454. Walworth Road?—Yes.

38455. It is just as near to come through Crampton Street, Dante Road, Brook Street, Bird Street, and pass my house to go to the divisional surgeon?—It might be so, but I never knew that. The way I always used to come when I did go to the hospital was through Crampton Street, down the Butts, and by Kennington Lane Police Station.

38456. What remark did you pass to me when my daughter, who was cleaning the doorstep, said to me "Good-bye, dad"?—I did not see your daughter. I did not know you had got one.

38457. Did you not remark "You artful b——r"?—Certainly not. Do you think I should say that in front of a child?

38458. And I asked you what you were doing there?—Certainly not.

38459. And you told me you were on the sick list?—Certainly not.

38460. You told me, if my memory will trust me, you had a touch of influenza?—I never met you there in my life.

38461. Did I not tell you that whisky was a good thing for influenza?—No, certainly not.

38462. And we had two drops?—Where did we go?

39463. To the Two Eagles?—No, I was never in the house in my life.

38464. And you do not live very far from it?—I thought you said just now that when we parted at your door I said "Good-bye, you artful b——r"?

38465. No; I said what remark did you make to me?—Yes, at the door, when I said "Good-bye."

38466. No; my daughter said "Good-bye, dad"?—No, you said I said "Good-bye, you artful b——r" just now.

38467. Then you told me you had been laid up for a few days?—Certainly not.

38468. And I gave you a sovereign?—You have dropped it a bit now. I thought it was two.

38469. And, after having a second drop, I dropped another sovereign?—Certainly not.

38470. Saying you could do with a little extra?—When you say you dropped a sovereign, you forget about the other sovereign.

38471. Then you left me while you continued on your way to the doctor. I believe you had to be there about 10 o'clock in the morning?—Certainly not.

38472. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did you know of Chapman being summoned?—Yes.

38473. I want to know why you proceeded against Chapman by summons and not by arrest?—Because he did not commit an offence under the Metropolitan Police Act—only one man approached him at a time.

38474. But you were able to obtain a conviction?—Yes.

38475. What evidence did you have to give?—That he was betting against the County Council Bye-laws.

38476. What evidence did you have to give to show that?—That we had seen men come down there and hand him slips.

38477. But not two or three?—Not two or three at a time, but one at a time.

38478. Why should you not have proceeded against any other of these people whom you knew perfectly well in the same way?—Because we saw them commit the offence under the Metropolitan Police Act, which gives us power to arrest.

38479. But you must have had plenty of opportunities in which you could have summoned them?—When we saw them commit the offence under the Metropolitan Police Act then we did make the arrest.

38480. Yes. You told me you saw this man Clements, and others, daily plying their trade, but you said you could not arrest them because they did not comply with the Metropolitan Police Act, because there were not two or three together. Then I asked you why did you not proceed against them in the same way as you did against Chapman by summons under the bye-laws?—I may have seen Clements or others several times, but they might not have been betting at all. When I saw them betting they were betting under the Metropolitan Police Act, which gave me power to arrest, which I did.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think you did not ask him whether he saw them plying their trade.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I understood him to say he knew they were every day in the York Road betting.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not think he meant to say he had seen them betting.

(Chairman.) I did not gather that.

(Witness.) No; I saw them there. I might have seen them two or three times a day, but they were not betting.

38481. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Even if you do see them betting I suppose there is some difficulty about the evidence?—Yes.

38482. But if you arrest a man you find the evidence on him?—Yes.

38483. (Mr. Platt.) Would the second time of my arrest be on the date when a complaint was made at Kennington Road Police Station by Forbes?—Against you?

38484. Against Platt, the bookmaker?—I do not know. I could not answer that.

(Mr. Platt.) I call for Forbes' report made to Kennington Road Police Station.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I am not aware that any report was made by Forbes.

(Mr. Platt.) I call for a report made at Kennington Road Police Station by my employer, Forbes, at that time.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You are wrong in calling it a report. It is a complaint, or a statement, made by Forbes against you which was lodged at that station.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We have not got one, but we can inquire if there is such a thing.

(Mr. Platt.) On my cross-examination you asked me about it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) If there is such a thing it shall be looked for. Mr. Muir has inquired, and no complaint was made in writing. There is no record of the complaint. I am afraid we cannot produce it.

(Chairman.) You, Mr. Platt, can go on and put your questions on the assumption that some complaint was made.

38485. (Mr. Platt.) Did you not come to me, and look through the wicket gate and call me away to the tunnel and tell me of the complaint that had been lodged at the police-station, and that I must come down that day?—When was that?

38486. On my second arrest?—Before I made the arrest?

38487. Before you made the arrest?—Certainly not.

38488. And you wanted me to go down there, but my handling of you persuaded you to let me stop later, as my employer at that time would have been only most anxious for me to be taken down at the time this officer came to me?—Certainly not.

38489. He stood outside The Hero with his bike, and had a laugh at me because I was taken down?—Certainly not on the second arrest. When the second arrest was made I think you were then working for Mr. Forbes. I am not sure.

38490. I say I was working for Mr. Forbes?—Mr. Forbes would not be very pleased if I did make the arrest. He would have to pay £5.

38491. He did not have to pay the £5. I turned up that morning when he lodged the complaint, and it was what he gave you that caused you to arrest me that day.

38492. (Chairman.) What do you say to that? Was any money given to you by this other man?—Certainly not.

38493. Or any complaint made to you?

38494. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Or anything said to you by the other man?—Certainly not. I never knew anything about it until I saw Mr. Forbes at the station I think at the time of the second arrest.

38495. Did you see him at the station at the time of the second arrest of Platt?—No; Mr. Forbes did go to the station I think and complained about Mr. Platt taking about £50 of his money. I think that was the complaint that Mr. Forbes made. At the time of the second arrest I think Mr. Platt was still working for Mr. Forbes.

38496. (Mr. Platt.) I had given up working for him on that morning on money matters?—Do you remember the date when you gave up working for Mr. Forbes?

38497. I believe it was on July 8th.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Your second arrest was not till the 1st August. Mr. Forbes was arrested on July 9th.

(Chairman.) Have you finished, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) No.

(Chairman.) What other topic do you want to cross-examine upon, because it is no use putting everything that comes into your mind about these transactions?

38498. (Mr. Platt.) What arrest did you make between the 24th August and the 27th August?—I could not say. There is the list here.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Only one—George Hatfield.

(Mr. Platt.) On what day was that?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The 26th.

(Witness.) Hatfield was the man who was asking for Mr. Burnett that I was looking for just now.

(Mr. Platt.) Would the date when two of us were arrested—Mansell and myself—be the 28th August?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes.

38499. (Mr. Platt.) I promised to go down on the 27th?—Not that I am aware of.

38500. Where were you on the 27th?—I cannot say. It appears I had an arrest on the 27th.

38501. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) No, on the 26th, I think?—I could not say where I was.

38501*. (Mr. Platt.) Would your daily book show where you were?—The list will show where I was. The list will show whether I was out on the 27th in plain clothes; I could not keep it in my head.

(Chairman.) There was no arrest on the 27th August.

(Mr. Platt.) That is the day I agreed to go down.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He was out on the 27th according to the report.

(Mr. Platt.) He knows he was out.

(Witness.) He would be a clever man to remember all these dates when I was out.

(Mr. Platt.) Would he have to give a report of where he was during those four hours?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No.

38502. (Chairman.) At the end of four hours in plain clothes do you report yourself at the station?—Yes; we report ourselves when we go off.

38503. Do you give any account of where you have been?—No. I could not. There is no report left at the station as to where we have been.

38504. (Mr. Platt.) If you have no arrest during the four hours that you are out you do not have to account for where you spent that time?—No.

38505. So you could not say where you spent those four hours from 12 to 4 on the 24th August?—No.

38506. You could not say where you were at half-past two or at twenty minutes to three?—No, I have not the slightest idea.

38507. Is there in any of those arrests that you made any arrest of two persons?—Yes, on two or three days, I think, I had two arrests—twice, I think. Lawrence and Noon were both on the same day.

38508. Would that show the time when the two arrests were made?—Yes, on the sheet.

38509. I should like to know the time, and whether that would be at the same time or not.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What date do you want?

(Mr. Platt.) I want to get the point proved.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Tell us what the point is.

(Mr. Platt.) I want to know what was the time when he arrested two persons and took them to the station.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It was the 8th of August.

(Chairman.) On the 23rd of September Lawrence was arrested by Gunn.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The entry on the 8th of August shows it.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There is an entry to his name on the 17th of October. There is Rolfe and Noon.

P.C. A. Soer.

(Mr. Platt.) The only one I know in which there were two arrests on the same day was the 17th of October.

26 Mar. 1907

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Will that do for you?

(Mr. Platt.) Anything will do for me if I know at what time they were arrested.

(Chairman.) On the 17th of October Rolfe and Noon were arrested.

(Mr. Platt.) They are two well-known bookmakers. He arrested Rolfe and very likely saw Noon, and took him at the same time.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is it your suggestion that all these bookmakers are taken by arrangement?

38510. (Mr. Platt.) Nine out of ten. On the day that you arrested Forbes you say I was there and ran away?—Yes.

38511. You had come back for me in August, but you did not come back for me the day I ran away, as you say, from Forbes?—Perhaps you do not know that. I did not get you, did I? You do not know whether I came back that day.

38512. You did not call for me that day?—No, worse luck, I did not.

38513. (Mr. Platt.) On the day of the 28th of August, the date that you apprehended a friend of mine, had you ever seen that person in that street before?—What is the friend's name?

38514. Mansell?—I have seen him several times, but not in that street.

38515. What part have you seen him in?—Walworth.

38516. Did you know he was at work at the time that you arrested him, although not that day?—He was working at betting—I know that.

38517. Where previous to that day?—I don't know. I did not know the man.

38518. What made you draw the conclusion that he was a fresh man there?—I saw him betting.

38519. You saw him betting?—Yes.

38520. From where did you observe him?—From the side door of Waterloo Station.

38521. After you had taken him to the station and charged him you came back for me?—Yes.

38522. Where was I standing?—You were standing against the third door on the right from Mepham Street in Robert Street.

38523. What happened when you approached me?—I saw you betting.

38524. I was betting with people. I was not by myself?—No.

38525. So that when I saw you I could not go into the passage and slam the door. Why did you not arrest one of those persons instead of coming after me after I slammed the door?—My intention was to have you. You were the bookmaker. You slammed the door in my face, but it did not shut. I pushed it open and followed you.

38526. Have you ever arrested a punter?—No, not to my recollection.

38527. When I slammed the door what happened?—I opened it.

38528. You forced it?—No. You did not latch it.

38529. That is quite right. After you put all your weight against it I let go, and you chased me upstairs and through the first door on the first floor?—Yes, and then you jumped into Robert Street and I jumped after you.

38530. You jumped on me?—Yes.

38531. On what part of my body did you jump?—I just caught the hind part of you; my hand slipped down your coat, and you jumped up and away you went, and I followed.

38532. You were not on me bodily—you only just touched me?—I did not want to hurt you.

38533. You say you followed me and caught me outside the "Hero" door?—That is right.

38534. Where was Gunn at that time?—He was with me when I started.

38535. Could he not have been outside the door that I ran through, if he was with you, as you say, so that when I came out of the doorway that I jumped through he might have had me?—Perhaps he did not know the run of the place. He might have followed me.

38536. He was in Robert Street, the turning that I jumped into?—He was in Robert Street before he got into the workshop.

38537. You say he was with you?—Yes.

38538. You both ran downstairs after me?—Yes, he came down the stairs after me.

38539. He never jumped through any doorway?—No.

38540. He must have been waiting outside, according to you?—I don't know. He will explain that.

38541. You say he was with you?—I could not see behind me.

38542. He must have been in Robert Street?—Of course he was in Robert Street.

38543. When I jumped through the doorway on the first floor he ought to have been there to apprehend me?—He ought to have been, but he was in the passage trying to assist me. He did not think of your coming out of the doorway of the first floor, or very likely he would have been waiting for you.

38544. What drink had I called for when you went into the "Hero" public-house?—On this particular day, do you mean?

(Chairman.) I do not quite follow this examination, Mr. Platt. It is common ground between you that you were arrested. There is no need to go over all these details.

(Mr. Platt.) The point is this: The witness says he arrested me outside the "Hero" doorway. He says that Gunn was with him, and entered the street at the same time, and they both ran down the steps after me, but I wish to prove that Gunn was in one place and that this man arrested me, as I say, in the public-house after I had been served with the drink.

38545. (Chairman to Witness.) That is Mr. Platt's account. What do you say. Is that a true account?—Not what Mr. Platt says. Gunn was with me at the time at the side door of Waterloo Station. When I ran down Gunn followed. Mr. Platt ran into the passage, and it appears that Gunn followed me, thinking that we were going to arrest Platt inside. Instead of that, Mr. Platt jumped from the first floor door into Robert Street, and dodged the pair of us.

(Chairman.) So much for that. Now what is the next point, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) Is it possible for me to have the dates and the times when the two persons were apprehended on one day?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We cannot get them here. We have not got the materials. The only way to get them would be to look up the charge sheets, and that means going back to the station, and looking up the charge sheets for 1903.

(Mr. Platt.) That is an essential point.

(Chairman.) We have given you one case.

(Mr. Platt.) But I want the times, and whether it was a bookmaker or a punter, and how often he thinks he has arrested a punter.

(Chairman.) He said he had not arrested punters.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) He can tell you whether these names are names of bookmakers or punters. Rolfe is one and Noon is another.

(Witness.) They are both well-known bookmakers.

38546. (Mr. Platt.) In taking one to the station you passed the other, and then arrested him.

38547. (Chairman.) Noon was arrested several times in this year?—Yes, several times. I do not know the number.

(Mr. Platt.) That is all I have to ask on that matter, Sir.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) May I hand in the sheet relating to Sergeant Powell? I do not think you have seen that. He has been called as a witness. It is a clean sheet.

Police-constable ANDREW BEATTIE GUNN, 209 L, sworn.

38548. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you Police-constable 209, of the L Division?—Yes.

38549. You have been in the Force about 6½ years?—Seven years on the 9th April.

38550. I think you have a clean sheet?—Yes—exemplary character.

38551. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What does a clean sheet mean?—Exemplary character.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) And Sergeant Powell's sheet, which has just been handed in, is the same?

38552. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is, sir. In the year 1903 were you employed during part of the year on plain clothes duty in connection with keeping observation on street bookmakers?—Yes.

38553. I think you were not employed at all prior to July?—The end of July—I forget the date.

38554. I think you began on the 9th July, according to the record, and you were on duty a certain number of days in July?—Yes.

38555. And in August and in September?—Yes, those three months.

38556. Had you been employed at all on that class of duty before that?—Never.

38557. I think during that time you were concerned in three arrests which have come before the present Commissioners?—Yes.

38558. I think on the 9th July you were in company with Soer when he arrested a man named Forbes?—That is correct.

38559. Were you in court when Soer gave his evidence about that?—I was.

38560. And did he correctly state what happened?—As far as I remember Forbes pleaded guilty to the offence.

38561. Did Soer state correctly in his evidence here what took place with reference to that arrest?—He did quite correctly.

38562. I think you arrested Forbes, but Platt ran away on that occasion?—That is right.

38563. The next occasion was the 1st August?—Yes, that is right.

38564. Were you with Soer on that day when Platt was arrested in Robert Street for betting?—Yes.

38565. I think you were also with Soer on the 28th August when Platt was again arrested for betting in Robert Street?—Yes.

38566. Is that the occasion upon which Platt jumped out of the first-floor door?—Yes.

38567. Some questions have been asked Soer about that. Just describe what happened?—On this particular occasion Soer and I kept observation on Platt from within the wicket gate at Waterloo Station. We saw him receiving slips of paper and money, and Soer ran down the steps to arrest him. I followed Soer, and Soer and Platt both ran into the door. I followed down after them. As I got inside I lost sight of them. I turned to look back, and I saw Platt and Soer running down Robert Street past the door. I ran up the steps again and followed up Platt and Soer, and I saw Soer catch hold of the back of Platt's neck at the "Hero" public-house, in Waterloo Road.

38568. Is there any truth in the suggestion that Platt went into the "Hero" public-house and had a drink before he was arrested?—No, he never had time.

38569. Did you arrest anybody else on that same afternoon, the 28th?—There were two men arrested, but I do not know that it was on that date. It was one day in August. I forget the date.

38570. A man named Mansell?—I did arrest a man named Mansell prior to Platt's arrest.

38571. On the same day?—On the same day.

38572. With reference to the allegations that Platt has made against you, has he ever given you money at any time?—Certainly not.

38573. I think he has spoken to three occasions. There is one occasion after he had pleaded guilty when he says he came outside the police station and joined you and Soer, and that money was paid you outside Lillywhite's, the cricket-bat makers?—Outside the police court he referred to.

P.C. A. B. Gunn. 26 Mar. 1907.

38574. That is close by?—It is some distance from Kennington Road Station.

38575. After his conviction did you or Soer join him?—Never on any occasion.

38576. Is it true that he gave you any money on that occasion?—Certainly not.

38577. He says on another occasion he gave you money in the "Hero of Waterloo." Have you ever been into the "Hero of Waterloo"?—I have never been inside the house in my life, Sir.

38578. And the third occasion he speaks of is on the premises of the London and South-Western Railway Company, Waterloo Station, in the Tubeway of the Electric Railway, and he said you asked him to go into the Tubeway, and when you got there he gave you money?—Certainly not.

38579. Have you ever been in the Tubeway with him?—Never. I have been there with Soer.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask any questions, Mr. Platt?

38580. (Mr. Platt.) Yes, Sir. What would take you with Soer into the Tubeway?—We wanted to get near the wicket gate.

38581. How far would the Tubeway be from the wicket gate?—About 15 yards.

38582. Was there any occasion for you to walk that side of the approach to Waterloo Station to the Tubeway?—If we cared to do so.

38583. You would go to the Tubeway before you get to the wicket gate?—Sometimes.

38584. But what would take you there?—To try and get hold of you, I expect.

38585. Would you go and look in the Tubeway for me?—No.

38586. That is on the South-Western property, where you could not arrest me?—We could do it if we liked.

38587. Then why did you do it?—Not to arrest you.

38588. What would take you to the Tubeway?—So that we should get near the wicket gate to see if you were in Robert Street, betting.

38589. You could not see me from the Tubeway?—No, we waited till the coast was clear.

38590. How would you know the coast was clear?—None of your touts about.

38591. Were there any of my touts about?—Sometimes.

38592. Were there any touts about the approach at Waterloo?—If any private persons saw us they would give us away to you.

38593. Would they not be able to give you away to me when they saw you in the Tubeway close to the wicket gate?—That is what I say.

38594. They could give you away?—Yes. We had to hide in there sometimes.

38595. Why was it necessary for you to go to the Tubeway before you got to the wicket gate? If you were in the Tubeway I could have the tip that you were coming?—We did not want your people to see us. That is why we were there.

38596. They might see you in the Tubeway from the wicket gate?—No—if there were none of your touts about.

38597. I had no touts there because if I had you would have arrested them. Were you not in the Tubeway because I asked you to go into the Tubeway?—Certainly not.

38598. You are positive?—Yes, positive.

38599. You say you would go to the Tubeway where you hid yourself to approach me?—Certainly.

38600. Knowing at the same time you have to come over a distance of ground to get to that wicket gate?—Yes, 15 yards.

38601. There are two roadways, and I should say it is a matter of 25 or 30 yards?—That is immaterial.

P.C. A. B. Munn. 26 Mar. 1907.

38602. It would be just as easy for me to get the tip if I wanted them to give me the tip from your leaving the Tube to the wicket gate as it would be for me to get the tip before you get to the approach from the Tubeway?—We could easily get there without anybody seeing us. We were going there to see if there was anybody about who knew us who would be very pleased to give you the tip.

38603. Soer has never said he had to go to the Tubeway before he came to the wicket gate?—We were in dozens of places, and we should have to have a good memory to remember them all.

38604. You admit being in the Tubeway?—I was in the Tubeway, yes.

38605. What was the time that Mansell was charged at the Kennington Road Station?—I cannot say. The records are there.

38606. How long would you say you and Soer were watching me when you arrested me the same day as Mansell?—Possibly a few minutes.

38607. What do you call a few minutes?—A few minutes.

38608. Cannot you say whether it is 10 or 20?—No, it is not necessary.

38609. What would you say?—It is not necessary.

38610. But what should you say?—It is not necessary in this case.

38611. I think it is very necessary. You don't know how long you were watching me?—No, I did not book it down.

38612. Is it the fact that you have to book all the times of watching down?—No.

38613. You did not book it down?—No.

38614. How is it that there is nothing booked in your book on the 27th August? When you go back to the station you do not have to report what you have been watching, but you put it in your book?—But I arrested you.

38615. What makes you use those words, you did not book the time you were watching me?—There was nothing to book. We arrested you.

38616. Do not you enter up all the arrests of bookmakers in your little diary?—I might put your name in, but I would not put down the time I was watching you—not when I arrested you.

38617. There are days that you do book it in?—I might put your name in the book.

38618. There are times when you are watching bookmakers when you do book how long a time you have been watching them?—Possibly so.

38619. Is it a fact or not?—I cannot remember this occasion.

38620. Have you ever done it?—Done what?

38621. Booked the time you have watched a bookmaker?—Not when I arrest him.

38622. Where were you when I jumped through the first floor?—Downstairs.

38623. Are you positive?—Yes, positive.

38624. Where were you when I attempted to throw the beer over?—I saw no beer. I saw Soer get hold of the back of your neck in the Hero public-house.

38625. In the Hero public-house?—At the door.

38626. At the door of the Hero public-house?—At the door of the Hero public-house he had hold of you.

38627. Not inside?—Not inside.

38628. He says I pulled him in the doorway. Where were you when I was pulling him in the doorway?—In Mepham Street. I followed both of you. Soer had hold of you at the doorway before I got up to you.

38629. You did not follow us through the first floor doorway?—No. I did not want to break my leg.

38630. You were in the passage on the ground floor within three or four yards of Soer and me, and still you were not at your comrade's assistance to stop me pulling him in the doorway?—I would have been in a matter of five seconds.

38631. Do you think it was possible for me to pull an athletic young man like him into the doorway in five seconds after I had been fallen on?—You are talking of the occasion when you jumped out of the doorway.

38632. Do you think I could pull him in the doorway in five seconds?—How long was it when you jumped on the ground? You ran away.

38633. I am no judge of distances of time in running. Where were you when Soer says I was attempting to pull him into the doorway?—Which doorway?

38634. The doorway of the Hero?—I was in Mepham Street then.

38635. You did not see me attempting to pull him into the doorway. All you saw was he had me by the scrag of the neck on the pathway?—Yes.

38636. Not in the doorway?—That is right.

38637. (Chairman.) I did not catch the year in which you joined the force?—9th April, 1900.

38638. Have you been in the L Division all the time?—Yes.

38639. When were you first told off for this special work of observation of street bookmakers?—July, 1903.

38640. That was the first time you had done any work of the kind?—It was the first occasion I was ever employed in plain clothes.

38641. Why were you picked out for this work, do you think?—I could not say. I was told off for the duty by the Sub-divisional Inspector.

38642. That meant that you would have to go about for four hours every day in plain clothes?—Yes.

38643. Did that mean that you went out for the same four hours every day?—Four hours in the morning we were employed on plain clothes duty during the time that betting was on.

38644. The instructions to you were the same as the instructions to Soer, as I understand you; that is to say, to keep observation on bookmakers?—Yes.

38645. Were you at liberty to choose any four hours that you liked?—During the time that the betting was on.

38646. Did you know the time the betting was on?—Usually from 11 till about 4.

38647. You knew that?—Between those times were the principal times when betting was taking place.

38648. Did you know that those were the hours during which the betting generally took place when you were first told off for this work?—Oh, yes, I know that.

38649. How did you get to know that?—By my own observation in uniform.

38650. You are not bound to go on duty from 12 to 4. You might have picked out from 11 to 3 if you liked?—Exactly so.

38651. Or 10 to 2 if you wished?—Yes. Sometimes we could not leave the station for an hour, because the scouts used to watch us at the station to see when the plain clothes men left, and they used to follow us, and we had great difficulty in arresting these men.

38652. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did you know these scouts?—Yes.

38653. (Chairman.) Would that count as service?—That would count as time.

38654. Did you not disguise yourselves?—Yes, we did disguise ourselves, but we could disguise ourselves in any way we liked they would know us. The scouts were at every corner approaching the police-station, and sometimes we had to jump the back wall at the rear of the station, and jump down a matter of 16ft. or 17 ft. so that they would not see us leaving the place.

38655. Who employed these scouts—individual bookmakers?—The bookmakers.

38656. Each man had his scout?—Each man had his scout.

38657. How did you know that?—We knew that very well. You could always see the scouts hanging about a man's pitch.

38658. Then before you left the police station for your round of observations you would see men near the police station whom you knew by sight, I suppose?—Yes.

38659. And they were generally men whom you had seen near somebody's pitch?—Yes. When we left the station the scouts would watch us, and if they saw us approach a man's pitch they would get in front of us and give the bookmaker the tip. He would fly into a public-house or some other place of safety until we were out of the way.

38660. Were you unable to disguise yourselves effectively?—We disguised ourselves in many ways—black faces and all that, but then they would know you.

(Mr. Platt.) Do you think it possible for him to disguise himself?

38661. (Chairman.) I should not think that a black face would be a very effective disguise?—It would help a little way.

38662. The more secretly you worked, and the more unobtrusive a man was, I should have thought would give you a better chance of sweeping down upon them?—Yes.

38663. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did you black your face to look like a nigger?—I have blacked my face to look like a coalman many a time.

38664. (Mr. Whitmore.) Did you always start from the police station?—I did, because I was a single man living in the section house. I had to leave the station, and I used to arrange to meet Soer perhaps a mile away from there, so that nobody would see us meet, but I had to leave the station, and the touts knew it.

38665. (Chairman.) Then I understand observation work is done in couples, that you do not work singly at it, but you meet one of the other constables told off for the same work?—Yes, we used to meet each other.

38666. When did you work first with Soer with regard to Smith or Platt?—It was July when Forbes was arrested. I went out with Soer in July, and he told me there was a bookmaker in Robert Street.

38667. What kind of plan did you make on any particular morning, or, take a racing like the Cup Day at Ascot, when the Ascot races were on? What kind of plan did you make in the morning before leaving the station?—I used to arrange to meet Soer at some place outside, probably the Elephant and Castle; I might meet him there, and we would get in the inside of a 'bus and go to Waterloo Station. If we saw nobody hanging about at Waterloo Station when the 'bus stopped, we used to fly into the station, so that nobody saw us. Then we might come down the approach into a tunnel or any convenient place wherever we could hide, and watch from this wicket gate to see if there was anybody in Robert Street.

38668. That is not quite an answer to my question. I dare say you did that; but before you left the station did you make any arrangement with Soer that you would go and watch a particular bookmaker on that particular day—make a dead set, so to speak, at one particular bookmaker—or did you go out into the street and go to some of the pitches you knew on the chance of catching one of them?—We did not go to any particular one. We went to any of the pitches, and if we went to a pitch and we failed to arrest the man we did not stop, because it was no use waiting; he would not come anywhere near when we were about. We used to go to the gate to watch, and if we arrested a man there we took him to the station and went to the police court.

38669. You knew pretty well about where the pitches were?—I knew where the pitches were.

38670. And you knew, I suppose, there were about fifteen bookmakers—that is the number that Soer gave us?—About that.

38671. Habitually indulging in their occupation on the various pitches?—Yes.

38672. Do you account for the intervals of time between the arrests of Platt or of Noon in the same way that Soer did? Do you account for the fact that Platt apparently was able to carry on his occupation from some date in May right up to the end of August—a good long interval?—I could not say. Possibly we could not get a chance of arresting him, or get near him.

38673. Take July. You were on the work in July, and he was not arrested at all in July?—Possibly we went there several times, and were not successful in getting near him.

38674. Did you go out with Deed at all?—Never.

38675. Only with Soer?—Yes.

38676. Have you any distinct recollection of attempting to catch Platt on any day in July?—Yes, when he was with Forbes when Forbes was arrested.

38677. That was the 9th July, after you caught Forbes, but failed to catch Platt?—Soer caught Forbes and I failed to catch Platt.

38678. You, of course, had a note book supplied to you, as usual?—Yes.

38679. Did you make any entry of this half detective, half constable work that you were doing? Did you make any notes about it of where you were doing that?—I do not know that I made any notes, unless I put the man's name and address in the book when he was charged in the station. It was not necessary. The man was arrested for causing an obstruction, and he pleaded guilty, and there was no need to put his name in the book.

38680. Supposing you went to a pitch and were unsuccessful in discovering him, or perhaps it may be that no offence was being committed, did you make any entry in your notebook?—No.

38681. When you have finished your four hours and go back to the police station, what is your duty then?—To report off to the officer on duty.

38682. To report that you had come back and finished your four hours' duty?—Yes.

38683. Then you take four hours off and then four hours on in uniform after that?—Yes.

38684. Will there be an entry made by you of the work you were doing in the particular four hours, even supposing nobody had been arrested? Was any note made at the police station as to what you and your companions had been doing during those four hours?—No. We simply tell the officer on duty that we have been unable to arrest anybody, and have completed the tour of duty.

38685. Who do you make that statement to, that you have been unable to effect an arrest?—The officer on duty.

38686. That would be the Inspector?—Yes. We usually saw the Sub-divisional Inspector.

38687. You say you did not make any notes in your notebook on such days?—No. I might have put the man's name and address in. I think I did. When he is placed in the dock the officer on duty might ask his name and address, and I might pull out my book. That is all that was necessary.

38688. How long were you at this work continuously?—About six weeks altogether.

38689. Platt says the first time he met you was in the Newington Causeway. Did you ever meet him in the Newington Causeway?—Certainly not. It is a deliberate falsehood.

38690. He says he bribed you the first time that he was arrested—that was in May. Had you anything to do with that arrest?—I was not in plain clothes at all in May. I never knew the man, and I never saw him till August 1st.

38691. You witnessed his first arrest?—No.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There must be some mistake about that.

(Chairman.) It may be. I do not want to do an injustice either to this witness or to Mr. Platt, but it is Question 13,356 that I was calling attention to.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) If you look at 13,355 I think it shows that he cannot have meant that was the first time he was arrested. He must have been dealing with the 1st August.

(Chairman.) Mr. Muir asks Mr. Platt: "What was the occasion of your bribing Gunn? (A.) He was with the officer that I had been in the habit of bribing, so I used him the same. (Q.) When did you first bribe Gunn? (A.) The first time I was arrested." It is obvious that Gunn was not with him.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) "By Gunn," he means.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What he means is after the 1st August by Gunn. If you look back at Question 13,355 it is obvious that what Mr. Platt is referring to is that he bribed P.C. Gunn the first time after he was arrested by Gunn, or Gunn was a witness.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, that is so.

38692. (Chairman.) The first time you met Mr. Platt was on the 1st August, was it?—That is so.

38690. When Soer was the officer who charged?—Yes.

38694. Then again on the 28th August you were with Soer, and he effected an arrest of Mr. Platt again?—Yes.

P.C. A. B. Gunn.

26 Mar. 1907.

38695. And on the 13th October were you with Soer when he arrested Mr. Platt?—I do not think I was in plain clothes then, as far as I remember.

38696. When did you cease to do this kind of special observation work?—I was never in plain clothes after street bookmakers after September of that year. Never after September. I was in plain clothes in October, but that was for street rowdyism.

38697. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I want you to explain one thing to me. You say that you knew the scouts?—I knew most of them.

38698. Generally were they the same men?—Yes, they were generally the same.

38699. They used to wait outside the station till you came out?—Yes.

38700. And when you came out was there a general stampede?—You could see them getting away or keeping observation on you as to which way you went.

38701. How many do you think there were outside waiting for you?—I could see through the window.

38702. How many?—Possibly two or three.

38703. Did you ever arrest a scout?—I never arrested a scout.

38704. You told us they walked in front of you, and then used to give some sign?—That is right. They would tell the bookmaker that we were somewhere near.

38705. You could not hear what they said?—No, we could not hear, but we could tell.

38706. By the time you got there he was gone?—Yes.

38707. Where was the scout?—He was gone too. He would not come anywhere near.

38708. (Chairman.) Did the scouts disguise themselves?—No, they were usually in the same attire.

38709. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I am interested in the disguise you have told us that you used. You were known, I suppose, after you had been at work for some time, by the scouts and by the bookmakers?—Yes, they all knew us.

38710. They all knew you as one of the men in plain clothes, and as a police-constable on the look-out for them?—Yes.

38711. So that for that purpose you used to disguise yourselves so that they should not know you?—Yes.

38712. What sort of disguise did you use? You have told us you looked like a coalheaver?—I have been out like a coalheaver on many occasions.

38713. In your old clothes?—I used to have a lot of old clothes for that purpose.

38714. Do you ever adopt any other disguise?—I hardly ever went out in the same coloured clothes.

38715. Were clothes supplied to you for that purpose?—No, there are plenty of old clothes in the section house.

38716. Which you can use?—Yes, old clothes belonging to about 40 single men. You could have a different garb every day.

38717. Were those clothes that were there for the purpose of being used for disguise?—No.

38718. They belonged to the men, and they used them when they were out in private clothes?—Yes.

38719. You put on their private clothes when you wanted to go out in disguise?—Yes, or in other old clothes that they did not want to use again.

38720. How many days did you go out? Take, for example, the month of July. You were out pretty well every day, were not you?—Yes.

38721. How many different sets of clothes do you think you used during that time?—We used to have a good many, I could not say how many.

38722. Did Soer also go about like that?—Soer did the same.

38723. And Powell?—Yes.

38724. All of you?—Yes.

38725. Then when you went out you were away for four hours?—Yes, about four hours.

38726. Did you walk about?—Yes.

38727. Wherever you thought right, I suppose?—Yes. If we failed at one place we would go somewhere where there was another bookmaker, and if we failed there we would go somewhere else. Sometimes in the four hours we would tramp miles and go on 'buses and tramcars, and then could not get near them.

38728. And then when you came back did you have to give an account of your doings at all?—Oh, no.

38729. If you were minded so to do, then it might be that you did nothing at all?—We did not make any notes of every street and turning that we went through.

38730. I am not asking you that. What I do not understand is this, you have been gone away for four hours and you go away in private clothes with another constable?—Yes.

38731. Then if I followed correctly what you said when you come back you simply report the time when you return?—Yes, to the officer on duty, who is usually the Sub-Divisional Inspector.

38732. You simply book your time of return?—Yes.

38733. To show you have been on duty four hours?—Yes, and returned.

38734. You are not asked for any account of what you have been doing during the four hours?—No. The officer on duty would know if we fetched anything in.

38735. But there are many days when you do not fetch anything in?—Yes, there are many days when we do not.

38736. Have they no sort of check on you?—We simply tell the officer on duty that we were unable to effect an arrest that day.

38737. Supposing you chose to go and spend your time in public-houses, would there be no check of any sort upon you?—No, I do not know that there would.

38738. (Chairman.) The sergeant makes no arrangement to meet you at any given point at any time during the four hours?—No.

38739. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I suppose that would be difficult because you might be looking after your man on the pitch?—Yes.

38740. So it has to be left entirely to you?—Yes.

38741. Are men selected for this duty because they are of particularly good character? Is there any special reason why they are selected for this work?—No, I could not say.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You will find, Sir, that that is so.

(The Witness.) The Sub-Divisional Inspector selects a man who he thinks is likely to do the duty satisfactory.

38742. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He has to trust to his doing the work properly?—Yes.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Is it a duty which is gladly accepted by a constable?—No.

38743. You would rather not be selected?—It is much easier to be in uniform, because there is too much running about to do in the four hours. Sometimes you do 20 miles.

38744. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Sometimes you ride on a tramcar. That is not so very hard, is it?—It is hard.

38745. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you remember when this matter was first brought to your knowledge by the Inspector?—Yes, I remember something about it.

38746. What do you remember?—I remember the Sub-Divisional Inspector telling me there had been a complaint against Soer, Powell and me of receiving money, as far as I remember.

38747. Can you at all fix when that was?—No, I could not say exactly; it is a long time.

38748. Do you remember making a report about it?—Yes.

38749. How long was it before you made the report that he asked you about it?—I could not really say distinctly, but I should not think it was long.

38750. Was it the same day, or was it a fortnight before?—I could not say. I could not really remember.

38751. You do not remember what instructions he gave to you with regard to making the report?—No. He told us that these complaints had been made, and he simply told us we would have to report on it.

38752. Did you write out this report which I have before me, which is dated the 21st November?—Yes.

38753. In the report you say: "I beg to report that I have been employed in plain clothes for four hours' duty on all the principal race days during the months of June, July, August, and September in company with P.C. 204 Soer. I have never arrested Platt for betting. I witnessed his arrest on two occasions by P.C. Soer, namely, on the 1st and 28th August, 1903," and then you deny the allegations made against you by Platt of having received money from him?—Yes.

38754. Do you remember writing that report?—Yes.

38755. Where did you write it?—In the library in the Police Section House.

38756. Do you remember that Soer also wrote a report?—Yes, Soer and Powell. The three of us had to report on it.

38757. Did you write those reports at the same time?—Certainly not. It was at 8 o'clock in the evening when I made mine out, I think. When I came in I was called into the office and the Sub-Divisional Inspector told me to make out the report. I did not see Soer at all.

38758. You wrote it quite of your own accord?—Yes.

38759. I have just read you the words you began your report with, and I will now read you the words of Soer's report: "I beg to report that I have been employed in plain clothes for four hours' duty on all the principal race days during the months of June, July, August, and September in company with P.C. 204 Soer." P.C. Soer's report says: "I beg to report that I have been employed in plain clothes for four hours' duty on all the principal race days during the months of June, July, August, and September in company with P.C. 180." You both use exactly the same words in that report. Are you sure that when you made that report you were not writing at the same time?—No. Powell and Soer had made out their reports before I made mine out.

38760. Had you seen the reports?—No, I had not seen the reports.

38761. Have you ever seen the reports?—When I made it out.

38762. But have you ever seen Soer's report?—I have seen Soer's report.

38763. When did you see Soer's report?—Shortly before the Commission started. Each man was given a copy of the report he made out at that time.

38764. Did you write your report straight off on paper, or did you write it out in pencil first of all, and then copy it?—I wrote it out in pencil first and then when I put it in a grammatical form I put it down in copying ink.

38765. Is it the custom to write out reports in pencil first of all?—Yes. You could not write a decent report straight away.

38766. Then you generally do write it out in pencil?—Yes, if you are not very sure of what words to put down so that it is in good form.

38767. When you wrote that out in pencil first of all did you communicate with your brother officers at all?—Oh, no. As soon as you get your report complete you hand it to the Sub-Divisional Inspector who has asked you for it, and you hear no more.

38767*. (Chairman.) Mr. Platt has asked Soer, and I think asked you, some questions about the exact time of your making the various arrests. How could you fix that time except from the charge sheet? You do not make a note in your notebook, I understand?—No. You would be able to judge within a minute or two what the time was.

38768. You take the prisoner, first of all, to the police station?—Yes.

38769. And there, of course, when charged, the time of his being charged or the time of his arrival at the station would be entered in the charge sheet in the usual course?—Yes.

38770. You would not keep any special note yourself of that?—No.

38771. The arrest has obviously taken place during your four hours' work, has it not?—Yes.

38772. Then, as I understand, in this class of case, at least in this division, the prisoner is taken right off to the police court at once, if the magistrate is sitting?—Yes, that is usually the custom.

38773. I gather that from Mr. Platt's evidence?—Sometimes we used to go out again if we thought we had time.

P.C. A. B. Gunn.

26 Mar. 1907.

38774. Leaving your prisoner—Mr. Platt, for instance—at the police station?—Detained at the station till we came back.

38776. You would take him to the station then at that hour?—Yes, at half-past 2.

38777. Then there would be no opportunity of his standing you a drink or anything of that kind without you committing a breach of duty that would be very noticeable during the time you were taking him from the police station to the police court?—That is right, Sir.

38778. It would be a little bit difficult even if you were willing to go with him somewhere?—Yes.

38779. Although you are in plain clothes?—Yes.

38780. You do not put on your uniform?—No, you go to the court in the same clothes as you have been out in.

38781. Then when you get to the court you are under the ordinary rules of constables in attendance at the police courts?—Yes.

38782. Do you have an attendance card for that?—Yes.

38783. Would you have an attendance card given you before you left the police station or by the Inspector when you got to the police court in such a case?—No, we would not have an attendance card when we were employed in plain clothes.

38784. You told me you would?—Not when we are in plain clothes, but always in uniform.

38785. Why?—The men are employed for four hours at this duty, and it is not necessary to have an attendance card.

38786. But the purpose is to see that no waste of time takes place on the part of the constable or to mark up the card with the attendance of the officer engaged. My reason for putting the question is this. If you have no attendance card, and that seems to be the case in the case I am putting to you, when you leave the police court with a prisoner after he has been fined, and he has paid the fine, there is no check on what you do then, even if the four hours are not up?—No.

38787. In the ordinary case of a constable attending in uniform, as I understand the regulations, the Inspector would mark the time on the attendance card at which he ought to leave the police court?—Yes.

38788. Then his duty is to go back to the police station?—Yes, straight away.

38789. If he wastes his time by going to public-houses or anything of that kind there is a check in the case of a man in uniform attending the police court?—Yes.

38790. But in the case of the plain-clothes men going, as we understand you did more than once, in the case of Mr. Platt, and his being fined, then he goes out and you can go out with him?—Yes.

38791. And there is absolutely no check on what you do. I am not suggesting you have done anything wrong, but there is no check?—No. We were allowed four hours for the tour of duty.

38792. But supposing there was still half an hour after the police-court proceedings were over. If you went with your prisoner, who had then paid his fine or not, there would be an opportunity for your going to a public-house with him to have a drink?—Yes. If we got away from the court early we would go back on the ground again.

38793. That I quite understand. If the arrest was effected at 12 o'clock you would have time to go and pounce on another pitch?—To go back straight away again.

38794. With regard to the disguise. Did you always have to go to the station before starting out on this work?—Yes, because I was a single man and lived in the station section house.

P.C. A. B. Gunn.
26 Mar. 1907.

38795. It seems to be a very inefficient way of doing the work. I do not say you are to blame for it, but it is much better to send somebody from an adjoining police station. All the scouts and all the bookmakers of the L Division know that certain men in plain clothes are going to emerge at some hour—say 11 o'clock every day?—Yes, but when I left the station I always proceeded in the reverse direction to that in which I intended going.

38796. But that would not take in a knowing scout?—It used to put them off the ground a bit.

38797. But not a scout such as Mr. Platt employed, according to his account?—I used to go the other way and dodge them the best way I could.

38798. But you gave them a great advantage by always starting from the same place and from a known place?—They had an advantage of me, but not of Soer.

38799. As to the disguise, did you always put on the same boots?—No, I used to have all sorts on.

38800. You changed your boots as well?—Yes.

38801. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Who decides what day you go out on this duty?—The Sub-Divisional Inspector warns the men who are to go out.

38802. Are you told off for the duty during the month?—It might be for a week or a fortnight.

38803. Supposing you are told off for a fortnight, do you go every day?—If there is racing on.

38804. How do you know whether there is racing on?—I can always tell by looking at the race card.

38805. You do not get race cards, do you?—You could get one anywhere, or you could see by the morning papers if there is racing on that day.

38806. But you would not in the ordinary course get a race card?—They are not hard to purchase.

38807. In the morning when you go out to work?—No. You could buy an annual for all the year round showing all the principal races.

38808. Are they always on the same day?—No, but we used to see the papers every morning.

38809. Whether there was racing on that day or not?—Yes.

38810. (Mr. Whitmore.) Do any of your superior officers give you directions as to what course you should follow on particular days in keeping watch on these bookmakers?—No, not any particular person. We have to arrest the first man we can get hold of.

38811. So on any particular day—take, for instance, the Ascot Cup day—you arrest who you can find?—Yes.

(Mr. Platt.) May I ask another question?

(Chairman.) What is it about?

38812. (Mr. Platt.) It is a question about the report. Is it any unusual thing for a constable to make a report and show it to his sergeant or Inspector to see if it is made out correctly or in corroboration of any other reports?—Certainly not.

38813. It is no unusual thing?—You make your report out and give it to your superior officer.

38814. The sergeant would not see it or the Inspector?—No.

38815. So that if that was the case we should have a great number of conflicting reports. I agree it seems to be the rule that reports coincide with one another.

(Chairman.) That is argument and not a question.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Now, sir, I have two short witnesses who I should like to call if you think it is material, and it is on this point. You may remember the first day that Mr. Platt was called, he said he had got books in which he made entries with reference to payments from police-constables, and you may remember after an adjournment he went away to fetch the books. He came back and he produced one book, and then the next time he came he said he had had another book, but it had been destroyed by his wife. Then the wife was called, and she said that she had destroyed it on the very day on which Platt was first called—that was the Thursday, the 18th October—and she said that it was destroyed in a fit of temper one day after she had been down to the police court to complain about her husband. Now we have looked up the records, and we find that the day she went down to the police court was the 10th October and not the 17th, and therefore if her version is right this book must have been destroyed prior to the first occasion of Platt coming here, and it must have been destroyed at the time he went back and came back without it.

(Chairman.) We had better have the evidence complete.

(Mr. Platt.) I do not think my wife was positive of the date.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I should like to fix the date. I have only given that explanation of the reason why I wanted to call these witnesses.

Police-constable WILLIAM GALE, 7 L, sworn.

P.C. W. Gale.

38816. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What is your position?—Chief Warrant Officer to the Lambeth Police Court.

38817. Have you made a search to ascertain the date upon which Mrs. Platt attended the Magistrate and made a complaint against her husband with reference to his conduct?—Yes, on the 10th October, 1906.

38818. I think you were directed by the Magistrate to send an officer to caution him?—Yes.

38819. And I think the officer you sent was Police-constable Barnes?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Do you ask any question, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) I should like to know what date my wife fixed. I don't think she was positive of the date.

38820. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Would you mind telling us what it was she complained of?—She complained of her husband threatening her and breaking up the crockery in the home.

38821. The dinner service?—Yes.

38822. That was on the 10th October?—Yes.

38823. Did it come before the Magistrate on that day?—The wife made an application to Mr. Bennett, and he directed me to send an officer to caution the husband with regard to his behaviour in threatening his wife.

38824. What day was the 10th October?—Wednesday.

Inspector FRANK KNELL, sworn.

Inspector F. Knell.

38825. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Do you know the witness, Mr. Alfred Platt?—Yes.

38826. Do you remember his calling upon you at the Kennington Lane Police-Station and making some complaint about Police-constable Deed?—Yes.

38827. What was the date upon which he called upon you?—On the 19th November, 1903.

38828. At what hour?—In the morning.

38829. Did you yourself take any written note of his complaint at that time?—I made a note of his call.

38830. And of the nature of his complaint?—No.

38831. Do you remember whether he complained of any other officer besides Deed?—He complained of Deed only.

38832. What did he tell you?—He said that he had written a letter to the Superintendent, and that it had not been acknowledged.

38833. That would be Superintendent Noviss?—Yes. It was on a Monday morning he saw me. I said: "If you only write the letter on Saturday probably the officer has not had time to call upon you. I advise you to go home, and if an officer does not call upon you during the day, come here this evening and I will introduce you to the Superintendent." And he came in the evening and saw the Superintendent.

38834. Did you yourself have any further interview with him about his complaint?—No.

(Chairman.) Mr. Platt, do you wish to ask any questions?

(Mr. Platt.) No.

Sub-Divisional Inspector FREDERICK SPENCER, sworn.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.

26 Mar. 1907.

38835. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What is your position exactly, please?—Sub-Divisional Inspector.

38836. I think you are attached to the L Division?—Yes.

38837. What was the first occasion on which your attention was directed to this matter of Platt?—On the morning of the 19th October, 1903.

38838. Previous to that had you had your attention called to the Chapman case? Have you got your report dated the 9th October before you?—No, I have not got it. (The report was handed to the witness.) This is my report.

38839. For what purpose was a report called for on that occasion?—There was an appeal.

38840. I call your attention to your report of the 9th October. You recollect now that that had reference to Chapman?—Yes.

38841. Do you remember Platt calling at the station?—Yes.

38842. Whom did he see?—He saw me.

38843. What did he say?—If I might start at the beginning, I saw him first on the 19th.

38844. Where did you see him?—At Kennington Lane Police-Station, in the Inspector's office.

38845. What did he say to you on that occasion?—He was talking of a man he called Patsey. He made a complaint against a man named Patsey of having made a bet with him, and I think he called it "ramping" him.

38846. Did he make any other complaint at that time?—No. He was invited to do so.

38847. Was that all that he complained of at that time?—That is all.

38848. Did he come again on the 20th?—He came to Kennington Lane Police-Station on the 20th by appointment.

38849. Did you see him there?—I did.

38850. Did he make any complaint on that day?—No, except against Deed.

38851. Tell us what he said upon that occasion?—I must refer to the report.

38852. Yes?—He complained that P.C. 180 L had attempted to obtain £20 from him under the following circumstances: At 2.40 p.m., 17th inst., the P.C. went to him as he was making a book at Robert Street, Waterloo Road, and handed him a slip of paper on which was written, "Oasis, 20s. win, 20s. 1, 2, 3—any to come, Abanico, 20s. win, 20s. 1, 2, 3—Jack."

38853. Is that a statement made by you shortly after of what he said?—Yes.

38854. Was that made on the same day as he said it?—Yes.

38855. The report then goes on to say what you did upon the receipt of that complaint?—That is so.

38856. I do not think I need go into that. The report correctly states, does it, what you did upon the receipt of that complaint?—Yes.

38857. I think it has been suggested that upon one or other of those two occasions he complained to you about other officers, and stated he had been paying money to officers?—Yes.

38858. Did he say anything of the kind?—He said at the superintendent's office that he had paid, I think, 70s. a week to the police.

38859. That was on the 19th?—Yes.

38860. He said what?—That he had paid, I think, 70s. a week to the police to prevent his arrest, and so on. He was invited to disclose the names and numbers and to give all particulars. He then refused to do so.

38861. That was on the 19th?—On the 19th that was.

38862. I think just a moment ago you said he had attended on the 20th by appointment?—Yes.

38863. When was the appointment made?—On the evening of the 19th.

38864. For what purpose was he to come?—For me to take his statement with regard to his complaint in the presence of the officer he complained of.

38865. Did he on the 19th complain of Deed?—I asked him his name, and he called him Patsey. I did not then know who he was referring to.

38866. On the 20th did he repeat his complaint about paying money to police officers?—He did.

38867. What did he say then?—He used very nearly the same terms, as far as I remember. I invited him then to give all the particulars he possibly could so that it might be investigated. He again refused to do so.

38868. On that same 20th you took a signed statement. He made a statement in writing, did he not?—Yes.

38869. Do you produce the original statement?—It is here.

38870. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think the Commissioners have a copy of that, and I think I should like to go through it with the officer. This is what he says, "Statement of Alfred Platt, of No. 7, Bird Street, Lambeth, Bookmaker." In whose handwriting is that?—It is in my handwriting.

38871. "At 2.40 p.m., 17th instant, I was in Robert Street, Waterloo Road, when P.C. 180 L came up to me and said, 'I have brought you a bet from the governor. You may as well have it as anybody else. It will do you a bit of good. He gave me a paper with two sovereigns. On the paper was written, 'Oasis, 20s. win, 20s. 1, 2, 3; any to come, Abanico, 20s. win, 20s. 1, 2, 3.'"

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not know whether you have any special object in reading it, but we have read it.

38872. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) So long as it is familiar to you I am content. Was he invited then to make a full statement of every sort of complaint he had got to make?—He was.

38873. Did you reduce into writing the whole of his complaint?—Yes.

(Chairman.) This was put to Mr. Platt in cross-examination very carefully.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes, it was.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The point being that the whole of that statement only refers to P.C. 180 L.

(Chairman.) That I gathered was the point of the cross-examination.

38874. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You do not want us to go through Deed's case. We know the story of that. Then, so far as you were concerned, what was the next incident?—The next incident, so far as I remember, was a letter, about a month after that, in which the numbers and names were given.

38875. That is a letter of the 23rd November, 1903. That is your report upon it?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I think there is a letter of the 19th, before the letter of the 23rd.

38876. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. The letter of the 19th November is from Mr. Platt to the Commissioner of Police, "Respecting the statement I have made of P.C. 180 L, who has been dismissed from the Force through the facts of my statement. I beg to state the complaint I made against the other three P.C.'s—viz., 204 L, 203 L, and 209 L, which was in the presence of Superintendent Novice and Inspector Spencer, at Kennington Lane, the above officers were in the habit of receiving of me a weekly wage, and, moreover, they never fairly arrested me," and so forth. Is it true that he, at Kennington Lane Police Station, or anywere else, had given you the numbers of those three men or of any other men as persons to whom he had given bribes?—He never gave any numbers.

38877. Was this letter sent on to you in the ordinary course?—A letter was sent on to me which bore the names and numbers of the men he then complained of.

38878. Then in due course reports were called for from the officers?—Yes.

38879. Then I think you made your report upon the correspondence, and the report is on the 23rd November?—Yes.

38880. I need not read it all, but in the third para-

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.

26 Mar. 1907.

graph you say, "The assertion that he had paid a weekly wage to various police-officers was made as stated"?—Yes.

38881. Did you mean by that it was made as stated in the sense that he had given the numbers, or merely a general assertion?—A general assertion was made.

38882. "And he further stated he kept a diary in which the particulars were entered. He was invited to produce the diary, so that the necessary particulars as to numbers, names, etc., might be copied for investigation, but he declined." Is that so?—That is so.

38883. Is that accurate?—That is quite accurate.

38884. Then you go on to say, "When he made his complaint at Kennington Lane Station" (that is the second one), "which I took down, I again invited him to tell all he knew, but he declined to give particulars, but made sweeping allegations against the police generally"?—That is so.

38885. Is that correct?—Quite correct.

38886. "He also stated that when charged on the 13th October he handed 10s. to two police-constables in the charge-room. This also is absolutely false"?—Yes.

38887. What had that reference to?—That had reference to an occasion on which he was charged, and which he mentioned at this time. He said he paid 10s. to two officers in the charge room on that day.

38888. Did you inquire into that?—Yes.

38889. And you found, as far as you could ascertain, there was no foundation for it all?—That is so.

38890. Upon that you made this statement in your report?—Yes.

38891. The next thing that I think you had to do with this matter was on the 15th January, 1904, when you made a further report upon the further correspondence which was brought before you and the allegation which had been made in Chapman's case?—Yes.

38892. Is this report correct so far as it contains statements of fact?—Yes.

38893. I think this is all you have had to do with this matter, is it not?—That is all.

38894. I should like to ask you this general question, Are you the person who is responsible for selecting the officers who go out on this plain clothes duty?—Yes.

38895. On what grounds do you select them?—Their general ability and their knowledge not only of the district, but of the bookmakers themselves.

38896. Is it a duty which is popular amongst the men?—No, unpopular.

38897. In making the selections, do you have regard to the character of the officers?—Yes.

38898. And not only so far as their records show, but from your knowledge of the men who are implicated in this charge, what do you say as to their characters for reliability and straightforwardness?—I say they are absolutely straightforward.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That applies to three.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. I do not carry in my head all that Mr. Platt has said, but I hope I have covered the ground.

(Chairman.) Do you want to ask any questions, Mr. Platt?

38899. (Mr. Platt.) Yes. Did you say it was on the evening of the 19th that the appointment was made for the 20th?—On the 19th I first saw you, and on the same day, I think, either in the morning or in the evening, an appointment was made for you to see me at Kennington Lane at 11 o'clock the next morning.

38900. Where did you see me on the 19th?—In the Superintendent's office at Kennington.

38901. You never saw me till you were sent for; when I was in front of Superintendent Noviss was on the 20th?—No, it is the 19th.

38902. The Monday was when you kept me under observation?—You are mistaken as to the date. I say I first saw you on the 19th October in the Superintendent's office.

38903. At what time?—I will not be sure of the time, but possibly about 10 or 11 o'clock in the morning.

38904. On the 19th?—Yes, the day before I took your statement at Kennington Road Police Station.

38905. You took my statement the same day as you saw me?—I do not think so.

(Chairman.) Are you suggesting that you saw him on the morning of the 20th?

(Mr. Platt.) The same time that I had to see him at Kennington Road Station at 11 o'clock. I saw him that morning soon after 9 in the Superintendent's office.

38906. (Chairman.) What do you say to that suggestion?—I say the first time I saw him was on the morning of the 19th October in the Superintendent's office.

38907. In Superintendent Noviss's office?—Yes, at Kennington Lane. It was the first time I had ever seen the man.

38908. (Mr. Platt.) I think you will find, according to Inspector Knell's evidence, he saw me in the morning, at the time I stated—at 1.25 on the 19th?—I do not know when you saw Mr. Knell.

38909. You are stating that I had already been in front of Superintendent Noviss before I saw Inspector Knell?—I am not stating anything. I am saying when I first saw you in answer to your question.

38910. You say you saw me in front of the Superintendent on the 19th October?—Yes.

38911. You are wrong?—I have got it written down here, anyhow.

38912. If you saw me then, why was I not made aware of the fact then that you were going to keep me under observation on the 19th?—Why should you be made acquainted with that fact?

(Chairman.) You, Mr. Platt, had seen Inspector Knell at 9 o'clock on that morning, as I understand it.

(Mr. Platt.) On the 19th. I think you will find it is at 1.25.

(Chairman.) I thought Inspector Knell said it was 9 o'clock that he saw you on the 19th October, and that he made a note of your call, and told you to come again in the evening.

(Mr. Platt.) I saw Inspector Knell at the station, but when Inspector Knell says that I saw him in the morning I spoke to him in the street before he entered the station, and I have never entered the station till 1.25.

(Chairman.) Very well.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Inspector Knell tells me it was 12 noon.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What he said, I think, was that it was on the 19th October.

38913. (Chairman.) Very well. He said, "I made a note of his call," and that seems to be right, only it was at noon instead of at 9 o'clock. I do not know that it is very important.

38914. What do you say in answer to Mr. Platt's suggestion?—I say when I first saw Mr. Platt was in the Superintendent's office.

38915. You made a note about the time, did you not?—I made a report after.

38916. But your note, I suppose, was made on the same day, or very shortly after the interview?—Yes, and my extract is from the press-copy report.

38917. (Mr. Platt.) Do you say that this duty that these men go out on is unpopular?—Yes, I do.

38918. Why?—Because it is not a very pleasant duty.

38919. How many years have you been in the Force?—I do not think it matters to you how long I have been in the Force.

38920. Yes it does?—Then, unless the Chairman wishes me to answer, I refuse to answer.

38921. (Chairman.) You had better answer?—Twenty-one years.

38922. (Mr. Platt.) In the course of that twenty-one years, have you ever done street duty to apprehend bookmakers?—Sometimes.

38923. Is there any record that you can produce to show that you have done that duty?—No.

38924. Because you told me yourself you had never done the duty?—Where did I tell you that?

38925. Where? In the Kennington Road Police Station?—Do not shout. I can hear. I am not deaf.

38926. So that you would not know yourself from personal observation why these men would be unpopular?—Why should I not?

38927. From personal observation?—Yes.

38928. And knowing the fact of how they do their duty?—Probably you know more about police work than I do.

38929. That particular work, possibly.

(Chairman.) We understand your suggestion, Mr. Platt. You say the Sub-divisional Inspector's opinion as to whether the work is unpopular or not is not worth having, because he has never had any personal experience.

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) But he says on oath he has had personal experience, and that you cannot leave out of consideration.

(Chairman.) You have made your point for what it is worth. We understand your suggestion, and the witness denies it. The witness says he has had experience.

38930. (Mr. Platt.) I take it to be the fact, and it has been already stated, that when I went to the Superintendent's office on the 20th October, soon after 9 o'clock in the morning, I stated what had happened from my house the preceding evening up to a certain time in the evening, and whilst I was stating that fact you were sent for, and I was asked to say the same thing over again, which I did. Then you brought out a report, and the time I stated I was in the "Ship" and the "Tankard," and the time these men crossed to my house coincided as near as possible?—I only heard your accusation against a man named Patsy for having ramped you, I think you called it, for £20.

38931. I am asking you the first time you saw me?—That was the first time I ever saw you.

38932. When I stated about being followed about by these men the night before?—I know nothing about what you said before I arrived there. You said nothing of the kind when I was there.

38933. What time at night were you told to follow me on the 19th?—I was not told to follow you on the 19th.

38934. Did you not follow me on the 19th?—No.

38935. I took it for granted you did as you made the report. Whoever was told, they followed me on the 19th?—I kept observation on a certain public-house on a certain night, if that is what you refer to. Is that what you are referring to?

38936. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Your report of the 20th mentions that in the last paragraph but one?—The paragraph before the one just mentioned by Mr. Muir will fix the time we were trying to find out just now.

38937. (Mr. Platt.) Is it the usual practice, after a man has been dismissed from the Force, for him to enter the police station?—If he has business there. He is an ordinary citizen then, and he can come in as an ordinary citizen does.

38938. Will the Commissioners be able to see the report, or the statement, or complaint that was made by that man?—The statement that he made?

38939. Yes, the complaint that he made.

(Chairman.) Deed, you mean.

38940. (Mr. Platt.) Yes?—I did not know he made a complaint.

38941. You know that you interviewed him?—I interviewed him in your presence before he was dismissed.

38942. No, since he was dismissed?—I do not remember interviewing him.

38943. I think you will find that is right?—When did I interview him. I recollect seeing him with regard to the Chapman appeal case, in which you had tried to induce him to go and get evidence, if that is what you refer to.

38944. Yes.

38945. (Chairman.) Have you stated in your report all that passed at the interview with Deed and Platt?—I think so. I think it is all here.

38946. Did Deed say anything about bribery or anything of that sort?—He questioned Platt upon it.

38947. I have forgotten whether Deed admitted accepting any bribe?—The questions were put to Mr. Platt: "Where did I meet you at 2.40 p.m.?" The reply was "At Mepham Street, near the public-house." (Q.) When I met you did I not say, "I have got a bet from a friend of mine, not the Governor?" (R.) No, you said it was from the Governor. (Q.) When I saw you at Waterloo Station did you not say to me, "Who is that man there" (pointing to a friend of mine). "I cannot get on my pitch as there are several strangers about. I thought he was a detective." (R.) Yes, I asked that question in order to gain time so as not to pay out."

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.

26 Mar. 1907.

38948. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) At that time, as I understand, the complaint against Deed was of having made a bet under these circumstances, and asking for the money?—Yes. The bet was made, he said, after the race was run.

38949. Yes, but at that time had any complaint been made by Platt against Deed of having accepted bribes from him?—None whatever, so far as I know.

38950. That is why the questions only refer apparently to the bet?—That is so.

38951. That is the matter in respect of which he was charged?—Yes.

38952. And in respect of which he was dismissed?—That is so.

38953. (Chairman.) I understand, so far as you know, there was no accusation of Deed being bribed?—I never heard of one before.

38954. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He was not dismissed in any way in consequence of having been found to have received bribes, but because he had made this bet?—That is so.

38955. (Mr. Platt.) On the morning of the 20th when you came into the office where Superintendent Noviss and myself were, and I made my complaint again and you made some remarks, I turned round and said, "After the moneys I was giving them, to do such a thing as this to me"?—I think you made an observation of that sort, but you did not make it definitely at all. You made a sort of sweeping allegation against the police generally about being bribed all over the place, and not only in Lambeth; at least, so I understood it; I may have been mistaken.

38956. I was then asked if it would be convenient for me to attend at Kennington Road Police Station at 11 o'clock. This was something like twenty to half-past nine on the 20th?—I cannot be accurate with regard to that; I know an appointment was made and you kept it.

38957. And at that interview I turned round and told you to look in the charge book and you would see by the time I was taken in that I was giving these men moneys?—What record do you suppose is in the charge book with regard to giving men money? I take it for granted at the time I entered the police station the time is looked at and booked, and the time you went to the station.

(Chairman.) We have the charge sheet showing the exact time.

38958-9. (Mr. Platt.) Yes, but I am asking him if I did not ask him to look at the charge book?—Yes, I think you did. You said you were brought to the station at certain times, or something of that sort, and I referred to the charge book to see whether the time you said was correct, and it was correct.

38960. And you had a memorandum paper in your hand?—I daresay I had.

38961. Did you take down the time?—I might have done.

38962. Have you a record of that?—No.

38963. When you looked at the time did you notice who the charging constables were?—Yes, I had a piece of paper in my hand, and I jotted down the name of the officer who arrested Platt and the time at which he was arrested.

38964. (Chairman.) There is a subsequent letter in which he says he gave the numbers to you of the constables who took the bribes?—As a matter of fact he did not. I strongly urged him to clear it up if he could clear it up at that time, but he refused to go further.

38965. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) But he had made a definite statement to you, if I caught your evidence correctly, that he had been paying 70s. a week to police constables?—Yes.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.

26 Mar. 1907.

38966. He also asked you to look at the charge book which would tell you the time at which he was arrested?—Yes.

38967. You did look at the charge book?—That is so.

38968. If you looked at that you would know against which police constables he was making the charge?—He did not specify any police constables, but in the ordinary way the number of the constable who arrested him would be in the charge book.

38969. In consequence of the statement that he had made did you not understand he was making the allegation that he had bribed these three particular constables?—I did not take it in that light. I asked him to be definite and say who he had bribed, because he said it in such a way that it implicated men all over London.

38970. Why were you to look at the charge book to see at what time he was brought in. What was it for?—Because he said he was brought down by appointment.

38971. Exactly. His statement was that he was brought in by appointment by men to whom he was paying bribes?—No, I did not take it in that light.

38972. Why did he say he was brought in by appointment?—That means he was not taken from his pitch at a time when betting would be brisk.

38973. But that would surely show you that according to his statement he was being brought in in consequence of some arrangement with the police constable?—Yes, that was so.

38974. And he was making allegations of bribery?—No, he did not make allegations of bribery against those men.

38975. But general bribery?—Yes.

38976. He says: "I am paying police constables so much," and then he says he had come there by appointment, and that he had been arrested by appointment at certain times. Did you not understand from that that he was intending that the charge of bribery should apply to the men who had arrested him?—No, because I asked him to be definite, and to state the numbers of the men he complained of. He refused to do so. He added that he had come there by arrangement—that he was brought by arrangement.

38977. You mean arrested by arrangement?—Yes. In order to verify that I turned up the charge book and saw the times at which he was brought to the station. So far as those men were concerned I had no idea he alluded to those men who had brought him.

38978. It was with them that he arranged that he should be arrested. I am putting to you the story he tells. He said he was being arrested by arrangement, which meant by arrangement with the police constables who had brought him to the police station. It could only mean that, could it not?—That is all.

38979. Therefore it meant that he had some secret agreement with the police constables?—Yes.

38980. He conveyed that pretty quickly to you?—Yes.

38981. Were you not shocked on hearing that?—I did not believe his story. I referred to the charge book to see whether what he said with regard to the time was correct. I found it was, and I left it there.

38982. (Chairman.) No. You told me you took the numbers of the constables who charged him?—Yes, I did.

38983. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did you not ask them any questions about it?—Ask whom?

38984. The constables who charged him?—No.

38985. He had told you this. You quite understood from what he said (you had only got his statement for it at that time) that he had conveyed to you that he had been arrested on various occasions by secret agreement with the police constables who arrested him?—He did not put it in that way.

38986. I know. He said it was by appointment, or by arrangement you told me just now; but that is what he meant?—Yes.

38987. And it could not mean anything else but that. A man does not get arrested by appointment unless it means that he has made some arrangement for a policeman to come and arrest him at that time?—No.

38988. That is the kind of thing that would have struck you as an Inspector very forcibly the moment he made the statement?—What did strike me was that if he had any definite statement to make he would be definite, and I asked him to be definite, and to give me the names and numbers so that it could be cleared up.

38989. Might it not strike you that he might have very good reason for not being definite?—It did not strike me at all in that way.

38990. If he was plying his trade, and making an arrangement with the police-constables, there might be a reason why he should hesitate to formally make a charge?—I did look at it in that light.

38991. There was no reason why you should not investigate the charge?—He was not definite enough so that you could go upon it.

38992. You had taken down the numbers?—Yes.

38993. That is the same as the names?—Yes, but he made sweeping allegations about making arrangements with the police for the time at which he should be arrested, and he mentioned, I think, about 2.45 as being a late time, being a bookmaker. For that purpose I looked at the charge book to see if he was brought in at that hour, and I found he was accurate.

38994. And you also found the names of the constables. If I walked into the station and said I had been arrested on a certain day by arrangement with a constable to arrest me, you do not want me to give you the name. You find that out for yourself?—If you told me you were arrested on a certain day, and you referred me to the time of the day, I should know the constable; but he did not do that.

38995. What was the point of your looking at the charge book?—To see if the time agreed with what he said.

38996. Then you did know the time?—Yes.

38997. And the day?—Yes.

38998. Then you had got all the information which I was suggesting to you just now?—Yes, but you suggested, if I may say so, that the time and the date and the men were all included in his accusation. I say they were not.

38999. No. If you will follow me for a minute, you will see that I am not putting that to you. He makes a vague charge, according to you, but he does convey to you that there has been a secret arrangement between him and the constables who arrested him, as you have told me, and then he does tell you he was arrested at a certain time on a certain day. He tells you that?—Yes.

39000. You then look up the charge book?—Yes.

39001. You verify the fact that it is on that day and at that time that he was arrested?—Yes.

39002. All you have to do then is to look further and to see the name of the policeman who did it?—Yes.

39003. You have all the information?—I believe 180 L, Deed, was the man who arrested him. We are dealing with that man.

39004. Do you mean to say it was on that one occasion you only referred to one entry?—I believe so.

39005. When was that?—I could not tell you now, but my impression is Deed was the man he was dealing with, and it was in consequence of his referring to his being brought in at a late hour that I referred to the charge book to verify his statement with reference to the late arrest. We were dealing with one man, and with only one man.

39006. If that is so, you know he was making a charge of bribery against Deed?—No, he was making a charge then of having made this bet after the race was run.

39007. I do not want to go over it again, but according to your statement it is as plain as possible that you knew he was making a charge against Deed, not of making a bet, but of bribery?—No. My impression is, and always has been, that he was only dealing with Deed.

39008. That is because 180 L was the constable who had arrested him on that occasion?—Yes.

39009. I suppose the last occasion was on the 13th October?—I cannot tell you.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The only definite charge of bribery is contained in the last paragraph but two on page 31. That is the only statement where a definite charge is made by Platt.

39010. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not think that meets

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.

26 Mar. 1907.

the difficulty that is in my mind with regard to it. I quite understand the statement which you are making that his charge was vague about it. Will you just follow what I am putting to you for a moment? When he sees you on the 19th and on the 20th October he makes a statement to you both times about the 70s. a week, which is a fair allegation of bribery. He did tell you that he had been arrested by appointment?—Yes.

39011. When Platt said to you, the Inspector at this station, that he was paying sums of money per week to police-constables, and that he had been arrested by appointment, it was a mere question of finding out who the constables were who had arrested him to ascertain against whom he was making charges of bribery?—That may be so.

39012. It did not strike you at the time?—No, not in that way. My mind is very clear just now that I just referred to the charge book to find out who brought him in on the date he mentioned to verify the time at which he said he was brought in.

39013. The point of verifying the time was because he said he had been arrested by appointment?—Yes; and we are dealing with Deed only on that occasion, I think.

39014. When you look at that, which is the 13th October, you find out that Deed is the person who had arrested him, and you find out also, if you look at the 13th October, if I am not mistaken, that Deed never did arrest him?—But he was present when he was arrested, which is the same thing.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Soer and Deed together.

39015. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) According to the return which we have got, I think I am right. You are the Sub-Divisional Inspector?—Yes.

39016. Turn to the first document. Is that a return?—Yes.

39017. Do you find a note there 13th October, 1903?—Yes.

39018. "Alfred Smith. Officer P.C. 204 L Soer, 180 L"—that is Deed—"a witness"?—Yes, that is right.

39019. That is what I was putting to you just now, and there is a note: "P.C. 180 L"—Deed—"never arrested." Is that right?—Yes. What I mean by a witness is two together. Two could get hold of him, but it is unnecessary.

39020. (Chairman.) I am not going over the ground covered by the questions put to you by the learned Commissioner, but I merely want to ask you one or two general questions as to the consent of the Chief Commissioner to men going out in plain clothes. How is that obtained?—The Superintendent obtains that permission.

39021. Is it obtained for an individual or is it obtained for a constable to be picked out by somebody else?—It depends on the duty on which he is employed.

39022. With regard to street betting?—With regard to street betting I should be given a certain latitude with regard to selection, and the Superintendent's approval would for my purpose suffice for employing him.

39023. Then who actually writes to the Chief Commissioner from the station?—No one writes to the Chief Commissioner; but if special observation is necessary with regard to certain things a report is made, and the Commissioner sanctions the arrangement suggested or not as he pleases.

39024. I was just turning up the Order about it. There is a Special Order?—I think that refers not to what we call ordinary common cases of street betting, but to such cases as occur in houses, or public-houses, or shops, or anything of that kind, or anything special.

39025. Street betting, I know, is one of the things. It is at page 341 of the White Book. It is Rule 94: "The employment of police officers in plain clothes to detect betting or unlawful sale of liquors by betting and drinking themselves is not to be permitted except with the express sanction of the Commissioner"?—That would refer to houses, shops, or public-houses, or anything of that sort, and not to ordinary street betting.

39026. The constables have described the kind of duties they were told off to perform in plain clothes and they themselves assented to my suggestion that they were not detective constables that disguised themselves. I am calling your attention to the words in the White Book: "The employment of police officers in plain clothes to detect betting or unlawful sale of liquors by betting or drinking themselves is not to be permitted except with the express sanction of the Commissioner"?—Yes. As to such extreme cases as the ones you have mentioned, you would never be employed to keep observation unless the sanction of the Commissioner had been given, but in ordinary street bookmaking cases application is not made in that way.

39027. Do I understand you to deny that in practice Rule 94 is applied to cases of men employed in plain clothes to keep observation on street betting?—That is not strictly followed with regard to ordinary street betting, but with regard to betting in houses.

39028. That I understand you to say.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Is not the rule covered by the words "by betting and drinking themselves," which involves the expenditure of money?

(Chairman.) It may be. Our duty is to find out what are the duties of the police with regard to this class of case. I do not deny that that construction is a reasonable one.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That involves the expenditure of money, and in all cases that involve the expenditure of money the sanction of the Commissioner has to be obtained.

39029. (Chairman.) Then I do not yet follow the answer that the Chief Commissioner or the Chief Superintendent does permit the employment of men in plain clothes on that duty?—I did not intend that—not for street observation. The sanction of the Superintendent is sufficient authority for me to employ men in the way these men have been employed.

39030. However, what may be the construction of the rule, the practice is, with regard to the employment of men in plain clothes for such purposes as Soer and Gunn and Powell were employed on, that no sanction is obtained from the Chief Commissioner, but the Superintendent's sanction is sufficient?—That is so. His authority is quite sufficient for a case of that sort.

39031. In 1903, or just before, had there been any such complaint made to you at the police-station, or had such information been gathered by you as to lead you to believe that street bookmaking was very rife in this part of London?—It was only in May, 1903, that I came there, and I heard no allegation of the sort which you name.

39032. We have been told by Platt that he had been carrying on his occupation as a bookmaker for nearly 20 years in 1903?—In 1903, at the Superintendent's office, was the first time that I ever saw Platt.

29033. Yes, I know that; but I am calling your attention to the fact that Platt has stated that for nearly 20 years he had been carrying on his business as a bookmaker whenever he liked to do so, and that he had never been arrested in Lambeth, at any rate, until May, 1903?—That was the very month I came there. I cannot answer for whatever happened before that.

39034. Can you account for the comparative immunity with which Platt had been carrying on this occupation for so many years if he is speaking the truth?—No, I cannot.

39035. How many men did you appoint in May, or did you find appointed when you took up your duties in May, for this work of special observation in plain clothes?—Usually two men were employed regularly on the principal racing days, and those two men were Deed and Soer, but sometimes Deed was employed on other divisions, and then a man would be employed casually to fill his place.

39036. As there were 15 bookmakers with 15 pitches on important racing days, that was not very adequate provision, was it, for really putting down street bookmaking, having regard to the difficulties and to the Act of Parliament?—The question is whether, with increased numbers, there would be increased efficiency as regards that. Two men may be as good as 22.

39037. The result here was that, by your arrangement, Platt was arrested four times between May and October 13th?—Yes.

39038. He had never been arrested before. He had been arrested four times by the energy and cleverness, apparently, of Soer?—Yes.

39039. But Platt must have been carrying on his business on the other days at the same pitch?—Yes, but it does not always follow that when the constable goes to arrest a man that he is committing such an offence that he may be arrested for, or such an offence that he may be summoned for. Within my own knowledge we go time after time to these pitches and we see the men there, but nothing else.

39040. It has been suggested by Platt that there was a sort of arrangement by which, when he had been arrested perhaps in May, he might be allowed to go on for four weeks, and that he bribed the constable, and then arranged that he should be taken on some convenient day?—He has said so, but he would not be let alone for four minutes if there was a chance of arresting him, let alone four weeks.

39041. I noticed you used one phrase that struck me with regard to the qualification of the men. You said "I choose the men to be employed upon this duty because of their trustworthiness of character," and you also said "and because of their knowledge of the bookmakers themselves." What did you mean by that?—I meant by that that sometimes men in uniform, employed for certain months at certain places, will have opportunities of seeing whether such a thing is going on, but have no opportunity of arresting the person who is committing the offence. Such men would have a better chance than strangers, who, first of all, would have to be seen.

39042. I do not know whether you did have any conversation with Soer or Powell about the matter, but if you knew that Powell or Soer had stated that they observed street bookmaking was going on, that would be one of the qualifications for sending them out in plain clothes?—Those were the two men I found employed on this work when I went there, and I gathered that they knew what work to do, and how to do it.

39043. Does it not strike you that the attempt to disguise themselves is rather feeble?—The disguises were many and various; only one was described, I think.

39044. Did you know what scouts were also acting outside the station waiting for the disguised constable to be seen?—At that time the scouts were on the look out, but when I discovered what was going on men who did not live in the section house were selected for that purpose, and did not come near the station at all.

39045. Then if a man is a married man living away from the station, he might go about his business disguised without coming to the station?—By previous arrangement—by my direction before.

39046. (Mr. Whitmore.) Do the men employed on this duty, when they make arrests, get recommended for promotion?—No.

39047. Supposing they make many arrests, would that recommend them for promotion?—No, it would only encourage them in this way, as any other kind of charge would, if they are energetic men—that is to say, they are not men who go about with their eyes shut, but it makes no difference with regard to their promotion.

39048. Do they receive any higher pay?—Nothing whatever.

39049. (Mr. Dickinson.) There were two occasions on which you saw Platt on Tuesday, the 20th, were there not?—On Monday, the 19th.

39050. I think you saw him on Tuesday, the 20th, at 9 o'clock in the morning?—I saw him once. I also saw him at Kennington Road Station. I saw him one evening when I kept observation on a public-house.

39051. But did you not see him at Kennington Lane Station?—Only on one occasion there, so far as I can remember, and that was at the Superintendent's office.

39052. Mr. Platt told us that that was at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning?—It would be later than that. It was on a Monday, I think, but I will not be positive as to that.

39053. Mr. Platt told us that he saw you and Superintendent Noviss at Kennington Lane Police Station at 9 o'clock on Tuesday, and that on that occasion after some conversation he was asked whether he could be at the Kennington Road Police Station at 11 o'clock, and there, as I understand his evidence, he saw you?—An appointment of that sort was made, but I am not sure at what time it was made.

39054. Then you did see him twice on that day?—I must have done if that is so.

39055. Do not say you must have done?—My memory is faulty as to that.

39056. Where is the book kept that you took down and looked at?—At Kennington Road.

39057. That was not at Kennington Lane Station?—No.

39058. Do you remember prior to that having a meeting at Kennington Lane Station?—Yes.

39059. On that occasion Superintendent Noviss was there?—Yes.

39060. Was this account right that he gave us—that first of all Superintendent Noviss asked Mr. Platt to repeat the story that he had told him about the way in which he had been followed, and that he repeated it to you?—I do not remember that.

39061. "Then Inspector Spencer from a paper read an account of his movements," which tallied with what he had said?—Are you referring to the observation I kept upon him?

39062. I am referring to this interview that you, Superintendent Noviss, and Mr. Platt had at 9 o'clock on the Tuesday morning at Kennington Lane Police Station. He tells us that first of all the Superintendent asked him to repeat to you what he had told him?—I think the two dates are confused. Perhaps I may put it in this way: I first saw him at Superintendent Noviss' office.

39063. Where is Superintendent Noviss' office?—At Kennington Lane.

39064. That was the first time you saw him at Superintendent Noviss' office?—Yes.

39065. Then was it true that Superintendent Noviss asked Mr. Platt to repeat to you what he had told him?—I cannot remember.

39066. You say it is not correct that you, from a paper, read an account of his movements?—That was after I kept observation on him. I say the dates are confused.

39067. But not on that occasion?—Not on that occasion.

39068. Was it later?—Yes.

39069. When was that?—I think either the same evening or the next evening.

39070. (Mr Rufus Isaacs.) Look at your report of the 20th October. There you say: "At 7.40 p.m. I kept observation"?—I gathered from your questions that that took place on the first occasion when I saw Platt.

39071. (Mr. Dickinson.) I understand that on Monday, from your own report, you kept observation on him?—Yes.

39072. Then on the Tuesday morning when he came to Kennington Lane Police Station you seem to have read a paper giving an account of his movements?—Yes.

39073. Now what I want to know is this. Carrying your mind back to that moment, can you at all remember where Platt was?—At the time I kept observation on him?

39074. In the room?—He was in the Superintendent's office.

39075. Walking about, or sitting down?—He walked about.

39076. That is what he told us. Did he say anything about "After the moneys that I have given"?—I do not remember that observation. He made sweeping allegations, as I have said, but what the exact words were I do not remember now.

39077. Sweeping allegations against one policeman?—Against the police generally—he paid 70s. a week.

39078. Did Superintendent Noviss make an exclamation to the effect that he knew this game was going on?—No, I do not think he did. I think I should have remembered it if he had.

39079. Then you went after that to the Kennington Road Police Station. After these general accusations had been made you met him at Kennington Road Police Station?—Yes, the next day. You are speaking now of 7.40 p.m. when I kept observation?

39080. No, I am speaking of Tuesday, at 11 o'clock, at the Kennington Road Police Station?—Yes.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.

26 Mar. 1907.

39081. Was that the time when you took down the book and took the numbers?—Yes.

39082. You told us you took the numbers and put them down on a slip of paper?—Yes.

39083. Why did you take the numbers on a slip of paper?—I wanted to verify his statement as to the time he was brought in. That was the only object.

39084. Why did you put the numbers on a separate piece of paper?—It was not a separate piece of paper; it was on the same piece of paper, and the time he was brought in. The time I was looking for, and not the man. The reason I looked at the time was this: he said he had been brought to the station by appointment, and I think he specified the time at which he had been brought to the station on a certain date. I looked at the charge book and I found he was right.

39085. You say there was no particular reason why you put down the numbers?—No, none whatever.

39086. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) This was the kind of work in respect to which, if there was to be bribery, it would take place, was it not? I mean, if you expected bribery to take place amongst your constables at all this work of watching and trying to arrest street bookmakers would be just the kind of occupation in respect of which they would be bribed?—That may be; I mean you can make that suggestion with regard to any kind of police work.

39087. I should have thought it would commend itself more than anything else?—I do not think so.

39088. Have you not heard of it before?—Yes, I have heard of bribery.

39089. Had you not heard that there was something of the kind which had taken place? I do not mean general bribery, but that police constables had been bribed?—No, I had not heard a sound until this time—not a word—but I have heard general allegations, of course.

39090. I am rather puzzled to know why you make no reference at all to these allegations of bribery which, I should have thought, even although a vague statement, was sufficiently serious. You make a report on the 20th October. To whom is that report made?—My reports are all made for the Commissioner's information. On the 20th October I took his statement.

39091. That is about Deed?—Yes.

39092. Deed's offence was very like bribery, or might we call it something else?—I do not think it was bribery. It was trickery, I should think.

39093. It might even be called something stronger, might it not?—Yes.

39094. Deed is asking him to pay a bet of £20 which he made after the horse had won?—He said so.

39095. Do you mean Deed denied having made the bet in that way?—Yes.

39096. That is what he said, and that is the statement you make in that report which you send to the Commissioner?—Yes.

39097. Platt had made a statement to you. Did you not understand that he was suggesting that Deed had been receiving bribes from him?—No, he did not suggest it in the least. His complaint of Deed was of having made this bet after the horse had won the race, and when before the Superintendent he made the allegation that he had paid the police not to arrest him, as I gathered it, and now they had arrested him, and not only had they arrested him but this man had tried to "ramp" him, I think he called it.

39098. That is what I have been putting to you. Then you make a report to the Commissioner, and you do not say anything at all about this; you do not make any report at all about the allegation of bribery?—I say he has made these sweeping allegations, but nothing definite.

39099. Do you?—Yes. I do not know whether it is in this report.

39100. That is what I am calling your attention to. This is a report of the 20th October, and I do not think anything at all is said about it.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, there is nothing.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is nothing until you get to the 19th and 21st November.

39101. Only one thing further I want to understand from you. I do not follow yet why it is this service is so unpopular, I mean this particular duty of going out in plain clothes apparently without any superior officer over the man; he goes away for four hours, and then he comes back and reports himself. I do not understand why it is so unpopular?—Such means have to be adopted that the men have to adopt extreme measures to get anywhere near these men at all. In an ordinary way they could do their four hours' duty in uniform without much exertion, but in order to observe these men they have to exert themselves a good deal, and they are subject to all sorts of allegations if they do get them; and they have to have overwhelming evidence before the magistrate to get a conviction unless the man pleads guilty. Bookmakers as a rule can get any number of witnesses to swear that a constable is telling lies.

39102. It does not look like that if you look at the convictions. I think there are 111 arrests, and I think they are only two in which defences were put forward?—When a man is arrested he is not defended. If he is summoned he is nearly always defended.

39103. That is why you have only about 19 summonses. There is all the more reason why you should arrest him because you find the incriminating documents upon him—the slips. Do you mean it is because they have to be disguised?—It is not a pleasant duty.

39104. I suppose a policeman's duty is not always pleasant, is it?—It depends a good deal.

39105. Riding on tramcars, and things of that sort, does not strike one as being a particularly unpleasant duty; it does not strike one as being quite so monotonous as walking about on a beat. You are hunting for game?—I do not think there is much sport about it.

39106. (Chairman.) I only want to call your attention to a passage in Platt's own statement of the 20th October which I think might have arrested your attention: "On looking at the paper I saw the first-named horse" (this is what Platt says in his statement made before you) "was in the 3.45 p.m. race. I then gave him 5s. and bid him good day." That is to Deed. What did you understand he meant that to imply?—This was a statement with reference to Deed, and that was investigated by the Commissioner at the time Deed was dealt with. This is merely what he said, and what was put down. It is what he signed.

39107. That 5s. was a bribe, was it not?—That is mentioned in this report here, and there was an investigation at the time. It was gone into at the time.

39108. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In that statement which you forward?—Yes.

39109. (Chairman.) I only meant to call your attention to that fact as an instance from which one may infer that the question of bribery was present to your mind?—Yes, with regard to this man, and only with regard to this man.

39110. But the learned Commissioner has been suggesting to you that it must have been present to your mind with regard to the other men as well.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) And to this man.

39111. (Chairman.) And to this man as well?—I cannot agree with that.

39112. There is a statement that he gave him 5s., and you say the matter was investigated?—Yes.

39113. It seems to me that Platt is making good his point against you, that he made statements to you implicating the police who had arrested him of having been bribed by him?—He did as to this particular man. He specified this particular man, but nobody else.

39114. I will not go over it again, but you referred to the charge sheet, which contained the numbers?—These allegations referred not only to places in Lambeth, but everywhere he went. I understood he had agents all over the place.

39115. Very likely, but I will not put it again. I only call your attention to this matter of the 5s. because it is evidence that there was a question as to bribery with regard to Deed at any rate?—Yes, with regard to him, but not otherwise.

39116. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) This matter all took place in October, 1903?—Yes.

39117. The earliest date at which you reduced this to writing was the 23rd November, 1903?—Yes.

Sub-Divisional Inspector F. Spencer.

26 Mar. 1907.

(Chairman.) We do not want to take formal objection, but there is no re-examination upon the Commissioners' questions.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No.

(Chairman.) Then what is the point?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The point is that this officer is obviously trying according to the best of his recollection to give an explanation of things that took place in 1903.

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) An explanation is to be found really in his report of the 23rd November, for instance, with regard to the 5s.

(Chairman.) We have all this before us.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is one of the reports we have had.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is suggested to the officer now that the 5s. is a bribe. See how he puts it in his report: "Beyond the allegation of betting by P.C. 180 Deed (which was admitted by the P.C.), he went on to say that he had given the P.C. 5s. commission and had paid for drink in a public-house for him. This was proved beyond all possible doubt to be untrue." That, of course, is quite a common thing.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) No doubt.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) For instance, with other than police constables.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes, but the point of the questions the learned Chairman put to the Inspector, which he admitted more than once, apart from the 5s., was that he knew that the charge made of bribery did affect Deed. The point I was putting upon that was, why, if he knew that, did he not deal with it in his report of the 20th October. I only wanted to see why it was not mentioned in that report.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Quite.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Before you leave that report will you read the next paragraph: "He also stated that when charged on 13th October he handed 10s. to two P.C.'s in the charge room." When did he make that statement?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I was going to ask him that very question.

39118. When was it that Platt made the statement that when he was charged on the 13th October he handed 10s. to two P.C.'s in the charge room, when was it Platt made that statement to you?—I am not certain, but I should think it must have been at the time that he made the other statement.

39119. I mean the whole of this report deals with the statement on or about the 20th October?—Yes, I think that is so.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Then he did say that?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The witness is answering the questions out of his head without referring to the report made at the time. If he had looked at his report of the 23rd November he would have seen that they were not correct answers, because he said to Mr. Isaacs that Platt charged Deed with being bribed, and nobody else; whereas in the officer's own report he shows that there was a charge of bribery against two constables—namely, Deed and Soer.

39120. Do bring your attention to this report of the 23rd November in order that we may get at the correct facts about this?—I have got it here.

39121. This charge was made about the 13th October against two officers who took him into the charge room?—No. There is a little misunderstanding there.

39122. Read it?—"He also stated that when charged on 13th October, he handed 10s. to two P.C.'s in the charge room." There might have been twenty-two P.C.'s there.

39123. Did you or did you not understand that he referred to the two police-constables who had taken him there?—I did not understand who he referred to; but subsequently I called for reports from those two officers.

39124. Did you or did you not understand that those two police-constables were the two police-constables who had brought him in—namely, Soer and Deed?—I cannot say that I did understand that, because other constables were there besides those men.

39125 Before you give a definite answer on that, you took down the charge book to see if he was right as to the time?—Yes.

39126. Was it the charge book with reference to the 13th October that you took down?—I think it was.

39127. And were not the numbers that you took a note of the numbers of those two police-constables?—Who arrested him?

39128. Yes?—Yes.

39129. Now that you recall all that, looking at your report, was it or was it not present to your mind that Platt alleged that he had paid the two police-constables who brought him in a bribe?—He did not say that, but one would infer it, of course.

39130. Did you not call for a report from P.S. Dale on this very point?—Yes.

39131. That is on the previous page?—Yes.

39132. I will just read that report which you called for from P.S. Dale: "Referring to the allegation made by A. Platt, 'bookmaker,' of 7, Bird Street, Lambeth, of having given 10s. to two P.C.'s in the charge room at this station on 13th October last, I beg to report that at 2.45 p.m. on 13th October last I was in charge of this station when the above 'bookmaker' was brought in by P.C.'s 180 Deed, and 204 Soer, on a charge of obstruction by betting. I at once took the charge and sent him to police court. No complaint was made to me, and no such transaction took place to my knowledge"?—Yes.

39133. Does not that point to a report by P.S. Dale as to whether 10s. each had been paid to Deed and Soer?—It bears that construction.

39134. And that is how it occurred to you?—No, it did not. There were other men present in the charge room to whom it might have been given as well as to those two.

39135. Why on earth to some strange man in the charge room should he give 10s.?—He is so liberal, he would give it to anybody.

39136. And why so niggardly as not to give it to those two?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You must not cross-examine him. We have got the report.

39137. There is one thing I want to ask upon that. You made the report of the 20th October, which is a contemporaneous document, and there is no mention in that of any of these facts which Mr. Muir has just been putting to you. I have been asking you why you did not report to the Commissioner. You do not say one single word about these allegations of bribery which you now admit were made, and more specifically than you have been telling us before. Why did not you tell the Commissioner that in your report of the 20th October?—We are not dealing with anyone but Deed.

39138. I will not go over the story again. We know now you understood there was a charge of bribery against Deed. Now look at your report of the 23rd November to which Mr. Muir has called your attention. That report is only written after you have had the letter sent to you by the Commissioner of Police of the 19th November, 1903. On the 19th November, 1903, Mr. Platt wrote to the Commissioner, and it was sent to you, and in that letter he says: "I beg to state the complaint I made against the other three P.C.'s, viz., 204 L, 203 L, and 209 L, which was in the presence of Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer at Kennington Lane, the above officers were in the habit of receiving of me a weekly wage, and, moreover, they never fairly arrested me in my occupation as a street bookmaker. That was always pre-arranged as to what time they should come and take me into custody, which in the charge book will prove I was only charged between the hours of 2.30 p.m. and 3 o'clock p.m." It was on the 23rd November when you were answering that that you deal with these points which have been put to you by Mr. Muir?—Yes, that is the first occasion he ever mentioned any names, or numbers, in that letter, a month after the other affair of Deed.

FORTY-FIRST DAY.

Major GEORGE GOLBOURNE TARRY, sworn.

Major G. Golbourne Tarry.
27 Mar. 1907.

39139. (Chairman.) You are the Chief Constable of Leeds?—Yes.

39140. When were you first appointed?—In February, 1900.

39141. You have been good enough to say that you would come here to give evidence relevant to the Inquiry which we are making under the warrant appointing us, dated the 28th May, 1906, and we have sent you a memorandum suggesting various points upon which you might give evidence?—That is so, Sir.

39142. Would you like to read the statement that you have been good enough to send in?—If you think that would be the most convenient course for me to adopt.

39143. I have read the statement and you seem to cover the ground comprehensively. Perhaps I had better take your statement in sections. I understand that you have no special knowledge acquired during your service as Chief Constable as to the way in which the Metropolitan Police discharge their duties?—I have no special knowledge of the inner working of the Metropolitan Police, but, of course, I have been a good deal in London, and with the experience that I have gained as a responsible officer of police myself I have made it my business as a spectator to notice the way in which they perform their duty, and I have formed an opinion upon the subject. I have not mentioned it in that statement.

39144. We should like to have your opinion as to the way in which the work of the Metropolitan Police in regard to the three classes of cases which we have to deal with is performed?—I have formed a very strong opinion that their manner of doing their duty is admirable, and I have made that manner as far as I could the standard in my own police force. There is a lack of fuss, if I may say so, and a lack of over-zeal, and a complete absence of an argumentative attitude towards the public. It is when the police begin to argue with the public that I have found difficulties so frequently occur.

39145. With the view of making our report we desire to have some basis of comparison between the duties of the Metropolitan police and the duties of the Leeds police with regard to these three kinds of cases, and therefore I propose to ask you some questions as to the way in which your police force is organised and the way in which your police force does its work. First of all what have you to say as to the powers possessed by you for dealing with cases of drunkenness?—We find those powers sufficient and no difficulties arise in dealing with that class of cases in Leeds.

39146. Then with regard to the cases of disorder in the streets, do you find that the powers you have are sufficient?—I do not, and on that subject I should like to read, if I may, the answer which I have given in my statement. The powers now possessed by the police for dealing with instances of disorder are not satisfactory. The only provision that we have in Leeds for dealing with disorderly conduct is a local Act which makes it an offence punishable by a fine of 40s. to be guilty in any street of any disorderly conduct. The expression is a wide one, and may cover anything from a turbulent schoolboy to something approaching a riot. I have made a suggestion, but I do not know whether you would wish me to put that forward.

39147. Yes, if you please?—I should submit that some classification might be adopted for the more serious forms of disorderly conduct, and that power of arrest be given to the police in a case where an offender after a second or third request neglects or refuses to comply with the requirements of the constable to conduct himself properly and leave the vicinity. At present no such power exists, although if the offender is unknown and refuses his name and address he may be taken to the police station. Cases occur, however, where offenders tender their name and address and refuse to quit the spot.

39148. I think you mention an instance in your notes, the case of the Tivoli Music Hall at Leeds?—Yes.

39149. What was that case?—I mentioned that as showing the difficulty we labour under in this respect. It was a case of a disturbance at a music hall which arose owing to the action taken by some medical students who objected to an item in the programme which they thought reflected upon the medical profession, and owing to this disturbance these students were ejected, and there was a young fellow in their company who was ejected at the same time, but who was not a medical student. Outside the music hall in the street the disorder was resumed, and this young fellow as alleged by the police distinguished himself rather by his particularly disorderly conduct, refused to go away, was apprehended and taken to the police station. His statement was that he tendered his name and address to the police who arrested him, a card, but that was denied by the police, and he was eventually allowed to go and summonsed for disorderly conduct. The case brought by the police was dismissed, and an action was brought against us in the County Court for unlawful arrest and also for ill-treatment at the police station. That action failed, and the police succeeded, but my point is that we have no power of arrest under our Local Act if the offender gives his name and address and he could stand there and create a very serious state of things.

39150. Then your opinion is that in Leeds there is a difficulty in dealing with cases of disorder in the streets because the police there do not possess powers of summary arrest in that kind of case?—I am strongly of that opinion in the more serious cases of disorderly conduct, but, of course, I do not suggest it in trivial cases at all.

39151. And hence you have come to the conclusion there ought to be a classification of disorder in the streets?—Of the more serious cases in which after a second or third admonition an offender did not move away.

39152. As I understand it, in that case the students or the persons who had been ejected from the music hall continued to make a noise and disturbance in the street outside the music hall?—They did so.

39153. The law in Leeds appears to be, as I gather from your statement, that no policeman can summarily arrest a person making such continued disturbance there?—No, unless a breach of the peace appears to be imminent and then of course the common law would justify it.

39154. Quite so. Then you think there may be disorder which does not amount actually to a breach of the peace, in respect of which a constable ought to have the right to summary arrest?—I do in certain cases. A large crowd of people collect and feeling perhaps runs high. It is vital to get the cause of the disturbance away somewhere and somehow.

39155. (Mr. Whitmore.) By "the cause of the disturbance" you mean a person?—Yes.

39156. (Chairman.) That really comes to this, if I follow it, that if the disorder is of a kind which though at the moment it does not amount to a breach of the peace, yet is likely to lead to a breach of the peace, the policeman ought to have power to arrest?—I almost think he has in that case if it is likely to lead to a breach of the peace, but it is rather a fine point, I submit, when you have to sustain that in court, when no breach of the peace has occurred, and you have to justify your arrest on the ground that a breach of the peace might have occurred.

39158. (Chairman.) Then it really does come to what I was suggesting to you that you think it would be expedient for a constable to have the right of summarily arresting a person who is not actually committing the offence but who is disorderly without reference to the question whether it is likely or not to produce a breach of the peace?—That is my view in what I may term serious cases of disorder.

39159. So much for disorder for the moment. With regard to cases of solicitation by women in the streets, do you in Leeds find any great difficulty in keeping order in that respect?—At present we are labouring under a very serious difficulty in that matter. From the year 1872 we have had a Local Act in force in Leeds which made it an offence for any common prostitute who loitered or importuned in the streets of the city for the purpose of prostitution. This is the wording of it: "Every common prostitute or night walker who in any part of the borough loiters or importunes passengers for the purpose of prostitution—Penalty £5." Now, Sir, we proceeded under that from the year 1872 to the year 1905. In 1904 all our Local Acts were consolidated, and the Bill came before Parliament. Parliament refused to renew that power to us, and when the Act came into force on the 1st June, 1905, we came under the general law—that is, the Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847, Section 28. As no doubt you are aware, solicitation by a prostitute only becomes an offence under that statute when it is committed to the annoyance or obstruction of the residents or passengers. We found an immense difficulty in getting residents or passengers to come forward and swear to annoyance. We took a test case on police evidence only, where a woman stopped seven men in twenty minutes, and our case failed. It was decided on the question of law that there was no evidence. Since then no proceedings have been taken under the Towns Police Clauses Act, because we have found it impossible, as I have said, to get the evidence of the members of the public who were solicited. We have only proceeded under the Vagrancy Act of 1824 for indecent conduct in the streets. During the year 1906 there were 38 such cases. They were all extremely bad cases of prostitutes found having connection with men in the streets, and the result is that the proceedings against these women have fallen (I will take the highest figures) from 468 in 1896 down to these 38 cases I have mentioned in 1906. The last year that our Local Act was in force, 1904, there were 247 of those proceedings, most of them taken under the Local Act. That has brought about in my humble judgment a rather serious state of things. There is no doubt there is an absence of decency and decorum in the streets that we were able to maintain under the old Local Act. These women carry on their solicitation under the eyes of the police. They are perfectly well aware of the position and the difficulty under which we labour. As bearing on that I should like to say that the power entrusted to us for over 30 years was a very drastic one, and I have never heard of a suggestion of a complaint. It was carried on without friction, and in the most efficient way. We did not attempt, we do not hope, to stamp out this evil or suppress these women, but all we asked was to keep them in reasonable order and keep the streets of our city in such a condition that they were decent and orderly, and that, I think, we are no longer in a position to do.

39160. Do you remember any case in which under the operation of your Local Act an innocent woman was arrested and prosecuted?—I know of no such case, and I have not been able to discover that the oldest officer of the force can give me any information with regard to any such case.

39161. I do not quite follow upon what ground the evidence of the police was rejected as insufficient by the magistrate in the last case you referred to unless, of course, the constable was unable to give any evidence at all of passengers being annoyed?—May I read you the report, which is a short one?

Yes, if you please.

39162. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) There is a stipendiary magistrate at Leeds, is there not?—Yes.

39163. Before you read the report may I ask whether the case went any further?—No.

39164. There was no case stated by the magistrate?—No. I took advice on that point. There were two courses apparently open to us, either to have a case stated, or to apply for a mandamus, but I was advised that it was extremely doubtful whether we should succeed, and that the law laid down was good.

39165. (Chairman.) Have you the notes of the evidence of the constable?—No, I have not.

39166. Were you in court when the case was heard?—No, I was not in court.

39167. Perhaps the magistrate's decision will enlighten us if you will kindly read it?—Perhaps I had better not mention names.

39168. Just as you like. The case was published in the newspapers, was it not?—Yes, but the woman was discharged.

39169. Very well, then you need not mention her name?—A woman was charged with loitering for the purpose of prostitution. She was a convicted prostitute, and she was charged on the 19th June, 1905, with loitering for the purpose of prostitution on the 17th June. When charged by the Clerk of the Court and asked whether she was guilty or not she pleaded guilty. The Magistrate asked her what she was pleading guilty to. She replied "I am guilty." The Magistrate said "What, of annoying persons." She replied "No, certainly not." He said "I thought not," and turning to the police sergeant who was in the box he said, "What did she do, officer?" The sergeant then gave evidence to the effect that he watched her for 20 minutes, during which time she stopped seven men. He went up to the last man and asked for his name and address, which he refused to give. The officer told him that he was going to arrest the woman for soliciting prostitution, and he could attend the court on Monday morning if he desired to do so. The man replied, "I shall have nothing to do with it," and walked away. The Magistrate asked the sergeant if he had any more evidence, and he said, "No, Sir, only the other officer." The Magistrate then remarked "Very well, there is no evidence of annoyance, and the prisoner must be discharged." Then, Sir, the Deputy Chief Constable, who was in court representing the police, rose, and, addressing the Magistrate, said: "Will your Worship hear me on this case?" He replied "Certainly." The Deputy Chief Constable then observed in listening to the evidence he thought it a very strong case. The Magistrate replied "On the contrary, there is not a rag of evidence that anyone was annoyed." The Deputy Chief Constable added that he respectfully suggested to his Worship that where a convicted prostitute was seen to importune seven men there was sufficient for the court to assume that there had been annoyance. The Magistrate replied that the evidence in this case was against such an assumption. The only man spoken to by the police showed that he was not annoyed and declined to give his name and address. The Magistrate added that he would insist on these cases being just as strictly proved as if the Lord Mayor was before him. The Deputy Chief Constable replied that he was afraid by his Worship's ruling the police would be in an impossible position in these cases; that we had a large number of prostitutes in the city, not more than they have in other places similar in size, but if the police were bound in every case to bring the men importuned to prove annoyance it would be difficult if not impossible for the police to get a conviction. The Magistrate replied that he had not laid down any rule yet, but the evidence in this case was entirely of a negative character. The Deputy Chief Constable replied that he was sure his Worship would pardon him, but the police were very anxious to know how they stood in these cases. He knew, as a matter of fact, that in several of these large towns where proceedings were taken under the Towns Police Clauses Act the Court assume annoyance on the evidence of the police, and the Deputy Chief Constable added "If the officer asked a man importuned in the presence of the prostitute what she said to him, and he in her presence tells the officer, would your Worship accept it as evidence against the prostitute?" The Magistrate replied "Yes, if she admitted it before me, but if she denied it then I would want the proof." The Deputy Chief Constable then continued: "Then in begging cases your Worship. If a policeman sees a person going from house to house or from shop to shop, and he thinks that person is begging but cannot get near enough to hear what he said, the police constable takes the person back to the house or shop and inquires what his business was, and if in the presence of the beggar the householder or shopkeeper tells the constable that the person was begging, then your Worship accepts that as evidence." The Magistrate replied, "Certainly, but even then if the prisoner denied it I would require the householder or shopkeeper to come and prove it on oath." The Magistrate went on to add to the Deputy Chief Constable, "You see in some respects you are in a better position than before." The Magistrate said he would not require the police to prove loitering if the police saw a known prostitute importune a man and the police went up to the man and asked him what she had said and the man told the police constable in the woman's presence. Then, added the Magistrate, "Take the man's name and address and arrest the prostitute. If the man refuses his name and address and declines to assist the police, let her go, and watch again until you do get a man who is willing to help you." That, I believe, is a fair and accurate report.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Twice in that report there is a reference to "a convicted prostitute." What is the meaning of that?

39170. (Chairman.) I was going to ask upon that whether the Magistrate in this class of case in Leeds has been in the habit of receiving evidence of the previous conviction of the defendant for solicitation?—No, not before he comes to a finding in the case.

Major G. Golbourne Tarry.

27 Mar. 1907.

39171. From the note you have read out I gather that the sergeant in the box told the magistrate the defendant was a convicted prostitute?—That was in the statement of the case, "the above-named woman who was a convicted prostitute."

39172. Then when the case came before the magistrate he had no evidence in that case that she had been convicted before?—No, he would not until he came to a finding on the subject.

39173. I see from the notes you have sent in that you base some observations upon the rejection by the magistrate in that case of the evidence of the police?—Yes. Would you wish me to read that?

39174. If you please?—It is difficult to say upon what grounds the evidence of the police is regarded as insufficient to establish the offence of solicitation under the Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847, section 28, when convictions take place every day under that section for other offences enumerated therein upon police evidence alone. The only conclusion which I can come to is that the reason of this is a distrust of the police in their relations to these women. I venture to say that that distrust is not justified. Perhaps I had better not speak of anything except my own jurisdiction, but I have told you that we have had for 30 years a very drastic power, and I know of no case in which that power has been abused, but I also submit to you with the greatest respect that to curtail the powers and usefulness of a great police force on the ground that one or two of its members may make an improper use of their opportunities seems to me to be a most unfortunate proceeding. Policemen are not infallible, and I daresay in the large body of police in this country there are men who are not what they ought to be. Those men it is our business to find out and remove. It is also, I submit, inevitable that in the enormous number of cases going through the hands of the police every year—in my own city we have 10,000 cases a year—that some percentage of mistakes must be inevitable, and I venture to suggest that where a mistake is a bonâ fide one, such disciplinary action as may be necessary should be taken against the police officer, and there should be some means, some ready means I would suggest, of giving redress to the person who is the victim of the mistake. Of course, if the mistake is due to mala fides, then I suggest nothing but the utmost rigour of the law or the disciplinary powers against the offending policeman.

39175. Do you mean by redress money redress and money compensation?—I do not quite see what other form it could take.

39176. What fund do you suggest the compensation should come out of?—I think it would undoubtedly have to be a charge on the public fund if the mistake was a bonâ-fide mistake.

39177. You mean upon the local funds, I presume?—Yes, upon the local funds.

39178. (Mr. Whitmore.) What fund do your local fines go to?—They go to the city fund. They are really in relief of the city rates. There is a power allowing a portion of them to go to the Police Superannuation Fund, but that is not carried out in Leeds.

39179. (Chairman.) Then I understand your suggestion to be that out of the Corporation funds reasonable compensation should be payable in proper cases to anybody who is the victim of a mistake made by a constable in good faith?—Yes.

39180. By mere error of judgment?—Yes, because I submit with all respect that a certain small percentage of mistakes is inevitable. We are all human and liable to err.

39181. Before I come to ask you questions on some of the details connected with the proceedings in each individual case I should like to ask you whether you have formed any opinion as to the question whether greater uniformity with regard to the law and practice in regard to police-constables might be introduced throughout the whole country?—I feel that very strongly. Of course, I feel that I am on rather delicate ground in submitting to you suggestions of that importance, but I do feel that we provincial police forces are left perhaps a little too much to work out our own salvation, and I cannot help thinking if we had the assistance of a central authority in framing general regulations for our organisation and performance of the more professional part of our duty, it would be a great advantage.

Major G. Golbourne Tarry.

27 Mar. 1907.

39182. (Mr. Whitmore.) Are not your regulations subject to the approval of the Home Office now?—Yes, they are.

39183. You have not got absolute independence?—No, we have not got absolute independence, but I think we want a little more assistance. I am not suggesting for a moment that the provincial police forces should not be administered locally. I do not suggest that. I think that matters in connection with their pay and promotion, discipline, recruiting and appointment, and so forth, should be in the hands of the local authority, as it is now; but, if I may give an instance, under the present conditions where we obtain the most valuable assistance from a central authority like the Central Criminal Registry at Scotland Yard, which, I think, most if not all of the police forces in the country apply to and make use of, I do not know what we should do without the Central Registry in criminal matters, and also the "Police Gazette," which is issued from Scotland Yard. There is an instance where all through the country we make use of a central bureau in criminal matters. Then it seems to me, I venture to think, that there are other points on which we could obtain valuable assistance from a central authority. Very often in London there are legal decisions of great moment given by law officers of the Crown. We get those to a certain extent by reading the newspapers, it is true, but otherwise we do not get the details of them furnished to us. There are other points, it seems to me, where uniformity might be secured, such as instructions with regard to bail, the manner in which constables keep their books, the giving of evidence and preparation of their cases, prisoners' statements, and a uniform system of keeping books and returns. I put this suggestion forward with the greatest diffidence, but I know the difficulty I was in when I was appointed to my present position in having to revise the condition of things and re-organise what I found.

39184. (Chairman.) Will you tell us something about the general organisation of the force under you, how the officers are graded and so forth?—We are organised in divisions. The city is mapped out into four police divisions, and in addition there is the staff division, which comprises the staff headquarters, the detective staff, fire brigade, warrant office, and so forth. The officers are graded as follows: Chief Constable, Chief Superintendent, Superintendent, Chief Inspector, Inspector, sergeant, constable.

39185. (Mr. Dickinson.) May we have the salaries of the classes, starting from the Superintendent?—The Superintendent commences at £170 a year, and after five years' service he goes to £220. We have not a Chief Inspector at present. The Chief Clerk was Chief Inspector, and his salary was £150 a year, but he has now been made a Superintendent. The Inspector varies from £117 a year to about £140. The sergeant from 36s. a week to 40s. a week, and the constable from 26s. commencing wages to 34s. after 15 years' service.

39186. (Chairman.) I do not know that I need ask you the duties of each of these classes, because I think their names sufficiently indicate the character of the work that they do in the whole organisation; but with regard to the Chief Constable and his relation to the Watch Committee I should like you to give us some evidence. How would you describe your duties as Chief Constable?—My relations to the Watch Committee, I should suggest, as briefly as I can state them, are as follows: That in all matters affecting the appointment, the discipline, the pay, and promotion of the police I am subject to their direction. On the other hand, in all matters where administration of justice and the service of the Crown is concerned the Watch Committee are good enough to regard me and to treat me as an independent and responsible officer, and they have never placed any restriction upon me in the performance of those duties. Full disciplinary powers are delegated to me by the Watch Committee, who give their legal sanction by confirming my awards. I have full authority to give special directions as to the way in which officers should discharge their duty in the three classes of cases referred to, provided, of course, that such are in accordance with the law and the dictates of common sense. I exercise those powers in the form of general orders published to the police officers or by memoranda to the Superintendents of divisions.

39187. I suppose the superintendents of divisions have to make the orders known to the officers under their charge?—Yes. That is done by reading them out on parade, also hanging them up in the parade room. Copies are sent round to all police stations for that purpose.

39188. I understand the general regulations are conveyed to the police in the form of general orders signed by you, I suppose?—Yes.

39189. And then the orders are hung up in the parade room?—Those orders are typed and they are hung up in the parade room on a file.

39190. Are they copied into a book?—They are also copied into a book.

39191. What is the name of that book?—The book is called the general order book, and every station has a copy of that book, so that the constables can always have access to it, and read at any time what the instructions are on any particular subject.

39192. It is open to any constable at the police station?—Yes.

39194. Are any local regulations made from time to time which the police ought to know—I mean by local regulations, regulations made by the City Council after obtaining the approval of the Home Office or the Local Government Board as the case might be?—Those would be circulated to the police force in a similar way. I have here a booklet which was prepared and circulated to every member of the police force at the time the Consolidation Act was passed.

39195. Which Consolidation Act?—The Leeds Consolidation Act of 1905, which I have referred to, and under which we lost our powers with regard to solicitation.

39196. That was a local and personal Act?—Yes.

39197. That was the Act which altered your powers with regard to solicitation cases?—Yes.

39198. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did they go before the Police and Sanitary Committee?—Yes.

39199. And they must have refused to renew your clauses?—They did renew them, but we lost them in the House of Lords.

39200. It went through the House of Commons?—Yes.

39201. (Chairman.) Then the clause in the Local and Personal Act, the Act of 1904, is the same in terms as the one which applies to the Metropolis as I gather?—I think it is, but I am not acquainted with the provisions of the Metropolis Act.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) In effect it is the same, but not in terms exactly; I have just compared them.

39202. (Mr. Dickinson.) Was it thrown out in Committee of the House of Lords?—Yes.

39203. (Chairman.) On what principle is promotion conducted under you?—We go on the principle of seniority tempered by selection.

39204. Would it be true to suggest that among the circumstances taken into account in the promotion of an ordinary constable the question of the number of arrests effected by him would be taken into account?—No, Sir, not at all. We should expect the constable to show that he had performed his duties efficiently, but we should not regard it as a test of his efficiency that he had had a very great number of prosecutions.

39205. Do you keep any record of a man's service, anything in the nature of what is called in the Metropolis a defaulters' sheet?—Yes, we have a conduct book, which shows all awards and commendations on the one side received by every member of the force, and on the other side any offences which he may have committed against police discipline or against the police practice.

39206. Now coming to the three classes of cases with which we are more particularly concerned, will you tell us under what statutes you in Leeds proceed against persons charged with these offences. Take drunkenness first?—In simple cases of drunkenness we proceed under the Licensing Act of 1902, Section 1, where there is a penalty for the first offence of 10s., and for the second offence within 12 months 20s., and for the third offence within 12 months 40s.

39207. Then with regard to drunkenness coupled with disorder?—For being drunk and disorderly, or drunk in charge of a horse, etc., we proceed under the Licensing Act of 1872, Section 12, where we have a power of arrest. The penalty is 40s., or a month without the option of a fine. Then for being drunk while in charge of a child under seven years of age, under the Licensing Act of 1902, Section 2, Sub-section 1, there is a power of arrest and the penalty is 40s., or one month without the option of a fine. For drunkenness on licensed premises we proceed under the Licensing Act of 1872, Section 18. There is a power of arrest in the case of a person drunk and incapable.

39208. Then I gather from that answer that there are no provisions in any local Act dealing with drunkenness or drunkenness and disorder in the streets?—No, not now.

39209. And that no by-laws of the Corporation have been passed upon those topics?—No, we had powers under the old local Act, but they went when our Acts were consolidated.

39210. All the statutes you have referred to are Public General Acts?—Yes.

39211. Now with regard to disorderly conduct without drunkenness?—There we proceed under the Leeds Corporation Consolidation Act, 1905, Section 207, Sub-section 2, which makes it an offence punishable by a penalty not exceeding 40s. for every person who in any street is guilty of any disorderly or indecent conduct.

39212. Is there power of arrest given?—There is only power of arrest where the offender is not known and refuses his name and address.

39213. That really is the Tivoli Music Hall case that you have referred to?—Yes.

39214. Then with regard to prostitution, what are the statutes under which you proceed?—Soliciting prostitution, common prostitute or nightwalker, and importuning passengers for the purpose of prostitution in any street to the obstruction or annoyance or danger of the residents or passengers, we proceed under the Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847, Section 28, with power of arrest. The penalty is 40s., or 14 days without the option of a fine.

39215. That is a Public General Act?—That is a Public General Act.

39216. And it is under that Act that the test case to which you refer was taken?—Yes.

39217. And your case failed because the magistrate said there was no evidence of obstruction, annoyance or danger to the residents or passengers?—That is so.

39218. Is there any other section?—A prostitute behaving indecently in the street, or a common prostitute loitering in the public streets or public highways or in any place of public resort, and behaving in a riotous or indecent manner is proceeded against under the Vagrancy Act of 1824, Section 3, where there is a power of arrest and a penalty of £5, or one month without the option of a fine.

39219. Now under the existing state of the law you have no special powers at Leeds in cases of solicitation as I gather?—No, we have no other statutory powers other than those I have just read under the Towns Police Clauses Act and the Vagrancy Act.

39220. Now with regard to street betting?—There we have some local provisions. "Street betting. Every person who with two or more other persons is assembled in any street or streets for the purpose of betting shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding £5 and a daily penalty not exceeding 40s." That is Section 209, Sub-section 5 of the Leeds Corporation Consolidation Act, 1905. Then we have a further local provision, because the first was found insufficient: "Any person who shall frequent or use any street or any office or any open space in the City either on behalf of himself or any other person for the purpose of bookmaking, betting, wagering, or agreeing to bet or wager, etc., shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding for the first offence £5, for the second offence £10, and for the third or subsequent offence £50." That is Section 210 of the Leeds Corporation Consolidation Act, 1905. We have no power of arrest under that Act unless the offender refuses his name and address. Then we have recently obtained this statutory power: "Any person frequenting or loitering in a street or public place on behalf either of himself or any other person for the purpose of bookmaking or betting or wagering or agreeing to bet or wager or paying or receiving or settling bets shall be liable for the first offence to a fine of £10, for the second offence to a fine of £20, and for the third or subsequent offence £50 or six months' imprisonment if convicted on indictment or £30 or three months' imprisonment on conviction by a Court of Summary Jurisdiction." That is Section 1 of the Street Betting Act, 1906, which also gives us a power of arrest.

39221. We need not deal with the question of gaming in the streets. What are the methods according to which your constables are instructed to, and I presume therefore do, in fact, take prisoners to the police-station?—Provided the prisoner is willing to go quietly, the police use no restraint whatever. The constable or constables merely walk beside their prisoner. Handcuffs and physical restraint are only used in violent and extreme cases. For persons incapable and troublesome female prisoners a patrol waggon is provided which can be rung up from calls in any part of the city. It is kept on the fire brigade premises and turned out at a moment's notice to proceed to where its services are required.

39222. What have you to say with regard to the use of a truncheon?—I am glad to say that that is very rarely used in Leeds. I only remember two or three cases during the time that I have been there, and those were cases in which the constable was set upon by a crowd and found himself in imminent danger in consequence.

39223. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) During how many years is that?—Over seven years.

39224. (Chairman.) Is there a special order or regulation about the use of the truncheon?—Yes. There is an instruction to the men that it is only to be used in self-defence and not as a means of correction.

39225. When the prisoner arrives at the station, I presume it is the duty of the constable arresting to take him into the charge room?—That is so.

39226. And to charge him?—Yes.

39227. Is there a station in each division?—Yes, there is a headquarters station in each division—the headquarters of the division, and there is also a number of sub-stations.

39228. Are charges taken at all the stations?—Charges are taken at all the stations.

39229. Who is the officer who is in command of the chief station. What is his grade?—The Superintendent is in command of and resides at the divisional headquarters. At the other stations there is also a resident Inspector or a resident sergeant who resides at and is in charge of the station.

39230. And charges at the various stations are taken by either the Superintendent himself or somebody acting for him at the chief station and by the Inspectors or sergeants at the sub-stations?—Or by the constable clerk who is in every police-station.

39231. You have an officer called a constable clerk?—We have a constable clerk at our police-station.

39232. Take the case of a sub-station, what is the organisation there? Who is in charge of the station?—The resident sergeant or the resident Inspector.

39233. Who is under him?—One or more sections, according to the size of the district.

39234. But I am dealing with the actual sub-station itself?—Then he has a constable clerk in the office.

39235. Is the Inspector or sergeant himself bound to be present when a charge is taken?—No, he is not bound to be present.

39236. And if he is not present, then it is the constable clerk who takes the charge?—The constable clerk would have to take the responsibility of taking the charge, but I should like to point out that if there is any doubt in the case at all, he would probably put the man back and refer to his sergeant or his Inspector who, if he is off duty, would be in bed upstairs, and if he is on duty he would be in the immediate neighbourhood and he is also connected on the telephone with his police headquarters and could ring up his Superintendent, or even ring me up as they do in cases of difficulty

Major G. Golbourne Tarry.

27 Mar. 1907.

39237. Then if one of the constables brings a prisoner to a sub-station he probably finds in the charge room only the constable clerk?—No, I think at night-time he would most probably find the sergeant or the Inspector. These resident officers are on night duty.

39238. Supposing there was nobody except the constable clerk there, the constable clerk is authorised to take the charge, as I understand?—Yes.

39239. Has he a book given him for that purpose, or is there a book kept at the station called the charge book?—Yes, each station has its charge book, and under our system the prisoners are sent in during the night with the charge book to the divisional headquarters, and the prison van collects them from the divisional headquarters early in the morning and brings them to the Town Hall.

39240. Then taking the case that I was putting, a constables arrives with a prisoner at a sub-station. He is certain to find there a constable clerk?—Yes.

39241 Then he makes his charge against the prisoner to the constable clerk?—I would prefer to say not necessarily, because I think in the majority of cases a superior officer would be there.

39242. We will suppose the superior officer is there as well—the Inspector is there we will say. If the Inspector is there it is he who would take the charge and listen to the constable and listen to the prisoner, and not the constable clerk?—Yes, the constable clerk would enter particulars in the book.

39243. And according to your view, and according to your practice, is that charge room open to the public?—No.

39244. Would persons who wish to come and object to the charge, saying they were witnesses of the occurrence or something of that kind, be allowed to enter the charge room?—Certainly.

39245. As witnesses, you mean?—As witnesses for or against. We should permit all witnesses.

39246. Then you have somebody outside, I suppose, who is guarding the sub-station?—Do you mean when a prisoner has been brought in?

39247. Yes, when a prisoner is brought in, if you like, but at all times is there a constable stationed outside a sub-station?—No, but if when a prisoner is brought to a station a crowd of people are outside, then the constable would remain outside to preserve order.

39248. Then the charge is made in the case that I am putting to the Inspector?—Yes.

39249. Then the constable clerk enters the particulars in a book which is called the charge book, as I understand it?—Yes.

39250. What particulars are put in the book? It is a regular form, I suppose, and if you give us the headings of the columns we shall understand?—There is first an annual consecutive number. "When apprehended—day, hour. When sent to the central station—day, hour. Name, address, and occupation. Charge preferred. Value of property stolen. Offence—where committed. When committed—day, hour. Person charging. Name, address, and occupation. Witness—name, address, and occupation. By whom apprehended. Officer taking the charge. Property—prisoner's personal; connected with the charge. Value of property recovered—ward." That is the municipal ward of the city. "County. Married or single. Local or stranger. Employed or unemployed. Degree of education. Age. Was prisoner drunk or sober." And a column for remarks.

39251. Then, of course, if the Inspector is present and takes the charge the prisoner is still in custody?—Yes.

39252. And in the ordinary course I suppose the case would come on the next morning before the police Magistrate?—Yes.

39253. Then is the prisoner dealt with thereupon in the sub-station? Is he kept in the sub-station at all?—He would be kept in the sub-station until it was convenient for him to be taken, with his charge book, down to the divisional headquarters.

39254. The prisoner I am talking of?—Yes.

39255. You have regulations about bail, I presume?—Yes. I was not for the moment thinking of bail.

39257. The prisoner is from that time in the custody of the officer at the divisional headquarters?—Yes. Then in the early morning the prison van comes round to the divisional headquarters, collects the prisoners, also the charge books, and they are taken to the Central Bridewell, where this charge is again copied into the principal charge book. Then the prisoner's property is signed for by the Inspector at the central charge office, and he becomes responsible for the prisoner then, and for his production before the Magistrates in the morning.

39258. Now, coming back to the sub-station again. Supposing the Inspector is not there, and the constable clerk is there, he is authorised to take the charge?—Yes.

39259. But you say in cases of doubt he would probably refer it at once to the resident Inspector, or, if need be, communicate with headquarters?—Yes.

39260. What do you mean by the phrase "doubtful case"? Is it the duty of the Inspector in the charge room to go into the question of the probable guilt or innocence of the prisoner?—No; his business is merely to say if there is a primâ-facie charge against the prisoner, and a charge which can also be justified in law as well as in fact.

39261. Then his duty is to listen to the constable, and if the constable says it is a drunk and disorderly charge, and it is perfectly clear it is a drunk and disorderly charge, it is entered?—Yes.

39262. Take the solicitation cases in Leeds. Supposing a woman prisoner is brought to a sub-station, and the constable clerk only is there, and the constable says, "I arrested her for solicitation," what would be the duty of the constable clerk, in your view?—If there was not evidence of annoyance to residents or passengers he might refuse the charge.

39263. Then it would be the constable clerk's duty to ask the constable whether there was any evidence of annoyance?—He has to satisfy himself there is a primâ-facie case against the prisoner. As we are instructed in Leeds, and as the law has been laid down to us, there would not be a primâ-facie case in that instance.

39264. As the law stood, as I gather, in Leeds, and as the law now stands, before the woman can be arrested she must be a common prostitute or night walker, and she must have been guilty of loitering or importuning to the annoyance, etc., on the particular evening?—Yes.

39265. In the charge room, would the Inspector or constable clerk accept the statement of the constable, "This is a prostitute; I arrested her," and so on?—Of course, if she was one of the women who habitually frequent the streets in the neighbourhood, he would know of his own knowledge that she was a prostitute. If he did not know that, he would then ask the constable what evidence he had that she was a prostitute, and the constable would state it.

39266. Then if the constable makes it clear that there is a primâ-facie case, as you have called it, it is the absolute duty of the constable clerk or the Inspector at the station to take the charge in your view?—It is.

39267. He would not consider the question whether in that particular case the constable may have made a mistake. It would not be his duty to say to him, "Do not you think you have made a mistake in this case"?—Yes, I think it might be, if he had any reason to suppose that the constable was making a mistake—certainly.

39268. Supposing the prisoner has been arrested for being drunk and disorderly, and the Inspector at the sub-station, looking at the prisoner, thinks he cannot have been drunk a few minutes ago?—He would refuse the charge. Of course, it is a very common occurrence. The shock of the arrest would often sober a man to such an extent that when he gets to the police station the charge is refused, and, if I may refer to the figures here, it will be noticed that the charges that are refused are principally cases of drunkenness, and, I think, largely for that reason.

39269. I will ask you for those figures directly. In your sub-stations, do you have anything in the nature of a dock in which a prisoner brought in is put?—No; there is a long counter, and he is brought up to the counter.

39270. And at the divisional station?—Precisely the same.

39271. So that, in fact, the prisoner is not treated as necessarily in the wrong until the charge is actually taken?—No.

39272. Then you were kind enough to refer to some statistics you have got about the charges refused. Will you read those out?—I find that in cases of drunkenness the charges refused in the three years 1904, 1905, and 1906 are as follows:—1904, 19; 1905, 17; 1906, 12. The charges refused for disorderly conduct in those years were as follows:—1904, nil; 1905, 1; 1906, nil. For solicitation: In 1904, nil; 1905, 1; 1906, nil. The total number of arrests for these offences was as follows:—Drunkenness in 1904, 2,204; 1905, 2,181; 1906, 1,764. Disorderly conduct: 1904, 18; 1905, 18; 1906, 19. For solicitation: 1904, 247; 1905, 186; 1906, 38.

39273. 1906 is the first year in which the new Act was in force, or, rather, in which the old Act was not in force?—Yes, for the first complete year. The percentage of charges refused to the numbers of arrests is as follows:—For drunkenness: 1904, 0·94; 1905, 0·77; 1906, 0·68. For disorderly conduct: 1904, nil; 1905, 5·55; 1906, nil. For solicitation: 1904, nil; 1905, 0·53; 1906, nil.

39274. With regard to the cells, do you have cells at the sub-stations?—Yes.

39275. And at the divisional headquarters?—Yes, at every police station.

39276. What are your architectural arrangements as to the cells? Are they on the same floor as the charge office or room?—Yes, the passage from the cells leads out in all cases from the charge office, and it is on the same floor.

39277. Is that merely accidental, or were the stations planned with a view of having the cells on the same floor and leading out of the charge room?—I should think it was accidental, because most of these stations have a heating apparatus, and so forth, in the cellars, but we always endeavour as far as possible to avoid steps leading to the cells.

39278. You think it was not with a view to the greater efficiency of the police organisation and work, but rather with a view to purely architectural considerations, and considerations of comfort and economy?—Quite so.

39279. The reason I ask you the question is this: We have had one case, at any rate, in which a person having been charged was taken away, or was said to have been taken away, from the charge room down some steps, instead of being taken to the cells; or, at any rate, not taken the most direct and proper way to the cells. If there are two sets of prisoners charged at the same time, and the charge room is inconveniently crowded, what is done then?—They would have to wait their turn, and they would be required to sit down in the station itself.

39280. In the charge room?—In the charge room.

39281. Supposing one of the prisoners whose turn had not come was violent and making such a noise that the work could not be conducted, where would he be taken then—I mean before the charge was taken?—He would probably be taken to the parade room.

39282. Such cases do sometimes arise?—Undoubtedly.

39283. Of course it is impossible for the business of the charge room to go on if there are one or two prisoners making a great noise?—Quite so.

39284. In your experience it would be quite right in that case for the Inspector or the person making the charge to take the turbulent prisoner and put him in the parade room?—Yes, in charge, of course, of the constable who brought him in.

39285. In charge of the same constable, you think, would be the proper course?—Yes.

39286. What is the practice as to the number of persons in each cell?—We put one, or more than two; we never put two prisoners in a cell together.

39287. Who is responsible for the prisoner after the charge is taken and the prisoner is put in the cell?—The officer in charge of the station.

39288. The responsibility of the arresting and charging goes then?—Yes.

39289. What is the rule as to physical restraint or no physical restraint?—We place no physical restraint upon a prisoner in a cell, but if he became violent his boots are removed.

39290. What are the arrangements made for the meals of prisoners?—We give them a meal if they remain in our custody, at 9 a.m., 2 p.m., and 6 p.m., consisting of a pint of coffee and half a pound of bread.

39291. That is done at the expense of the City?—At the expense of the City. They are permitted to have any luxuries in the way of food their friends wish to provide, but as all our remand prisoners are sent each evening up to the local prison it is very unusual for a prisoner to be detained in the police cells for more than a few hours.

39292. Bail, of course, is granted at Leeds and elsewhere on much the same terms, I presume?—Yes, we grant bail very freely, and perhaps unusually freely.

39293. What bail does the officer in charge, say, of a sub-station usually accept as sufficient?—£5.

39294. On whose recognisance?—That of a householder.

39295. If it is ascertained that the prisoner is a householder would his own recognisance be taken?—In default of another surety, yes.

39296. I may take it, then, that you grant every facility for the granting of bail?—Every possible facility.

39297. And prisoners are allowed, I suppose, communication with their friends for that purpose?—Yes, at any hour of the day or night.

39298. What are the rules as to medical attendance upon prisoners brought to the station?—If a prisoner complains of illness, or appears to be ill, or complains of suffering from an injury, or appears to be suffering from an injury, the divisional surgeon is called in to attend to him. If he asks for his own medical attendant we send for his medical attendant. If he asks for his medical attendant to see him upon a matter connected with the offence which is charged against him we send for his medical attendant, and we also send for the police surgeon, who sees the prisoner in conjunction in accordance with the instructions of the Home Office.

39299. That is the memorandum of the 16th February, 1895?—Yes, I think it is the 18th February.

39300. Supposing a man denies that he is drunk when charged in the charge room, and he says he would like to have his medical officer sent for, the officer would send for him, would he not, in the ordinary course?—Yes, we should send an officer for his medical attendant and we should telephone then for the police surgeon.

39301. So that the police surgeon would be in attendance as well as the man's own medical attendant?—Yes, those are the Home Office instructions.

39302. You say "the police surgeon." What do you mean by that phrase; is the police surgeon a surgeon who only does the police work?—No. He is a medical man of repute in practice, and they are appointed to each division in the city.

39303. How are they remunerated?—By a fixed salary.

39304. Supposing a man accused of drunkenness says, "I deny that I am drunk, and I should like the police surgeon sent for," and supposing the police surgeon comes and certifies that he is not drunk, the prisoner would have to pay nothing?—If he sends for the police surgeon in his private capacity he would have to pay the police surgeon's fee.

39305. But supposing the prisoner, when charged, says, "I deny that I am drunk; I admit I am excited, but it is all a blunder; my excitement is due to the fact that I have been arrested, and I absolutely deny, even if my breath does smell," and so on, "that I am drunk, and I should like the police surgeon sent for"; supposing he said that, what would the inspector do?—If he considered the case a doubtful one he would send for the police surgeon as part of his duty, and the man would not be charged.

39306. If the Inspector sends for the police surgeon, and the police surgeon attends, the prisoner is not bound to pay the fee of the police surgeon?—No, certainly not, unless he wishes to call him as his own private medical attendant for the time being to give evidence on his behalf at the police court. I think in that case the police surgeon would charge him a fee.

Major G. Golbourne Tarry.

27 Mar. 1907.

39307. Of course, if the police surgeon does attend by the request of the Inspector, and upon the request of the person charged, and he says, after examination of the prisoner, "This man is not drunk, and I do not think he was drunk a few minutes ago, or half an hour ago, when arrested," the charge would not be taken, I presume?—No.

39308. Then the prisoner would pay nothing?—Then he would pay nothing.

39309. But he would have to pay the police surgeon's fee if the Inspector said, "I think it is clear you are drunk, but I shall not send for the police surgeon. I shall take the charge, but if you like to wait for Mr. So-and-so, who is the police surgeon, at your own expense, you can do it"?—That is the position exactly.

39310. Then the police surgeon's fee would have to be paid by the prisoner?—Exactly.

39312. Then, I understand, if a letter were sent from a Leeds resident complaining that he was roughly or improperly treated by a police-constable, number so-and-so, and the letter were addressed to you, you would have authority, and it would be your duty, to hold an inquiry without reference to the Watch Committee?—Yes. The Watch Committee only meet once a fortnight, and our great object is to prevent any possible delay in giving redress to the public.

39313. And if the citizen, instead of writing to you, writes to the Watch Committee, the Watch Committee would, as a matter of course, refer it to you, in the first instance, for you to carry out your primary police inquiry?—That is so.

39314. Do I understand that at the inquiry you hold the person complaining is allowed to attend?—Yes, he is asked to attend.

39315. Is he allowed to examine or to cross-examine the police?—He is.

39316. Who conducts the inquiry in cases not sufficiently important to warrant your own attendance?—I invariably do all those cases myself.

39317. You go to the sub-station, I suppose, or do you take it at your central office?—At my central office.

39318. You take down the evidence yourself, or the evidence is taken in your presence—one or the other?—I have the written statement of the complainant, and I have the written report and explanation of the police officers concerned, and I really make notes on those.

39319. The first step that you actually take on the receipt of a complaint, unless it is an anonymous one, or very trivial in its character, would be to ask for a report from the police-constable?—Yes, through the superintendent. I acknowledge the letter from the member of the public, and say that the matter shall be inquired into, and then I make the inquiry, and if I am not able to reconcile the two statements, then such an inquiry as I have mentioned is held.

39320. But when a complainant is before you, and, I will not say the incriminated constable, but the constable whose conduct is complained of has made his statement to you, is the complainant allowed to ask him questions?—He is. The constable is allowed to ask the complainant questions, provided the complainant is willing to answer.

39321. In other words, you treat the matter in a judicial manner, you sitting as judge, and you let the parties give their evidence, and examine each other, and make their speeches to you?—Yes, to the best of my ability in a disciplinary sense. I wish to guard myself there. If it were alleged that a constable had committed an offence against a citizen which would bring him within the cognizance of the law, I should then ask the citizen, "Do you propose to take proceedings in this case, because I am not a magistrate, and I cannot investigate it judicially." If he says he is going to take proceedings, then I do not touch it. If he tells me he wishes me to dispose of it, and will abide by my decision, then I go on with the inquiry.

39322. Take the case where a man complains of a police-constable having treated him too roughly in taking him to the station, or of having assaulted him in the street without any provocation, how would you treat the matter then?—A case of assault I do not think I should touch. I should regard that as rather too serious a matter for me to deal with. The complaints are more of what you might call officiousness or over zeal.

39323. Then what you have said only applies to cases in which the misconduct charged against the policeman is not one that necessarily involves any illegality on his part?—Yes, generally speaking.

39324. In cases where the complainant has a redress in a court of law, you tell him that he can go there?—I should not take up an arbitrary position there, because my duty is, as I understand it, to smooth matters between the police and the public, and if, by the exercise of a little tact, I could smooth down the complainant, and satisfy him that this was an error of judgment, I should endeavour to do so.

39325. If it were a case of offended dignity, you would make the police-constable express regret?—Yes. I have done that.

39326. Or express regret yourself?—Yes. I have found it very satisfactory at times to make constables apologise.

39327. Supposing a charge by a constable is refused, is there any inquiry as a matter of course held by you thereupon?—We have a form called "Refused Charge Sheet," and all cases of charges refused have to be reported to my office, and they are brought to me, and I read them very carefully. If the case is perfectly clear, and there has been a bonâ-fide mistake, the charge sheet is initialled, and copied into a Refused Charge book, which is a record which we produce at the Government inspection, and no further action is taken; but if the circumstances are not satisfactory then a refused charge would be referred back for inquiry.

39328. When the magistrate dismisses a charge (I am now dealing, of course, with the three classes of cases that form the subject of our inquiry) do you necessarily call for any report from the constables concerned?—Not necessarily because a charge is dismissed, but if there are any circumstances elicited in Court in the course of the inquiry which reflect in any way upon the conduct of the constable or the judgment with which he had acted in the proceedings, then the Court Superintendent, the superior officer who always attends at the police court, would make a report to me on the subject, and I should then make such further inquiry as might be necessary. That is, I may say, not frequently done, but occasionally it is done in the constable's own interest as well as in the interest of the general public.

39329. I am going back to something now which I omitted to ask you about when I was dealing with the police stations, and that is as to whether you keep any Occurrence Book at the sub-stations?—Yes, at every police station there is an Occurrence Book.

39330. I understand that among the instructions to the police that are given by you there is one which provides that if there is any unusual occurrence the constable has to report it either to the visiting officer or at the police station on retiring from duty?—Yes.

39331. And that is entered in the Occurrence Book of the station?—Yes.

39332. What are your rules as to giving notebooks to constables?—Every constable of whatever rank is supplied with and is expected to keep up his notebook. It has two pages for each day—one for his visits paid him by his visiting officers, sergeants and inspectors, and another page for any unusual occurrence.

39333. The notebook is a diary as well as a memorandum book?—Yes.

39334. What kind of event or circumstance ought a constable to enter in the blank sheet for the day? Does he enter every arrest he makes, for instance?—He should enter every arrest he makes; he should enter cases of accident; he should enter complaints made to him by members of the public; and, in fact, he should enter anything of an unusual character that occurred during his tour of duty.

39335. Is he supposed to keep the notebook in such a manner that it may be useful to him for reference when he is called upon to give evidence in court as coming under the doctrine of an entry made at the time of the occurrence?—Certainly.

39336. I mean, one of the reasons why you give a notebook to every constable is that he should make notes of anything in respect of which he may be likely to be called upon to give evidence?—Not only that, but at times matters are brought to our notice, accidents and so forth, which appear at the time to be of a minor character, and an applicant will say to me, "A police-constable witnessed this." These books are then very useful records to enable us to trace who it was and what he knows of the circumstances that took place. I should not regard a notebook as entirely useful for the purposes of a constable giving evidence in court.

39337. No, but that is one of the objects?—It is one of the objects.

39338. Have there come under your notice any special kinds of misconduct on the part of the police since you have been in Leeds?—In what respect?

39339. Has there been any charge made against the Leeds police in regard to bribery by any class of people or by street bookmakers?—I have never known any suggestion of bribery on the part of these women who frequent the streets, and, after making inquiry among the oldest officers of the police force, I cannot find that there has ever been a suggestion, much less a complaint, that a constable has taken money from women. I cannot put it quite so wide as regards bookmakers. We have had two or three cases, I am bound to admit, where it has been proved that the men have taken money from bookmakers, and those men have been removed from the Force. I do not wish to disguise that. I certainly think there are not more than three cases in my experience of over seven years.

39340. Then I may take it that even with regard to street bookmaking the corruption is not widespread?—No, I am convinced it is not.

39341. You infer from your experience that only the two or three cases that have taken place have, in fact, taken place. Let me put it to you in another way. Do you think that there are a good many undiscovered cases or not?—No, I do not think there are a good many. I would not put it so wide as that. I should not like to say (I must be fair) that the three cases were the only ones that have occurred. I think, also, if you will allow me to add this, that my police force have a very high tone on these questions, and I think the vast majority of the men are incapable of lending themselves to practices of that description.

39342. Are there any observations that you would like to add in reference to any special difficulties connected with the three classes of cases that we are dealing with—drunkenness, disorderly, and solicitation. I limit the question to difficulties in those classes of cases as the police have a very large range of duties not touched by our terms of reference. Therefore I had better put the question in this way. Are there any special difficulties which the police find in dealing with these classes of offence or any one of them?—I have referred in my notes to a matter which I put forward with the greatest diffidence, because it is a question rather of alteration of practice in the police force, but I do think we find a more far-reaching difficulty than perhaps we realise at first in the fact that only the informant has a locus in a police court. I have tried to get over that by making superior officers in important cases lay their own informations. Perhaps you will allow me to read quite a short instruction which I issued on that point in June, 1905:—"General Order, No. 526. Police Informations. The Chief Constable desires to strengthen the hands of Superintendents of Divisions and the Chief Detective Inspector when dealing with police cases in court. Commencing on Monday, therefore, the 5th June next, the Superintendent and Chief Detective Inspector will sign and swear their own Informations in all cases of felony and indictable misdemeanour where the prisoner is taken into custody and where there is no private informant. It will be necessary for them to attend at the Office of the Clerk to the Justices at 10.30 a.m. on such days as may be necessary for that purpose. This Order is not intended to vary in any way the present system of dealing with summons reports where the Informations are, and will continue to be, laid by the Deputy Chief Constable, nor to make any alteration in the signing of the charge book, but it is intended to assist the Superintendent and the Chief Detective Inspector in conducting important cases in the court in which Informations have hitherto been laid by the constables concerned in the cases. For all the more ordinary offences, such as drunkenness, indecent conduct, prostitution, deserting the Army or Navy, begging, sleeping out, wandering abroad of unsound mind, wilful damage under £5, and attempting to commit suicide, where there are no special difficulties, the constables in the cases may lay the Informations as at present." There again I make this suggestion with great diffidence, but I feel, rightly or wrongly, that to impose upon constables the responsibility of conducting their own cases in the police court is not quite fair, and I think also it is bad from the sense of responsibility. I think we superior officers of police are apt to think that this is a matter which immediately concerns the constables, and does not so immediately concern ourselves, and in that way our responsibility to the public is not quite perhaps sufficiently brought home to us in cases such as I have mentioned, and there is the further danger of the constable being led into taking too great a personal interest in the result of his case—becoming too keen in fact. I cannot see (and I say it with all respect to you) in a case where legal advice has not been called in on the part of the police, and it is a Police Information, any difficulty in a superior officer of police being given a locus to conduct the case and to examine the witnesses instead of having, as he does at present, to sit there mute; he has no right to open his lips, and he sees his case perhaps being blundered and mismanaged by a very well-meaning but young and inexperienced constable.

39343. That rather points to the fact that the police force in general should be represented by counsel or a solicitor, or, rather, putting it in another way, that there ought to be a public prosecutor in each court. As I understand it, you are suggesting that the Superintendent, who is, as you have told us, in attendance at the police-court, should have a right to address the Magistrate and to examine the constable and the witnesses in each case?—No, I do not put it quite so wide as that.

39344. Please do not think I am hinting what my own opinion in the matter is. I did not mean to do that. I am not at all sure that you are putting it too high at all in going so far as that?—But I do not put it so high as that. There are other considerations. In the first place, as regards legal assistance (counsel or a solicitor) there are perhaps hundreds and thousands of cases which occur where no question arises, and the expense involved would be enormous of always having a solicitor or counsel in attendance for some of the trivial cases that we have day after day in the police court. That is the reason why we do not ask the superintendent or the superior officers to sign the Information, because they would spend all their time in the police court away from their duty where they are required for looking after good order, the traffic, and so forth in the City, but when a case does seem to be blundered, and to be going wrong, I think the court Superintendent could act most usefully if he had a locus.

39345. Supposing he were given a locus, what could he do—only address the Magistrate?—And examine the witnesses and really assume the responsibility of conducting the case instead of placing it on the shoulders of a constable, who, I think, is overweighted in those matters.

Major G. Golbourne Tarry.

27 Mar. 1907.

39346. Then your suggestion is that there should be legislation upon the subject?—I am afraid there is no other way of bringing it about.

39347. With regard to police offences, which are very numerous, and in regard to which the public could hardly be expected to go to the expense of having counsel or a solicitor in attendance, your suggestion is that the superintendent should by law be given the right to conduct the case?—If it is a Police Information, and there is no legal advice.

39348. We are dealing with a case in which there is no Information in the strict sense of the term, but a summary arrest and charge made?—But an Information would be laid then.

39349. Yes, that is so, in a broad sense?—We have in those cases to swear an Information, and the officer who swears the Information becomes the Informant, and he is the only person who is allowed to take part in the proceedings.

39350. And the Superintendent has to sit by quietly, whereas if he might put a few questions to the constable he might put everything right?—Yes. He can make a suggestion to the constable by passing a note over to him, or something of that sort; but that is not quite satisfactory. I think it is not in accordance with the responsibility that a police officer ought to assume in these matters.

39351. But the Magistrate is watching surely?—Yes, but the Magistrate, I suggest, has to take an impartial position, and he would not be expected, or think himself called upon to conduct the case for the prosecution.

39352. No, but if he sees that a young constable is, as you say, blundering, I should have thought the Magistrate might have put a few questions to the constable?—No doubt in many cases he would.

39353. There is one other topic to which you refer in your notes, and that is with regard to the special difficulties about disorder. You refer to hooliganism. Do you find that there is in Leeds—I will not say a growing class—but a class of idle, disreputable young men loafing about the streets?—We do.

39354. I think you have suggested that your powers are not quite enough in that respect?—They are not enough. They are not adequate.

39355. How would you suggest that the powers should be enlarged?—When their conduct is such as that it could be described as disorderly conduct, as I ventured to suggest before, I would give greater powers to the police. When they have shown them every consideration, when they have told them to go away, and have warned them not once but twice, or thrice, then I think, when a man is defying a constable, the power of arrest might reasonably be given.

39356. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not think you have told us how many constables there are in your force?—600.

39357. For the whole of Leeds?—Yes.

39358. Do you happen to know the population; could you accurately give it to me?—Yes. Our estimated population now is about 460,000.

39359. Do the 600 only include constables?—All ranks.

39360. All told?—Yes.

39361. Does your experience in the force date from your having been Chief Constable of Leeds, or had you had experience of the police force before?—I had had 12 months' previous experience working in a County Police Force before I was appointed Chief Constable of Leeds.

39362. I want to ask you a question or two about this old Act which you had in force—the Leeds Corporation Consolidation Act. From what date did the new Act come into force?—The 1st June, 1905.

39363. The provision which you read out, if I caught the words correctly, made it an offence under the Act of 1872, I think it was, to loiter for the purpose of prostitution?—Yes.

39364. That was all that had to be proved?—Loitering, or importuning, and also that the woman was a common prostitute or night-walker. You had to prove the two things.

39365. You had to prove that she was a night-walker?—Yes. You see it was very drastic—loitering or importuning. It was an offence to loiter; and my point is that as the police carried out their duty for 30 years without complaint they might be reasonably entrusted with more extended powers.

39366. I suppose the evidence given of importuning was accosting passers-by?—Yes.

39367. And not proving that they were annoying?—They were all taken as cases of solicitation. We did not, as a matter of fact, take cases of loitering as a general rule.

39368. I suppose as a rule your evidence was as to loitering?—No; solicitation and importuning. We did not take cases of loitering only as apart from importuning.

39369. And you never had any difficulty when you prosecuted for importuning?—I do not recollect any. I cannot tell you for the moment off-hand how the information was worded. It would entirely depend upon the wording of the sworn information produced at the court. Our cases are dealt with very strictly upon those informations.

39370. Was the Stipendiary Magistrate who decided the test case under the new Act on the prosecution which you have told us of the same Magistrate who had convicted under the old statute?—Yes, for some years before.

3971. No difficulty had been raised as to what "importuning" meant?—I do not remember any question on that word, but I do remember a very proper insistance, I think, on his part that these women should all be cautioned before they were brought there.

39372. I only want to get what happened. With regard to the words. It does not strike me that there is such a vast difference between the use of that word and the word in the statute to which you have made reference?—Are you speaking of the Towns Police Clauses Act?

39373. Yes. There are the words "obstruction" and "annoyance." The word "danger" is a very much stronger word?—Yes.

39374. I should have thought it would have been obstruction and annoyance to passers-by. It was assumed, I gather from what you said, that if a prostitute were proved by evidence to be a prostitute, and she accosted a passer-by, that amounted to importuning?—Yes, to solicitation. We should have booked that woman probably in our charge book with solicitation, and in the sworn information prepared by the clerk to the justices they would have put that into more legal phraseology.

39375. You have no such regulation as there is in London apparently, providing that the police are to give a warning of some kind to a prostitute before you arrest her for solicitation?—Yes, that is an instruction to the force.

39376. I wanted to know whether you had such a regulation?—Yes, that is so.

39377. Is that an instruction which is issued to the members of your force?—It is so, and it has been so for years.

39378. Do you know the London instruction?—No, I do not.

39379. Can you tell me what the instruction is which is issued to the members of your force as to warning? Have you got it before you?—No, I am afraid I have not got it; but the purport of it is that where there is reason to believe that a woman is wandering the streets for the purpose of prostitution the constable shall keep observation on her, and not do anything in a hurry. If he is satisfied that she is being seen in the same street night after night, accosting men, and is seen going off occasionally with a man—if he has seen all that, and has satisfied himself that she is leading a life of prostitution, then he is to warn her with regard to her conduct, and if she continues to do so after his warning she is then arrested.

39380. Of course he would have to take extreme care before he warned her?—Extreme care. That was our point. Extreme care in every way has to be taken so that a respectable woman shall not be molested in this way, and I do not remember a single mistake having been made.

39381. When he had once satisfied himself clearly that she was a prostitute, and that she was plying her occupation by walking the streets for the purpose of soliciting?—Then he warned her.

39382. That he always had to do before he arrested her?—That he always had to do before he arrested her.

39383. Had he to do that within a limited period?—No period was specified, but we should have expected him as a reasonable man to allow a reasonable period for the warning to take effect; he would not arrest her five minutes afterwards; I think the next day.

39384. Suppose, for example, he gave her a warning on a Monday and he saw her again on the next Monday?—Doing the same thing?

39385. Doing the same thing?—Then he would arrest her.

39386. That warning would be sufficient?—Yes, I should say, with all respect, that he could arrest her the next day.

39387. I suppose he might do so even the same night?—No; I think that would be taking an extreme view. We should like to give some little time after warning her.

39388. Do you mean that, having got the warning, she is free for that night, and can do what she likes?—No; I do not mean that.

39389. You mean the constable would not take advantage of having warned her and arrest her within the next few minutes?—No.

39390. But if she was continuing to do it for, say, an hour, or if he found her doing the same thing an hour afterwards, there would be no reason why he should not arrest her then?—I do not know of any reason, but the principle I always endeavour to work on is to give as much latitude as possible before we act. I should prefer that the man should give her till next day.

39391. That would mean, would it not, that once having got a warning, she is free to act in defiance of the law for the rest of the night?—Quite so. After she has had her warning a constable is justified in arresting her five minutes afterwards if she continues to do it, but we, the police, do not do everything that we are justified in doing.

39392. There is a discretion, I suppose?—Yes, and a very, very big discretion.

39393. And you find it is very carefully exercised by the police?—It is very carefully exercised, and it is very essential that it should be. Perhaps I ought in fairness to say on that question of the test case that subsequently to that there was a memorandum (not in the nature of a judgment) of the law on the subject which was handed to me. I do not know whether you wish me to refer to that?

39394. As a matter of fact, it is in the document which you handed up to me, which I read. It is a memorandum of the stipendiary magistrate in reference to this question in consequence of the correspondence that took place?—Yes. That we took to be the law on the subject, and we have acted strictly in accordance with it ever since.

39395. I do not quite follow what happened with regard to this clause in the House of Lords. I follow what you said—that it passed all stages in the House of Commons, but when it got to the House of Lords Committee it was thrown out?—

39396. That was the special clause of your Act. Do you know at all what the discussion was which led to its being thrown out?—I think it was entirely on the question of uniformity, and that we should not be granted powers that other local authorities did not possess.

39397. Now, I want to ask you about taking charges in the charge room by the constable clerk. I understand you to say that they have power to ring you up on the telephone if it becomes necessary, or some inferior officer if they can get to him?—Yes.

39398. I suppose what it means is that it is only on some question of very grave importance that they ring you up?—Yes. They would not ring me up except under exceptional circumstances. They have always their superintendent at the divisional headquarters, or the inspector, who is a very experienced officer, of the division, who is on duty.

39399. Then, the constable clerk in the ordinary course when the inspector is away would be the person to act, and to accept or to refuse the charge according to his discretion?—I would prefer, with all respect, that you would not put it so high as that, because the constable clerk does not possess such a wide discretion as that. It would only be in the very simplest and plainest of cases that he would take the responsibility upon himself of accepting the charge.

39400. Then, what it would amount to, if I follow you correctly, is this: if it were a charge he thought he ought not to accept, if he had a doubt about it, he would apply to his superior?—Yes, if there was the least doubt about it, or even if the charge was of an unusual character.

39401. He would merely accept it if it were a routine sort of case?—Yes.

39402. As to your practice in the charge room, is the charge read over to the accused?—It is.

39403. And is there a column for any answer the accused may make when the charge is read over to him?—There is a column for "remarks," but we should not record the answer of the accused.

39404. Would it not be recorded at all?—Yes. The constable clerk would take it down, or the officer in charge of the station would take it down, in a diary which is kept for that purpose, and that would be embodied in a report of the proceedings made to me. It is invariably recorded in either a case of a charge involving an arrest or a summons what reply is made or what statement is made by the accused to the charge.

39405. Have you any special system with regard to reports? Suppose you call for a report from your constable, is there any special regulation with regard to the reports?—Do you mean the manner in which they are submitted, or whether they are verbal or written?

39406. I assume they would be written. They would be written if you called for a report, would they not?—Yes.

39407. What I really had in my mind was this. I wanted to know whether there was any regulation forbidding constables to confer with each other or to write their reports together?—I do not know that we have any actual regulation, but such a thing as collusion of that kind is discouraged very, very much indeed.

39408. Do you find it happens sometimes?—Very rarely.

39409. You do not find that there is a natural tendency of one man to compare his report with another when he knows that that other man is sending in a report?—It is a matter we discourage very much indeed.

39410. You try to prevent it, but I suppose you cannot tell exactly how far you succeed?—No, I am not quite prepared to admit that.

39411. You try to prevent it?—We discourage it in every possible way. I want to be very careful here in what I say, because I want to be perfectly fair. When two people witness an occurrence it is perfectly possible that one man may see a point that the other man does not see in the case, and if you are going to compare strictly (and I say this with all respect to the magistrate) the evidence of one constable with the evidence of another, and to assume that because they were both at the spot at the same time they saw it from precisely the same point of view.

39412. I should generally assume the contrary myself?—You would rather see discrepancies.

39413. Yes, I would. I agree with you that two men cannot always exactly see the same thing in the same way?—With great respect to the Bench, I have known cases go down for that very reason.

39414. We are travelling a little away from the point I was putting to you. I was not asking with reference to the credibility of their evidence before the magistrate. What I was directing attention to was how reports are made by the constables, and whether there is any regulation or any instruction by you to your constables forbidding their comparing their reports before they are sent in to you?—Certainly.

39415. I was not suggesting that there was collusion when policemen do that. Perhaps it is rather the natural thing for two men who know they have to send in a report to compare them. What I wanted to know was whether you forbade it?—Certainly; such a thing as comparing reports and anything like that we should regard as grossly improper.

39416. When a report is sent in would it go to the In-

Major G. Golbourne Terry.

27 Mar. 1907.

spector at the station or straight to you?—It would go to the Superintendent.

39417. Would he then have any power to alter it?—Not to alter a written report. We never vary a written report under any circumstances.

39418. Supposing he disagreed with it, what then would be his duty?—To send it on to me.

39419. With a note of his disagreement?—That is so.

39420. It would not be right for him, would it, to call the constable and discuss it with the constable, and then persuade the constable, for example, to alter his report?—No, except it was a matter of an obvious mistake, such as a date, or matters of that sort.

39421. Not as to the facts?—No, certainly not.

39422. Then I want to understand something from you as to the inquiries you conduct. Of course, yours is no doubt an extremely efficient but an apparently limited force as compared with the Metropolitan Police?—Quite so.

39423. You find it possible to hold all the inquiries yourself?—I do, and I attach great importance to the fact that I am able to do that.

39424. I agree. You then have in a sense the case conducted before you?—I do.

39425. There are no restrictions, as I follow from what you said to the learned Chairman, upon the right of the person who is making an accusation or complaint against a constable before you as to putting questions to the constable?—None whatever.

39426. Equally the constable can put questions to the person accusing him?—Equally.

39427. If I understood you quite clearly, some of those cases that come before you must involve charges which if they were brought in a court of law would be the proper subject of investigation in a court of law, must they not?—Rarely, I think. I do not say never, but rarely.

39428. You mean that the complaints that come before you are mostly such as offended dignity and matters of that sort?—They are very largely cases of street obstruction. A person is asked to move on, and he resents it very much when he is talking to his wife or daughter.

39429. Those are mostly all the complaints?—Yes, mostly.

39430. Have you had complaints of assaults, for example?—Of a technical character where there was reason to believe that the person complaining had been loitering for the purpose of committing a felony, and perhaps there was some handling on the part of the constable to see if they concealed anything about them.

39431. I understand you to say it should be made clear as to whether it is intended that there is to be process of law before you hold the inquiry?—Yes.

39432. If you ascertain that there is to be process of law then you do not touch the case. Is that it?—The case I mentioned just now is a not uncommon one, and it is one that is troubling me at present. There is a legal remedy; it is a technical assault.

39433. Perhaps as it is sub judice I ought not to ask you anything about it. You have had, I think you said, three cases of bribery by street bookmakers during the seven years that you have been at the head of the force?—Yes.

39434. That is, to be quite accurate, three cases during the seven years in which after there has been an inquiry the men against whom the charges have been made have been dismissd the force?—Yes.

39435. I do not want to go into it in detail, but there have been complaints, I suppose, besides those three?—Only one other complaint I remember by a man who complained in one of the other cases. The inquiry was conducted by me.

39436. You inquired into it, and satisfied yourself that there was nothing in it?—Yes.

39437. With regard to the other three cases, were inquiries conducted before you?—They were.

39438. That is quite as serious a case as you would be ever likely to have. They were cases in which the men were charged with having received money, I suppose for the purpose of allowing immunity to a street bookmaker to ply his trade?—That was the substance of the allegation. That was not likely to be a case that would come before the Court.

39439. I understand you mean it would naturally come before you to deal with. Who made the complaint in the three cases? I do not mean the person, but what class of person was he? Was it the bookmaker?—The bookmaker.

39440. The bookmaker in each of the cases?—Yes. I am speaking from memory now, because I did not expect to be specially examined on this point.

39441. I do not want to go into it very deeply?—It was a bookmaker in one case, and another case it was a superior officer.

39442. What was the rank of the policemen? Were they all three police-constables?—Yes.

39443. Was there any system of the police-constables being employed to detect the bookmakers by means of disguises?—Not in those particular cases, I think.

39444. Were they constables who went out in private clothes or in uniform?—I think one of them was a plain-clothed constable. It happened some years ago. I am really trying to tax my memory over it, because I did not look the case up.

39445. You have told us sufficient upon that, and you have told us quite as much as I want to get from you. Can you tell me approximately the number of cases that you personally have inquired into during the seven years?—I think I am perfectly safe in saying not more than three or four cases a year. Many of the cases I can deal with by letter. Where I have had the constable before me, and have heard his account, and have substantiated it by some superior officer that he was acting reasonably, I have then been able to write a courteous letter.

39446. It is only in cases where it is difficult for you to determine which of the parties is right, whether it is the constable making the explanation, or the person making the complaint, that you have them before you so as to endeavour to ascertain on which side the truth lies?—Quite.

39447. In most cases, I suppose, you can find out for yourself from your officers what has happened, and it is not necessary to hold an inquiry?—No. As a rule I can satisfy a member of the public, whoever he is, by writing him a reasonable letter.

39448. Supposing in a case which is being heard in the police court or in any court—in the county court—there is some charge which affects a police constable, I mean some allegation made during the course of the case, which reflects upon the conduct of one of the members of your force, is it your practice then to call for a report or to have the man before you?—That would be invariably reported to me, and an inquiry would be conducted. Any allegation, either public or private, made against the conduct of the police, is the subject of an inquiry.

39449. Supposing in a prosecution the man who has been arrested complains of having been ill-treated by the police constable. I suppose such things have happened during the seven years?—I only remember two cases in seven years. One was the case I referred to, and the other was the case of a thief.

39450. I do not want to go into the cases, but do you get complaints made at the court when the Magistrate would tell the person complaining to make it to you, the Chief Constable?—I do not recollect a case actually before the Court, but I do recollect cases on application to the Justices for process, and then it is a frequent matter for the Magistrates to refer the complainant to me for inquiries to be made as to the truth of his story, such a case coming more within the purview of the police than that of the Magistrates.

39451. (Mr. Dickinson.) When you read out to us the clause in the Leeds Act with regard to prostitution you did not finish it and tell us what penalty there was?—Do you mean the old power that we lost?

39452. Yes?—The penalty was £5.

39453. Was arrest possible under that section?—Yes, there was a power of arrest.

39454. Would you mind giving us the number of police stations that you have?—We have 23 police stations in the city.

39455. Is each of the stations presided over by a Superintendent?—No, there is a resident officer, either Sergeant, Inspector, or Superintendent, according to the importance of the stations.

39456. How many Superintendents are there?—Four

Divisional Superintendents, one in charge of each of the four uniformed divisions.

39457. Leeds is divided up into four divisions?—Yes, and then we have two other Superintendents, a Chief Superintendent, who is Deputy Chief Constable, and the Chief Clerk is a Superintendent.

39458. Really you divide Leeds up into four divisions with a Superintendent in each?—Yes.

39459. Then he has inspectors who are under him?—He has three inspectors, one who is always on duty for eight hours.

39460. Has the Superintendent of the division any responsibility for the police stations in his division?—Full and complete responsibility for every police-station in his division.

39461. And everything that comes up from the inspector to you goes through him?—Yes, he is responsible to me for everything in his division, as I am responsible to the Watch Committee for everything in the city.

39462. I suppose in small matters you would instruct him to inquire into them?—Not exactly in matters between the police and the public. I always as far as I can inquire into those matters where the relations between the police and the public are concerned.

39463. Then there must be a lot of other things that the Superintendent inquires into, I suppose?—Of course. He does not worry me with details.

39464. When a case is dismissed, who brings to your notice that fact, that a charge is made by a police constable and the Magistrate does not believe him and dismisses the case?—Every morning I see the charge sheets of the previous day's police court proceedings, and I always look them through. If there is a case of any importance or an unusual case at all that has been dismissed, I usually mark it myself "What are the circumstances of this case?" and so I keep touch with it. Then the Superintendent of the division would make me a report or the Court Superintendent, as the case might be, of why the case failed.

39465. Have you got a special Court Superintendent?—No, my Deputy Chief Constable acts as Court Superintendent.

39466. There being one court only?—No, there may be three.

39467. Is he present at all inquiries?—He divides his time between the three courts.

39468. Is he present when all the cases are heard?—As a rule our number of courts is two—the stipendiary magistrate's court and the city justices' court.

39469. Do they sit on different days?—The same day.

39470. Then he cannot be at both of them?—He cannot be at both of them.

39471. At the court at which he is not, who takes his place?—The senior warrant officer.

39472. What is the senior warrant officer?—The inspector.

39473. That is to say, for the whole of Leeds?—The Warrant Department. We have a branch of the police called the Warrant Department, and he is the head of the Warrant Department and takes charge of the police courts.

39474. He is not an officer connected with any district?—No, he is in the staff division.

39475. In all police court inquiries you have some superior officer who is not connected with the district, listening to it?—Yes, from the staff division.

39476. It is his duty to watch the case?—Yes.

39477. Would it be his duty to comment on any behaviour on the part of a police constable that he thought was improper?—Certainly, he would make a report about it.

39478. Does he ever do that?—Certainly.

39479. It is done?—It is done.

39480. Do you and he discuss the matter, or what course is adopted?—No, he would make me a written report, and my usual procedure is to say that I wish to see the police constable.

39481. Is that the only check you have over the behaviour of police-constables so far as that appears from the police-court proceedings?—It is.

39482. Then supposing a case is brought to your notice, and you see the police-constable, what sort of inquiry do you hold to satisfy yourself about it?—I have the officer there who made the report of the unusual circumstances. I ask the police-constable what he has to say, and what his explanation is, and if I am satisfied with it I should mark it so in the report that his explanation was accepted. If I was not satisfied I should refer it to the Superintendent of the division to send me statements from the persons concerned, and I should make a discipline case of it, which would be heard on the day when I hear the discipline cases.

39483. What do you mean by statements from the persons concerned? From what persons?—Persons who might have been witnesses in the case.

39484. Then you would make inquiries of the people themselves?—Certainly; and I have one day a week when I hear discipline cases, and then that case would be put back to be heard on that day, when the result of the Superintendent's inquiries was complete.

39485. Then when you spoke of discipline cases before I rather took it that they were cases of complaints brought by outsiders against the police?—No, we understand by discipline cases cases where a constable has committed an irregularity according to his regulations between himself and his superior officers, or as regards the working of our police system, quite as much as offences with regard to the public or irregularities in giving evidence in court.

39486. Have you had any cases which have been brought to your notice by your Superintendents and you have had to punish policemen for assaults on the public, so to speak?—Not assaults.

39487. Still you think you are pretty well sure that you have sufficient means of knowing whether those things occur or not?—I believe I can keep in touch with my staff with whatever goes on either in the police courts or otherwise.

39488. You have only 700 men?—600 men.

39489. I want to ask you something about the witnesses in the charge room. In one of the answers you gave to the Chairman you said that the proceedings in the charge room are not open to the public, but you would admit witnesses?—Yes.

39490. What proceedings would be taken for ascertaining what the witnesses had to say in the charge room?—Of course the police officer taking the charge has no judicial functions. He cannot hear the evidence on both sides and hold a judicial inquiry. He is not empowered to do that. His business is to satisfy himself that there is a prima-facie charge against the prisoner, and he would probably hear the complainant, and then if there were any witnesses on behalf of the prisoner who would come in on a charge of unjustifiable arrest, for instance, he would hear them.

39491. And he does hear them?—He does hear them. He might use his discretion on that as to whether he accepted the charge or not.

39492. Does he take down their statements?—He would in a case of an unusual character. He might take down their statements in writing, and they would be sent to me then with a full report of the proceedings which goes into court for the information of the justices.

39493. I understand you to say that any statement made by an accused person is invariably taken down?—Yes.

39494. That is always the case?—Yes.

39495. That is the business of the officer in charge to take down what he says?—I am not suggesting that he would take down every word of a long, rambling statement, but if a man denied the offence he would take that down.

39496. If a man came in and said, "I was not arrested in John Street at all, but I was arrested at the door of the police station," would he take down a statement like that.—Certainly.

39497. It would be his duty to do so?—Yes.

39498. As regards the witnesses, he would not be bound to take their statements down. He would use his discretion?—He would use his discretion. He would not take them in an ordinary case.

39499. Would a witness be invited into the charge room?—No.

39500. Supposing a prisoner is brought by a policeman to the station, and the prisoner has a colleague,

Major G. Golbourne Tarry.

27 Mar. 1907.

would there be an invitation to the colleague to come, or would the tendency be to keep him out?—By a colleague do you mean a man who was present with the prisoner at the time of his arrest?

39501. Yes, and who might very likely have been something of importance?—He would certainly be allowed to come in.

39502. If he asked to?—Yes. I do not think he would be specially invited unless there was a reason to believe he had something material to say. If he had I think he would be given every opportunity of saying it.

39503. Are there any means by which a police-constable who is locking up a man who has been in a street row can bring witnesses from among the bystanders before his superior officer or before the Magistrate?—He would have to go (and of course it is done in certain cases) and ask them their names and addresses, and whether they would come and give evidence on the part of the police.

39504. Is that a practice you recommend?—That is a practice I recommend, and that is done.

39505. It is done, is it?—It is done.

39506. Is it done to any large extent?—It is done to a large extent, because we try and enlist the support of the public, and our desire is to have a fair—I think I am entitled to put it as high as that—and impartial hearing of the case. The evidence of independent witnesses like that would be obviously valuable.

39507. And as a matter of fact the police do manage to bring witnesses up?—We do wherever we can.

39508. How do they manage it, because a constable has got his work cut out to take a man in custody as a rule?—Yes; as a rule further assistance is available, and police-constables from adjoining beats or patrols would come on the scene.

39509. And do I take it from you that there are instructions to them that they are at once to set to work to get the names and addresses of witnesses?—I could not put it as a general instruction on that subject. I should put it that there is a practice wherever we can get corroboration of any member of the general public to get it.

39510. You try to?—Yes.

39511. And you succeed?—I think on the whole we succeed. There are certain members of the public who will not come forward. They object very much to coming forward on certain questions that you have been dealing with this morning—for instance, the question of prostitution. They do not like coming forward on that question. I do not think they care much for coming forward on betting questions.

39512. But take an ordinary question of drunk and disorderly conduct?—In an ordinary question of that kind I do not think we find difficulty on the whole.

39513. Is it a common thing for policemen to go round in the crowd and get the names and addresses in a general street row?—Not in the ordinary everyday routine cases, as you used the expression this morning, but anything of an unusual character rather out of the routine they would.

39514. Not in a common case?—Not in a common case.

39515. And in a common case I suppose the Magistrate bases his action on the uncorroborated testimony of the policeman?—Unless, which is very often the case, the prisoner or the defendant brings witnesses himself, which he very often does.

39516. They would be on the other side of course?—Yes.

39517. One question about your method of procedure under the old Act with regard to prostitutes. I do not know whether you said so or not, but is it a fact that the number of prostitutes now in the streets has increased in Leeds since the change in the law?—Yes, it is a fact.

39518 What methods did you adopt for taking up these women? Did you adopt any special methods at all?—Do you mean under the old Act or under our existing Act?

39519. Under the old Act, first of all?—Our system was, as I described this morning, a caution in the first instance when we were satisfied the woman was following this trade, and after that it was usual to see her solicit three or four men, that there might be no possible doubt about the case when it came on for hearing, before she was arrested.

39520. All these arrests were made by policemen in uniform in the ordinary course of their duty?—No. This question was, as a rule, dealt with and controlled by the plain clothes officers of the division.

39521. I did not know that was the case in Leeds. I know it is the case elsewhere. Would you just tell us what you did. Did you tell off particular officers for the purpose?—In addition to our central detective force we have in each division certain plain clothes detectives doing duty, and an important part of their duty is the control of this prostitute question. It would be the duty of the plain clothes constable when he saw these cases of solicitation occurring before him to take action. As you will understand, they do not, as a rule, take place within the purview of the uniformed constables, and it would be impossible to keep this question of prostitution in check by uniformed men altogether, and so these plain clothes men perform the duty.

39522. Has that been the custom for many years?—For many years.

39523. Have you found any objection raised to it?—None whatever.

39524. When you talk of plain clothes men you mean detective officers, not ordinary policemen in plain clothes?—No, I mean detective officers.

39525. How many do you have on this particular work?—We have six in each division.

39526. That is 24 in the city?—Yes.

39527. And devoted to this particular class of work?—Oh, no, that is only a branch of their duty. It had an advantage in another way, that these men being on duty more or less permanently got to know these women and the possibility of a mistake being made and a respectable woman being subjected to any indignity was reduced to a minimum.

39528. I suppose the women would get to know them too, would not they?—Yes, but in the crowded streets of a city like ours they were much more easily able to escape observation than the uniformed constable.

39529. Is it the duty of that officer to give the caution?—Yes.

39530. Then you find it much more efficacious than allocating this duty to uniformed officers?—I do. I do not think you can altogther remove it from the cognizance of the uniformed officer because it is part of his duty as much as anybody else's, but we find it more advantageous to have it dealt with by this special class of officer.

39531. With regard to drunkenness, when a man is brought into the station charged with drunkenness, I understood you to say that if the inspector found any doubt about it he would send for the surgeon?—Yes.

39532. Can you tell me what sort of certificate the police surgeon would give in such a case as that?—He makes upon the ordinary report form that we use a report to me on every case in which he is called in to examine a person, whether that person is the subject of a charge by the police or whether that person has been the victim of an outrage on the part of somebody else.

39533. I want you to confine your remarks to drunkenness, and the question of whether a man is drunk or not. That is what I am asking you about?—That would be his report, and his certificate would be written in this form and submitted to me.

39534. Would he be asked by you to certify whether the man was drunk or not?—He would report on that form in writing the result of his examination of the man, and that would be sent into court to be laid before the Justices in the morning.

39535. Would he ever put down such a formula as this: "Not drunk, but has been drinking"?—I do not recall a case of that wording. I can recall a case where he said when his inspection of the prisoner took place some time after his arrest that he detected signs of liquor upon him and that he might have been drunk at such and such an hour when the arrest took place.

39536. You say you recall one instance of that?—I can recall instances of that.

39537. Then that kind of certificate is not unknown?—No, it is not unknown, and necessarily so, because of course the police-surgeon is not always available at a moment's notice.

39538. Of course it is a very different question as to whether a man is drunk or whether a man has been drinking?—That is so, and a man might be drunk at one o'clock in the morning and might show signs only of having been drunk at three o'clock in the morning.

39539. And he need never have been drunk at any hour?—That is possible.

39540. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You have given us the number of cases of solicitation which have been brought before the court during the period of three years. Can you tell me in how many of the cases there was a denial of the charge?—No, I am afraid I could not.

Major G. Golbourne Tarry.

27 Mar. 1907.

39541. Does it often happen?—I think in the majority of cases the women admit it and plead guilty. In the instance I gave you and the report of which I read the woman pleaded guilty.

(Chairman.) That is all we have to ask you, Major Tarry. The Commission are much obliged to you for taking the trouble to come up and give the valuable evidence that you have given us to-day.

Mr. Leonard Dunning, sworn.

39542. (Chairman.) I believe you were educated at Eton and Exeter College, Oxford, and you were a student of the Middle Temple till the age of 22, when you joined the Royal Irish Constabulary as a cadet, being appointed after competitive examination in 1882?—Yes.

Mr. L. Dunning.

39543. In January, 1895, you were appointed assistant head constable at Liverpool, and in March, 1902, you were promoted to be head constable of that city?—Yes.

39544. Have you any information to give us about the Metropolitan Police and the way in which they discharge their duties with regard to the three classes of cases which are mentioned in our terms of inquiry?—No, I have not, except, as I say, as a casual observer, and, of course, I have been for many years acquainted with the principal officers at Scotland Yard, and, of course, we discuss such matters a good deal between ourselves when we meet. Up to the time I went into the Royal Irish Constabulary my home was in London, and during the time I was a schoolboy on my holidays and an undergraduate and a student of the Middle Temple I was a good deal about the streets of London, and the only one of those particular subjects that strikes me is the question of solicitation. In my opinion the streets are very different from what they were when I was a boy of 18 or 19.

39545. We have been desirous of hearing what you have to say about the way in which the police officers under you in the City of Liverpool discharge their duties with regard to the three classes of cases coming with our terms of reference with a view of making a comparison between your methods in Liverpool and the methods of the metropolitan police as given in evidence before us. The Commissioners have supplied you with a memorandum setting forth the particular topics on which we thought your evidence might be helpful, and perhaps you would like to read the proof that you have sent in?—Yes. I should like to say that as far as possible our aim in Liverpool has always been to let every policeman have some definite instructions upon every subject, and therefore as far as possible I would refer you to the instructions which are issued to the police, and I think you may take it for granted that, having issued those instructions, we do our best to have them followed by the police, and as far as possible it is not a question of what is the custom, but what is the instruction to the police. I hand you in the Instruction Book and really the answers to a great many of your questions would be really extracts from those Instructions. The Instruction Book which I have given you, Sir, is issued to every constable when he joins the Force; it is the text book by which he is educated to be a policeman; it is in his possession all through his service amplified, and to a certain extent varied by Standing Orders, which are printed and issued from time to time to every rank down to that of sergeant, and is available for constables and everybody else at every station where a constable goes for any purpose whatever. Of course matters of local and temporary interest which arise from time to time are circulated every day and read to the men upon parades.

39546. And of course the book is as far as practicable kept up to date?—Yes.

39547. I understand that the Standing Orders deal with matters of a variable nature which, for that reason, are kept out of the book?—Yes.

39548. What do they include?—For instance, rates of pay and things of that sort, regulations about leave of absence, and then, of course, there are new regulations which are made necessary by new laws which come into operation, and so on. They are dealt with generally by a Standing Order, and when a new edition of the Instruction Book is issued they would be embodied in the new edition.

39549. And the instructions to the Bridewell sergeants, what do they comprise as a rule?—They deal with matters equally which have arisen since the issue of the last edition of the Instruction Book, instructions to the charge sergeants in dealing with charges, and so on. Very often questions turn up which want a fresh instruction, or there may be a confusion about some instructions and alteration of forms, and so on.

39550. How are other matters which are merely of temporary importance dealt with?—If anything occurs that I think wants an instruction I write an instruction, which is kept in what is called my order book, and extracts from that are circulated all through the Force and read to the men as they parade for duty for the next few days.

39551. You have told us that a good many of the questions we have sent to you can be answered by a reference to one or other of these documents?—Yes.

39552. As to the general organisation, perhaps you would tell us how your force is divided or graded?—It is much the same as the metropolitan police, I think. I am responsible to the Watch Committee for the whole of the city, for the regulation, instruction, and comfort and well-being of the police. Then, putting aside the question of staff duties, which I can deal with afterwards, the ordinary organisation is this: the city is divided into divisions, each division is commanded by a Superintendent or Chief Superintendent, as the case may be, who is responsible to me for everything that occurs in his duty and any part of the police duty in that division, detective or preventive. He has under him three inspectors who divide the day between them, being on duty for eight hours, and act for him or under him as the case may be. Then the division is divided into sections, and a sergeant has charge of a section, and he has so many constables. The sergeant is responsible through the Inspectors to the Superintendent for the state of his section and for the duties of the police under him. The constable is responsible for the peace and order and general well-being of his beat to his sergeant. In the same way all reporting is done—the chief responsibility runs through. In the ordinary course a constable reports verbally. The sergeant is the first man who puts the thing into writing, and he reports to the Inspector, who submits it to the Superintendent. Such things as the Superintendent has to submit to me he submits to me, but each officer through whose hands it passes has to add anything he knows or to criticise anything which is said to him, or reported to him, by his subordinate. Each person has to express his own opinion irrespectively of what has already been said. That is with regard to ordinary duty, and you can put aside detective duties, which I do not think affect so much the questions you are inquiring into. Those are the details of the organisation of the police.

39553. What is the system in vogue as to the promotion of officers?—That is governed by the regulations on page 301: "Promotion to the higher ranks of the Force is the natural and proper ambition of every man who joins it, and it is well that he should know the principles upon which promotions are made. Promotions are made by the Watch Committee on the recommendation of the Head Constable, not with the object of rewarding the men recommended, but solely with that of getting the higher ranks filled with the men best qualified to fill them for the good of the service. Any attempt to influence the Committee or the Head

Constable through private friends or by direct or indirect canvassing can only be looked upon as disqualifying the man on whose behalf it is made. Though long service and good conduct will be taken into account in deciding between men who are otherwise equal, they are not enough by themselves, and the preference must always be given to the man who has shown such intelligence, zeal, and energy in the discharge of his duties in one rank as shows him fit for advancement to a higher one, and who, in his manner to the public, his speech, and smartness of bearing, is a credit to the Force. But, however well a man does his duty himself, before he is put in a position of authority over others, he must, by the ready obedience," and then comes the question of education. They have to pass an examination. There used to be grumbling that certain men were not called up for examination, so I altered that system, and now the promotion is dealt with by Standing Order 19, which provides as follows: "For the future each Superintendent will keep and submit to the Head Constable quarterly a list of constables recommended for promotion, but no constable may be put upon it until he has passed a qualifying examination. The examination will be held annually, and any constable who has completed eight years service, and has for five years been clear of punishment, reported to the Watch Committee, may apply for permission to present himself, and will be allowed to do so unless he is, in the opinion of the Head Constable, utterly unfit for promotion." Therefore it rests on the man; when he has got the requisite service he can present himself for examination. If he passes the examination he is eligible, as far as education is concerned, to be put upon the Superintendent's promotion list. If he does not care to present himself for examination, that man, then, has no ambition for promotion.

39554. I suppose the question of the zeal of the particular constable in the discharge of his duties is an element taken into consideration?—It is the principal element.

39555. When you are considering whether a man has been a zealous police officer, do you consider at all the number of arrests he has made in the course of any given time?—To a certain extent, but, of course, I always look upon prevention as the more important part of a policeman's duties than detection. Of course, detection must influence one's opinion of a man's energy, because it is very hard to point out what he has prevented. You can say what he has done. It is always impressed on the man that prevention is the first great duty of a police officer.

39556. What are your relations as Chief or Head Constable to the Watch Committee?—They are governed by Standing Orders of the Watch Committee. Of course, there is a great deal in the personal relations between the Chief Constable and the Watch Committee, and that influences a great deal the way the work is done between them.

39557. I mean the theoretical legal relation?—In the eye of the law I am merely a constable. I possess no statutory powers such as the Chief Constable of a county possesses. I cannot appoint, punish, or dismiss a man. I merely possess such powers as the Watch Committee delegate to me, and the Watch Committee have defined my position very shortly upon page 17 of the Instruction Book: "The Head Constable commands the whole force, and is accountable to the Watch Committee for its good order and efficiency. He selects and recommends to the Watch Committee such officers, sergeants, and constables as he thinks best fitted for promotion, and also those whom he considers worthy of reward for special services. The punishment of members of the Force for offences against discipline, by dismissal, reduction in rank, fine, or otherwise, is left to his discretion, subject to a right of appeal to the Committee, as will be found described later under the head of 'Discipline.'" Their Standing Orders are as follows as far as they relate to the appointment of constables:—"No. 12—The Head Constable shall, as occasion arises, bring before the Committee such candidates as, after personal interview and due inquiry, and upon the report of the medical officers of the Force, he may recommend as fit and proper persons for appointment to the Force." Then there is a condition as to the men's age and height. Then No. 15, as far as discipline is concerned: "That the Head Constable shall be empowered to punish by personal reprimand or stoppage of leave such offences aginst discipline as may, in his opinion, be adequately so punished." Then No. 16: "The Head Constable shall not allow any person to be present during the hearing of a complaint against a member of the Force except members of the Watch Committee, the complainant, the witnesses, and members of the Force. (17) That the Head Constable shall submit to the Committee for approval or otherwise his recommendations for punishment by way of dismissal, reduction in rank or pay, fine, or reprimand by the Committee. (18) That any member of the Force who feels aggrieved by any such recommendation shall have liberty to appear before the Committee by giving notice in writing to the Head Constable before the day on which the recommendation will be laid before the Committee. (19) That any man who is dissatisfied with the character given upon his certificate of discharge from the Force shall have liberty to appear before the Committee." That pretty well defines my position; in fact, the Watch Committee, I may say, give me very ample powers to deal with that.

39558. Now, coming to the specific cases with which we are concerned, let us take drunkenness first. Under what statutes or bye-laws do you deal with drunkenness in the streets?—I may say entirely under the Licensing Acts of 1872 and 1902.

39559. They are both of them public general Acts?—Yes.

39560. There are no special bye-laws with regard to drunkenness?—No. Drunkenness within the borough is an offence under the Local Police Act, but it has always been regarded as being over-ridden by the Act of 1872. The only local power which is in use is the power of the magistrates to imprison for three days in default of payment of a fine of 5s. for drunkenness, and they commit to the police lock-up instead of His Majesty's prison.

39561. Is that in pursuance of the Local Act?—That is in pursuance of the Local Act.

39562. What is the reference to that Local Act?—The Liverpool Improvement Act of 1864, section 28, and we have an arrangement with the Prison Commissioners, by which they pay us for the maintenance of those prisoners. It only means really imprisonment for practically a day.

39563. The instructions to the police are given in the books?—Yes.

39564. Now come to the offence of solicitation in the streets. What are the statutory provisions under which you deal with those cases?—They are practically dealt with under the Vagrant Act.

39565. That is the Act of 1824?—Yes. Our Improvement Act of 1842, section 149, sub-section 23, is somewhat wider and, of course, we have a power to arrest there, but there is power to arrest under the Vagrant Act, and I think the Vagrant Act myself is quite wide enough to deal with the question. Our Act says frequenting a street for the purpose of prostitution.

39566. I think it would be convenient if you read out the exact words of the section of the Improvement Act that you refer to?—It is the 23rd sub-section of the 149th section of the Liverpool Improvement Act, 1842: "Every common prostitute or night-walker loitering or being in any thoroughfare or public place for the purpose of prostitution or solicitation to the annoyance of any inhabitants or passengers."

39567. What is the punishment?—A fine of 40s.

39568. No imprisonment?—No imprisonment.

39569. Is there a power of summary arrest?—Yes, in another section there is a general power of arrest of persons committing offences against the Act.

39570. Does the Town Clauses Act apply to Liverpool?—No, our Act is a better Act than the Towns Clauses Act, so we do not bother our heads about the Towns Clauses Act.

39571. Now, with regard to the case of disorder?—There we have a section just the same as a section of the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839, as follows: "Every person who shall use any threatening, abusive, or insulting words, or behave with intent to provoke a breach of the peace or whereby a breach of the peace may be occasioned is liable to a fine of 40s." I may say that the enforcement of that section is only quite of recent date in Liverpool. When I came to Liverpool 12 years ago I thought it strange, looking through the books, that I saw no charge of disorderly behaviour per se without drunkenness, and when I inquired I found that such charges were not prosecuted. If a man was under the influence of drink and was disorderly in the street, if he could straighten himself up when he got to the station, enough to convince the Bridewell sergeant he was not drunk, he got off altogether unless a charge of assault could be proved against him. I drew the attention of my then Chief to this section, and we tried it for some time in the most rowdy division, and it has been now enforced all over the city for a considerable number of years, and, I think, with considerable advantage.

39572. Now, with regard to street betting?—Street betting was first of all dealt with by the Liverpool Improvement Act, 1883, section 28, which is as follows: "Any three or more persons assembled together in any part of a street within the city for the purpose of betting shall be deemed to be obstructing such street, and each of such persons shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40s." This Act gave no power of arrest. Then we had a bye-law after the Home Office model, dated the 6th April, 1898. This being made under the Municipal Corporations Act gave no power of arrest. Now, of course, the matter is dealt with under the Street Betting Act, 1906, and the instructions to the police you will find in Standing Order 39.

39573. Now, coming to the topic of arrests, can you tell us generally how arrests ought to be effected according to your rules, how the prisoner ought to be charged on being taken to the station, and how he ought to be treated when he arrives in the charge room?—We possess the common law and statutory powers of arrest possessed by the police all over the kingdom, and then we have special powers to arrest under the Liverpool Improvement Act of 1842, which are pretty large, but they are much the same as those possessed by the Metropolitan Police under the Metropolitan Police Act, 1839. It is impressed upon the police, and they are told what an arrest is, what the purpose of an arrest is, and they are told to avoid arrests which are unnecessary. I think, if I may, I would read you the instructions given to the police with regard to arrest for misdemeanours and minor offences from page 59 of the Instruction Book: "In both misdemeanours and minor offences you will constantly have to decide between making an arrest and taking a name and address for a summons, and the best way to decide is to ask yourself two questions, first, 'If I just take his name to summon him, will he go off and do it again?' If you think that there is a chance of his doing so you had better arrest him; if you don't think that there is any fear there is no need to arrest him; the second question is, 'If I let him go, shall I be able to find him to summon him?' If you think that you will there is no need to arrest him; if you think that probably you won't, either because he is a stranger or a tramp, or because you are not satisfied that he has given you his real name and address, you must arrest him."

39574. How is the arrest effected?—In the ordinary way. It is explained that an arrest, to be legal, must be complete; that is to say, that it is not merely telling the man he must come and he comes, but there must be an actual laying of hands upon the man to complete a legal arrest, or a movement to show that the person arrested is going, with the person who arrests him.

39575. Does the constable keep his hands upon the prisoner all the way to the station?—Not unless there is some necessity. Of course, in an ordinary way the prisoner is taken to the Bridewell on foot, but we have a patrol wagon system in force for nearly the whole city; that is to say, whenever a constable has difficulty with a prisoner, all he has to do is to go to the first telephone or police-signalling box and ring up, and the patrol wagon will come up at a gallop if necessary.

39576. With regard to the use of the truncheon, what are your regulations?—They are on page 384: "You are supplied with a truncheon, to be used when absolutely necessary, but you are strictly forbidden to use it or even to draw it from your pocket unless there is real need, and you must always be prepared to give the reasons which induced you to use or draw it. You may use it in self-defence when you cannot otherwise protect yourself from violence. You may use it to secure the arrest of, or to prevent the escape of, a person charged with a serious felony, but in the case of a less offence it would be better that the offender should escape for the time rather than that you should use violence to keep him. You may use it on the orders of your superiors when quelling a riot or other disturbance of the peace. As to the manner of using it, never hit a man with intent to, or so that you may, do him permanent injury; hit him on a muscle, and not on a bone, and never hit him on the head; never hit a woman, an old or infirm man, or a child; never hit a man who is running way unless he is charged with a serious felony and you are sure that you cannot otherwise arrest him. Unnecessary use of your truncheon, or even excessive use of it when its use is necessary, will certainly subject you to punishment for disobedience of these instructions, and may also render you liable to prosecution for the assault or an action for damages by the injured person."

39577. Then as to charging prisoners. The officer arresting the prisoner is, of course, bound, on arriving at the station, to charge the prisoner with an offence justifying the arrest?—Yes. That is plainly given in the instructions to the charge sergeant.

39578. Will you give us the reference in the book?—From pages 334 to 338.

39579. What is the name you give to the book in which the charges are entered?—The Charge Book.

39580. Have you the same distinction, as at Leeds, between stations and sub-stations?—As far as booking prisoners, no. Every station where there are cells is a station for booking prisoners, and they are all in the charge of a sergeant as far as booking prisoners is concerned, except what we call the main Bridewell, which is the station for booking charges in the first instance, and also a collecting station for the prisoners for production in court, and at that station there is an officer of superior rank.

39581. But if a constable in any part of Liverpool arrests a person for one of these street offences, the constable takes the prisoner to a station where he can charge him?—To the nearest station where he can charge him, whether it is in his own division or in another division.

39582. He is not bound to take the prisoner to the charge station in his own division?—No, he takes him to the nearest station. In some cases it happens that the nearest station would be over the border in the next division.

39583. What is the distinction between what I may call charging stations and other stations?—Locally, in Liverpool the station where a prisoner can be charged is called a Bridewell, and the others may be called "police stations" or "fire stations," where there are policemen at which no charge is taken, although a prisoner might be taken there as a matter of convenience while the patrol wagon was sent there, or something of that sort, but the charge would be dealt with at what we call the Bridewell.

39584. At any rate, the prisoner has to be brought to a charging station?—Yes, and we have 20 of those stations.

39585. What grade of officer is entrusted in these charging stations with the taking of the charge?—The sergeant at all except the main Bridewell.

39586. You have no officer called a constable clerk at a station?—He is merely in the Superintendent's office; he has nothing to do with dealing with prisoners. The man who deals with persons arrested is what we call the Bridewell sergeant. He holds the rank of sergeant.

39587. And nobody under the rank of a sergeant can take a charge?—No. These instructions to which I have referred are the instructions to what we call the Bridewell sergeants.

39588. Are the members of the general body admitted as a matter of course to the charge room?—No.

39589. What is the practice as to the admission of persons with the prisoner and the arresting constable?—If a person came to the Bridewell and said he had something to say on behalf of the prisoner he had just seen taken in he would be asked to come in and say what it was.

39590. Has he right to be heard? Supposing he said to the sergeant, "I insist, before you take this charge, that you will hear me"?—As long as the Bridewell sergeant is carrying out his instructions properly there would be no need for him to assume that attitude. If he said he had something to say to the sergeant, in the ordinary course he would be asked inside to say what it was. Very often, when there has been a bit of a row in the streets, the station door is surrounded by a hostile crowd, and it is very likely he might have to talk about "insisting" before he came in.

39591. The kind of case I was thinking of was a case where a man was arrested for drunkenness when he had been in the company of a couple of friends, and the two friends followed the constable and the prisoner to the station. Would the two friends have the right to enter the station?—I should take it they would have no right, but certainly, unless there was some very good reason to the contrary, they would be accorded the privilege of coming in.

39592. Then, supposing they said: "We wish to say that this man is not drunk at all, and that the constable has been guilty of an error of judgment, and we should like to tell the sergeant that"?—Where it is a question like that, whether a man is drunk or not, the sergeant is there to see for himself and need not depend on the evidence of anybody else. Of course it is a question of opinion. But if the three people have been drinking together, probably the evidence of the men who followed would not be worth very much.

39593. I think that is very likely to be the case, but I am only trying to see what the rights of the public are in regard to the charge room, and what the rights of the prisoner are with regard to the charge room. Could not the prisoner say: "Sergeant, I have got two friends outside who were with me; I am not drunk, and I think they would tell you so, and I should like them to come in"?—The sergeant would certainly let them come in.

39594. And they would say he was not drunk?—Not always.

39595. You have said that the sergeant would not take much notice of them?—Having heard them, it would be for the sergeant to weigh it as evidence.

39596. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) If the prisoner said it as well as that it would be very good evidence that he was not drunk?—Possibly. All we aim at is to give everybody a fair show.

39597. (Chairman.) What view do you take of the duty of the sergeant when the charge is preferred? Is his duty merely ministerial to see that the constable makes out what, if true, is an offence in law, or does he go further and think of the probabilities of the case?—No, I think it would be hardly safe to put that responsibility on the sergeant. What the sergeant has really to decide on is whether it is necessary or advisable to keep the man in custody. He has not got the ultimate disposal of the case. He has to decide if it is necessary to keep this man in custody for the purpose of making this charge which is now made against him. In the case of a minor offence he has always to consider that. The first thing the sergeant has to consider is, is it necessary for the purpose of making this minor charge to keep this man in custody. If he thinks it is not necessary because he can be brought up on summons that is another matter. He need not inquire into the merits of the case at all. Very often, in the case of a man who is disorderly in the street, he refuses his name, but when he comes to the station he begins to realise his position, and then he gives his name. Then at once the necessity for the arrest and the legality of the arrest ceases. You find that explained to the charge sergeants and the possible reasons they may have for refusing a charge.

39599. You can give us, I daresay, some statistics about the number of charges refused—I mean refused in cases in which the charge was one of those that come within our terms of reference?—I have taken them for two years. In 1905 there were 7,566 persons arrested for drunkenness. Of these 56 or 0.74 per cent. were refused, and of those 13, or 0.17 were refused on the ground that the proceedings might be taken on summons. That would mean that there were 43 in which the drunkenness was disputed and the Bridewell sergeant gave the prisoner the benefit of the doubt. For disorderly conduct there were 3,643 persons arrested; in 154 cases the charge was refused; in 118 cases the charges were refused on the ground that proceedings might be taken on summons. In 1905 we had a good deal of bother between Roman Catholics and Protestants, and arrests were made for the purpose of finding out their names, and as soon as their names were found out they were sent about their business. With regard to prostitution, there were 1,880 cases, and 6 were refused. There were none refused because they could be summoned, but they were all six refused because the evidence was not sufficient. In 1906 there were 7,946 persons arrested for drunkenness, and there were 73 charges refused, or 0.92 per cent. There were 15 refused on the ground that proceedings might be taken on summons. Then disorderly conduct. There were 3,388 charges, and the 167, or 4.93 per cent. were refused; 145 of those were refused because proceedings might be taken on summons. Then prostitution. There were 1,576 arrests and 7 refused charges. One was refused on the ground that proceedings had better be taken on summons.

39600. Now with regard to the cells?—Our cells are old and beastly, as a rule, but I think all I can say of them is that they are the right shape and size.

39601. What arrangements are made for the comfort of the prisoners?—There is a seat on each side broad enough to lie down. The dimensions of the cell allow of three persons lying down at the same time, and we give them pillows and rugs if they ask for them. The cells are warmed and lighted by electricity.

39602. How many prisoners are put in the same cell?—One or three, or more.

39603. Never two?—No, except in the case of women. As far as possible we classify them. We do not put seemingly respectable women with prostitutes, and we put clean people with clean people and not with dirty people, and so on.

39604. What officer is responsible for the cells and keeping the prisoners?—The Bridewell sergeant has the whole responsibility for anything that takes place in his Bridewell.

39605. Is there a warder under him dealing with the cells?—No, but he has the services of the constable who is generally hanging about the station for fire prevention and extinction duties. If he had some disorderly prisoner, and it was not desirable for him to visit the cell alone there is generally a constable about the station.

39606. Is there any matron?—Yes, at every station there is a woman living on the premises to search and visit the female prisoners.

39607. With regard to bail, I presume that the regulations are of the ordinary character?—Yes.

39608. What is the practice of the Bridewell sergeants as to giving bail? What sureties do they ask for?—You will find that on page 350. They are told to measure it so as to make sure that he will turn up—that is to say, he would sooner pay the fine than let his bail be estreated. On the top of page 351 the instruction is to bail every prisoner they possibly can.

39609. Are facilities given for the prisoners' friends being communicated with in some way?—Yes. If the prisoner wants anybody communicated with he has only to say so, and it will be telephoned to the police station nearest to the place where the message is to be delivered.

39610. And the message is delivered, or ought to be delivered, speedily?—Oh, yes.

39611. Do you recollect whether there are any complaints that prisoners have been kept waiting unduly for their sureties?—I have only had one in the last two years, and then, as far as I could make out, there was no justice in it.

39612. Have there been any complaints during your time that sergeants do not give bail readily enough, or that the sureties when they attend at the station are kept waiting?—No, the only complaint I have had on the subject is one from the stipendiary magistrate that the sergeants were admitting people to bail who were outside their powers, and I had rather to restrict it in consequence. Of course the magistrate was quite right. The sergeants assumed that the case would be dealt with by the magistrate, and, of course, their powers only extend to cases which are unconditionally within the magistrate's jurisdiction.

39613. What are the regulations, or what is the practice as to medical attendance?—There is a medical attendant appointed to every Bridewell, who is to be telephoned for whenever he is wanted. When there is a question of a man's sobriety or when the question is whether a man is ill or whether he is drunk the sergeant is told to telephone to the Bridewell surgeon at once.

39614. Is the sergeant bound to send for the police surgeon in any case?—He must use his discretion. He will be liable to blame if he does not send for him, and he will be liable to blame if he sends for him unnecessarily and thus causes expense.

39615. I was thinking of what Major Tarry told us, that if a prisoner sends for his own medical attendant the sergeant is instructed also to send for the police surgeon?—Yes, that is so.

39616. Is that your practice, too?—Yes.

39617. Who pays the police surgeon in that case when the sergeant sends for him?—We very seldom make the prisoner pay for the doctor. We nearly always pay him in the ordinary way whenever he is called to the station.

39618. But in the case I have put the prisoner would not be asked to pay the surgeon?—No. I should think we would reckon he has paid enough when he has paid his own doctor. We have no real difficulty about it. The Magistrate might make an order about it, but that is not the ordinary course.

39619. The Magistrate could hardly make an order on a prisoner to pay for a doctor that he never sent for?—He might, because he might say that the prisoner by sending for his doctor if it was unnecessary had also put the police to unnecessary expense, and he would make him pay for it. It would probably be in lieu of a fine, or he would take it into consideration.

39620. The next topic on which I wish to hear you is about complaints—I mean complaints by members of the public addressed either to the Watch Committee or addressed to you as Head Constable?—Yes.

39621. Supposing a member of the public writes to the Watch Committee complaining that he was assaulted or roughly handled by the police, what course is taken by the Watch Committee?—The Watch Committee only meet once a week, but any letter of complaint addressed to the Watch Committee would be laid before them in due course, and the Town Clerk immediately sends a copy of it to me, and then I should regard it as coming within my duty to inquire into.

39622. If the complaint is made direct to you do you make the inquiry before you say anything to the Watch Committee upon the matter?—The only way in which it comes before the Watch Committee is if I make a recommendation for punishment.

39623. I do not think you quite follow. Supposing a member of the public instead of writing to the Watch Committee writes a letter to you as Head Constable, you use your own discretion in the matter?—Yes.

39624. And you make your inquiry before reporting anything to the Watch Committee?—Certainly.

39625. It is the result of your inquiry that would be in due course communicated to the Watch Committee?—If it resulted in my recommending the man for punishment. If the complaint had been made to the Watch Committee the Watch Committee would like to know what the result was.

39626. If you, so to speak, dismiss the complaint because you think there is nothing in the complaint that has been made against the officer under you, and supposing the member of the public is not satisfied, and says, "I shall go to the Watch Committee," what takes place in such a case as that?—I tried a little while ago to make the Watch Committee take the view that they would sit in appeal on me when I dismiss a charge, just as they sit in appeal on me when I order a constable to be punished.

39627. What is the character of the inquiry that you make in such a case as I am supposing—namely, a complaint by a member of the public?—I should send the thing to the Superintendent of the Division, and it would be his duty to make such inquiry as he thought right personally, or through his Inspector, or even through a sergeant.

39628. Does that mean that he would call for reports from the constables concerned?—No. If the complaint amounted to a definite complaint of some breach of discipline, or of something which could be said to be a breach of discipline by a constable, I should look upon him as being the person charged with the offence. It is put to him as a definite charge: Did you on such and such a date bring discredit upon the police by assaulting the man? If I am going to deal with the matter as a matter of discipline then he has an opportunity of admitting it or of denying it. If he denies it he is brought before me for trial. If he admits it he can come before me to offer his explanation or not, as he likes, or he can put it on paper.

39629. When he is brought before you is the complainant entitled to be heard?—Yes. If a man complains of an assault by a policeman, of course he has the remedy of the law open to him; he can summon the policeman and he can bring an action for damages against the policeman, and that is pointed out to him. Very often the man will say, "No, I would sooner have it dealt with by the Head Constable." Then the matter is dealt with as a matter of discipline. The plaintiff comes before me with his witnesses; he gives his evidence; he examines his witnesses, and he can cross-examine the witnesses who give evidence on the other side. I try to hear the case as far as possible according to the rules of discipline. Of course I cannot swear them, but I have been long enough at the job to be able to get at the truth.

39630. Do you allow the complainant to cross-examine the constable and the constable to cross-examine him, and so on?—Yes.

39631. Putting aside cases of complaint by members of the public, are there circumstances under which you have to make inquiry into the conduct of officers under you?—Anything that comes to my ears suggesting any irregularity whatever of course is a proper subject of inquiry by me.

39632. Do you, as a matter of course, when a charge has been refused by the sergeant, make any inquiries?—Personally I do not, but as a matter of course whenever a charge is refused by the sergeant a copy of the entry in the charge book has to be sent to the Superintendent of the constable who made the arrest.

39633. "Instructions to sergeant" is at page 328. You say that does not necessarily come before you?—No. If the Superintendent is satisfied that it is all right there is nothing for him to report.

39634. But if the Superintendent thinks that the charge was one which not only ought not to have been made, but is one which the constable was at serious fault in making, he might mention it to you?—If he thought the constable had committed a breach of discipline he would frame a charge and bring it before me in the ordinary way as a breach of discipline.

39635. What have you to say as to charges which are dismissed in court?—Every proceeding in court is reported to the Superintendent, and if the Superintendent saw that a charge had been dismissed by the Magistrate, and if he thought there was anything strange about it, it would be his duty to inquire into it as to why it was dismissed, and if there was anything wrong with the action of the police in the matter it would be his duty to bring it to my notice. Of course in every court there is somebody who would report any remarks made by the Magistrates. In the Stipendiary Magistrate's court there is a Chief Inspector in charge of minor prosecutions, and in the other court there is a Sub-Inspector or a sergeant belonging to the Warrant Department.

39636. Do you attach much importance to dealing promptly and tactfully with complaints made of the police?—I attach every importance to it; it is a most important thing to be considered.

Mr. L. Dunning.

27 Mar. 1907.

39637. Then your attitude is that when a complaint is made against a constable by any respectable person in Liverpool you think it your duty to examine into the matter at once as fully as possible, and to give the utmost satisfaction that it is possible to give, consistent with justice to the person who complains?—Yes. I find, especially among the lower orders, very often all they want is an opportunity of making their complaint, and even if they are told it is not believed they have some satisfaction.

39638. I gather you find from that that speedy inquiry into the matters of this sort can clear up misunderstandings not only between the individual policeman and the complainant, but the misunderstandings which may be general in the mind of the public about the conduct of the police?—Yes, and not only about their conduct, but about their powers and duties. A person will very often charge a constable with neglect of duty because he wanted the constable to do something which the constable had no power to do.

39639. In your experience such treatment of these complaints has been entirely satisfactory in Liverpool?—I think so.

39640. I now come to a matter of special difficulty incident to these three classes of cases, and by "special difficulty" I mean some difficulties due either to the character of the offence, or to the law relating to the offence. There are certain difficulties common to all police work involving the arrest of people, and there are also special difficulties with regard to each class of case. I think on page 11 of your proof you make some observations upon that. What have you to say upon that?—Under head 15?

39641. Yes?—Locally speaking, Liverpool has to a certain extent had a law to herself for many years by reason of resolutions of the Licensing Magistrates, and resolutions of the Watch Committee, and I think on the whole public opinion is that the police are doing what they can to stop drunkenness and to keep order. These particular cases are the ones in which special opportunities are given to individual policemen to make mistakes, and considering the class from which the police are mostly recruited I must say personally that I think that the number of mistakes they make is wonderfully small. Mistakes are made, but taking the police force in Liverpool all round, speaking personally, I may say that the mistakes of the police are wonderfully few in number, and wonderfully moderate in effect.

39642. I see you say that in 1887 there were 3,619 women prosecuted for solicitation?—Yes.

39643. In 1906 there were 1,569 women prosecuted?—Yes.

39644. What conclusion do you draw from that very considerable diminution?—I think that is a true index of the state of the streets. No doubt a great difference was made in 1890, when the Licensing Magistrates, in response to a strong expression of public opinion, determined that public-houses should not be the resort of prostitutes. That cleared the public-houses of prostitutes, and incidentally that cleared the streets of them.

39645. Then I may take it that the action of the Liverpool authorities with regard to licensed houses had quite as much effect in clearing the streets of objectionable women as the police action had?—I think so. Of course the Magistrates acted through the police; but, as a matter of fact, as far as the arrest of women in the streets for prostitution was concerned, there was no actual change in the methods of the police.

39646. That is exactly what I was going to call your attention to. The law in 1887, as far as Liverpool was concerned, was the same as the law is now as to solicitation?—Quite.

39647. Has there been any increased activity of the police in clearing the streets between 1887 and 1906 in the sense of some change of method?—Of course the one thing reflects upon the other. Just about that time there was what we call in Liverpool the Purity Crusade, and there is no doubt that the police did become more active in all these matters from that date. The number of arrests for prostitution in, I think, 1885 was the largest number. I think there were then over 4,000 prostitutes arrested; but the number ran to between 3,000 and 4,000 between 1880 and 1890. Then the action about the women in public-houses no doubt caused a diminution of women in that neighbourhood, and consequently the number of women soliciting in the streets. But, as I say, I do not particularly want to go into contentious matters or to state what the method of administering the Licensing Act was.

39648. Thank you. I do not think we need go into that. In your judgment, are there any considerable number of mistakes made by the police in regard to the arrests of prostitutes?—No, I do not think there are. We had a local Cass case some years ago, but there I do not think any real injustice was done. The lady protested much, and she got her damages, but I think they were all pure gain. Of course that may be a prejudiced view to take. The only complaint I personally had was one which I finally disposed of a little time ago. About two years ago a woman's husband came and complained that his wife had been locked up for soliciting. She was not locked up for that; she was locked up for being drunk and disorderly; but it was one of the cases in which difficulties present themselves. This woman was no doubt in the streets for the purpose of soliciting prostitution; the constable had seen her there on previous occasions, but he did not know her to be a common prostitute, and he ought to have warned her. She hung about the streets, and he could not get rid of her, and finally he arrested her for being drunk and disorderly, but she was not drunk, and therefore the charge was dismissed as her conduct was not such that it could be dealt with as "disorderly conduct." Her husband made her see a doctor, and so on, and I made the constable pay for it. I thought he had done the best he could under the difficulties which presented themselves, but I made him pay some £2 or £3 for it. A couple of weeks ago the lady came to me and said that her husband had deserted her, that she was getting a summons against him for maintenance, and that he threatened that he would bring up this occurrence reflecting upon her character, and she said that he got the whole of the money which was paid for the doctor. I said, "How is that?" She said he arranged for one of those half-crown men, and then he sent in a bill for £2 10s., and they shared the money. I merely mention that as illustrating the difficulties the police have. I told the lady, "Yes, we will prove the circumstances, and if you ask me to come I will come and I will tell the Magistrate I am certainly convinced that you were in the streets for the purposes of soliciting prostitution," and then she admitted that she was.

39649. Do you find that there is any difference of opinion between the police and the Magistrates at Liverpool in reference to this matter of solicitation?—No, none whatever.

39650. What Courts have you there? You have a Stipendiary Magistrate?—Yes, but he does not deal with those cases. By arrangement, the Coroner has a Court of his own, and he deals with all cases of simple drunkenness, drunk and disorderly, and solicitation and prostitution.

39651. He is a kind of Deputy Stipendiary?—He is a kind of Deputy Stipendiary.

39652. What line does he take in regard to the evidence for making out a primâ facie case? Does he require the evidence of any person annoyed, for instance, in addition to the police evidence?—No. I may say such evidence is non-existent entirely. I think I only remember since I have been in Liverpool one case where a man would come forward and give evidence that he was solicited.

93653. What evidence is given as to the character of the woman? What evidence satisfies the Magistrate that the woman comes within the category of a prostitute or night walker?—Generally it is the evidence of the constable who made the arrest.

39654. But what does the constable say?—That he knows her to be a common prostitute.

39655. Does he use those words: "I know the defendant to be a common prostitute"?—Yes.

39656. Or "I know her as a common prostitute," I suppose?—Yes.

39657. Is that all he says?—Yes.

39658. All the evidence is on that point?—Yes.

39659. What evidence does the Magistrate require as to soliciting?—The constable says he has seen her in the streets on previous occasions, and he saw her before she was arrested accost one, two, or three or more men, as the case may be.

39660. Have any causes of complaint by women of their being molested by men come under your notice?—Yes.

39661. Do you think there is required any amendment of the law?—No, I think the difficulty is entirely one of evidence.

39662. How do you proceed in a case in which a woman came to the police station and complained that a man, giving his name and address, had been molesting her in the street?—She could summon him for using insulting behaviour.

39663. You would then tell her that she could obtain a summons from the Magistrate?—Yes.

39664. But supposing a woman comes up to a constable in the street and says the same thing and points out "That is the man who insulted me"?—It would be the duty of the constable first of all to ask the woman, "Will you come to Court to prove it?" If she says "Yes," it would be his duty to ask the man for his name and address. If he refuses it he could arrest him.

39665. Under the statutory provision would such an arrest be made?—That would be for being guilty of using insulting words or behaviour with intent or whereby a breach of the peace might be occasioned. I have known cases of women being molested in that way, and it has led to a breach of the peace, and under our general powers of arrest under the Improvement Act the constable would arrest the man.

39666. With regard to disorder not accompanied by drunkenness, are you satisfied with the existing state of the law?—I do not quite understand the question.

39667. Are the powers given to the police by the existing law adequate for dealing with cases of disorderly conduct in which there is no drunkenness?—Yes, I think the police powers are adequate, but I do not think the power of the Magistrate is adequate.

39668. What do you mean by that? Do you mean that the Magistrate cannot give a heavy enough sentence?—Yes. I think the Magistrate should have power to imprison without the option of a fine.

39669. With regard to allegations of blackmailing by the police or bribery of the police by prostitutes and street bookmakers, what is your experience in Liverpool?—I put it in this way: I have never had one case of blackmailing of a woman to which I could attach any weight whatever. I have never had one where the blackmailing of the bookmaker was alleged that I could prove. It is some time since I have had one now where a publican was concerned.

39670. Then during the 12 years you have been connected with Liverpool there has been only one case where a bookmaker was concerned?—No, I do not say that. I say there has not been one that I could bring home to a man. Yesterday I had to deal with two plain-clothes officers for neglect of duty in not arresting two bookmakers. I was told that they had been got at.

39671. Do you think there is any real ground for the suspicion that bribery of the police by bookmakers is widespread in Liverpool?—No, I do not think so, because if it was we should not have as many convictions as we have.

39672. But you think in some cases it does take place?—As I say, these allegations give one an uncomfortable feeling, knowing the temptation to which the police are open, but I have never been able to prove one.

39673. With regard to the duties of constables in Court, what are your arrangements in Liverpool? Is there a Superintendent or an officer in attendance at the police court watching the conduct of police-constables?—In the Stipendiary Court there is an Inspector, who conducts minor prosecutions, which are not conducted by my solicitor. It is his duty to report anything that reflects on the conduct of the police.

39674. Does the Stipendiary Magistrate at Liverpool allow the intervention of a Chief Inspector?—He does.

39675. He allows him to call the constable, and to examine the constable?—Yes. We recognise that we have no right to do it, but it is convenient, and the solicitors who attend the court all fall in with it. An important case, or a case that is going to be returned for trial, is conducted by the prosecuting solicitor.

39676. Have you any general observations to make upon that topic that I have been asking you about? I am speaking of the difficulties. I began this branch of my examination by asking you about special difficulties. Are there any general observations you would wish to make?—I think a great deal of the difficulties of the police are difficulties which attach to any duties of the police where an individual policeman has to exercise some discretionary power; and I think you must take into consideration not only those difficulties, but the class of men from whom the police force is recruited; they have the virtues of that class, and they also have their failings. A policeman perhaps has only seen two or three months' service; he has left the plough, he is a decent countryman, and he gets into a tight place, and although sometimes a case will take a judge, and eminent counsel, and a jury a week to try, still he has to decide it all of a sudden, and I think the public do not consider the thousands of cases the police have to deal with that go through properly and successfully, but they jump on one where an unfortunate constable has made a mistake. As regards the public, the rich man is too apt to regard policemen as appointed in his interest. There is no doubt about that. Their complaint about the police is generally of neglect of duty when they think they are overlooked. The poor, on the other hand, look at it in very much the same way as the rich, and are apt to look upon them as their enemies, and there is misunderstanding caused, and therefore their complaints, as a rule, are of tyranny, oppression, and possibly over-roughness, and so on. I have been in the police force now for 24 years, and my impression is that the police come through the difficulties which surround them with wonderful credit to themselves. Those sort of difficulties are accentuated locally very often. I am glad to say that although we have an extraordinary population at Liverpool, a very cosmopolitan population, and a varying population, taking it all round the police are on very good terms with the public, and I ascribe that to a great extent to what I call the outside duties of the police, which bring them into contact with the poor, and especially with the children. You asked me with regard to the difficulties about the police coming to give evidence. We constantly have instances in which people come to the station and volunteer to give evidence where they have noticed a bother between the police and the public, and they not only volunteer to give evidence, but they help. Many a man gets his head cracked in Liverpool through helping the police, and I think a little well considered liberality in the shape of a reward has a good effect; if a man knows he will get 7s. 6d. or 10s. 6d. he will help the police, even if he loses a day's work in going to the court to prove it.

39677. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not think you told us how many police you have in your force?—1,971, divided into seven divisions.

39678. How many stations are there?—There are 20 stations where prisoners are booked.

39679. Twenty charging stations?—Yes.

39680. Are there more police stations, or does that mean that there are 20 police stations?—There are a few more odds and ends, fire stations, and so on. There are altogether about seven or eight more stations, but there are 20 stations where charges are taken.

39681. You said something at the outset of your answers to the learned Chairman about prevention of crime being the first duty of the police force?—Yes.

39682. Is there any instruction in your book to that effect?—Yes.

39683. Will you call my attention to it?—I will look it up for you later.

39684. Very well. You can let me have it at any time. There is an instruction. You are clear about that?—Yes. It is at page 6.

(Chairman.) It is also mentioned at page 68.

39685. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) "From a very early period of the history of this country a system of police has existed in some shape or other. This is no place for a history of all the stages through which it has passed, but it has from the very first been to a great extent based upon the principle that the preservation of the King's peace is one of the duties of citizenship; and though in early days the punishment of the offender by death or maiming was perhaps thought to be the best way of preventing his offending again, there can be no doubt that the idea of prevention rather than detection was early recognised as the true aim of a police system." You lay stress upon that?—Yes, I always lay stress upon that.

Mr. L. Dunning.

39686. The result of the system under which you work your police force at Liverpool, as I follow you, is that you have got, according to your view, a very good feeling between the police and the inhabitants?—I think so, taking them all round.

39687. I think I understood you to say that the police had the public at their back in dealing, for example, with licensing offences?—Yes, I think they have. As you know, there are interests in the opposite direction.

39688. And also, I suppose, just in the same way you have the city supporting you in dealing with the offence of solicitation?—Yes.

39689. I do not know whether you can tell me conveniently now the number of charges of drunkenness at Liverpool last year compared with, say, five years ago?—I have them here for 20 years. You mean apprehensions for drunkenness?

39690. Yes?—I have here two sets of figures, "Drunk when apprehended," and "Proceeded against for drunkenness." Which will you have?

39691. "Proceeded against for drunkenness"?—In 1887 there were 15,230, and five years later, in 1892, it dropped to 9,005; five years later, in 1897, it dropped to 5,105; five years later, in 1902, it was 5,115; and in 1906 it was up to 8,078. I do not know whether you have a copy of this report, but it is at page 67, table 20.

39693. Those figures do not suggest to you the fact that there is more drunkenness in Liverpool, but rather that the police have been more vigilant owing to the better powers they have of charging people with drunkenness?—I have no doubt the action of the police has been stimulated by public opinion continually. I do not regard prosecutions for drunkenness as a true index of less intemperance, but I am certainly of opinion that there is less drunkenness as an offence against the law.

39694. The new Act would account, as you have told us, for the increase from 1902 to 1903?—Yes.

39695. If you look at the figures, you will see there is an increase of about 500 in the numbers between 1903 and 1906?—I think there is no doubt whatever that public opinion is in favour of an improving standard of public decorum in the streets, such as is adopted in the United States, where a man, when he shows the least signs of drink, is regarded as drunk. Without any legal sanction for it there is a generally recognised halfway house between sobriety and drunkenness—"Under the influence of drink"—which, I think, is a mistake.

39696. Have you any special instructions in your book as to the duties of a constable when asked to report to you—I mean to make a report in writing when some complaint has been made or some question has arisen which necessitates your calling for reports, which does happen, I suppose?—In an ordinary way the constable only reports verbally, but he may be, on occasions, told to put his report in writing. The ordinary system is this: the sergeant is the man who initiates the correspondence by putting the report in writing, but the constable is bound to put any detail that comes under his notice in his memorandum book, which is our property, and he cannot deface it.

39697. According to that, it would be rare for a constable in your force to make a report in writing?—Except of something that personally concerns himself. Very often I do call for reports from constables, but very often they make them themselves; they prefer to do so.

39698. Are there any instructions with regard to it?—No. I think you will find that the constable is directed to report verbally to his sergeant. That is the system. The sergeant initiates the correspondence.

39699. Now, will you tell me about solicitation? Is there any instruction as to giving warning?—Yes, there is. I think you will find it under "Beat Duty," and also under "Prostitutes."

39701. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) "Directly you see a woman on your beat acting as if she was there for the purpose of soliciting prostitution, watch her, and if you see her do anything to confirm your suspicion, caution her, if possible in the presence of a comrade, if necessary take her name"?—Since then I have modified that by instructing the men that, of course, they must not do that in the hearing of any other person.

39702. You mean the warning?—Yes.

39703. You can arrest her if she does not go away when cautioned?—That is to say, when the evidence of the offence is complete.

39704. Apparently there is a caution given first?—Yes.

39705. First the constable has to satisfy himself that she is a prostitute, then he cautions her, and then, if she commits an offence after that, he arrests her?—Yes. Very often that gives her another chance. You can easily understand how careful you must be in making these charges. If one is made against a respectable woman, it may do her very great injury. Somewhere else in the Instructions you will find it is said that it is better that 99 prostitutes should get off than that one respectable woman should be arrested.

39706. Are you responsible for this book?—I am, I am sorry to say.

39707. Do not say, "I am sorry to say." If I may be allowed to say so, I think it is most excellent, as far as I have been able to follow it. I think the instructions are given in such a manner as must inform a policeman exceedingly well what he has to do and what he ought to do?—That is the aim of the book.

39708. That is what it appears to do.

(Chairman.) I think so too.

39709. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You have told us about the Liverpool Improvement Act, and about the words of that Act which I have not got, but under that Act, in dealing with the offence analogous to solicitation, in order to make the offence complete it must be to the annoyance of the public, must it not?—Of course, and that is the same as a good many sub-sections of that Act. I must say that the Magistrate assumes the annoyance in very many cases. For instance, in the by-law about street cries there has been put in "Shouting to the annoyance of the inhabitants." When that by-law was passed by the City Council—I think in the year 1887—there was a suggestion that this by-law would be unduly enforced, and therefore the chairman of the Watch Committee was asked to give an undertaking that no prosecution should be made under that by-law unless some person would come to the Court and say he was annoyed by the cries. There are people who would really never think of kicking up a row, and therefore it was left to the Magistrate to assume the annoyance. Generally a constable would be able to say he had received a complaint. So in the same way I think if there were a prosecution under that section the Magistrate would assume the annoyance to passers-by, and they do now assume that a conversation which took place between the woman and the man, as alleged by the constable, is solicitation of prostitution.

39710. Have you ever been called upon to prove by calling a person annoyed that the offence had been committed?—Yes. Sometimes the Magistrate has refused to convict under the section of the local Act, and has said: "We have no proof that anybody was annoyed; do not do it again."

39711. I was refeiring to prostitution more particularly?—All our prosecutions are taken under the Vagrant Act.

39712. You have given us some figures which come under, I think, Clause 8?—About the refused charges?

39713. Yes. Take, for example, two years, and take, for instance, prostitution—there were 1,880 arrests for prostitution, including the refused charges, in 1905?—Yes.

39714. Can you tell us in how many of those cases the accused person denied the offence?—No, I could not. I could tell you the number that was not followed by a conviction.

39715. Perhaps you can tell me that. Shall we find that in the report?—In 1905 you asked me.

39716. 1906 will do just as well?—I can give you both. In 1905 there were 1,874 women charged with prostitution, and of those 1,553 were convicted, and 321 were discharged—that is to say, in those cases the Magistrate was willing to give them another chance.

39717. I do not know how you can quite say that?—I mean if the charge is not a properly made one it is sure to come to my ears.

39718. You mean that with regard to the 321 acquittals, no complaint was made to you?—No complaint was made to me. The Magistrate tried to deal evenly and mercifully.

39719. It does not at all follow that because a Magistrate acquits them that therefore the policeman has been wrong in arresting?—You do not think so, but a great many people do.

39720. But out of 321 there was no complaint of any kind made to you of any wrongful arrest?—No.

39721. I presume when you say no complaint you mean not only by the Magistrate——?—Nor by the prisoner nor anybody.

39722. The person charged?—Quite so.

39723. Nor by a relative?—No, I have had no complaint.

39724. Can you tell me the numbers in 1906?—They will be found at page 45. There were 1,569 arrests and 1,250 convictions. In 317 cases the prisoner was discharged—practically the same number as the year before. Only one of these cases was dismissed on the merits. The rest were all disposed of under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, s. 16 (1) or (2).

39725. As you have got the figures for 1906 there will you give me the figures with regard to drunkenness and disorderly conduct?—I cannot give you the disorderly conduct, because those are all mixed up with proceedings under the local Act.

39726. Can you give me the drunkenness?—Yes.

39727. (Chairman.) "Drunkenness simple" and "drunkenness with aggravations." That is at page 44 of this report?—I specially alluded in my evidence to the small number of dismissals on the charge of drunkenness.

39728. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) According to that you deal with the two together, do you not—"Drunkenness simple" and "Drunkenness with aggravations"?—Yes. There were 9,017 charges of drunkenness and 8,846 convictions.

39729. (Chairman.) Does drunkenness and disorder come under the head of "Drunkenness and aggravations"? What do you mean by "Drunkenness simple" in this table?—That is merely "Found drunk." That is an offence against the 1872 Act.

39730. Then "Drunkenness with disorder" would come under the head of "Drunkenness, with aggravations"?—That is the number we had. There were 9,017 charges of drunkenness, with 8,846 convictions.

39731. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In the proportion of two males to one female?—Yes.

39732. Now about the inquiry. Supposing a complaint is made of the conduct of one of the constables in your Force either to your Watch Committee or to you direct, under the circumstances you have told us, do you at once have to hold an inquiry, or what do you do?—I immediately refer the thing to the Superintendent of the Division for inquiry, and he gets into personal communication with the person who makes the complaint. Sometimes a person will come to my office and make a complaint, and in that case he would be brought straight in to me if I am available, or to one of my assistants, or to one of my chief clerks. I try to see everybody who comes to my office and who asks to see me, but of course I cannot see a great number. Having taken the details the matter would be referred to the Superintendent of the Division for inquiry, and if he thought the constable had done wrong he would then regard himself in the position of prosecuting the constable before me for the offence. He would make inquiries.

39733. He makes an inquiry first of all to see whether there is sufficient ground for the charge or complaint to bring it before you?—Yes, and he gets all the evidence he can to lay before me, and if he thinks there is a charge he charges the constable so as to give the constable a fair trial.

39734. Suppose a person complains and the Superintendent makes his examination and comes to the conclusion that there is no ground for the complaint, and then the person complains to you?—In that case I should order the man to appear before me.

39735. Then you would see him personally?—Yes. If he was not satisfied with the inquiry which had been made by the Superintendent, I should then direct that the constable should be charged and brought before me, because it is only fair that he should know what is alleged against him and to give him a fair trial the same as I give the other man a fair trial.

39736. In such a case as that I think you have told us you allow the matter to be conducted as if you really are, as you really are, in an impartial position?—Yes, I try to hold the scales of justice evenly between the police and the public.

39737. Can you give me any idea during the last three years how many inquiries have been held by you?—I may say my recommendations for punishment to the Watch Committee run to possibly between 75 and 80 a year. Of course there are many punishments, such as stopping a day's leave of a man or something of that sort. Where there is a complaint by the general public there would not be anything like that number, but comparatively few. I have a list here of actions which have been brought against the police within the last five years, and there is a list of actions which I have settled, dealing with them in a disciplinary manner.

39738. I should not attribute so much importance to those because an action may be brought against a policeman, and it may succeed because he has made some mistake in the law?—Here is one where the Watch Committee made a mistake in the law, and it cost them £133.

39739. Those actions do not seem to me to throw much light on the subject matter of my inquiry to you. What I want to know is about complaints made against the police about some misconduct and inquiries made by you into them?—I should not like to pin myself down here because there have been very few. Last year I do not think I had more than three or four cases in which civilians appeared before me to make a complaint.

39740. Not more than that?—No.

39741. What are the other cases—the 70 or 80?—Those are cases of ordinary offences against discipline.

39742. Which were reported to you by the Superintendent?—Yes.

39743. And then you reported it to the Watch Committee for punishment?—Yes.

39744. Then the policeman has the right to appeal to the Watch Committee?—Yes, but he hardly ever appeals except against an order for dismissal or reduction of rank.

39745. Now about street bookmakers, and the allegations or rumours of bribery. Do I understand that you have never been able to bring it home to any policeman that he has been bribed?—No.

39746. But, as you told us very fairly and frankly, you cannot help thinking something of the kind does go on among a few?—I am afraid so.

39747. The temptations, of course, are very great?—Of course they are. Betting, I am sorry to say, is rather prevalent among the police, and they must bet with somebody, and at some time or other they may come across the man they bet with in the course of their duty.

Mr. L. Dunning.

27 Mar. 1907.

39748. Have you had complaints of that kind made to you?—We get a good many letters complaining. For instance, the other day there was one, and indirectly I was told that a certain bookmaker did not bribe so and so, mentioning the detective who had executed a warrant, and I am perfectly certain he did not, because the detective officer came into my office as a boy; and I have implicit confidence in him.

39749. Do you think the new Act will have any effect upon the bribery of the police to however limited an extent it is carried on?—No, I do not think it will. It cuts two ways. Where it is a question of arrest it rather aggravates the matter. It is easier to get at a constable for neglect of duty in not arresting a bookmaker than it is to get at him for neglect of duty in failing to get evidence on which he could be summoned. In the same way if the bookmaker has any allegation to make about bribery, that he is giving the constable money, then he is much more likely to blurt it out if he is arrested than if he gets a summons. To tell you the truth, I do not think it is carried on to any extent, and therefore it is not a matter which causes me any anxiety.

39750. Do you employ men in plain clothes?—Yes, very considerably. Nearly all the arrests of common prostitutes are effected by men in plain clothes.

39751. And street bookmakers?—Yes.

39752. Are they usually the same men?—The Superintendent or the sergeant has to recommend men for plain clothes duty, and I have to be satisfied that they are good policemen, and they take uniform duty, and it generally runs for two years. The men employed in the supervision of public-houses do the duty for a month.

39753. As I understand you, those who are specially told off for this duty in accordance with the instructions or power which the Superintendent or the sergeant has received from you perform this duty for a period not exceeding two years?—That is about it. Sometimes the period may be shortly extended; a man may be promoted, or as a matter of punishment I might make him revert to uniform duty before his time was up, but that is the special limit.

39754. Is there any special reason for the choosing of particular men?—You pick the man whom you think is best; first of all he must be absolutely reliable because, being in plain clothes, he must use greater discretion in the execution of his duty.

39755. Do you find that it is a duty that is popular amongst the police?—It is, no doubt.

39756. They rather like it?—Yes. To begin with they all like to get out of uniform.

39757. And they all like to be away from supervision for a few hours?—No, I do not think it is that. They are selected for something better than the ordinary duty. You may put it in that way.

39758. And there is more variety?—Yes, there is some fun to be got out of it.

39759. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do they get more wages?—They only get a plain-clothes allowance, which little more than compensates them for the wear and tear of their own clothes.

39760. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Have you any system in Liverpool when the plain-clothes men have been out looking for street bookmakers by which when they return they give any account of themselves?—Yes, they report what they have done to the Superintendent.

39761. Suppose they have made no arrest. First of all, will you tell me how long do they go out for?—They work under the Superintendent entirely; sometimes the plain-clothes men whose principal duties are the suppression of brothels, prostitution, betting, and attending to small complaints like noises, and so on, have to be out watching brothels for six or eight hours.

39762. I was thinking only for the moment of street bookmakers?—In the ordinary course I do not suppose they would be out for more than three or four hours at a time.

39763. What I was anxious to find out was whether, under your system, when they return from this duty, having been out we will say four hours, and having failed to arrest any man or to take a man's name and address to summon him, they give any account of what they have done during those four hours?—Yes, there is a book kept in which they report what they have done while they have been out on duty called Plain Clothes Officers' Memorandum Book, and they say what they have been doing during that time, and what places they have visited, and anything that they have done.

39764. Do you find that a useful salutary check on them?—Yes, every man, whatever his rank is, has to carry a memorandum book, which is not only for putting in memoranda of anything about which he may have to give evidence, but also a diary. As I have pointed out, "It is to your own advantage to point to an entry in an official document to show where you were at a particular time."

39765. It shows what they have been doing, and it shows that they went to a certain part of the town and waited there for an hour observing, and all that sort of thing?—Yes.

39766. How many plain-clothes men are there in the division now altogether?—It varies according to the division. I think one Superintendent is allowed to have eight; it runs down from eight to four; that is apart from the constables and sergeants in each division who attend to licensed premises.

39767. Do you find at all that complaints or objections are made as to the evidence given by constables in your force?—No, I think, taking them all round, they give their evidence very fairly. Of course you cannot get away from the fact that the policeman has his side of the story, and thinks that he has to do his best to get that side to win; but I think, taking it all round (I know Judges of Assize say how fairly the Liverpool policeman gives his evidence), if he can say anything for the prisoner he will do so.

39768. Supposing that you found that a policeman had given evidence which was exaggerated for the purpose of obtaining a conviction, what would you do?—If I found it out I would dismiss him, and if I found that he had committed perjury I would prosecute him.

39769. If he had exaggerated his evidence for the purpose of obtaining a conviction, would you not look upon that as a very serious offence?—Certainly. I should recommend his dismissal. I should have no hesitation whatever about that.

39770. Do you give any instructions about evidence?—Yes, you will find it on page 177. It begins at page 176.

39771. I notice that you give a very useful warning; you say, "You must tell the court exactly what happened, keep back nothing, whether it is in favour of one side or the other, and do not add or exaggerate anything. The object for which you give evidence is the furtherance of justice—justice to the prisoner just as much as justice upon him"?—Yes. That is what we try to impress upon him.

39772. If I may so it is a very good way of inculcating the lesson?—If I found that an officer was guilty of exaggeration I should deal with him as being guilty of falsehood or prevarication before any court or inquiry. That is an offence of discipline. The instructions on page 24 are mostly taken, I may say, from the regulations of the Royal Irish Constabulary. I have added one or two. I say on page 177: "It is of course only human nature that you should to some extent look on the prosecution as your side of the case, but it is to be hoped that you will not be influenced by this, and should you try to keep back a single word of your evidence or that of others, which might in the slightest degree assist the prisoner, you may expect the severest punishment. Finally, you must remember that any display of ill-will or of desire to press a charge seriously affects your credibility as a witness."

39773. (Mr. Dickinson.) In connection with this number of prostitutes, 1,569, which you give in this table, can you tell me at all how many separate individuals were prosecuted?—No, I am afraid I cannot.

39774. You did that in the case of drunkenness?—Yes, and I have explained why that is. That is because of the return to the Home Office called for last year. I am not anxious to multiply tables. That is a new table created by the Home Office last year. There are two classes of prostitutes. There are the prostitutes you may compare to the Regent Street prostitute, whom we have about Lime Street Central Station, and so on, and then there is the regular Sailors' Home prostitute. Of course, a Sailors' Home prostitute comes up as soon as she is out of gaol, and it is only a few weeks before she is in again, whereas the Lime Street prostitute compared with the Regent Street prostitute comes up at longer intervals. It is very hard to say how many individuals that number represents. Of course, it is not anything like that number.

39775. I suppose the sailors' prostitute carries on her calling in the streets, whereas the others may not?—Yes. You may compare the one with the prostitute you see in Ratcliff Highway, and you can compare the other with the one you see in Regent Street.

39776. You cannot give me an idea as to how often they are brought up?—No, I should not like to give you a figure there, because it might be altogether wrong. I could get you that.

39777. I suppose all these persons have been prostitutes who have been known to the police—practically all of them?—That is the reason of their being so convicted.

39778. What do you take to be the meaning of the phrase "Known to the police"? Do you have a list of them?—No.

39779. Then they must be known merely to the individual police?—Known to the individual. There was a case that was before the Licensing Committee a few weeks ago, where a house was objected to on the ground that it was frequented by prostitutes of what you may call the better class. I heard the evidence, and I was struck by the fact that the policeman who gave evidence knew the names of about nine out of every ten of the 50 or 60 women who were frequenting that house. He knew the names of 45.

39780. That was one of your plain clothes men?—That was one of my plain clothes men.

39781. That man is restricted to a division, I understand?—Yes.

39782. In the course of time, if he is there two years, has he sufficient means of obtaining the identity of these women?—He may have known the names of a good many of them while he was in uniform in the same division. Very often a man will get to know the name of a prostitute when he is prosecuting a prostitute—he sees another prostitute prosecuted and so gets to know her name.

39783. I see your figures show a diminution in the number of prosecutions?—Yes.

39784. Does that mean a diminution in the activity of the police or a diminution in the number of prosecutions in Liverpool?—It means an improvement in the streets. There is no doubt the activity of the police has caused greater care to be taken on the part both of brothel keepers and of prostitutes in pursuing their calling. There are so many more sly ways of doing it.

39785. Do the police carry on their work both with regard to brothels and prostitutes in the streets at the same time?—Take our Regent Street; of course, there are not many brothels in that particular neighbourhood. At one time we had a restricted area in which brothels were recognised; so long as they did not have any young girls or murder anybody, in certain streets they were left alone. Now we prosecute a man for keeping a brothel whenever we can get evidence, and as we prosecute them they get further and further out, and any respectable working man is liable to recognise some day that he has a brothel next door to him.

39786. You do not have certain times at intervals at which you make raids?—No, directly a constable or any policeman has a suspicion that a house is being used as a brothel it is his duty to report, and then it is put under observation.

39787. The Watch Committee have the power over the whole of Liverpool to order a prosecution?—I order the prosecutions. I am the public prosecutor. The Watch Committee never interfere with me on the question of prosecutions.

39788. The Borough Council can prosecute?—That is for disorderly houses. We prosecute under the Criminal Law Amendment Act.

39789. I see with regard to inquiries into behaviour on the part of the police you also have a senior officer who attends the Police Court?—In the Stipendiary Magistrate's Court there is the chief officer who conducts the minor prosecutions, but there is an Inspector, a Sub-inspector, and many sergeants and constables, who do what we call Court duty. Each of those has a Court book in which he is bound to enter any remark made by the Magistrate or anything which reflects favourably or unfavourably on the conduct of the police. That book is brought to me when any such remarks appear in it.

39790. That, then, is the view of a subordinate. The opinion that a constable has given his evidence improperly is the opinion of a subordinate before it comes to you?—Yes. He is one of my subordinates certainly.

39791. Is he a man in a high position?—No. It would be a waste of time to have a Superintendent always hanging about the Court merely looking about for things of that sort. I am quite satisfied with the means I have of those things coming to my knowledge.

39792. They come to your knowledge through the channel of an officer who is concerned in that particular division?—No. The Court has nothing to do with divisions. We only have one Court. Those men are generally staff duty men. They are not concerned with any particular division. Their duty is in Court.

39793. They cannot by any means be concerned in a case?—No.

39794. And for that reason you are certain of getting a bona-fide opinion as regards the behaviour of the police?—I think so, because those men are selected for that particular duty because we think they are reliable men who will do the duty rightly. I have to, and I hope I may, trust my subordinates to perform the duties which are imposed upon them.

39795. I do not know whether you have been asked about what steps are taken by the police to get other witnesses of an occurrence?—In the ordinary course a constable would look round for a witness, especially where the evidence of the police is disputed. Naturally it would be our duty to try and strengthen our evidence. Very often a witness will come voluntarily to the station and say he is prepared to give evidence.

39796. On the spot the policeman is supposed to try and get that evidence?—As a rule, but it would be regarded as a waste of time.

39797. I notice in your statement at page 15 you refer to the question of tipping policemen. I should like to know what your opinion about that question is?—It is a very difficult question. I should like to see a more healthy public spirit on the question. In Ireland a constable of the Royal Irish Constabulary never under any circumstances takes tips; a constable of the Royal Irish Constabulary would regard it as an insult.

39798. Have you any rule upon that question?—No man is allowed to accept anything without the permission of the Watch Committee. They never refuse to allow him to accept a present to him, but we encourage them to report it.

39799. Do you find that testimonials are given to policemen when they retire?—No.

39800. I do not mean testimonials from the Force, but testimonials from publicans?—There is very little of that sort of thing done between publicans and the police.

39801. You do not think there are any means of preventing it?—I should like to see it made an offence against the law, but that is not likely, I know. I should like to see a more healthy attitude towards the police. A rich man regards a policeman as appointed in his interest, and he thinks the right way to reward him is to give him a shilling or half a crown. It is a most objectionable practice, to my mind.

39802. You really think it is an evil?—I do. Some time ago a man said to me, "I gave a policeman 2s. 6d." I said, "What would you think of yourself coming and offering to give me £5." He said, "I should not do it." I said, "Then why do you want to give it to him? I am a policeman. If you would not come and offer me £5, why should you go and offer him a tip of 2s. 6d. or 5s?"

39803. I see you have a table at page 71 with reference to the number of Informations laid by the police, and as regards prostitution there were 177 informations laid?—Those would be cases in which we were not sufficiently sure of the case to make an arrest. Supposing a constable reports that he has seen a woman who is alleged to be so and so, and he believes her to be a common prostitute, he would make inquiries, and if he got evidence that she was a common prostitute then instead of arresting her he would summon her. Of course, you see, that occurs very seldom.

(Chairman.) We are much obliged to you for your evidence.

FORTY-SECOND DAY.

Wednesday, 10th April 1907.

J. F. WALEY, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Assistant-Secretary).

Mr. JAMES VERDIER STEVENSON, sworn.

Mr. J. V. Stevenson.

10 April 1907.

39804. (Chairman.) Are you the Chief Constable of Glasgow?—Yes.

39805. How long have you held that office?—Five years.

39806. Would you prefer to read the statement that you have sent to us, or would you prefer that I should ask you questions?—I should prefer that you asked me questions, because there are many points that you will have to elucidate with regard to Scotch procedure.

39807. I think I will begin by asking you to tell us something about the general organisation of the police force in your city. How is the city of Glasgow, for instance, divided?—There are nine police districts, each under the charge of a Divisional Superintendent, and in each division there is a police court and a police office where charges are received, that is nine divisional offices, and there are also six sub-offices where charges are received.

39808. The offices are what we call stations, I presume?—Yes.

39809. Then there are nine chief offices or stations at which charges are received, and six sub-offices?—Yes.

39810. Is there a Superintendent for each division?—There is a Superintendent in charge of each division.

39811. What are the subordinate offices in each division?—Next to the Superintendent comes the Lieutenant. There are in the larger divisions three Lieutenants, and in the smaller divisions two Lieutenants. Next to the Lieutenants there are the Inspectors, then sergeants, then constables. I should explain with regard to the Lieutenants that their ordinary duties are entirely office duties. There is always a Lieutenant in charge of the charge room or station. That is, there are three in the large divisions, and they take the 24 hours between them. The Lieutenant in the charge room is assisted by an officer called the bar officer or the court officer, and by one or more turnkeys, according to the size of the station.

39812. I understand, then, that the Lieutenant does not go and do any of the ordinary police duties of patrolling the streets, or anything of that kind?—No, unless specially ordered to do so.

39813. (Mr. Whitmore.) Is he promoted from the ranks?—Yes, all save the Chief Constable have been promoted from the ranks.

39814. (Chairman.) What are the duties of the Inspectors?—The Inspectors do the outdoor duty, supervision of the constables, and each is responsible for the well-being of his own division.

39815. And the sergeants?—The sergeants, acting under the Inspectors, have the supervision over the section of a number of constables varying from 10 to 14.

39816. Can you give me the total number of constables?—The total number of all ranks is 1,563. I can give you the total number of constables approximately, but I did not take out the exact figures of all ranks.

39817. Perhaps you will be good enough to send us a list of all the officers, distinguishing between the different grades, and give us the number of each grade?—Yes.

39818. Then you have a Detective Department as well?—Yes, we have a Detective Department. In all there are 70 members of the Detective Department. There is a Superintendent in general charge, a Lieutenant, seven Inspectors, 32 Detective officers—that is a special rank next to the Inspector. There are five detective sergeants and 24 detective constables.

39819. Do any of these officers of the Detective Department have anything to do with the offences which are mentioned in our terms of reference—that is to say, cases of drunkenness and disorder in the streets, and cases of solicitation in the streets?—Not generally. It would be special.

39820. How about street bookmaking?—No; their work lies with what we call in Scotland crimes such as theft, housebreaking, offences against the person, and offences against property.

39821. You draw a distinction between criminal offences and police offences, as I gather from your answer?—Yes.

39822. And unless specially ordered the Detective Department has nothing to do with the police offences?—No.

39824. Yes, I think you had better read it?—My order with regard to promotion is?—"Each Superintendent will furnish on the last day of each quarter, commencing on 31st inst., a list in form attached of men in the various ranks eligible for promotion, beginning with the rank of Inspector, and arranging the names of the men in what he deems to be the order of merit, taking into consideration literate and other qualifications. Due regard will be had to length of service and respectability of conduct, but more than this is required in men aspiring to the higher rank, and preference must always be given to men who with good conduct have shown superior intelligence and zeal in the discharge of their duty. Superintendents may bring under notice the claims of men whose cases call for special consideration, whether previously on their promotion lists or not."

39825. I do not think we need go into the requirements for the higher ranks. I notice that you say that preference must always be given to men who with good conduct have shown superior intelligence in the discharge of their duty. Do you take into account the number of charges that have been preferred by a constable in the course of the year?—Not charges of the kind that you are dealing with, but I would take into account the number of cases, say, of house-breaking or theft, or cases of that kind, that he has dealt with.

39826. The mere fact that a man stands conspicuous in the number of charges that he has made against women for soliciting would not enter into your consideration in determining whether he ought or ought not to be promoted?—No.

39827. (Mr. Whitmore.) With regard to the Lieutenants who, as I understand perform rather judicial duties in the police station, do you require any sort of legal knowledge from them?—Yes, I should have said that in the requirements for the rank of Lieutenant it is stated: "Inspectors recommended for promotion to the rank of Lieutenant must be men of good education, manner and address. In addition to a knowledge of police duties they must have a knowledge of the criminal law and of the law of evidence, and be competent to prepare cases for submission to the Procurator Fiscal, also to prepare lists and returns."

39828. (Chairman.) Before passing on you might tell us what are the duties of the Procurator Fiscal and what is the character of the office of the Procurator Fiscal in Scotland?—Taking the police court there is a Procurator Fiscal appointed by the Corporation for the police courts.

39829. Before you tell us about that I would ask you this general question: Is it the case that there is a Procurator Fiscal for every court in Scotland?—As a rule there is a Procurator Fiscal for each court.

39830. What are the duties of the Procurator Fiscal in the Sheriff's Court, for instance?—He takes the cases that would be indictable offences here—that is, house-breaking, thefts, serious assaults, and such things as that.

39831. And his duties are those of the Public Prosecutor, as I understand?—Yes.

39832. And in Glasgow there is also a Procurator Fiscal for the business of the police courts who discharges the duties of a Public Prosecutor?—Yes. He is appointed by the Corporation, and is in no sense a police official; he is not under the control of the Chief Constable, and he has absolute power of taking up or rejecting any case.

39833. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand you to say there is a different Procurator Fiscal for each police court?—No, not for each police court. There is one for the police courts of Glasgow.

39834. (Chairman.) He is not able to be in each of the nine courts or rather public offices, because that is where he would have to be?—No—in the police court. It is his duty to prosecute.

39835. But he also, as I understand it, has to decide whether to take a charge or not?—Yes.

39836. He cannot be in each of the nine offices?—It is this way: each of the Superintendents and each of the Lieutenants is also appointed by the Corporation as an Assistant Procurator Fiscal, and as such, the Superintendent being Assistant Procurator Fiscal prosecutes in his own division.

39837. I suppose that that appointment must take place under some statute?—That is an appointment by the Corporation, and it is a yearly appointment. I cannot give you just now the authority under which it is made, but I will take a note of that and let the Secretary know.

39838. The position then is this: that the Lieutenant at the police office in each division is exercising the power of a Procurator Fiscal?—The Superintendent: The Lieutenant, as I explained, is in charge of the public office where charges are taken, and he acts by virtue of a statutory power that is found in the 100th section of the Glasgow Police Act of 1866, and he is there called an officer on duty. "The officer on duty may deal with every person brought to the police officer in custody of a constable as follows: If he has been taken into custody charged with having committed any penal offence within the city, he shall cause him to be detained until he can be brought before the Magistrate: If he has been taken into custody either in pursuance of or without a warrant in consequence of being accused or suspected of having committed any police offence, or in consequence of his having failed to attend before the Magistrate when duly cited in pursuance of the provisions of this Act, the officer on duty shall inquire into the circumstances, and may either cause him to be detained until he can be brought before the Magistrate, or may accept bail or security, or a deposit by way of security, that he shall appear before the Magistrate at some time or place to be then appointed, and at all times and places to which the case may be adjourned by the Magistrate, and liberate him; or if the officer on duty thinks that the charge is unfounded, or is not supported by sufficiently strong evidence to justify his being detained in custody, he may liberate him." You will see there is a distinction there between two classes of offences. The first deals with penal offences, and there the Lieutenant on duty shall cause the person to be detained until he may be brought before the Magistrate. A penal offence is an offence which the Magistrate has not jurisdiction to try. He simply detains the man, and he is then forwarded for trial to the higher court, the Sheriff's Court, and sent on to the Sheriff's Procurator Fiscal. With regard to what we call a police offence, that is, an offence which the Magistrate is empowered to try, he inquires into the case, and he can either cause him to be detained—that is, locked up, or he can take bail for him and liberate him, or if he does not think the case is sufficiently strong he may liberate him.

39839. I shall return again to the proceedings in the charge room, but I will go on now with the more general matters. I suppose you have certain regulations which are directed to the police officers?—Yes, there is an instruction book of which I have handed in a copy, and I should say that that book is in process of revision now.

39840. I see that book was published in the year 1893?—Yes.

39841. And it is now under revision?—It is now under revision by me.

39842. Do you have to make any special regulations from time to time with regard to police offences or conduct of the police with regard to them?—I do not quite follow.

39843. Any special regulations?—If there is any reason I make special regulations for anything that may occur.

39844. I will give you an instance of what might give cause for a special regulation, some new by-law of the Corporation creating a police offence?—Oh, yes. Then I would issue an instruction regarding that.

39845. The Corporation of Glasgow has, I suppose, the right under statute to make by-laws from time to time with regard to various matters?—Yes, but not with regard to police offences.

39846. They have no power to alter the general law, but still, I presume, that the breach of a by-law is a matter which comes before the police court, does it not?—Some of them. For instance, there are a good many by-laws relating to health, and some of those would come before the police court. The police would take general cognisance of the breaches of those by-laws without specially directing their attention to them.

39847. I do not think I have asked you what your own position is with regard to the Corporation as an authority. There is a Watch Committee, I suppose, or something that is equivalent to the Watch Committee that exists in the cities and boroughs?—It is not exactly that. It is a Magistrates' Committee. The Magistrates in Glasgow are citizen Magistrates—there is no Stipendiary Magistrate—and the Chief Constable is responsible to the Magistrates' Committee for the carrying out of his duties. Perhaps I had better read you my note upon that. I am taking this from the Act of Parliament. "The Chief Constable is responsible to the Magistrates' Committee, and is under their regulation with reference to his duties." That is under Section 84 of the Glasgow Police Act, 1866. "The Chief Constable, with the consent of the Magistrates' Committee, appoints one of the Superintendents or Lieutenants to act during his temporary absence or illness." I am quoting now from the Act of Parliament. "For the purpose of securing efficiency and enforcing discipline and good conduct among the officers, the Chief Constable has absolute power of suspending or dismissing any Inspector of Police or constable under the rank of Lieutenant. The Chief Constable has power to suspend any Superintendent or Lieutenant, but the Magistrates' Committee may inquire into the conduct and efficiency of any

Mr. J. V. Stevenson.

10 April 1907.

Superintendent or Lieutenant who has been suspended by the Chief Constable, and if they see cause may dismiss such Superintendent or Lieutenant or may recall such suspension." That is Section 77 of the Glasgow Police Act, 1866. That in effect comes to this, that the Chief Constable has the full disciplinary control of all officers under the rank of Lieutenant, and with regard to the other two ranks above Inspector—that is, Lieutenant and Superintendent—the Chief Constable, if he finds occasion to suspend one of those officers, cannot go any further in that case—he could not dismiss him, but he must report the fact of such suspension to the Magistrates' Committee, who either dismiss the man or recall his suspension.

39848. Have you any power of fining the constables?—Yes; the Chief Constable has the power of imposing a fine not exceeding 20s. upon any member of the force under the rank of Lieutenant whom he does not consider it necessary to dismiss. That is under Section 77 of the Glasgow Police Act.

39849. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand from that that the police have no appeal from you to the Magistrates' Committee?—None.

39850. The superior officers have?—As a matter of fact I must report the fact of suspending a superior officer.

39851. How do you define superior officers?—Superintendents and Lieutenants. I call those two ranks superior officers.

39852. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Are you not bound to report the dismissal of a constable?—No.

39853. (Chairman.) For the moment I will pass from the duties of a constable in the charge room, and so on. You have observed, no doubt, that the class of cases which this Commission has to deal with are drunkenness, disorder, and solicitation in the streets. Those would be, according to your system, police offences and not crimes?—Quite so.

39854. Can you tell us under what statutes or under what law prosecutions, arrests or summonses followed by prosecution take place?—Take first drunkenness. Drunkenness is now prosecuted under Section 70 of the Licensing (Scotland) Act, 1903.

39855. Will you read that section?—"Every person found in a state of intoxication, and incapable of taking care of himself, and not under the care or protection of some suitable person, in any street, thoroughfare or public place, whether a building or not, or on any licensed premises, and every person who is drunk while in charge in any street or other place of any carriage, horse, cattle, or steam engine, or when in the possession of any loaded firearms, shall be thereby guilty of an offence, and may be taken into custody by any constable, and detained in any police office or police cells or other convenient place, and, not later than in the course of the first lawful day after he shall have been so taken into custody, shall be brought before a Sheriff or any one Justice of the Police or Magistrate, or, if not so taken into custody, may be summoned to appear before a Sheriff, Justice of the Peace, or Magistrate, and on being convicted of such offence shall be liable to a fine not exceeding forty shillings, and, failing payment, to imprisonment for a period not exceeding thirty days." The next section deals with a person in charge of a child. Do you require that?

39856. No, I do not think we want that. That is the section under which prosecutions for drunkenness are taken?—Yes, since this Act came into force.

39857. The ordinary drunk and disorderly case in the street?—Yes, under Section 70.

39858. Now as to disorder apart from drunkenness, what is the general statute, or what is the special by-law made under statute under which prosecutions take place?—If the disorder is simply disorder without drunkenness attached it is dealt with under the Glasgow Police Act, 1866, Section 135, Sub-section 5, which reads, "Every person who is riotous, disorderly, or indecent in his behaviour," and the penalty there is £10, or alternately 60 days' imprisonment.

39859. That is the maximum?—Yes, that is the disorder apart from drunkenness. If the person is drunk, and while drunk is guilty of disorderly conduct, it is dealt with under Section 70 of the Licensing Act, which I have just read.

39860. With regard to street bookmaking and betting in the streets and wagering in the streets how do you proceed?—We deal now with it under the Public General Act, the Street Betting Act of 1906, but before that came in we had a local Act that read in this way: "Glasgow Police (Further Powers) Act, 1892, Section 20: If any two or more persons assemble together in any street for the purpose of engaging in lotteries, betting or gaming, each of such persons shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40s. If any person who conducts business of any kind in lotteries, betting or gaming, or do any act for the purpose of inducing or enabling any other person to engage in any lottery, betting or gaming, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding £10. Any constable may take into custody without warrant any person who shall commit an offence under this section in view of such constable." You will observe there are two parts in that Act; the first is, "If any two or more persons assemble together," and then "If any person who conducts business of any kind," but of course now we are bound by the 1906 Betting Act.

39861. (Mr. Whitmore.) That applies to Scotland, does it?—Yes.

39862. (Chairman.) Then with regard to solicitation in the streets, under what statute or under what laws do prosecutions take place?—We deal with that under the Glasgow Police (Further Powers) Act, 1892, Section 18, which reads: "Every prostitute or street walker who on or near any street loiters about or importunes"—"importuning" is the word used in Scotland instead of "solicitation"—"passengers for the purpose of prostitution shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 40s. for each offence."

39863. There is nothing about to the annoyance of the public as I gather?—I will read you the entire section from the Act of Parliament. It is Section 18 of the Glasgow Police (Further Powers) Act, 1892. "Every prostitute or street walker who on or near any street loiters about or importunes passengers for the purpose of prostitution shall be liable to a penalty."

39864. There is no other section under which prosecutions can take place for solicitation or importuning?—Not for women. There is the Immoral Traffic Act.

39865. With regard to solicitation by men, do you have any cases of that class in Glasgow?—We have no cases, but it is practically impossible to prove them. The section runs in this way: "Every person who habitually or persistently importunes or solicits or loiters about for the purpose of importuning or soliciting women or children for immoral purposes shall be liable to a penalty." You observe there it says "Every person who habitually or persistently importunes." Persistence is a very difficult thing to prove, and again it is very difficult to get women to come forward and prove that they have been importuned by any man.

39866. What Act of Parliament is that contained in?—That is a local Act, the Glasgow Corporation and Police Act, 1895, Section 38, Sub-section 2.

39867. Have the Glasgow police the right to arrest for any of these offences?—Yes, if committed in their view.

39868. I have not noticed that the power of arrest is expressly mentioned in any of the sections that you have read to us. Under what Act of Parliament does the Glasgow police get their power of summary arrest?—There is the general power of arrest. "The constables may seize or take into custody and convey to the police office any person who is either accused or reasonably suspected of having committed either within the city or at any place wheresoever beyond the city a penal offence or any police offence not herein specifically directed to be made the subject of a complaint in respect of which imprisonment may be awarded without the alternative of a money penalty, or any police offence where the name and residence of such person are unknown to the constable and cannot be readily ascertained by him, or any person actually committing any riotous or disorderly conduct or act, or impeding any public thoroughfare."

39869. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is that a statute?—That is the Glasgow Police Act, 1866, section 88.

39870. (Chairman.) Then I gather that under that a police constable may lawfully arrest any person whom he sees drunk and disorderly in the street even if he knows his address?—Under the Licensing Act he has that power where he sees a man drunk or disorderly.

39871. The object of my question was directed to this: do the police constables in Glasgow arrest, as a matter of course, for these street offences even if they know the name and address of the defendant?—Their instruction is that if they can cause an offence such as disorder to cease without having recourse to arrest that they should do so, and merely take the name and address with a view of summoning if necessary. If they cannot cause the offence to cease then they must apprehend the person.

39872. That is contained, I suppose, in orders issued to the police?—Yes.

39873. Can you refer us to that in your book?—Will you turn to page 80 of the book before you under the title "Apprehension." The word "apprehension" is used in Scotland rather than the word "arrest." "When a person's residence is known it can rarely be a proper step for the police to take him into custody unless the offence is of a serious nature. The best way is to proceed by summons. When a person escapes into his own residence or lodgings, or any place where he may be found or traced to afterwards, forcible entrance to apprehend him then on a charge of assault, disorderly conduct, or the like, should not take place. The circumstances should be reported and a summons or warrant applied for. To deprive a person of his liberty is a very serious matter, and great discretion is necessary in trifling cases where one person charges another with having committed an offence. The police should not apprehend or unnecessarily interfere with any person unless some specific act has been committed by which the law is broken." That is in general to make an apprehension only where they have no other way of having the law obeyed.

39874. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Are not drunk and disorderly cases generally cases in which an arrest has to be made?—Yes.

39875. (Chairman.) What are the orders and regulations as to the mode of effecting apprehensions in your city?—The offenders are apprehended by taking them by the arms and walking them along the street to the police office. Cabs may be used in case of drunkenness, and always in the case of females if the arrest is made at any distance from the police office. A stretcher on wheels provided for the purpose is frequently used if the arrest is in close proximity to the police office. Police vans are in use in four divisions, and two additional vans will shortly be in use. Handcuffs are not carried by the men on ordinary street duty.

39876. What are your orders as to the use of the truncheon?—The constables are instructed that when taking the prisoner to the police office they are to take him as quietly as possible, to humour him if he is troublesome, and to prevent as far as is in their power any scene in the street. The truncheon is rarely used in taking prisoners to the police office. If constables are attacked by superior numbers they are permitted to use truncheons in self defence, but every such case must be reported.

39877. What about handcuffs in the case of these police offences. Are they used?—Our men do not carry handcuffs. They carry what they call "snitchers"—string, which is very rarely used.

39878. If a constable apprehended a person on the ground that that person was drunk and disorderly in the street, his duty is to take him to the nearest police office, as you call it, but we call it the police station?—Yes.

39879. Then the person so apprehended is taken into the charge room?—Yes.

39880. Is the charge room a public room to any; and, if any, to what extent?—The charge room is public to the extent that any member of the public having any business or inquiry to make regarding any police matter can go in there and ask the officer on duty. The prisoner is conveyed there, and if any persons wish to speak for or against the accused they can also go into that room when the prisoner is taken there.

39881. When the constable and the prisoner arrive in the room they find, or ought to, find a Lieutenant in charge, as I understand?—They are bound to find a Lieutenant in charge.

39882. And it is the Lieutenant whose duty it is to take or refuse the charge made by the constable who has arrested the person in question?—Yes.

39883. What are the directions to the Lieutenant, and what is the character of his office?—Is it his duty to inquire, for instance, whether there is a prima facie case against the person arrested?—I think I can answer that best by reading you the section. The Lieutenant is here called the officer on duty, and by statute the officer on duty in our police offices in Glasgow must be of the rank either of Lieutenant or Inspector. In all the principal offices it is the Lieutenant who is the officer on duty. His powers as officer on duty are statutory, and are contained in section 100 of the Glasgow Police Act, 1866. I have already read this to you, but I can explain it shortly.

39884. You told us the Lieutenant was required to have some knowledge of the criminal law?—Yes.

39885. Are there any rules as to the amount of evidence required—the number of witnesses, for instance?—There must be two witnesses under the Scottish law to every charge unless the statute states that one is sufficient.

39886. Take the ordinary case of a person arrested for being drunk and disorderly, the Lieutenant or officer on duty would not take the charge unless there was some evidence before him in addition to that of the police constable?—Yes. I may go further and say the constable would not bring him in until he had a second witness.

39887. But if he did bring him in, the Lieutenant would, as a matter of course, refuse the charge unless there was some additional testimony?—Yes.

39888. You have used the word "evidence." Does the Lieutenant or officer on duty swear the constable or anybody who comes before him?—No.

39889. He simply takes the statement?—Yes.

39890. And he ought not to take the charge unless there are at any rate two persons stating facts which make a prima facie case against the prisoner?—Yes.

39891. (Mr. Whitmore.) Is the statement taken down in writing?—No, except it is an important case. In the ordinary case with which you are dealing he would take the name and address in writing in a book.

39892. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Would not the charge be taken down in writing?—Oh, yes; the charge would be taken down in writing.

39893. (Chairman.) In what book is the charge taken down? Is there a charge book, or is it taken down on any paper?—He has the charge book; in fact, he keeps two books, in one of which he enters all the charges when he locks up the person—that is, when he entertains the charge. In another book he puts the charge either where he liberates the person and considers there is no charge or where he considers it is a case simply for further inquiry.

39894. Then the Lieutenant on duty is not limited to the mere acceptance or refusal of a charge on that particular occasion?—He can inquire further.

39895. Let us take the possible cases. Supposing a constable and one citizen comes into the charge room, and he says, "This man was drunk and disorderly in such and such a street." In that case the officer on duty would take the charge?—Yes.

39896. And the charge is entered in this book?—Yes.

39897. That is the charge book?—Yes.

39898. Is that what you call it?—It should be the charge book, but locally they call it the blotter.

39899. It is the charge book?—Yes.

39900. What particulars are put in the charge book or blotter?—The numbers of the constables who bring the case in, the name and address of any other witness for or against; the substance of the charge, say, drunk and disorderly in such and such a street at such a time.

39901. The hour and place of the charge?—Yes.

39902. And that charge book, I suppose, is taken by the officer on duty, or the Superintendent, to the police court next day?—I must explain further. The Lieutenant also has charge of the charge book that the Magistrate uses, and he transfers these cases at the proper time into the court book, which is placed before the Magistrate the next day.

39903. We will come to that in a moment. I will now pursue the proceeding in the charge room before the officer on duty. Supposing after listening to the constable, or the two constables—take that simple case first—the officer on duty looks at the person who is brought in charged with being drunk and disorderly, and says, I am not sure about this case. Is he bound to refuse the charge at once on that?—That is his discretion.

Mr. J. V. Stevenson.

10 April 1907.

39904. Then supposing he says to the constables: "Have you no further evidence that this person was drunk and disorderly," and they say "Yes, we have, but the man is not here," what takes place then?—Of course, if he has two witnesses to the offence that would be a primâ facie case.

39905. But I am putting a case where although the two constables say this man was drunk and disorderly in —— Street, and we arrested him, the officer on duty looks at the man and doubts whether he is drunk or says he is not drunk, or forms the conclusion he is not drunk, and says so to the constables, and they say, "We say he is, and that he was disorderly, and can get further evidence"?—He might take this course: he has what is called a side room, and without locking up a person he may detain him until he makes further inquiries into the case. He may tell the accused to take a seat in that side room.

39906. So as to give the constables time to produce their further witness?—Yes.

39907. But supposing they failed to get the further witness that night?—Of course, the discretion is committed to him by this Act of Parliament, and I am only saying what he would probably do. He would probably liberate the man in order to summon if the evidence was found sufficient afterwards. He could either do that or liberate him on bail. He would probably liberate him in the case you put.

39908. Could he liberate him on bail without taking the charge?—No, because the liberation on bail is in order to answer the charge. He could liberate him altogether without any bailing.

39909. Simply taking his name and address?—Simply taking his name and address for further inquiry.

39910. There is no power then for the officer on duty to say to the man: "Now I will not lock you up, and I will not take the charge, but I will bind you over in such and such a sum of money to come here again to-morrow or the next day, in order that the police may have time to bring their additional witnesses"?—No.

39911. He could not do that?—He would liberate him conditionally or on bail.

39912. If the charge is accepted, what bail would the officer on duty, as a rule, require?—That again is in his discretion. In ordinary cases I should think the average would be 7s. 6d.

39913. Would the prisoner himself be accepted?—The money is always paid. It is not a bail bond. The money is always paid down.

39914. Supposing the officer on duty says the bail is 7s. 6d., the prisoner has to hand him 7s. 6d.?—He hands him 7s. 6d. If it is a drunken case, when he is sober he would pay down his 7s. 6d., and he would be allowed to go.

39915. Then in his case that cannot be done at once, do you mean?—Any sober man—supposing a person was not drunk.

39916. Drop a drunkenness case, and take the case of a person who is accused of disorder. If the officer on duty says, "I accept the charge," then instead of taking a bail bond the prisoner has the option of paying, say, 7s. 6d. or 10s.?—Yes.

39917. Is that recoverable by him if he appears at the police court to answer the charge?—If he appears the next day he can claim back his bail money, but, as a rule, he does not appear.

39918. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is payment in anticipation?—If he does not appear he is satisfied to let the bail money go, and the bail is forfeited. That is the rule.

39919. (Chairman.) In an ordinary case no further proceedings are taken against the prisoner?—In an ordinary case of drunkenness no further proceedings are taken. The bail is forfeited.

39920. Supposing the prisoner is not the fortunate possessor of 7s. 6d., is there no way of his being liberated on bail?—He can communicate with his friends. The police will always send a message to any person he names in any part of the town, and if they like to come they may pay the money for him. Anybody can come and bail him.

39921. So that if the officer on duty says, "I accept the charge," a friend may say "Very well, I will pay this caution money," or whatever term you give to this money payment, and then they can go away?—Yes, providing the Lieutenant considers it a case in which he should liberate him on bail.

39922. In an ordinary case of drunkenness and disorderliness he would treat it so?—Yes, in ordinary cases.

39923. If there was no assault on the police, or no actual assault causing bodily harm to anybody else, he would adopt that course?—He would adopt that course.

39924. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I suppose it would perhaps depend on how drunk the man was. It might not be safe to let him go out if he was willing to pay 7s. 6d.?—He would not let a drunken man go away until he was sober. He would put him away in the cells.

39925. (Chairman.) It was my fault. You said a drunken man would not be allowed to go out, and then I went on to a case of disorder alone.

39926. (Mr. Dickinson.) Does the same rule apply to women?—No, not as a rule.

39927. (Chairman.) Supposing a woman is brought up before the officer on duty for importunity, having been arrested, is she not released on bail under any circumstances?—As a general rule she is not. I would not say under any circumstances.

39928. Supposing the officer on duty thinks it right to take the charge, and he also thinks it right not to lock up the woman for the night, what course would he take?—Then he could only liberate her on bail, or liberate her conditionally, when he can fix the bail himself.

39929. The bail is always a money payment?—Always.

39930. There is no system of bail bonds or recognisances?—No, none.

39931. (Mr. Dickinson.) Why is that?—I will explain that to you. A woman brought in for prostitution for the first time is never locked up. The Lieutenant cautions her and he lets her go. He takes her name and address. He will not lock her up the first time. He will let her go with a caution. It is only when she comes back afterwards, not having taken the caution, that he would take the charge against her, and then he would lock her up in the ordinary course. We have found that persons interested in the proceeds of prostitution have come and wanted to get women out on bail—I mean men who might be charged under the Immoral Traffic Act, who are trafficking in or gaining by the prostitution of these women—they have come and they have sought to get the person out on bail.

39932. Am I to understand from that, that if two police-constables bring in a woman, and, when asked what the charge is, they say, "The charge is one of importunity," that, without any proof that she is a prostitute or street walker, is accepted as a prima facie case by the officer on duty?—No. The officer on duty will not accept that charge unless he has evidence before him that the person is a prostitute or a street walker.

39933. He requires something more than the statement of the two constables accompanying the woman that she was importuning on that particular evening—he requires some evidence more than that mere statement?—He does. He requires evidence that this woman has been in the habit of frequenting that place, and has been seen there, say, for a month past, loitering there for the purpose of importuning, and he will not lock up a woman unless he is perfectly satisfied that she is a street walker or a prostitute.

39934. He infers prima facie that she is a street walker or prostitute if the constables say they have seen her, say, for a month walking about the streets accosting men?—Yes.

39935. (Mr. Whitmore.) Or if a previous charge has been made against her?—Yes—that is evidence, of course, if she has been already convicted.

39936. When she is brought in you say she receives a caution?—You mean when she is first taken in?

39937. Yes?—She always receives a caution.

39938. And that would be remembered against her?—That would be remembered against her. That would be part of the evidence against her.

39939. (Chairman.) Does the constable on duty caution her if he thinks there is really nothing in the case at all? Suppose she says "I am a married woman, and I will send for my husband," would he caution her then?—No. If she makes a defence he will inquire into her defence, and give her every opportunity; he would rather release than detain her if there is any doubt.

39940. I forgot to ask you whether in the charge book any entry is made of what the prisoner says. I forgot to ask you whether in such a case, where the prisoner says "I am not guilty," any note is taken?—A brief note would be taken. Owing to the number of cases he could not write in detail a lot of matter, but he would give a brief note of what occurred, and of the nature of the defence.

39941. He would put "denies—two witnesses," or something of that sort?—He would put something which would show what was the attitude of the accused.

39942. So that when the charge is copied into the court book the Magistrate on looking at it can see at once whether the case is a defended case or not?—No. He would not copy it into the book before the Magistrate; he would only put the charge there. The person would be called upon to plead, and he would have his witnesses in court. The police will cite any witnesses whom the accused desires to have, and will have them at the court.

39943. Will the witnesses who were heard before the officer on duty as a matter of course be summoned to the police court?—If it is a custody case, and it comes up the next day, they would be warned to be at the police court at the hour.

39944. So that if there are, say, two constables and one private individual giving evidence against the prisoner before the officer on duty, and two or three people come to give information on his behalf, all the parties would be told to be at the court at 10 o'clock, or whatever the hour of meeting might be, the next day?—Yes.

39945. Is there any formal written summons handed to them?—Not in a case like that. If it were a case where a person were summoned to appear on a certain day, then they would be served with a citation.

39946. (Mr. Dickinson.) Just to follow up what you told us about a woman being charged for the first time, when a woman is brought in she is liberated?—As a rule she is liberated with a caution.

39947. Is there any record of that?—Yes, in the charge book.

39948. Then you have to find out something about her?—I am assuming she does not deny the charge.

39949. You do not know at that moment who the woman is; she is not an ordinary person known to the police; a stranger is brought in as a prostitute for the first time; you liberate her with a caution?—Yes.

39950. Then do you make any inquiries about her name and address. No. That woman would not be brought in by the police unless they had seen her frequenting the streets for some time.

39951. (Chairman.) That is, she would not be brought in by the police if the police were doing their duty, you mean?—I mean the policeman on duty on the street would not bring into the station a woman charged with importuning unless they have known her to be for some time on the streets.

39952. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) As I understand, what happens is this. When a woman is brought in and charged, if it is the first time she has been charged, notwithstanding the evidence of the two police-constables that they have known her for some time as a prostitute, the Lieutenant would dismiss the charge with a caution?—Yes. He would exercise the discretion granted to him by the 100th section of the Act. He would liberate her and simply caution her.

39953. Would he then enter the charge?—No. That would be in the second book. I have mentioned two books, one in which the charge is to be taken, and the other in which the charge is either refused or continued for further inquiry.

39954. He would enter the name of the person?—He would enter the name of the person.

39955. And of the constables who made the charge?—Yes.

39956. So that he would have a record of it?—Yes, he would have a record of it.

39957. In the ordinary course, as I follow it, a woman would not be detained at the station for the night when she was brought in for loitering or importuning unless she had been brought to that station, or possibly to another station, where she had been charged with the same offence?—Yes.

39958. If she makes a defence, then the Lieutenant exercises his discretion as to whether he does—what?—If she makes a defence he may liberate her altogether if he considers that the defence is good.

39959. Suppose he does not; suppose he is in any doubt about it, and in such doubt that he does not liberate her and she has never been charged before, would he detain her?—If he was in doubt he would liberate her. If he had any doubt he would give her the benefit of the doubt. I am afraid we are not exactly on the same lines.

39960. Yes, we are?—I mean this. The endeavour is to prevent that woman being locked up and sent to prison, so that if it is the first charge the Lieutenant will liberate her. Again, if she had to go before the Magistrate, and it was the first time she had been before the Magistrate, as a rule he would release her instead of sending her to prison. The Lieutenant would try to communicate with her friends.

39961. If she persists in offending then she is detained. Your experience, as I understand you, proves that it is wrong to let her out on bail; it is wiser to keep her there?—If she is habitually there.

39962. (Mr. Dickinson.) What I want to know is how do you know that a woman is taken to one police station and dealt with for the first time? Is there a formal record kept?—No.

39963. Is it circulated?—No.

39964. Then she would go to another police station?—Yes, and get liberated there.

39965. She could do that six times?—She could do that nine times.

39966. (Mr. Whitmore.) Is that done, do you think?—It is quite possible.

39967. (Chairman.) Supposing a prisoner does not give bail, and has to be detained till the case is called on in Court and decided by the Magistrate, what happens to the prisoner? He is taken to the cells, I suppose?—He is then taken to the cells by the turnkeys and locked up in a separate cell.

39968. Are the turnkeys constables?—They are.

39969. And there is a turnkey or turnkeys at every station allotted?—At every station

39970. Where are the regulations in the book about the cells? Can you give us a reference to them?—Yes, it is at page 53 of the Instruction Book under the head "Turnkeys." You will see there how the turnkey has to deal with prisoners. If you look at the fourth paragraph you will see it says: "He will place prisoners in separate cells both before and after trial when there are cells to spare; and when he has to put more than one prisoner in one cell he will be careful to keep old offenders from persons in custody for the first time, and juveniles from adults, and prostitutes from other females."

39971. With regard to medical attendance on prisoners or on accused persons, what are the general regulations?—There is attached to each of the nine divisions a surgeon called the Casualty Surgeon, who is paid a salary according to the amount of business that would be required of him, and he must attend at all times when called on by the police to attend prisoners, and his house, or place, or office is connected by private telephone to the Divisional Office to which he is attached. If the officer on duty thinks any prisoner requires medical attendance he would at once send for the surgeon.

39972. Supposing a prisoner is brought to the charge room with a wound on his head?—If it is a slight wound—all our turnkeys are instructed in first aid, and some of them are very good at it—then he would dress it, but if it were something more the doctor would be sent for.

39973. Then the Inspector or officer on duty has a discretion as to whether in that class of case he will send for the doctor or not?—Yes, and he is responsible.

39974. But supposing a prisoner asks for medical attendance?—He would get it.

39975. At whose expense?—At the expense of the city; he would have the casualty surgeon.

Mr. J. V. Stevenson.

10 April 1907.

39976. Supposing the officer on duty is in doubt as to whether the prisoner is drunk or not, does he ever send for a doctor?—If he were in doubt he would send for the doctor. A doubtful case would be treated as a case of illness.

39977. Supposing the prisoner denies the drunkenness, does the Inspector ever send for the doctor of his own motion?—If he denies the drunkenness?

39978. Yes, if the prisoner says, "I am not drunk; true, I am excited, but I am excited because I have been arrested" ?—That again would be a case for the discretion, under the Statute, of the Lieutenant on duty, and he would send for the doctor.

39979. Supposing the prisoner denies the drunkenness, and says, "Now, I require for you to send for the doctor" ?—He would do so.

39980. At whose expense?—He would send for the casualty surgeon at the city's expense. That doctor can take no fee. If the man wanted his own doctor or another doctor, he would have to pay for it.

39981. Supposing the prisoner asks for his own doctor, and his own doctor does not come in a reasonable time, and then the prisoner says, "Now, as my doctor does not come, I should like to see the police doctor," would the police doctor be sent for as a matter of course?—The police doctor, I should say, in any case if the prisoner asked for his own doctor, would be sent for, but I cannot recollect a case having arisen.

39982. So that if the prisoner asks for his own doctor the officer on duty invariably, in your experience, sends for the police doctor as well?—We have not had such a case.

39983. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Never?—I cannot recollect a case in which a prisoner demanded his own doctor. The nearest thing I recollect to it is where a man was accused of drunkenness on licensed premises, and the licensed person got a doctor to come and see whether this man was drunk or not, because he would be prosecuted for the man being drunk on his premises. That is the nearest case I can recollect, and that doctor was allowed to see the accused.

39984. (Chairman.) There is nothing in the Regulations, as I gather from your answers, which makes it incumbent on the officer in charge to send for the police doctor if the prisoner asks for him?—I do not know that there is anything in the Regulations, but, as a matter of fact, I should consider it incumbent upon the Lieutenant to send for the doctor if the prisoner asked for him.

39985. As a matter of fact, they do take that course?—I have heard the doctors complain that they are sent for too often.

39986. Is the examination by the doctor entered in any book in the police office?—Yes, in every case which the doctor examines he enters it in the book himself.

39987. What name is given to that book? Is it the Occurrence Book?—We call it simply the Casualty Surgeon's Book.

39988. It is a special book of the surgeon's?—It is a special book of his own. He makes the entries.

39989. But the book is kept at the station?—The book is kept at the station.

39990. Have you at the police-station a book in which any occurrence connected with each case is entered?—I do not quite follow the question.

39991. Supposing, for instance, the prisoner did ask for his own doctor, and the doctor did come, or, if you like, take the very case you mentioned, where a doctor came in at the instance of the occupier of certain licensed premises, would the fact of the doctor examining the prisoner in such a case as that be entered in any book?—It would be recorded.

39992. In what book?—It would be recorded either in the charge book or in the second book that I mentioned, where cases for further inquiry or summons are entered. It would be recorded.

39993. Then in cases in which a prisoner denies that he is drunk, and wants to see the doctor, the officer on duty would postpone the case, and he would ask the prisoner to step into what you call the "side" room?—If he had any doubt himself about the matter.

39994. I am assuming that?—He would put the man aside and telephone for the doctor.

39995. Then the doctor would come, and the result of the doctor's examination would be entered in his, the doctor's, book?—Yes.

39996. Then the officer on duty would deal with the case, and would either liberate him on bail, or else would send him to the cells?—Or if the doctor thought it was a case such as you have suggested, that he was excited, and not drunk, he would liberate him altogether, because there would be no charge.

39997. There is one question about the charge room which I have omitted. Supposing a prisoner is violent in the charge room while the Lieutenant or the officer on duty is dealing with another case, what would be done with that violent prisoner?—The prisoner is brought in by two constables, and they stand with him at the counter in the charge room until the Lieutenant is ready to deal with the case; they simply stand and restrain him.

39998. Supposing he is making so much noise as to disturb the proceedings?—It frequently happens on Saturday nights that there is more than one noisy prisoner.

39999. Does the officer on duty have to do his duty with the other prisoners while this noise is going on?—He would say "Take that man into the side room until I am ready."

40000. (Chairman.) I was going to ask you how complaints by members of the public against individual constables are dealt with?—The ordinary complaint is made at the bar to the officer on duty whom I have been telling you is the ordinary person to be there. The complainant, he or she, goes into the station or office and makes a complaint there to the officer on duty, who takes down the particulars of her complaint—we will suppose it is a woman who is complaining—her name and address, and a general brief statement of what she has to say, and the names of the persons who can speak to her complaint. He asks her then, if it is a minor case, to come back at an hour that he names, to see the Superintendent in his office in the same building with her witnesses, and the constable is warned in the meantime. The Superintendent will hear the matter if it is a trifling charge in his room, and he may admonish the constable if he finds the constable is wrong. If the matter is more serious, or the person is not satisfied with the Superintendent's action, the case is sent on to the Chief Constable, and the Chief Constable hears it in his room. He has the constable before him, he has the complainer and his or her witnesses, and he also hears any witnesses that the constable wishes to have examined in his defence, and the constable has power to cross-examine the complainer. The Chief Constable comes to a finding then, and deals with the case. He may either find the case not proven, or he may find it proved, and inflict a punishment which may range from a caution or admonition to dismissal.

40001. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You say the constable has a right to cross-examine witnesses. Has the complainant also the right to cross-examine the constable?—I would ask the complainer, he having stated his case fully, if he wanted any further questions asked of the constable, and I would ask the complainant to give me the questions.

40002. He would put them through you?—Yes. I would not keep strictly to the rules of evidence, and I do not consider myself bound by the strict rules of evidence. I might depart from the strict rules of evidence in order to get at the truth of the matter. I would give the complainer every latitude.

40003. He would have the same latitude as the police-constable?—Yes.

40004. (Chairman.) You have drawn a distinction between trivial complaints and more serious complaints. What do you call a trivial complaint? A police-constable speaking too roughly, or something of that kind?—Speaking rudely.

40005. Where there is no arrest by the constable, you mean?—No; where it would be simply rude speaking, or a push, or something like that, that the Superintendent might deal with if the person is satisfied with that.

40006. But supposing a person who has been arrested is liberated by the officer on duty under such circumstances as we have been discussing before the adjournment, and the person complains about having been arrested, how is that complaint dealt with?—If the complainer does not want to go on with an action for what we call 'wrongeous arrest,' the complaint would be dealt with by me, and if I found the constable exceeded his duty I would have to inflict some mark of punishment upon him. Sometimes, of course, the letter of complaint comes direct to me and I will have an inquiry made and statements taken. I would have a detective officer appointed to go round and see all the witnesses of the complainer and take down fully all their statements, and take down a statement from the constable also if he wished to make a statement, and the statements of his witnesses.

40007. You do not ask for a report or make an inquiry simply because a charge is refused by the officer on duty, but you wait until the person who has been improperly arrested makes a complaint to you?—In the case of a refusal by the officer on duty, if the officer on duty considers the constable has acted improperly, then it would be his duty to report the constable. He may, of course, refuse a charge because he does not consider the evidence sufficient, although the constable may not have acted improperly.

40008. I quite follow that, and if the officer on duty does report to you you then inquire into the case?—Yes.

40009. I think you said that when the complaint comes to you direct, you direct, if you think fit, an inquiry. Does directing an inquiry mean that you write to the Superintendent asking him to send you written reports?—Yes, I get the complaint. I send to the Superintendent to have statements taken from all the persons who can speak to this complaint, and they will be placed before me, and then I will appoint a time to hear the complaint in my office.

40010. The Superintendent's duty would be in that case to take reports not only from police-constables, but from any witnesses who come before him?—From all the persons whom he could find, or whose names were given to him, who could throw any light on the matter.

40011. In other words, he has to make an inquiry?—Yes, and go to all persons as well as the police.

40012. Then when he has got all the documents together he forwards them to you?—Yes.

40013. Do you then reopen the inquiry and conduct another inquiry yourself?—He only takes statements, he does not conduct an inquiry. He sends round to the people and he has their statements taken. Then when it comes to me I look into the case. Supposing it was a charge of assault against a constable, I might send that case to the Procurator Fiscal as a charge of assault. Perhaps the person does not want it sent to the Procurator Fiscal, but he wants me to deal with it, and then I would deal with it by inquiry.

40014. Supposing a member of the public who makes a complaint expresses dissatisfaction with your expression of opinion or judgment, does he ever go to the Magistrates?—No, I do not recollect any case in which that has happened.

40015. I say go to the Magistrates in this case, because you are appointed, as I understand, by this Committee of Citizen Magistrates?—And the Sheriff of Lanarkshire, who represents the Crown.

40016. I think you say you never recollect a case in which complaint has been made to the Magistrates of your not having dealt properly with a complaint?—No. Of course, the disciplinary power is all committed to me by law.

40017. Do you find, having regard to the existing legislation and the existing arrangements, any special difficulties in dealing with cases of drunkenness and disorder and solicitation in the streets—I say special difficulties?—No, not special difficulties as regards dealing with the offences. Of course, it does not put down the offences. We prosecute offences according to the law. It is a question how far it really goes to check the offences. For instance, we prosecute a man for drunkenness, but it does not make that man a sober man.

40018. No, but do you find that the existing Acts of Parliament as construed by the Magistrates of Glasgow are sufficient to cope with the evils?—In the case of drunkenness yes.

40019. And in disorder without drunkenness?—Yes.

40020. And in regard to solicitation?—It does not check solicitation. The same persons come forward again and again. The punishment does not always check it.

40021. Are there more women importuning in the Glasgow streets now than when you were first appointed?—No, I would not say so. But they go back. Of course, there is no power of dealing with them except fining them or imprisoning them. There are no further powers. There is no power of detention in a Home or anything like a Reformatory. Very often the Magistrate will allow the accused person to go to a Home, of which there are several, if she chooses, or if she states she will go to a Home, he having allowed her to go to a Home cannot keep her there.

40022. Do you hear any complaints from any quarters that constables in your force receive bribes from street bookmakers or from prostitutes, or that they blackmail bookmakers or prostitutes?—I have heard some general statements, but I have very little specific evidence of such cases. Shortly after I went to Glasgow, in 1902, I had to deal with two constables accused of taking money from prostitutes in a certain place and allowing them to ply their trade there. I examined into that case, and I found the charges proved against those two constables, and I dismissed the men.

40023. Are those the only two cases in which you have dismissed men for that offence?—I had another case in which it was not exactly blackmailing, but it was very near it. In that case a constable received money from men to allow them to enter a shed with prostitutes. In another case two constables extorted money from a man on the threat of a charge of indecent behaviour with a woman. I heard the evidence in those cases, and I considered it was proved, and I dismissed those men.

40024. In those cases did the persons who had been blackmailed, or who had given the money, complain?—They came forward.

40025. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That would make, according to what you have told us, five constables dismissed?—Five constables dismissed on those grounds that I have mentioned.

40026. (Chairman.) Those are all the cases of dismissals for that kind of offence since 1902, I gather?—Yes.

40027. Have you grounds for thinking that bribery by these women is common or widespread in Glasgow?—No; I would say these are exceptional cases.

40028. Does no superior officer like a sergeant keep an eye upon constables who are in the various streets on their beats and who have to deal with those solicitation cases?—He visits them frequently. He goes round.

40029. Do you think that the sergeant is able to exercise an effective control over that kind of thing?—I think if a man was base enough to take money by way of blackmailing he could do so for a considerable time without being detected by his sergeant.

40030. But in the long run you think it would become known?—Yes I think it would come out.

40031. Do you ever send out any men in plain clothes to check the conduct of the police in the streets?—No.

40032. Then the next head on which I wish to ask you a question is as to the duties of the constables in proceedings in the police court. I understand that according to your system there is a Police Fiscal?—A Police Procurator Fiscal.

40033. In the note of your evidence you refer to him as the Police Fiscal?—That is a loose way of describing him.

40034. There is an officer, as we have heard, appointed by the Corporation for the purpose of taking these prosecutions in the police court?—Yes.

40035. But he has to delegate his duties to the Superintendents?—Yes.

40036. Take an ordinary case of drunk and disorderly. The man is charged; he is not liberated on bail by paying 7s. 6d. or 10s. 6d., but he is taken to the cells, and comes up in due course before the Citizen Magistrates. Who conducts the case before them?—The Superintendent as Assistant Procurator Fiscal.

40037. He has a right of audience?—He has a right to conduct the prosecution.

40038. How does he prove the case?—What takes place after the office proceedings which you have described? You told us that the lieutenant or officer on duty copies the entry in his charge book or his blotter into the court book?—Yes. A form is prepared by the Lieutenants, and I produce one (handing in document). In that is contained the charge at the instance of the Procurator Fiscal who is named there, and then it proceeds to define the charge.

Mr. J. V. Stevenson.

10 April 1907.

40039. Who prepares this—the officer on duty?—The officer on duty prepares this for the Superintendent, and this is his copy.

40040. The form you have handed in is headed: "Unto the Magistrates of the City and Royal Borough of Glasgow." The complaint of George Neilson, writer, of Glasgow. Then he is the complainant, and not the constable who made the charge?—He is the complainant in every case.

40041. Then who signs this form?—The Superintendent, as Assistant Procurator Fiscal, signs it.

40042. The Lieutenant fills it up, and the Superintendent then signs this form?—Yes.

40043. And that is handed in, I suppose, to the court?—Yes.

40044. And it is upon this complaint that the court gets its jurisdiction?—Yes.

40045. Then the Superintendent, I suppose, calls the witnesses?—When a case is ready all the witnesses in that case have to leave the court and retire to the witness room, and then they are called one by one by the Court Officer, and each comes singly and gives his evidence, and he may remain in the court after giving his evidence, but no witness who has not been examined can remain in the court during the hearing of the case.

40046. Those are the witnesses whose names have been entered by the officer on duty as having been in the charge room?—Yes.

40047. Then has the defendant the right of being represented by an advocate?—By an agent.

40048. Then the defendant has also the right to call other witnesses who were not present in the charge room at all?—Oh, yes, he has a right to call any witness.

40049. Then the witnesses whom the defendant intends to call have to go out of court?—They must all be excluded from the court.

40050. Without any special order of the court?—Without any special order of the court; that is the rule.

40051. So that the advocate for the defendant would automatically, as it were, order his own witnesses out of court?—Yes.

40052. Except, of course, the defendant?—It is the rule in Scotch courts that all the witnesses are excluded until they are called.

40053. Supposing that no advocate appears for the defendant, what is the course of procedure? Is the defendant asked at the commencement of the proceedings what answer he makes to the complaint?—He is asked to plead, and he is asked if he pleads guilty or not guilty, and, as you will see in the form I have handed in, there is a form at the back for pleading. Then the Magistrate adjudicates.

40054. The charge having been read over, there is this form of plea and sentence. When the complaint has been handed in by the Superintendent I understand that the defendant is called upon to plead?—Yes.

40055. Then this form "In presence of ——, Esq., Magistrate of the City and Royal Borough of Glasgow, and Mr. ——, appearing for the said accused, the charge having been read over, he or she pleads guilty, or he or she may plead not guilty"?—Yes, and then he may go further and be found not guilty.

40056. When the defendant, having pleaded not guilty, and the case for the prosecution is gone on with, what happens when the case for the prosecution is closed? What does the Magistrate do then?—He will ask the accused if he has any witness or what he has to say, and he will hear them then before finding.

40057. Is the defendant entitled to give evidence—I forget whether the recent Act applies to Scotland?—He is always entitled to give evidence.

40058. To be sworn and to give evidence?—Yes.

40059. Then he calls his own witnesses?—Yes.

40060. And then the court adjudicates?—Yes.

40061. Then, according to that, the Superintendent is responsible for seeing that his witnesses are in attendance?—He is responsible as the prosecutor, but in practice the constable who has the charge should see before his case is called that the witnesses for that charge are in attendance, and he should also see that when the case is called all the witnesses leave the court room and go into the witness room, to remain until they are called.

40062. Are the instructions given to the constable as to that in the Regulation Book?—Yes; it is in the statement I have given. It is at page 50 of the Instruction Book. "Court Officer.—The Court Officer shall have a book in which shall be recorded the whole cases to be brought each day before the court, with the number of each case, the names of the persons charged, and the names of all the witnesses for the prosecution. He shall, previous to the opening of the court, visit all the prisoners to be brought up, and note the number of the apartment in which they are confined; and also note those persons who are out on pledge, or have been summoned."

40063. I think we may take it for our purposes generally that on pages 50, 51, and following, the regulations as to the conduct of the police proceedings as affecting the police are contained?—They are.

40064. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you give any special instructions to the constables about the making of reports?—I do not quite follow.

40065. When you call for reports from your constables are there any special instructions that apply to the making of the reports?—Would you give me an instance?

40066. Do you at any time call for reports in writing from your constables?—Yes. Supposing there is something on the man's beat and I am not satisfied that attention is given to it, or that there is laxity of some kind alleged, I might call on him for a report to show that he has discharged his duty regarding the particular matter.

40067. Then he would make the report in writing?—He would make the report in writing.

40068. Would he make it direct to you?—No, he would make it through his Superintendent.

40069. And the Superintendent would forward it to you?—The Superintendent would forward it to me. Of course I look to the Superintendent also as being in a degree responsible for the man.

40070. In the same way supposing a complaint is made by a member of the public, would you call for a report from the constable?—If it was a charge that I might have to send before the Fiscal, such as an assault, I would not call for a report from the constable except he wished to give it, because he might have to plead upon it, and it might be adjudicated upon in court; but if it is an ordinary case that I could deal with as a matter of discipline, then he would be called on for what he had to say on the matter and any explanation he had to make.

40071. And that he would also make in writing? That he would also make in writing.

40072. Supposing you had a charge that somebody had been wrongly arrested by two constables, have you any special regulations that would apply to that?—No, I would just inquire into the matter.

40073. Would you call for reports then from the two constables?—Yes. To show under what circumstances they had acted, and why they had so acted. I have had such complaints. I have a note here of a case that I heard, and I see here "Wrongeous arrest; charges against two constables." In that particular case the complainant declined to go on with his case.

40074. I do not want to go into the particulars of the case, because that is travelling rather far afield. I wanted to know what your practice was. Would you then call for reports from those two constables and from the Inspector or Superintendent?—I would, to explain their action.

40075. Are there any special instructions that would be given as to the making of those reports?—No.

40076. They are not supposed to make them together, I presume?—Oh no, but each man makes a separate statement. Each man reports for himself, but they could talk over the matter between them. I could not prevent them doing that.

40077. There is no regulation?—Each would be responsible for his own report.

40078. Is there any regulation which instructs them if called upon to make a report not to consult together?—There is no regulation, but they would be called upon singly to make reports.

40079. Would you consider it wrong of them to consult together before making a report?—I cannot say that I would consider it wrong. I would prefer that they did not. If I were examining into it I should find out whether they did or did not consult together. It would be a natural matter for them to speak together if they were both charged in the same case.

40080. Can you also tell me with regard to the evidence they may be called upon to give?—They are instructed as to the rules of evidence and in the manner of giving their evidence in a police court.

40081. That is what I want to know. Is that instruction in writing?—Yes. I should say also that in addition to the instructions that are contained in this book the men are verbally instructed in classes. We hold classes, and they are verbally instructed, and questions on matters of police duty include such matters as you mention. They are questioned on various points. There is something with regard to evidence also in this Instruction Book, at page 104.

40082. Yes, that does answer what I wanted. Now I want to follow out what you have told us about the bail. If I understand you correctly, the only method of giving bail is to pay the money—that is all?—They could take out a security in lieu of money such as an article of value.

40083. Not a bond or anything of that kind, but an article of value which could be deposited instead of the money?—Yes.

40084. What would happen to the article of value if a person was charged with being drunk, for example, and he left his watch?—I mention it to you because it is mentioned actually in the Act of Parliament, but as a rule he does not do that; he may get a friend to come and see them, and he may give him his watch to pawn to raise the money.

40085. He does not generally give the article of value to the police, but he deposits the money?—Yes, generally.

40086. Supposing a man is charged with being drunk and disorderly and he deposits the 7s. 6d. which you have told us of, and then he does not appear the next day, what happens with regard to the charge?—The charge is marked "Pledge forfeited."

40087. It does not come before the Magistrate at all?—The Magistrate puts that order in the book.

40088. The matter does not come before the Magistrate?—Oh, yes; the case is called.

40089. And the person's name is called?—Yes.

40090. And then if he does not appear what happens?—"Pledge forfeited."

40091. And that disposes of the matter?—That disposes of the matter, except it is a case in which it is considered necessary to go further and summon him, or get a warrant.

40092. That is in the discretion of the Magistrate?—Yes, or the Prosecuting Fiscal could ask the Magistrate for a warrant. As a rule that is the end of these ordinary cases.

40093. When a man is charged under those circumstances, and has deposited his 7s. 6d., and does not appear the next day, and then it is marked "Pledge forfeited," does that count as a previous conviction?—No.

40094. Then he may go any number of times?—Yes, that is not a conviction.

40095. (Chairman.) And the name may be a false one?—The name may be a false one.

40096. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) According to that a man might be charged with being drunk and disorderly twenty times and it would not make any difference. He would simply deposit the money; it would cost him so much a time, and there is an end of it?—Every case is a first time according to the Act.

40097. Previous convictions are not taken into account?—No, there is no provision for that.

40098. Nor would you take it into account according to that. Supposing the man had been before you a good many times and charged a good many times the amount would be the same—there would always be the 7s. 6d.?—That is again at the discretion of the officer on duty. I mention 7s. 6d. as the very usual case for a simple charge of drunkenness. Sometimes there are circumstances in which he would make it much more. I have known cases in which £5 has been put down as the bail.

40099. Then the deposit of the money always seems to have the effect so far as the defendant is concerned of ridding him of a conviction?—Yes, except they proceed further with the case, which is not the rule.

40100. That is very rare?—That is very rare, except from some circumstances that the Superintendent or Magistrates think the case should be further proceeded with.

40102. I suppose that means that really the matter has turned out much more serious than was originally thought?—Yes.

40103. Supposing we had a list of the number of convictions for drunkeness in Glasgow during the year, it would not be a very useful record, would it?—The way I record it is the number of apprehensions, the number of pledges forfeited, and the number of convictions.

40104. You do keep a record of those?—Yes.

40105. Then, as to the arrest of prostitutes under the Act to which you have referred us. I do not quite understand what happens, supposing a woman is arrested and brought before a Lieutenant for the first time. Although it is quite clear the offence has been committed, she is let off with a caution?—Yes, as a rule.

40106. Then she is brought before the same Lieutenant a second time?—Yes.

40107. And he comes to the conclusion that there is a primâ facie case made out?—Yes.

40108. And then he detains her for the night?—Yes.

40109. Does she appear before the Magistrate the next morning?—She appears before the Magistrate the next morning.

40110. Then she is charged with the offence?—She is charged with the offence.

40111. Is all that he requires then a primâ facie case to detain her?—You refer to the Lieutenant?

40112. Yes?—Yes.

40113. He would not adjudicate upon it, of course?—No.

40114. I do not quite understand what you said to me before. You said if he had any doubt at all he would not take the charge. Why not, if there is a primâ facie case made out by two police-constables who depose to having seen her, and knowing her as a prostitute, and having seen her loitering and importuning for the purpose of prostitution. There is a primâ facie case made out on their statement. I do not quite follow why he should not take the charge if he only has to be satisfied that there is a primâ facie case.?—I think that matter of doubt arose with regard to some other matters in connection with the case.

40115. You may not have understood it, but you said you thought we were not dealing with the same thing, and that may be the reason of your having given the answer?—I will tell you a case which will illustrate what I mean. Not long ago two girls were brought in by two constables on this charge of importuning. They protested their innocence, and gave their address, and it was the first time they were brought in. One of the constables deposed to the Lieutenant that he had seen one or both of them—I am speaking from recollection—frequenting this place for some time back. The other constable did not know so much about them. In that case the Lieutenant did not detain those two girls.

40116. (Mr. Whitmore.) That was the first time they were charged?—Yes. I am speaking from recollection to illustrate a case.

40117. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In that case you are putting he had not got the definite statement of two witnesses, because one seemed to be in doubt?—He had the definite statement from the two constables as to the importuning, but the difference between the two was that one of the men had been longer on the beat, and said that these girls had been for some time frequenting this place. The other could not speak to any long period.

Mr. J. V. Stevenson.
10 April 1907.

40118. Importuning would not be an offence. It must be importuning for the purpose of prostitution?—Yes, and by a prostitute or night walker.

40119. Exactly, and therefore it is an essential part of the proof that the woman was a prostitute?—Why I mentioned that case to you was to illustrate that if the Lieutenant had a doubt that the woman was a prostitute he would exercise his power, and would not detain the woman.

40120. That is a doubt as to whether a primâ facie case had been made out. That is all it is, is it not?—Yes.

40121. If he had the evidence of two police-constables, who stated it definitely, he would be bound, would he not, to accept the charge?—He would.

40122. And then to leave it to the Magistrate to deal with?—Yes, with the exception of what I tell you—the first offence.

40123. Supposing a woman was arrested by two constables, and this charge was preferred, and the Lieutenant dismissed her with a caution—that is discharged her with a caution. Supposing the woman disputed the charge, but the Lieutenant thought it was true. What redress would the woman have?—If she had any witnesses, or she could call any person to speak to her character, or she could give evidence that she was a respectable woman, giving her name and address and the place where she was employed—all that would be inquired into.

40124. But she is arrested and brought in, and supposing she denies the charge, and the two constables say that they know her as a prostitute, and they have seen her in a certain part importuning persons for the purpose of prostitution; she denies it, but the Lieutenant thinks the police-constables are speaking the truth. What happens then?—He would detain her.

40125. Not if it was the first time?—Not if it was the first time. He would caution her.

40126. If he detains her she would have the opportunity of presenting her case to the court the next day and of fighting the issue. But supposing he does not detain her, but comes to the conclusion that the police-constables are stating what is true, and he does not believe her evidence, then she has no redress at all, has she?—No, not if he does not detain her. She could make a complaint to me, and I would go into the case. I have had a case pretty nearly like that before me. She can always show she is a respectable woman if she shows employment and address.

40127. Of course, and she might equally bring an action for wrongeous arrest?—Yes, and we have had such cases.

40128. In recent years?—Within two years. An action was tried in Edinburgh in the Court of Session, which was brought by a woman against two constables for wrongeous arrest. The Judge of the High Court held that though it was proved that this woman was not a prostitute, yet, if she acted as she appeared to have done in this case after the manner of a prostitute, the police were justified in apprehending her. The case went in favour of the police there.

40129. If she acted in the manner—that means on that particular evening?—Yes.

40130. I do not understand that, because I thought they would not arrest her if they had not noticed her some time before?—This woman, whose case has now come to my recollection, was a keeper of a house where a number of unfortunate women lived. That was notorious. She came out with these women. She had been in the court for other offences, and she was well known. She was in company with a prostitute on this particular night, and the police said that she and the other woman accosted several men, and they took her into custody. I think she was liberated—of course, I am speaking from recollection; I did not come prepared with the facts, but I want to illustrate this point. She was liberated by the Lieutenant on duty, I think, on the ground that she was not a known prostitute. The other woman was detained. At the trial the next day the case was dismissed by the Magistrates against the other woman. The first-mentioned woman took an action against the constables for wrongeous arrest, and the Judge there held that the police were justified.

40131. But did the police-constables in that case say that they had known her for some time as a prostitte?—I do not think they could have done so.

40132. Then how did they come to arrest her?—Because of her actions as a prostitute. She was known to frequent this locality—it was a bad locality, and she was frequenting it in the company of prostitutes.

40133. But I understood you to say that police-constables never arrest a woman unless they have known her for some time as a prostitute?—I should have to go into the whole case before you to satisfy your mind as to the whole thing.

40134. It is sufficient that the Judge has found it, and we are not inquiring into that particular case?—I could give you the whole case from beginning to end, but I am only giving you now the material points of the case. She was in company with a prostitute.

40135. That would rather indicate, would it not, that at least, in that case, the constable had arrested a woman whom they had not known as a prostitute for some time before?—They might have called her a street walker. "Street walker" is the word in the Act also.

40136. Is there any distinction?—That point arose at the trial as to whether there was a distinction or not between the two words in the Act—"street walker" and "prostitute." The two words are used, and the point was argued that there was a distinction, and that a woman might be a street walker without being a prostitute.

40137. (Chairman.) She might be going with a prostitute, and walking the streets with the view of the other woman going with men?—It was something like that. She was aiding and abetting the other woman in her prostitution.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Is that word "street walker" used in similar Acts?—I do not remember any other Acts.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is used in the English Acts.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is used in all our Acts, I think.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Sometimes there is the word "night walker."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you know any case, Mr. Muir, in which the distinction is drawn in English law?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No. There is only the presumption that Parliament never uses two words to mean one thing.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You must not press that too far.

(Chairman.) The word "night walker" is used in some Acts.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes.

40138. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Police constables would not arrest a woman who was not a known prostitute in the ordinary course of their duty?—No, not in the ordinary course. I would say this was an exceptional case.

40139. It was an exceptional case in which they had to justify what had taken place?—Yes, and this woman was notoriously with these women.

40140. They had acted in this way, and whether rightly or wrongly, it is a question which was determined?—It took a judge and a jury to decide whether it was right or wrong.

40141. The Judge held, anyhow, that no action would lie?—Yes; he threw out the action against the police constables. It was considered of sufficient importance that the present Lord Advocate appeared for the constables—I forget whether he was Lord Advocate then, but I think he was.

40142. Are the men who have to perform this duty of arresting women uniformed constables?—Some.

40143. Do you also employ constables in private clothes?—Yes, for various duties, that among others; for duties that cannot very well be performed by men who are conspicuous by their uniforms.

40144. Street betting?—Street betting, for instance.

40145. And also this kind of offence?—Yes.

40146. When you employ men in private clothes for the purpose of detecting street betting do the men have to give any account when they return to the police office of where they have been?—They are given general instructions as to the locality where they are to do their duty.

40147. And as to how many hours they are to remain away?—Yes.

40148. When they come back do they say what they have done?—They would inform the Lieutenant on duty if there is anything serious that needs to be reported, and they would inform him when they go off duty.

40149. Do they make you a report of what they have done during the time?—Sometimes.

40150. Supposing they have made no arrest, or they have detected no offence, and they have been away for four hours, do they simply come back and report their return and go off duty?—One must judge whether they have done their duty well by taking the whole scope of their time on duty.

40151. I only wanted to know how it was done. I only wanted to know what the course of business was, and whether when they did return they made a report?—They only make a verbal report; they do not make a written report.

40152. Would they say how they had spent their time?—If they are sent out on a particular duty, to look for particular offences in the locality, such as bookmaking and other things, then they would state what they had done.

40153. You told us about five constables altogether of which you gave particulars who had been dismissed. Have you had any other complaints of a similar character?—Of that kind?

40154. Yes, of receiving money, or of attempting to obtain money?—Do you mean as regards prostitution.

40155. I did not mean to confine it to prostitutes; but take it first as to prostitutes?—No; I have had no other cases of men accused of taking money. I have had a case of a man who was in the habit of taking a quantity of whisky from a publican. That is the nearest.

40156. Does that mean that in all the five cases you have told us of into which you made inquiry you found the charges proved, and dismissed the constables?—Those are all the cases of that nature that I have had in my time.

40157. In every one of the cases brought before you you found the charge proved when you inquired into it?—Of that nature, yes.

40158. (Mr. Dickinson.) You told us that you, as Chief Constable, were appointed by the Magistrates' Committee?—And by the Sheriff of Lanarkshire.

40159. You are under the Magistrates' Committee?—Yes; I will read you the section of the Act.

40160. (Chairman.) I think it is Section 71?—Section 71 says: "The Magistrates' Committee, and the Sheriff of Lanarkshire, excluding the Sheriff-substitutes, shall from time to time appoint a Chief Constable." Then Section 84 says: "The Chief Constable shall be responsible to the Board, and shall be under their regulation with reference to such of the provisions of this Act as he is or shall be empowered to carry into effect, classed under the following heads of 'Special Provisions, Fireworks and Gunpowder, Sanitary Objects, Nuisances, Diseases, Lodging-houses, Food'; and shall be responsible to the Magistrates' Committee, and be under their regulation with reference to all his other duties."

40161. (Mr. Dickinson.) Is the Magistrates' Committee a committee of magistrates, or is it a committee of all the City Magistrates?—No, only the Magistrates. They are fourteen in number; they are Magistrates elected to the office of Magistrate for a period of three years.

40162. How many Magistrates are there altogether of this particular class of magistrate?—Fourteen.

40163. They are the men who adjudicate on these cases in court?—These men adjudicate in the nine courts as Magistrates. There are also past Magistrates, who are called Police Judges, appointed by the Corporation, who also sit in these nine courts.

40164. How many of those Magistrates are there?—The number is indefinite.

40165. A large number?—Yes, the Corporation can ppoint as many as they think fit.

40166. Are these fourteen Magistrates appointed by the Corporation?—They are.

40167. And they are appointed only for three years?—For three years.

40168. Are the other Magistrates appointed for life?—While they are members of the Corporation.

40169. The Magistrates who have the direction of the police in Glasgow are really appointed by the Corporation?—Yes.

40170. When you speak of a Committee of Magistrates you mean a committee of men appointed by the Corporation?—Yes; I mean a committee of fourteen Magistrates who are charged with the peace and order of the City.

40171. I suppose the Corporation raise money to maintain it?—Yes. Another committee deals with all financial matters—the Watching and Lighting Committee.

40172. There is a Watching and Lighting Committee?—It is not a watching committee as it is in England, where the Watch Committee have entire control of the police with regard to all matters of peace and order. A Watching and Lighting Committee deal with all financial matters.

40173. But the Magistrates' Committee, these fourteen, have to deal with any difficulty so far as that difficulty is not remedied by yourself?—Yes.

40174. And they are the Magistrates who regulate the ordinary practice?—Yes.

40175. Are the other Magistrates, the Police Judges, appointed for life?—They are appointed only while they are members of the Corporation.

40176. Can they sit, and do they sit, as a rule?—Yes.

40177. Or do they only fill up vacancies?—There is a rota made out for the courts they are to take, and they take them for a fortnight at a time; they are in a particular court.

40178. They have no supervision over the police at all?—No, but the Magistrates have a supervision.

40179. The Magistrates have a supervision?—Yes, as is laid down by the Act of 1866.

40180. What Government control is there?—There is a Government Inspector appointed by the Government for Scotland; he makes an inspection annually; he looks to see that the Government get proper value for their side of the contribution, and he looks into the discipline, into the clothing, into the buildings, and matters of that kind.

40181. Now can you tell me about the Procurator Fiscal. He is, I understand, a solicitor?—He is.

40182. A writer to the Signet?—No; that is a special grade—a writer.

40183. Is he employed solely on this work?—Solely; he has no other work.

40184. (Mr. Whitmore.) Is he allowed to do any private practice?—He is not allowed to do any private practice.

40185. (Mr. Dickinson.) Has he an office and a clerk?—He has an office and a couple of clerks.

40186. That is sufficient for his work?—Yes; he is independent of me. I mean I have no control over him, his clerks, or his office.

40187. What is the relationship between him and your Superintendent and Lieutenant who are appointed as your assistants?—He can advise and direct in the matter of prosecutions; he can direct what cases to take up, and what cases to drop.

40188. Must they get his approval in a difficult case?—Yes; for instance, any difficult case against a licensed publican is sent to him by the Superintendent, and he decides in that particular case whether it is to be taken up or not.

40189. Who gives directions that it shall be taken up?—He himself. That was in existence before my time.

40190. Then he has independent power over your subordinates?—To the extent of prosecutions.

40191. You have nothing to do with any prosecutions?—No; nor any policeman.

40192. What happens when a doubtful case arises. Supposing a woman is threatened with a prosecution for prostitution, who would consult him as to what steps should be taken? You would not. You would have nothing to do with it?—I should be consulted. The Superintendent would come and tell me about the case, and I should say, "The Fiscal must decide whether that case must be taken up or not; you must consult him." He might consult me, perhaps, as to the disciplinary part of it; but the Fiscal must decide in a difficult case whether it is to be taken up or not.

Mr. J. V. Stevenson.

10 April 1907.

40193. The first thing the Superintendent would have to do would be to go to you and not to the Procurator Fiscal?—He would come to me, probably as a matter of courtesy to me, but he would go direct to the Procurator Fiscal in the matter of a prosecution.

40194. Supposing a wrongful prosecution takes place, it would be the Procurator Fiscal who would be to blame, I suppose?—If he himself knew of that particular case he would be responsible.

40195. Is he not presumed to know of it?—He cannot possibly know of all the cases which come before the Glasgow Police Court. The Superintendent must decide a great many cases for himself as to whether he will take them up or not.

40196. The Procurator Fiscal is theoretically the prosecutor in all cases?—I should say he is.

(Chairman.) He has to sign the plaint.

(Witness.) The plaint is in his name.

(Chairman.) He or the Superintendent has to sign the plaint.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Exactly.

(Chairman.) It is that document which gives the police court its jurisdiction, according to this witness.

40197. (Mr. Dickinson.) Is that actually signed by the Procurator Fiscal?—No, by the Assistant Procurator Fiscal.

40198. Then the Superintendent signs the name and puts "Assistant" before it?—Yes.

(Chairman.) That is done under a special Act of Parliament; and Mr. Stevenson has read the clause from the Act of Parliament with reference to the appointment of the Procurator Fiscal.

(Witness.) It is not an Act of Parliament. He is appointed by the Corporation annually.

(Chairman.) But the Act of Parliament gives the Corporation power to do so.

(Witness.) I will send you, for your information, later, what is the authority for the appointment of the Procurator Fiscal by the Corporation.

(Chairman.) Thank you.

40199. (Mr. Dickinson.) But I understand from you that the great majority of cases are brought before the magistrates on the sole initiative of the Superintendent of the division?—Yes.

40200. And the Procurator Fiscal does not come into it at all?—No; he could not possibly know the multitude of cases called before the Court.

40201. What is the salary of the Procurator Fiscal?—I think it is about £700 a year. I may explain further that the Procurator Fiscal has other duties to perform; he has to prosecute and to represent the Corporation in other matters, such as matters in what we call the Dean of Guild Court, which takes up a deal of his time. That is a Court which deals with buildings, and gives sanction for erecting buildings in the streets. I do not know whether that is exactly the English equivalent.

40202. I want to ask you something about what you said with regard to witnesses. You said under the Scotch law there must be two witnesses unless the subject allows of one being sufficient?—Yes.

40203. May I take it that in most of the cases that we are dealing with now two witnesses are imperative?—In all of them.

40204. Is that so with regard to cases of prostitution?—Yes.

40205. Then you never get one constable bringing in a woman and accusing her of prostitution?—No.

40206. How do they work? Do they work in couples?—At certain hours in certain localities.

40207. Do you put two men in plain clothes to watch?—Yes.

40208. And that applies to cases of disorder, too?—Yes.

40209. How do you manage to get a second witness in a case of disorder?—Do you mean a police witness?

40210. Yes, because there, I suppose, would be only one policeman?—It would depend. In the centre of the town on Saturday evenings, and at times like that, and at certain hours of the evening, there would be two men coming together, and if they came across a case they go together; but taking a case where there is only one man, he would either have to get an ordinary citizen as a witness, perhaps the person who makes a complaint about disorder, or he must summon a neighbouring constable.

40211. Then in the case of a street row with one constable present, it is his duty, I suppose, to bring somebody with him from among the onlookers?—Yes.

40212. Is that done constantly?—We get evidence from citizens.

40213. In the majority of cases are the witnesses two constables, or one constable and an onlooker?—I should say, in the majority of cases, two constables.

40214. If a constable cannot get another witness he cannot bring a man in?—The case is dropped.

40215. Are these cases examined at the police station?—They are asked a few questions to see what they know about the matter.

40216. Is that taken down in writing?—Very briefly. The names and addresses chiefly are taken down.

40217. I suppose you have statistics of apprehensions and convictions for prostitution?—I have some. I have them for the years 1904, 1905 and 1906. For which year would you like them—for all?

40218. If you have a Table, and could let us have it, that would be the best thing?—I can give you, of course, a fuller Table.

40219. May I look at the Table?—Yes. (The Table was handed to the Commissioners.)

40220. This does not give what I want to get at. I see here you give the number of arrests for drunkenness in 1906 as 19,334, and the number of cases refused is 109?—I gave that because it was in the memorandum.

40221. After the information you have given us today, could you divide that 19,334 into the number of arrests and the number of convictions?—I could not do it now, but I could send it to you.

40222. We might have that, and also with regard to importuning. I see the number of cases of arrests for importuning was 1,624, and cases refused 177?—Yes.

40223. That also requires dividing. This shows a considerable reduction of arrests in cases of prostitution. There were 2,247 cases in 1904 and 1,624 cases in 1906?—The gradual operation of the Immoral Traffic Act, which was passed in the year 1902, for Scotland, has cleared out of Glasgow a certain number of men, foreigners mostly, who kept a lot of women for the purpose of prostitution. That might have had some effect in reducing the figures.

40224. Last year was there a reduction of the number?—I could not give you an answer to that question; but it seems to me that the supply is always coming on.

40225. (Mr. Whitmore.) Is it part of your duty personally to supervise the police officers?—No. My duties take up too much of my time to admit of my doing that; it is only occasionally I can do it.

40226. You are the central officer?—Yes.

40227. You have no assistant or deputy?—No, I have no assistant or deputy.

40228. Do you not think it would be advisable that there should be some central officer appointed who could go round Glasgow to supervise the police officers?—I do. I think it would be of great assistance to the Chief Constable of Glasgow.

40229. I understand there are 1,563 policemen in Glasgow. Do you think it too large a duty for one central officer to deal personally with that number of police?—I take it you are referring to an officer who could exercise supervision over all the divisions?

40230. Yes; I am referring to a central officer like the Chief Commissioner here, who is not promoted from the ranks, and who would have general supervision over the police. What I mean is this. I am asking you whether it would be advisable that there should be one or more central officers with the general responsibility of supervising the police?—It would be of great assistance to the Chief Constable; but, of course, that again is a matter of money, for which the Corporation would have to pay.

40231. Speaking from your own experience, I understand you to say you think it would be advisable that there should be one or more central officers appointed to supervise the police?—I was trained in the Royal Irish Constabulary, and there the number of officers was much greater than anything I have experienced over here.

40232. In that Force are a number of the officers appointed from outside?—In the Royal Irish Constabulary half the District Inspectors are appointed direct as officers.

40233. And not promoted from the ranks?—No. The others make their way up from the ranks.

40234. (Chairman.) Only one or two other points I have to ask you about. The first is as to the provision of meals for prisoners in the cells. We have had evidence from Major Tarry, I think it was, that they provide meals for prisoners confined in cells?—There is bread provided, but nothing else. Prisoners cannot be confined for longer than 48 hours on remand. If they are on remand they are allowed bread and tea; otherwise if they are detained for the night they are only allowed bread.

40235. Are they allowed to send for food at their own expense?—They are allowed to send for food at their own expense, and their friends are allowed to bring food to them.

40236. Which constable's duty is it to get the food for them, or to order the food for them?—The turnkey. You mean food sent in by their friends?

40237. I see from your Instruction Book that a friend in this class of case has no right to go to the cell?—No.

40238. Supposing a friend brings food, which officer takes the food from the friend?—The turnkey.

40239. And it is the turnkey who will get food if the prisoner asked for it?—If the prisoner wants it out of his own money?

40240. Yes?—We employ waiters, ordinary civilian messengers, and if a prisoner wants a message of that kind sent the waiter brings it to the turnkey.

40241. And the prisoner then pays the turnkey?—The prisoner would give authority to have it taken out of his money which was taken from him when searched; the officer on duty would be in charge of his money.

40242. Do you search prisoners in all cases?—In all cases where they are sent to the cells, and a list of their property is made.

Mr. J. V. Stevenson.

10 April 1907.

40243. Major Tarry also suggested that in cases where the police had made a mistake of a kind that hardly justified perhaps the complainant in going to the expense of taking legal procedings some money should be paid to a person whose reputation had been damaged, or may have been damaged, by the action of the police by mistake. Has that suggestion ever occurred to you. I think Major Tarry suggested that it should come out of the Corporation funds?—If a person makes a complaint, or lodges a charge, or brings an action against a constable for a wrongeous arrest, that would come up before the Magistrates with a view to seeing whether they would defend the action or not, and I would report, and probably give them a recommendation as to whether the constable should be defended or not. That sometimes resolves itself into compensation being given without testing the case in court, where we feel that the constable has perhaps overstepped the limit.

40244. You mean you leave it to the constable to settle?—No, we leave it to the Corporation as to whether there should be money compensation paid with a view of settling an action if they do not take up the case, and it is a case in which the constable is wrong.

40245. The matter passes out of your hands, and you have nothing to say as to that as Chief Constable, although I dare say your advice may be asked, That is not in your department?—No; I could not defend a man myself. I have no funds. The Corporation would undertake to defend a man if they considered that he had acted properly.

40246. There is one general question which I did not put to you which I think you touch upon in the statement you were good enough to send to us. What is the general attitude of the public in Glasgow towards the police officers. Is it a friendly attitude?—It depends on locality to some extent. The feeling towards the police is decidedly good in the better class localities, and amongst the shopkeeping class. In the rougher localities the feeling is hostile and always in favour of the arrested person.

40247. And in those localities it is not so easy for the police to obtain witnesses to assist them in a charge?—No; on the other hand, a number of witnesses will come against the police cases.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I suppose in those localities there are generally two constables?—Yes, on a Saturday night.

(Chairman.) The Commissioners are very greatly indebted to you for your evidence, and for your courtesy in coming all the way from Glasgow. We are much obliged to you.

Miss Catherine Ellen Matson, sworn.

40248. (Chairman.) I think you are commonly known as Sister Mildred?—Yes.

40249. You reside at Manchester House, 5, Eastbourne Terrace, Paddington?—I did reside there when I gave my statement, but I am not residing there now.

40250. Where do you reside now?—In Chalton Street.

40251. Is Manchester House a kind of home?—It is a Sisters' house.

40252. You were, when you made your statement, the Sister in charge of the establishment called Manchester House?—Yes; it is called Winchester House.

40253. That is a Rescue Home?—It is a Rescue Home for Piccadilly girls principally.

40254. You used to go to Piccadilly Circus when you were Sister in charge of the Home three times a week, did you not?—Yes, on an average.

40255. At night time?—At night time, from 11 till half-past 1 or 2.

40256. What did you do there?—At Piccadilly Circus?

40257. Yes?—I went for the purpose of speaking to the girls in Leicester Square and Shaftesbury Avenue.

40258. With what object?—With the idea of getting them either into our Home on into other homes—with the idea of getting them to give up the life they were leading.

Miss C. E. Matson.

40259. Sometimes I think you went with another lady?—I generally went with one of our matrons.

40260. Sometimes you went alone?—Yes, very often I used to go alone.

40261. How did you generally proceed? What was the kind of conversation that you had with these unfortunate girls when you were on this good errand?—It is difficult to say exactly. Of course, I represented a Sisterhood that had been at work at Piccadilly Circus for fourteen years, so very often the girls would come and speak to me at once, and I had not to introduce myself.

40262. Your Sisterhood is well known to unfortunate women in this part of the town?—Yes.

40263. Did you give them any invitation to that Home, or anything of that kind, with a view to their coming permanently into the Home?—Yes, and I always had an at-home on Friday afternoon, once a week, to which I invited girls, so as to keep in closer touch with them.

40264. I understand you did about eighteen months' work in Piccadilly Circus?—Yes, eighteen months or two years.

40265. Were you able in that time to rescue any girls in the sense of getting them to come to your Home, more or less permanently, until they got occupation?—Yes.

40266. How many were you able to rescue, do you think?—I should think within that time we had from Piccadilly Circus between twenty and thirty girls, but I have come into contact with about 100 or more.

Miss C. E. Matson.

10 April 1907.

40267. You have come in contact with at least 100?—Yes, or possibly more in other ways

40268. Many of the 100 perhaps, or more, who did not come to the Home permanently, came perhaps to see you on one of your at-home days?—Yes. In some cases one has been able to restore them to their friends.

40269. You have had, therefore, plenty of opportunity of talking to these girls about their life and the hardships incident to it?—I think so. I think I have been able to get into touch with them. Of course, they are not always truthful.

40270. You had conversations with these girls before this Commission was appointed, I suppose?—Yes.

40271. And before there was any public talk about police action?—Yes.

40272. Will you tell us what your general impression is or was as to the relations of the police to these girls?—The girls had a great fear of the police. I have never known them offer the policemen a bribe. I have questioned them about it, because I used to hear that the police were in league with the girls. The girls have denied it to me; they said they did not bribe the police, and they had not bribed the police.

40273. Every girl denied that?—Every girl that I have spoken to about it. I cannot recollect any girl that affirmed that at all.

40274. Have you ever observed constables talking to girls in a way that excited your suspicions at all?—Never, when I have been in Piccadilly Circus.

40275. Have you observed any rudeness or undue brutality on the part of the police towards these women in telling them to move on?—Never when I have been there.

40276. Have you ever heard any constable use any bad language to any of these women?—Never.

40277. In the statement you sent in I see this expression: "Girls have told me that it does not pay to bribe the police now." Did any girl tell you that?—Yes, girls have told me that. I went on to Piccadilly Circus twelve years ago, first of all. My work has been changed since then. Things might have been different, but that is all I have been able to infer from them. I have no evidence of it at all. That would be about fourteen or fifteen years ago. I know nothing about that.

40278. Have you ever occasion, in doing your good work, to talk to the police-constables about that?—Yes, I very frequently speak to the constables on duty.

40279. Do the constables on the beat know what your occupation is there?—Yes, and they bring girls to me.

40280. What has been the attitude of the police towards you and your friends who are engaged in this rescue work?—They have always been most courteous. Inspectors have come to me when I have been out at night about young girls, and more than once they have brought girls to me themselves.

40281. Do you find that most of the girls whom you rescue, or that most of the girls who go as far as coming to one of your afternoon at-homes have been arrested?—A number of them have been arrested.

40282. And some, I suppose, more than once?—Yes.

40283. Do those who have been arrested complain of their treatment at the police station at all?—They have never made any complaint. They have been annoyed at being arrested, but they have never said they have been hardly treated, or have not been able to get to their friends.

40284. They have been annoyed at being arrested?—Yes, because it meant a fine for them.

40285. But, apart from the fact of arrest, they did not complain of any violence?—They never have to me.

40286. When you say they never have to you, do you mean that other people have told you that they have complained to them?—No, I mean in the conversations I have had with them myself.

40287. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You told the learned Chairman that this expression had been used: "It did not pay to bribe the police now." Do you remember when that expression was used?—It was said when I first began rescue work, about two years ago.

40288. Was it said by more than one?—It was said in general conversation; I cannot recollect it; it is an impression on my mind from which I inferred that things had altered.

40289. From which you inferred that things had altered, meaning by that that at one time it did, and now it did not?—That is what I inferred from it.

40290. Did you get any explanation of why it did not pay to bribe them now?—No, I do not think I followed it up.

40291. I suppose it was merely in general conversation that this was stated, or did you ask the question?—I have never gone into the question of the police with the girls, because I always hold myself quite independent of the police or the girls.

40292. But, so far as your general observation goes, in your experience amongst these girls, you found no reason to complain of the attitude of the police?—None whatever.

40293. Do they tell you about their lives?—They tell me a great deal in confidence after I have got to know them some little while.

40294. Are they on such confidential terms with you that, supposing they were in the habit of bribing the police, they would tell you?—Yes, I quite think they would tell me, because they have told me more confidential things than that.

40295. (Chairman.) Not connected with the police, you mean?—Yes.

40296. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Things which they would be more anxious to keep quiet?—Yes.

40297. (Mr. Whitmore.) Do you think the police action in Piccadilly Circus has diminished the number of prostitutes there?—I think there are fewer there now than there were thirteen years ago, when I first went. There was a break in my work, and when I went again I noticed a great difference in the streets; the streets were much more orderly. Latterly I think the girls have become bolder.

40298. What do you mean by "latterly"?—What I may call this winter, within the last six months or so.

40299. Since the appointment of this Commission?—Yes. I think the girls have become more riotous, because I have heard in the streets: "I will report it to the Police Commission."

40300. Do you think the attempt to drive the girls off the streets gets rid of the evil altogether?—No. I think it sends the girls into flats and into the suburbs—it sends them a great deal further.

40301. Do you think the system pursued has been effective as regards Piccadilly?—Yes, as far as the streets are concerned, but it does not diminish the evil itself, according to my idea.

40302. (Chairman.) You said in answer to Mr. Whitmore that it drives them into the suburbs. Do you mean into houses in the suburbs?—No. I have no knowledge of rescue work in the suburbs, but I understand there is a greater number of girls in the streets than there used to be.

40303. Do you mean that the clearance of Piccadilly only leads to the filling up of other places?—Yes. I have no knowledge of it, but I have gathered that from others.

40304. Do you think the number of unfortunates in the streets in the suburbs has increased?—Yes, in places, for instance, like Crouch End.

40305. (Mr. Whitmore.) Would they ply their business in the streets of the suburbs?—I think there is a greater number of prostitutes in the streets in the suburbs. I have only gathered that from others whom I have met.

40306. (Chairman.) From what you have gathered from others, your impression is that the number of prostitutes in the streets has been increasing in the suburbs of late years?—Yes.

40307. I understand you to say with regard to Piccadilly and that neighbourhood the condition of things until very recently was much better than it was twelve years ago?—Much better. When I went to Piccadilly Circus I used to have my bonnet torn off. Of course, I do not now.

40308. By whom was your bonnet torn off?—By the girls in the streets.

40309. They resented any good advice?—Yes, and I think their whole behaviour was much looser altogether. I think they have made the streets much more orderly. There was much more drunkenness.

40310. (Mr. Dickinson.) You think the streets are much more orderly, do you, owing to the action of the police?—I think so.

40311. You have no reduction in the number of police in that part?—No.

40312. (Chairman.) I understand you to say you doubt whether the police action has diminished immorality in London?—It has diminished street immorality.

40313. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In Piccadilly?—In Piccadilly.

40314. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you know the Tottenham Court Road, and about that part?—I know it. Miss C. E. Matson.

40315. Do you work there?—Occasionally—about once a month, perhaps, but my work is confined more particularly to Leicester Square. 10 April 1907.

40316. Do you think the condition of things has improved there?—I should not like to give any private opinion.

(Chairman.) Thank you. The Commission are much obliged to you for coming and giving evidence here.

Mr. William John Taylor, sworn.

40317. (Chairman.) Are you the Secretary of the London Female Prevention and Reformatory Institution, 200, Euston Road?—I am.

40318. And you have been connected with that Institute for 38 years?—Nearly 39 years in all.

40319. What is the general object of the Institution?—We have separate Homes for the protection of respectable, virtuous girls, and we train them for domestic service, and we have others for the reclamation of fallen women. We have also a refuge that we keep open all night for the immediate succour of both classes found destitute in the streets at night.

40320. Do the police ever send you girls as inmates in your Homes?—Yes, very often. Last year we had nineteen, and this year already we have had eight sent by the police either met with in the streets or from the police station.

40321. How many girls have passed through your hands, if I may use the metaphor, during the last few years?—We have on an average 700 and 800 a year.

40322. They come to you for a time, and remain in the Home, and then go away?—Yes. Sometimes we have them in our Home for twelve or eighteen months, according to circumstances; it may be less if they do not need to be kept so long for training.

40323. When a girl comes to the Home, say sent by the police, or is brought by some rescue worker to you, do you make it your practice to examine the girls at all by questions?—Yes; we have a lady registrar, who invariably goes into all the circumstances first of all, but all cases sent to the Homes are referred to me, and I have to go into the matter and decide which Home to send them to.

40324. What topics do you touch upon? Do you ask the girl when first she went wrong?—That is done by a lady.

40325. If it is a case in which the girl has been getting her living as a prostitute do you inquire into her history?—That is done by the lady. I should not go into those matters personally without its being inquired into by a lady, and recorded in black and white, which I have before me, without asking the girl a number of questions which I should consider objectionable from the point of view of being a male.

40326. My object in putting the question to you was to lead up to this: Do you talk to the girls in such a way as might lead them to give you their confidence?—Most decidedly, and I think I have been very effective in that department. I have known hundreds of women who have given me their confidence where they have not even given it to a woman.

40328. Do you think that police constables ever do accept money from these unfortunate women?—I have not met with any case of the kind. I have never met with a case of the kind. I know that the police are very often exceedingly kind to these women in the streets. There are a great many instances of what I should call touching instances of kindness on the part of the police to poor women, and respectable women, too, who might be found destitute in the streets. Exceptional kindness has been shown very often by the police officer.

40329. Then I am to understand you do not recollect even a complaint of blackmailing by the police from one of these unfortunate women?—Not from one as to which it could be traced. Mr. W. J. Taylor.

40330. You have heard girls say they have heard of cases?—I have heard girls say they have heard of cases. When I have put it to them: "Has it ever occurred with you," they have invariably said no. I have never met with any direct case.

40331. Have they ever complained that the police have suggested improper relations to them?—No; most of them say the police have been very kind in advising them. I have heard policemen speaking like a father to these women, and advising them to turn over a new leaf.

40332. You are able to give us some instances in which the police behaved with very great kindness and propriety in regard to these women?—Yes.

40333. There is one, for instance, in which you say a prostitute took a girl who was homeless to the police station?—Yes. That was a girl fourteen years of age. She found her conversing with a man at midnight in the streets, and she got the girl away from the man, and took her to the police station. The Inspector in charge sent a constable round to my Refuge with her, and we took charge of her until we got her home again to her parents.

40334. That seems to be a case in which the police had treated a destitute girl with very great kindness?—She was fourteen years of age.

40335. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I understand that is a case in which a prostitute took a girl to the police station?—Yes.

40336. (Chairman.) Do you recollect any complaint of a girl having got into trouble because she had neglected to be friendly with the police, either by paying money or otherwise?—No, I have never met with a case.

40337. How many cases do you think have been dealt with by you during the thirty odd years you have been connected with the Institution?—I should think I must have seen from first to last nearly forty thousand.

40338. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you mean cases of prostitutes?—No—young women, some of whom would be respectable; I daresay about half and half.

40339. (Chairman.) I was going to ask you what proportion the prostitutes rescued bear to merely cases of respectable people?—They are about equal in number.

40340. And in regard to all those you never recollect one of them complaining to you of having been blackmailed by the police?—I have not. Of course, it is one of the cases I have not specifically inquired into, but it has never come to my knowledge.

40341. I suppose a great many of the facts and details about the lives of these women have come to your knowledge?—A great many have.

40342. Do you think it is one of those things that they would conceal from you? They come to you as a friend. Do you think it is something they would rather not like to tell you?—I do not think so. I think if anything arises leading up to their telling me they would tell me. If nothing arises leading up to it they probably would not volunteer it, and I should not hear it.

40343. The girls that you have come across have not even complained of being arrested?—No; I think they felt that they deserved it.

40344. (Mr. Dickinson.) Am I right in saying that the majority of the women you have come across are hardened prostitutes?—Yes. Sometimes we meet with those who have been for many years leading a bad life, and have been locked up a good many times for drunkenness; but, speaking generally, they come to us after they have been a few months on the streets.

Mr. W. J. Taylor.

16 April 1907.

40345. Therefore can you speak with much knowledge of the system of the regular street walker?—Yes, I should think so, after doing this work all these years. I think I ought to.

40346. You think your knowledge enables you to say that there is no general system?—I can hardly define it in so many words, but I should not think there is very much cause for complaint.

40347. Do you think there is some?—There may be cases. As I say, I have heard these rumours, but I have never been able to meet with a definite case.

40348. Have you had anything to do with rescue work in other towns?—Only in London.

40349. Do you think the condition of things in London with regard to prostitutes in the streets has improved?—Undoubtedly. I am speaking from a large number of years' experience. You will find that the evil will change from one locality, and then it will be better, and then it will break out in a new district; but, taking London as a whole, I should say it is vastly better now than it was thirty or forty years ago.

40350. Does your experience extend over the whole of London, or only to a portion of it?—I may say to more or less the whole of London, although our Homes are mostly in the north-west and south-west, and perhaps I know more of those than others; but we receive women from the east end of London, and so on.

40351. One of your homes is in the Euston Road?—Yes; we have our office there. Of course, there are local reasons for it. We have huge termini there; then the road is very largely a road with private houses, and many of them are used as a sort of blind, I believe, as private hotels. If it were a business neighbourhood, with shops built out, and so on, I believe Euston Road would change its character very rapidly. I think the local conditions give rise very much to the condition.

40352. Do you think the streets are frequented by women by reason of the fact that the private houses are close by?—Yes.

40353. Do you think in that particular locality more active steps should be taken by the police?—I do not think the police have power to initiate action against the houses, but the Borough Council has; and I believe that our Borough Council of St. Pancras is pretty active. Of course, the evidence of the police will obtain convictions, and I understand the evidence is generally forthcoming when it is called for.

40354. That is with regard to the houses; but do you think police action should be more active in keeping women off the streets, knowing that in other parts it has been successful?—Only by keeping people moving on.

40355. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What do you mean by "moving on"?—By keeping the people moving on, and not allowing these women to have conversation with men.

40356. (Mr. Dickinson.) If the people in the houses you refer to are prosecuted, it does clear the streets?—Undoubtedly.

40357. There are more prosecutions in that neighbourhood?—Yes. Provided you could offer the women facilities for becoming respectable women again (and there are some) it would be advisable, but you always find, offer them what you may, that some will not take the opportunity of leading respectable lives. If you prosecute a woman for being about the streets you ought to afford homes, and so forth, for their reception and training. The things ought to go hand-in-hand together.

40358. Have the women who come to your Homes been prosecuted?—Some of them have.

40359. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) For soliciting?—Yes, for soliciting, and for disorderly conduct.

40360. (Mr. Dickinson.) Have you experience of importuning by men in your district?—I cannot say I have had any personal experience, but there is no doubt it takes place very considerably. I have heard ladies complain of having been solicited by men. I have known a lady who was dressed as a church worker complain that she could not go up and down a street without being molested by men.

40361. What street are you speaking of?—I think it was Tottenham Court Road the Sister was complaining of. I think something ought to be done to deal with men who do that, especially those who are known to be associated with these women. It may be very difficult to prove that they are living on a woman's earnings, or else the law could deal with them; but I have no doubt whatever that there is a large number of men about the streets of London associated with these women who act as what are called "bullies," and I think they ought to be dealt with very severely.

40362. The men live on their earnings?—Yes.

40363. I suppose that is a real evil?—Yes.

40364. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you mean that these men make them continue their trade?—Perhaps it is a little difficult to define it, because it is such a complicated thing; but a woman linked with a man of that kind would scarcely be able to cast him off because of his brutality and his association with other men, and of what would happen to her if he was badly treated. Again, I am afraid some of these women rather look for a little defence from some of these men, and for someone to back them up in case of difficulty.

40365. Those men are of an entirely different class to what Mr. Dickinson asked you about. Mr. Dickinson asked you about men soliciting women?—Yes. I quite see there is a difference.

40366. There are the two classes which you think should be dealt with if you could only find a means of doing it?—Yes, undoubtedly. There are the two classes.

40367. You said something in answer to the Chairman as to cases where money had been given by these women to the police. You said you had never met authenticated cases, and you also said that you had almost invariably been met with a negative?—Yes, I think invariably.

40368. Your expression was, and it struck me at the time, "almost invariably"?—Yes, I have never met with a positive "yes." I must withdraw the word "invariably."

40369. You mean that you have had an idea at times that something of the kind took place, but you have not been able to get real proof of it?—That is so; I have never been able to get any evidence of it.

40370. But you have thought something of the kind had taken place at any rate in the past?—Yes, I suppose so. Where there is smoke there is fire, and if there is a rumour there must be some basis for it; but my view is that the complaint is a very small one.

40371. There would be a natural difficulty in ascertaining the facts?—Quite so.

40372. (Chairman.) Why?

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I was going to suggest to you why. I think it was suggested by Sister Mildred's answer if it exists. If it exists there might be a refusal to speak of it because Sister Mildred said they have a great fear of the police?—It is very difficult to say how persons do withhold or unburden themselves.

40373. And it is very difficult to deal with rumour, of course?—Of course it is. I do not know that I could say why they do not; but I can only say I have not met with a case in which they have unburdened themselves to that extent.

(Chairman.) I can quite understand that it is a disgraceful thing for a policeman to accept the money, but I do not see why it should be a disgraceful thing for a woman, to avoid arrest, to give the money; and I should have thought it was one of the things they had often spoken about if it took place.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Inquiry might be made into it.

40374. (Chairman.) Sister Mildred has rescued them, I understand?—Yes. I have for years past been making specific inquiry on those lines, and I am telling you of what has come up.

40375. You are telling us what is the general impression on your mind with regard to all your work?—Yes.

40376. During your experience, as far as I follow from what you have told us, you do not think there is any change, and, with regard to the rumours that you have heard, it is neither better nor worse than it was. I quite understand you do not know of any authenticated case; but the rumours you have heard about the money being given by women to the police, and that sort of thing, are the rumours which you heard before, and you hear them now?—I have not heard it to any great extent at any time; it has only been in a few cases in the course of years.

Mr. W. J. Taylor.
10 April 1907.

40377. What I was trying to get at was whether you found that the rumours were more or less now than they were, say, ten years ago?—No; just once in a way you may hear of an instance of that kind; that is all.

40378. When you say "once in a way you may hear of an instance of that kind," what do you mean by that. What is the instance of which you would hear?—When a young woman perhaps in the course of conversation may have made a remark in relation to some woman she has known.

40379. What sort of remark?—As to whether a policeman has asked her for money, and she could not give him money, and he has locked her up. I have invariably said: "Has such a thing ever occurred to you," and they have said no. I have heard rumours, but I know nothing definite.

40380. (Mr. Whitmore.) I really should like to know what you mean by the word "rumour"?—When I have had conversations with women, and there has been some reference to someone they have known who would not give a bribe to a policeman, or did not give a bribe to a policeman, or something of that kind, I have invariably put the question "Has anything of this kind ever occurred in connection with yourself," and they have said "No. It is only hearsay."

40381. That has been the general reply?—Yes.

40382. There has been a denial of having given a bribe?—I have never met with a case in which a girl has admitted that she had to do it.

40383. (Chairman.) I gather you say that a girl had heard of it from some other girl, but in answer to your inquiry she said it had never happened to her?—I never met with a case in which a girl said she had to do it according to her statement.

40384. But you have heard that she said girls had been arrested because they would not give the policeman money?—I have heard so.

40385. You have never met a case in which a girl has said that?—I have never met a case.

40386. Have you ever known a case in which a girl has made an excuse of that kind when she has been arrested, and admitted it was not true; have you ever known a case of that kind?—No.

Mr. Solomon Cohen, sworn.

Mr. S. Cohen.

40387. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Are you secretary to the Gentlemen's Committee of the Jewish Association for the Protection of Girls and Women?—Yes.

40388. What does that Society exist for?—It exists for the protection of all Jewish girls who are arriving in this country, either foreign or English girls, who are alone and have no protection.

40389. English Jewish girls?—Yes.

40390. The work is not confined to fallen women?—Not at all. Our work is chiefly preventive work.

40391. How long has the Society been in existence?—It is now in its twenty-second year.

40392. Do you remember what caused it to be formed at all?—I think the reason was this, that at the time some of the ladies of the Jewish community came across some instances of Jewish girls who had adopted this life, or who had got into the toils of undesirable people, and they decided on forming a Ladies' Association, and it existed as a Ladies' Association until about nine years ago, when they came across cases of a sort of prostitution, or cases of that sort, in which ladies could not very well act, and so a gentlemen's committee was formed for the purpose of taking over cases of that sort.

40393. Do you have workers in the streets?—Not actually in the streets.

40394. Are the cases that you have cases which are brought to you or referred to you?—Yes.

40396. When a case is brought to you—we will deal with the case only of fallen women, which is the matter we are concerned with for the moment here—what do you do if a woman is brought to you or referred to you. What inquiry do you make, if any, about her?—If it is a case of a fallen woman who has sustained her first fall, she is immediately referred to the Lady Superintendent of our Rescue Home, who goes down with the matron to see her at her private house. We do not actually take up the case of old habitual prostitutes, or women who have been on the streets for years.

40397. It is for the protection of women who might be thrown into that class of life and who have not already started it?—Not actually started street walking, but who have probably got into the clutches of a man who might be a bully or a trafficer.

40398. Then that would mean this, if I understand you, that the experience of your Association would be confined to persons who are not actually engaged in the ordinary occupation of a prostitute?—Not necessarily, because we have had on many occasions girls who, knowing of the existence of the Association, have come to us complaining that they have got into the company of a man who had forced them on to the streets, and that he had brutally ill-treated them, and they come to us for the necessary protection which they think we can give them.

40399. Then is your experience large among prostitutes?—No, it is not large among prostitutes.

40400. It would be larger among other classes of women than amongst prostitutes?—That is so, except that I make it my business, and the business of one or two of my officers, to watch a great number of these women and men whom I know, in order that we may look out for any girls who are missing, and whom we are trying to trace to see whether they are upon the streets, and also to see whether they are getting any other girls in with them.

40401. Where is your work principally done?—Our work is done all over London, because we are the only Jewish Association, and almost any Jewish case that occurs in London is referred to us.

40402. Does that principally mean the East End?—Principally. Most of ours occurs in the East End.

40403. But you also have cases in the West and West Central district?—Oh, yes.

40404. With reference to the police, have you had any conversation with any of these fallen women as to their relations with the police?—I have myself in the case of two or three.

40405. Only in the case of two or three?—Myself, but the Lady Superintendent of our Home is also the official visitor to Holloway Prison for the female Jewish prisoners, and she sees all prisoners who are in Holloway for solicitation or prostitution, and she has authorised me to answer any question on her behalf?—

40406. I can only ask you generally with reference to your experience, not only your personal experience, but what you have ascertained in the course of your work as secretary of the Association from reports which are made to you, and what your general experience is as to the relations of these women with the police in regard to payments of money?—I can say quite definitely that I have not heard of any occasion in which any payment has been made by a woman to the police, or any occasion on which any demand has been made by the police upon these women. That I can state quite definitely.

40407. You know of no case?—No case whatever.

40408. And so far as your experience goes, how do the police treat these women?—As far as I know, the police treat them very considerately, I think; in some cases I think they treat them too leniently. I have had occasion to go out on the streets myself, as I have said, for the purpose of watching some of these women, so as to find out whether any of the girls for whom we are looking are amongst the prostitutes in the streets, and I have often thought that the women were allowed a great deal too much licence.

Mr. S. Cohen.
10 April 1907.

40409. Do you mean by that that things that were going on ought to have been stopped by the police?—What I mean is that I have seen the women accost men in the street quite openly.

40410. More than once?—Oh, yes.

40411. The same woman?—I have not stopped in one position to watch the same woman; I have merely walked along and seen a number of women doing it.

40412. Were the police about?—Oh, yes.

40413. They took no steps?—It is not that the police took no steps, but that the women did not do it when the police were about.

40414. Then I do not quite understand why you say the police were too lenient if they did not see it?—What I mean is this: in my opinion there were not enough police there.

40415. They were not watchful enough?—There were not enough there to cope with the number of women who are in what I call the black area.

40416. What is the black area?—I might say the black areas, because it extends now, as far as my work is concerned, right away from the Angel, coming along King's Cross, Euston Road, Tottenham Court Road, Oxford Street, Regent Street, and Piccadilly, which are about the worst quarters in London, and Shepherd's Bush at the present time is becoming also as bad.

40417. You mean bad for solicitation by prostitutes in the streets?—Yes.

40418. You do not think there are sufficient police to cope with the evil. Is that your view?—That is my view.

40419. Do you know there are police in private clothes?—Oh, yes.

40420. Do you know them?—No, I do not.

40421. You would not know whether there were any police in private clothes about at the time?—Not unless they were men with whom I have come in contact in the course of my work.

40422. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you think that more active operation on the part of the police would be a protection to an innocent girl?—I think so; but I think rather that if steps were taken by which the number of men who are on the streets could be diminished it would lessen the evil to a very great extent.

40423. Do you agree with the last witness that that is an evil which needs to be dealt with?—Quite so. I have noticed it actually myself for a good many years; even before I came into this work, that the number of men who walk along the principal thoroughfares, even in some of the side streets, molesting women is rather great.

40424. (Chairman.) Molesting women?—Speaking to them—talking to them in a way which suggests immorality, after the style and in the way in which the women importune the men.

40425. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand your work carries you to these streets constantly for the purpose of observation?—It does.

40426. I do not quite understand why?—Personally I am rather interested in the white slave traffic, and we have heard of several cases in which the men are concerned in this business, and consequently my committee have, on my advice, taken up the attitude of trying to get as much information with regard to these men as might lead us at some future time to be able to identify them in case it was necessary.

40427. What you are telling us is the result of real constant observation?—Yes.

40428. When you say the black area, I thought you dealt with the east end rather than the west end of London?—Yes, we do, but I live in the north-west district, and I have spent most part of my life in the west central and west end district, so I have known those districts not only from work in connection with my Association, but from actual experience.

40429. As regards the East End, are the streets in the East End more clear of prostitutes than they were or not?—I should say there is not very much difference. At the present time Bishopsgate Street, extending from Liverpool Street right the way down to Norton Folgate, is in a terrible state every night, and right down by Aldgate Church.

40430. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You say every night. What time does that mean?—I have seen the women there during the day; but, of course, the great number of them are there after dark, and right up to 12 or half-past 12 and 1 o'clock in the morning.

40431. (Mr. Dickinson.) Are they in large numbers?—In those streets the number is very great, or what I consider very great.

40432. As bad as Euston Road?—Yes, quite so. I refer to the other as the black area as being the area known to most people as the principal resorts of these.

40432*. Do you know the police take active steps in the east end of London?—I was present a few weeks ago in Aldgate when there were standing there, I should say, at the least eighteen or twenty women walking up and down round the church, and the police there were chasing these women all the way round the different streets, and that went on quite for an hour.

40433. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Chasing them, what for?—To clear them away from that corner.

40434. (Mr. Dickinson.) What do you mean by "chasing"?—Well, the women were standing there in groups, or just walking up and down, backwards and forwards, and the police went up to them, and the moment they saw the police coming near them they would scamper off, and the police would follow them round the streets and back again to the church. I have seen that taking place on several occasions.

40435. Do you know it is the practice on the part of the police in London that a woman must be cautioned before she is taken up?—I do not know that that is a rule, but that is actually what I have seen done there.

40436. Do you know whether there are many prosecutions in that part of London?—That I could not tell you, because it is in the jurisdiction of the City of London, and I have not much experience of the courts there.

40437. (Mr. Whitmore.) The City Police are responsible for that part?—Just that part I have mentioned up to Aldgate. There is very little, or practically no solicitation, as far as I know, beyond the boundary of the City Police along the Whitechapel Road, for instance, but in the Commercial Road there is a great deal, because it leads down to the docks, and there are so many sailors and members of the different crews of ships who are discharged, and there are a number of women who walk up and down the whole of the Commercial Road. It is there we very often come across a girl who we are looking for, because it is in the Jewish district, and it is there, probably, that we should make our first attempt to try and look for a girl who is missing, and whom we were asked to trace.

40438. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand from you that there is a real noticeable difference between the area inside the City and the area outside?—Yes; taking Aldgate itself, there and along the Whitechapel Road it is very noticeable. That corner at Aldgate is as bad as it can be.

40439. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Which corner of Aldgate?—Aldgate Church from Aldgate Station round to Houndsditch, and along Houndsditch into Commercial Street. Houndsditch is the passage way, as one may call it, from Aldgate into Liverpool Street, and if they are worried in Aldgate they walk through Houndsditch and go into Liverpool Street and then along to Norton Folgate.

40440. (Mr. Dickinson.) That is all in the City?—I do not know whether up to Norton Folgate is in the City.

40441. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is in the City?—I think it is.

40442. (Mr. Dickinson.) Is that due to the peculiar configuration of the streets there, or not?—I think not, because they are open thoroughfares. I think it has been due for a great many years to the Great Eastern Railway terminus being there, and that is the case with all railway termini. They attract these women because of the fact of the number of people who come into London by these stations.

40443. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I did not follow what you were saying to Mr. Dickinson about the men soliciting. Do I understand you to say that you have seen a great number of cases in which the men have solicited women?—Yes, I have seen a great number of cases in which men have gone up and made remarks to women of a like nature to those which these prostitutes make to men.

40444. What has been the result of the remarks that they have made?—In the cases I have seen the women have walked on sharply and gone away.

40445. Do you mean that men have accosted respectable women in that way?—Yes.

40446. Have you seen that occur in a great number of instances?—I have seen it in many instances.

40447. (Chairman.) What time of day?—At night.

40448. (Mr. Dickinson.) Have you seen the same men do it?—No, I have not taken notice of it being the same men.

40449. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Do you mean parts in which there are a great number of prostitutes—in parts of your black area, as you call it?—It is mostly in those districts that I have noticed it. I think it is due to the fact that the men know that the prostitutes are in those districts, and they rather begin to forget the difference between a respectable woman and a prostitute.

Mr. S. Cohen.

10 April 1907.

40450. They do not always know how to distinguish, I suppose, in the dark?—Probably that may be the case; it is quite possible.

40451. Have you ever made any complaints to the police about that?—I have mentioned it in the course of conversation, but I have not made an actual complaint.

40452. In the course of conversation to some individual policeman?—Yes.

(Chairman.) We have to thank you, Mr. Cohen, for the evidence which you have given.

Miss Lucy Colson, sworn.

40453. (Chairman.) You are in charge of the Church Army Training Home for Rescue Workers at 9, Stourcliffe Street, Edgware Road?—Yes.

Miss L. Colson

40454. I think that your branch of the Church Army only deals with the midnight outside rescue work?—Yes.

40455. And the general work and other applications are dealt with by another branch?—By the Women's Social Department of the Church Army at 57, Bryanston Street.

40456. The object of your branch, I understand, is to train outdoor rescue workers, and to conduct the outdoor rescue work?—Yes, that is so. We do midnight rescue work right thoughout London.

40457. How long have you been at this work?—For about 14 years altogether.

40458. The same class of work—outside rescue work?—For a little while I did mission work, but I did both afterwards. I have been doing outdoor rescue work almost incessantly during that time.

40459. You have had 11 years' experience of night work in London?—I have—almost continuously.

40460. Your general habit is to go out with another sister in uniform from about 11 o'clock at night to 2 o'clock the next morning?—Yes, generally, but sometimes it is from 8 o'clock to 11 o'clock. We vary it.

40461. In what part of London do you go chiefly?—Almost every part. We choose out routes each night—Euston Road and Hampstead Road, King's Cross, Piccadilly, Regent Street, Oxford Street, and all those parts.

40462. I understand that you speak to these unfortunate women, or women whom you judge to be unfortunate, whom you find in the streets?—Yes, we generally take some little thing with us so that we may have a little excuse for speaking to them. We speak to a great many at night. Four of us generally go out at night, two and two, by different routes.

40463. You seek some occasion for getting into conversation with one of the girls, and you very often give a card?—Yes, we give a small card with an address on it to say, I would be willing to see any girl that would care to come.

40464. Are your overtures generally well received by the girls?—Sometimes they will not listen to us at all; they pass us by. I never force myself on to any girl, and very often they receive it and just pass without saying a word.

40465. But a good many, I suppose, do take the card and speak to you?—Yes, we speak to about 20 to 25 a night.

40466. When you say you speak to about 20 to 25, do you mean that the 20 or 25 also speak to you?—Yes, or we speak to them first, as a rule.

40467. You get into conversation with from 20 to 25 every night?—Yes.

40468. Do they talk about any hardships or grievances that they are subjected to in the streets?—They have done so when they come home. They very rarely enter on that subject out in the street itself, because we are not allowed to talk long enough with them.

40469. You simply have a conversation with a view of inducing them to come and see you more privately at your Home?—Yes, I invite them to come. We rarely speak for more than two or three minutes, unless they wish to do so.

40470. Every year a great many of these girls come into contact with you, and you converse with them?—A very great number.

40471. Do they converse pretty freely with you—do they give you their full confidence, do you think?—After a while they do. They very often come to see me and tell me a great deal about themselves.

40472. So in a great many cases you come to hear the whole history of the woman coming on the streets?—Very often.

40473. A great deal about the life during the time she has been leading the life of a prostitute?—Yes, she tells me a good deal, as a rule; and sometimes, when it is necessary, we make inquiries.

40474. Do they often refer to the police?—They have done very often, but only in terms of appreciation of their kindness. I have had a great many talks with them, and there have been many opportunities for their telling me; and very many times the police have brought girls to me, or have introduced to my notice some girl who they wished to be helped and thought would be in danger of going further.

40475. Do many of them admit that they have been arrested and fined at the police court?—Yes, I have had several cases. I have been asked to go to the police court, and I have done a great deal of police court work. I have attended the police court on several occasions.

40476. Do you remember any complaints of their being wrongly convicted at the police court, and that they ought not to have been taken there at all? Have you ever come across any such cases?—No, I have not. Invariably it has been just.

40477. What do they say generally about their relations with the police?—I have often heard them speak very gratefully of the kindness the police have shown them; and very very often it has been because the police have sent for me that I have come into touch with them.

40478. Has anybody ever complained that the police have asked for money from them?—No, I have not heard that admission.

40479. Or made improper advances in any way?—Some years ago one girl told me of a policeman, but that was when I was working the Borough. I have had no instance since.

40480. There was one instance?—Yes.

40481. What did the girl complain of in that case?—She complained that an officer had taken her into a building for a purpose, but I was not able to prove it.

40482. She had gone with him?—She told me so.

40483. She had to?—She told me so, but that was quite nine years ago.

40484. Apart from that case you have not found that anyone of the girls you have come in contact with has complained of the police in that way?—No, I have no recollection.

40485. Has anyone mentioned that some policemen were supposed to want money from the girls?—I have no recollection of any girl telling me so. They speak very freely to me.

Miss L. Colson.

9 April 1907.

40486. Of course, these women belong to—I will not say different classes in life—but many of them are much better off than others, and much better dressed than others?—Yes.

40487. What class of women have you come in contact with chiefly?—I have come in touch with all of the classes and all the different grades, such as the Tottenham Court Road girls and the Euston Road girls, who are quite different from the Piccadilly girls. The Piccadilly girls would consider themselves much finer girls, but I have had two-thirds of the commoner class, if you may say so, and about one-third of the better-dressed girls.

40488. There is no distinction between them, so far as their absence of complaints against the police is concerned?—Not the slightest. The police have constantly brought to me girls, or asked for my card to give to girls, with the view of helping them. I have worked in the provinces also to a little extent.

40489. After all these years is it the genuine impression left on your mind that there is nothing in the supposition that many police-constables receive money from these unfortunate women?—It has not come to my knowledge. I have got that impression from my conversations with the girls.

40490. You have heard sometimes rumours to that effect, as the former witness had?—Yes, but not to the same extent.

40491. You do not think there is anything in it?—I should think not—not to my knowledge. The girls speak to me very freely. I have lived with them for days when they have come to me, and they have opportunities of saying anything. I have had little conversations with them before sending them on elsewhere.

40492. And you listen to conversations between themselves?—Very often.

40493. You hear them chatting together?—Yes, or my fellow workers do, who have their meals with them. I do not have my meals with the girls.

40494. Do they talk much about their past lives one with the other?—It is forbidden in the Home for them to do that. They only talk privately to myself or my fellow workers.

40495. I think you remember a case in which a constable was accused of having wrongfully arrested a girl who came under your notice afterwards?—I saw the case in the papers, in the "Marylebone Mercury."

40496. Did you go to see the young woman?—No, I had known her; that is all.

40497. In that case, I understand, the Magistrate let her off as having been wrongfully arrested?—I will not mention names, but I knew the woman.

40498. In that case the Magistrate dismissed the charge that was made by the police-constable, and yet the woman in question was to your knowledge a loose woman?—Yes, that is the case; I had known her two or three years before.

40499. (Mr. Dickinson.) What women do you speak to?—Those who are supposed to be fallen women.

40500. How do you form that opinion?—By their actions.

40501. I suppose you are very often in the same streets, and more often in Regent Street?—Yes.

40502. Do you get to know the features of the habitual prostitutes there?—Yes, very greatly—more than their names.

40503. You actually know a large number by sight?—Yes.

40504. Are those the women who come to your Home?—Some of them. That is the class.

40505. You do get the women who have been for some time on the streets?—Yes, very often.

40506. It is not only the girls who just dabble in it and want to get out of the life who come to you, but the old regular prostitutes go to your Home?—I have had a great many of those, but I have had often the younger ones.

40507. You would know what the regular prostitute is doing and thinking about?—Quite well. I have had eleven years of it, and I have got to know them in London.

40508. Do you speak to the police who are about?—I do not speak to the police very much, but I have done so. I am not in the habit of talking to the police in the streets, but they have spoken to me, and asked me to help such and such girls.

40509. That is the only case you have known?—An instance occurred a month ago in which a policeman asked us to help two girls who he knew were young girls just fresh come to London. He begged us to follow them up and try and assist them. We were not able to get them, but he was very anxious about them.

40510. What is your opinion about the general condition of the streets now as compared to what it was when you first came to London?—It is better.

40511. What do you attribute that to?—To the activity of the police. They are more particular.

40512. You think they are more active?—I have thought so since I began the work in Central London eight years ago.

40513. When you say you have thought so, do you mean you have not always thought so?—I have thought for the last two or three months the girls have been more free.

40514. To what do you attribute that?—I could not tell you exactly. Whether it was the winter or whether it was other causes I could not say.

40515. What is your own mind about it?—I thought that possibly the girls were not quite so frightened of the police as they had been.

40516. That is this winter?—Yes, within the last three or four months.

40517. How do you arrive at that conclusion?—There have been more, and they have not seemed to move on as quickly. They stand in groups more than they used to.

40518. You mean you used to see them flee at the approach of a policeman?—They would keep on the move.

40519. And now they do not?—They have not seemed to do so, and they have crowded together more in some parts.

40520. Is that noticeable in any particular part of London or in different parts?—More so in Piccadilly and round that region. I have not noticed it in Euston Road.

40521. I take it that you think the activity of the police helps you in your work?—It does, or rather, when I say it helps us, I mean the streets are clearer. I do not know that it helps me in my work personally, but I notice the girls are quicker in moving away from me when I am speaking to them if a policeman comes near.

40522. From the point of view of your Society, you would approve of the police force being active?—Certainly.

40523. (Mr. Whitmore.) I think you are a little bit afraid of saying what you really think about the diminished activity, or rather the lesser fear on the part of the women of the police in the last few months. What do you think is the cause?—I think it has been since that case arose when the police were complained of. I do not think the police have felt quite so free to act.

40524. That case and the subsequent appointment of this Royal Commission?—I had not thought of the Royal Commission, but I have thought of that case and the difficulty that arose.

40525. After that case?—Yes.

40526. (Chairman.) You mean that case that was reported in the newspapers, and very strong comments were made in the Press about the action of the police, and there were questions asked in Parliament?—Yes, and from what one or two policemen have individually said to me about the matter.

40527. What did they say?—A policeman told me one night he thought he would leave the work more to us, as he did not like the risk of losing his post, because he had a wife and five children dependent upon him. A policeman in Regent Circus told me that one night—he volunteered it.

(Chairman.) We are very much obliged to you, Miss Colson, for coming here and giving your evidence.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Would you let us know, Sir, whether you require any of these other ladies, whose statements you have got, to attend to give evidence.

(Chairman.) We are quite willing to hear them. The mere multiplication of witnesses is not of very much importance, but still we will hear them if they would like to give evidence.

FORTY-THIRD DAY.

Thursday, 11*th April* 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
Rufus Daniel Isaacs, Esq., K.C., M.P.
Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Secretary).
J. F. Waley, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Assistant Secretary).

(Platt's case continued.)

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Have you got before you, Sir, the bundle of correspondence relating to Platt's complaints with regard to the L Division of Police?

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) If you will refer to page 12 there is a statement by a man named Charles Turner, taken by a Sub-divisional Inspector named Hazelden. I have not called Hazelden, and I do not propose to call him unless the Commission think it is desirable he should give evidence as to the accuracy of that statement.

(Chairman.) I do not think you need trouble to call that officer.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Then, Sir, would you refer to page 36 of the same bundle. That is a statement of an officer named John Lewis, who is no longer in the Police Force. You may remember that I cross-examined Mr. Platt upon that statement and produced Lewis in Court, and I confronted him with Mr. Platt. Lewis is no longer in the Police Force, and he complains it upsets his employment if he is brought here. If the Commission think it necessary to call him, of course, I shall bring him here, but if otherwise I should desire to save him the inconvenience. The point of it was to show Platt's interest in Chapman and Chapman's appeal.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That was the only relevancy of it.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That was the only relevancy of it. Platt denied the whole business.

(Chairman.) I do not think you need call Lewis.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) If you please, Sir, I was desiring of saving the trouble of calling both those people if I could avoid it.

Superintendent Harry Noviss, sworn.

Superintendent H. Noviss.
11 April 1907.

40528. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you Superintendent of the L Division?—Yes.

40529. You have an office at Kennington Lane?—Yes.

40530. Do you also attend at the office at Kennington Road?—I only visit there.

40531. Your office then is at Kennington Lane?—Yes.

40532. Do you remember Platt being brought to your office at Kennington Lane on the 19th October, 1903?—Yes; shortly after 6 p.m.

40533. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) If you want to refer, Sir, to the Superintendent's report, I think the only material ones are on pages 32, 37 and 47. (To the Witness.) What was said?—Platt was shown into my office, and he said he had called with reference to the letter he had sent me on the previous night complaining of a police officer. I informed him that I had received no such letter, and requested him to inform me when and where he posted it.

40534. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What are you reading from?—These are my notes.

40535. Is it your report?—It is a statement.

40536. It is a note you made at the time?—Not at the time.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You had better tell the story. If it is a report or anything in writing at the time or about the time, of course, it would not be objected to.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It is a statement made after referring to his reports, and it is really a statement he made for me as being more convenient to examine him from than from his reports. It was only made the other day.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) But I think it would be objectionable.

40537. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Then perhaps you had better tell us from your recollection?—He informed me that it was posted the previous night about 11.30. I asked him who posted it. He said "I did." I said "Are you sure?" He said "I did not really post it, but I was about twenty yards away from the pillar-box when I gave it up to a man. I cannot say if he posted it" After hesitation he said "It was one of your own cloth."

40538. That is, one of the police?—One of the police I took it to be. I asked him then what the letter contained. He said "It contained a complaint against a constable named Patsy, stationed at Kennington Road who tried to ramp him on a bet on Saturday." He came to me about 2.40 p.m. and gave me a paper with two sovereigns, saying, 'Here is a bet for you, you may as well have it as anyone else.'" He also stated that the bet was made after the race was won, and the constable and a friend had been round to his house on several occasions since to demand the winnings, which were, I think, something about £20.

40539. Was anything said about any commission being given to the constable on the bet?—Yes, he afterwards said that when the constable gave him the paper he took him into the public-house and treated him and gave him 5s. I asked him if he had a witness, and he gave me the name of a man named Turner. I then sent for Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer from Kennington Road, and he attended very shortly afterwards. I asked Platt to repeat the statement that he made to me respecting the constable, and he did so. I ordered the Sub-divisional Inspector into plain clothes, and told him to keep observation at the Tankard public-house, Kennington Road, where Platt had informed me previously a friend of his had made arrangements to meet the constable. Platt then left my office and so did the Sub-divisional Inspector. On the following morning I again saw Mr. Platt and the Sub-divisional Inspector.

40540. That would be the 20th October?—Very shortly after 9 a.m. I think it was, to the best of my recollection, and Platt informed me what had taken place the night previous

40541. You saw Platt with the Sub-divisional Inspector?—I would not be quite sure upon the point whether they were both together at the first, but they were subsequently within a few minutes, and the Sub-divisional Inspector then reported to me what had transpired, that he saw P.C. Deed in company with a man enter the Tankard public-house. Then I made arrangements with the Sub-divisional Inspector and

Superintendent H. Noviss.

11 April 1907.

Mr. Platt to attend Kennington Road the same morning at 11 o'clock to make their statements in the presence of P.C. Deed. During our conversation that morning Mr. Platt made a general statement that it had cost him £3 10s. for years past for police.

40542. £3 10s. what—per annum, or what?—£3 10s. per week for years past for police. He had been connected with betting about 20 years; he had been arrested four times in the name of Smith, and he had also been arrested prior to that at Bow Street.

40543. Did he say what he had been arrested for?—For betting. The statement of Mr. Platt was taken, and that reached me in the afternoon. I saw Constable Deed, the officer in question, and suspended him from duty.

40544. Before you come to that, when he was speaking on this morning of the 20th October about its having cost him £3 10s. a week for years for the police did you ask him for any particulars?—I did. I asked him whether it was given to the C.I. Department or to the uniform men. He declined to say, and his last words almost to me just before he left my office on the morning when I invited him to give me any particulars he refused to do it, and just as he was about to leave my office he struck his left breast with his right hand and said, "I have notes in my pocket-book." I asked him particularly to show me his pocket-book, and he said "No, I have no further complaint to make at present. I will see how this job gets on first."

40546. And you obtained his statement from the Inspector?—Yes, and I saw the constable, and from his own admission and from the evidence, or the facts that I had before me, I suspended him from duty.

40547. Did you see the betting slip?—I did.

40548. Who showed you that?—Mr. Platt.

40549. Of course you knew Deed's handwriting?—Yes; it was not in his handwriting.

40550. You say on the constable's own admissions you suspended him. How much did he admit of Platt's story?—He admitted leaving his patrol and making a bet with Platt, but he denied receiving the drink or going to the public-house or receiving the 5s.

40551. That was quite sufficient, of course, for you to suspend him?—Yes.

40552. The mere admission that he had left his patrol to make the bet?—Yes.

40553. Did you get a statement taken from Turner?—I did.

40554. That was taken by Inspector Hazelden?—Yes.

40555. That is the statement, a copy of which is on page 12 of the documents before the Commission?—Yes.

40556. You read that statement of Turner, of course?—Yes.

40557. You considered that, did you, in the conclusion that you came to?—I did.

40558. Was the inquiry held before you?—Yes.

40559. And Platt was there?—No, I did not see Platt after that morning. I have had no conversation with Platt from that day to this, I do not think.

40560. So that the inquiry before you was conducted, so far as you were concerned, upon the written record of what the Inspector had taken?—Yes.

40561. That is Inspector Spencer?—Yes.

40562. That is before the Commission?—Yes.

40563. You referred it to headquarters?—I referred it to the Chief Constable, and he referred it to the Assistant Commissioner.

40564. And the decision of the Chief Constable and the Assistant Commissioner appears on the reports before the Commission?—Yes.

40565. And he was dismissed?—He was.

40566. Did you know anything more of the matter until the receipt of a letter from headquarters forwarded from there which had been received from Platt?—No.

40567. That is the letter of the 19th November, which appears on page 26?—Yes.

40568. Up to that time had you had any particulars at all of the complaints that Platt made with regard to having paid money to the police except Deed?—No.

40569. Did you call for reports?—I did.

40570. And got them from Soar and Gunn, who were still in the force, and Powell?—Yes.

40571. And also from Station Sergeant Dale and Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer?—Yes.

40572. And you made a report yourself on this matter embodying your recollection of what had taken place at your interview with Platt?—Yes, a month previous.

(Chairman.) Do you want to ask any questions of the Superintendent, Mr. Platt?

40573. (Mr. Platt.) If you please, Sir.—You quite admit that on the 20th October Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer was in your presence and mine?—That is so, and also on the 19th.

40574. And he read a report of what he had taken notice of the previous evening?—I do not know what he did. He was there on the 20th, and also on the 19th.

40575. Did he not have a sheet of foolscap and read out his report to you that tallied with the time that I stated?—No, he would not read anything out to me. If he had a report he would give it to me. There was no need for him to report except verbally.

40576. At the time which you asked me?—On the Tuesday morning you are alluding to.

40577. You particularly asked me, and Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer read from that paper?—No, I have no recollection.

(Chairman.) Are you referring to the morning?

40578. (Mr. Platt.) At 9 o'clock on the morning of the 20th October, 1903, or as near as possible 9 o'clock. Now you have mentioned here that I said to you that letter was posted by one of your own cloth?—After a lot of hesitation and beating about the bush.

40579. You know the officer who posted it?—I do not.

40580. You have had him in your office since?—If so it is your brother-in-law.

40581. You have had a man who is out of it now in your office?—I have had no one in my office. You are the only man that I have ever seen in my office with regard to any police business.

40582. I do not wish to mention this late police officer's name unless I am compelled, as he is in a very good berth at the present time. How long were you at Kennington Lane before I lodged my complaint?—What do you mean?

40583. How long were you Chief Superintendent of the L Division before I lodged my complaint?—Eighteen months.

40584. You had been there 18 months previous to my lodging my complaint?—Yes.

40585. Is it possible for me not to know the Chief Superintendent's name?—I think you were in a position to find out anyone's name, and you only had to go to the local directory or the London Directory to find my name out.

40586. A commercial man might be able to do that, but not being a commercial man and only a betting man I would not trouble. I should like to ask you on whose report did you cause inquiries to be made of the London and South-Western Railway's police?—On no one's report.

40587. (Chairman.) Did you cause inquiries to be made of the London and South-Western Company's police?—I directed Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer, who brought to my knowledge that Mr. Platt was on the railway and that he had tried to make a book after he left Robert Street, to go out in plain clothes to keep observation, and he came to the conclusion that he was there for the purpose of betting, and he saw one of the officers belonging to the London and South-Western police on it.

40588. Then it was upon the report of somebody—not a formal report, but on a statement that you heard from somebody—that you did give certain information to the London and South-Western police?—Yes.

(Chairman.) Is that an answer to your question, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) There have been a lot of reports, and I was asking the officer the question where those reports started from, so that I could try to show you the gist of the thing and where these reports first started from.

40589. (Chairman.) The Superintendent says that somebody made a statement to him. (To the witness.) Was there anything besides that statement?—No, Sir.

40590. (Mr. Platt.) What was the cause of your sending the Sub-divisional Inspector, and what officer did he see belonging to the London and South-Western Railway police?—I do not know. You must ask him.

40591. What caused you to send him there?—I have told you.

40592. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Was the statement in writing or verbal?—Verbal.

40593. (Mr. Platt.) Who did it start from?—I cannot tell you.

40594. Surely you know what caused you to send Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer to Waterloo Station police office?—I told you that Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer reported to me that he heard you were on the station.

40595. You being his superior officer, surely you know what caused him to report the fact to you. You must know who made the report to him?—I do not know.

(Chairman.) Are you suggesting that the person who you refer to as being no longer in the police force informed Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer.

(Mr. Platt.) No. An officer who is in the Force at the present time, and I want to show a certain malice.

40596. (Chairman.) Did you gather from Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer's statement that he himself knew that Mr. Platt was on the premises of the London and South-Western Railway, or did you gather that Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer was speaking on information which some other constable had given him?—From information that he had received, but I do not know from what source he received it.

40597. What Mr. Platt is asking you is whether you know what constable it was who gave this information to Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer?—I do not, sir.

40598. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) What date is this? About what time is it that this statement was made to you upon which you directed Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer to make inquiries of the London and South-Western police?—After his letter to the Commissioner.

40599. After he had made a complaint?—Oh, yes, after he had made his complaint—some time after. Just before he went on cab driving.

40600. (Mr. Platt.) Was there any cause from November, 1903, till between May and June, 1905, for me to be watched?—Yes.

40601. Will you kindly tell us the dates I was watched?—Only on two occasions, but I could not tell you the dates; they are in the reports.

40602. On two occasions?—As far as I know.

40603. What date?—1905.

40604. So from 1903 to 1905 there was no occasion for me to be watched?—I do not know that you were watched.

40605. What caused you to have me under the surveillance of the police on these two dates in 1905?—I received certain information—I think that came from Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer—that you were making a book—where he did not know. I directed him to have you kept under observation, and you were kept under observation. It was on a Tuesday or Wednesday to the best of my recollection.

40606. And you know where I was the month previous?—No, I do not.

40607. Did you know I had been in hospital a month?—No, not then.

40608. What caused you to put Detective-sergeant Waters to make inquiries about me?—I have not put Detective-sergeant Waters on to make inquiries about you.

40609. Did any officer of less degree than yourself cause him to do it?—No, not that I know of.

40610. Would Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer cause him to do it?—I could not tell you. I do not know anything about it.

40611. That was the first time for eighteen months that I had been in that street—Brook Street, Kennington—during the hours of betting?—I do not know.

40612. And that same evening you caused inquiries to be made at the two public-houses that I have mentioned, and from then you had me under observation.

(Chairman.) Why should they not? I do not quite follow the cross-examination, after what you have told us. You admit you did carry on, and were endeavouring to carry on, from time to time, this occupation.

(Mr. Platt.) I was never there myself during the hours of racing. I had somebody else there.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Perhaps that is why they did not catch you.

(Mr. Platt.) At that particular date.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You do not suggest, as I followed your evidence, that you were paying the police after you had made this complaint.

(Mr. Platt.) Not since November, 1903, I have not paid any of these officers.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is the point. You do not suggest you were paying any of them at that time?

(Mr. Platt.) No.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not know what the point of your cross-examination is as to their keeping observation on you after that.

(Mr. Platt.) I want to find out about these different reports, and why they have my house watched as they have done. I know they have watched it for a matter of ten or twelve hours a day.

(Witness.) That is untrue.

(Mr. Platt.) He knows a number of people come to my door.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I dare say.

(Chairman.) I should have thought it was the duty of the Superintendent to watch you, and the police, after what you had been saying to him.

(Mr. Platt.) The point I wish to make is that that was the first time for eighteen months I had been in the immediate neighbourhood of that street during the hours of racing, and I am not there two hours before the police know I am there, and they come and make inquiries.

(Chairman.) That shows how vigilant the Superintendent or the other officers were.

(Mr. Platt.) And it may show there was some malice at the other end of the stick.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You can put the question if you think right—I do not want to interfere with you—but how you propose to show malice by eliciting answers which, according to your statement of the case, would only show the police were doing what it was their duty to do, it is rather difficult to follow. They were bound to watch you.

(Chairman.) Put your question.

(Mr. Platt.) Why, after being under observation for three hours and twenty minutes, when I walk into Kennington Road Police Station is it refused to me to make any statement against the police officers only in their presence?—That is the order laid down, that any complaint to be made should be made in the presence of the officers.

(Chairman.) Did Mr. Platt after this complain that he had been watched for three hours or so?

(Mr. Platt.) Before June, 1905.

40613. (Chairman.) Did he come to the office, as far as you know?—He went to Kennington Road.

40614. Did you see him?—No. He came on Wednesday morning to Kennington Lane, but I refused to see him.

40615. On what ground did you refuse to see him?—I told him if he had any complaint to make the Sub-divisional Inspector there would deal with it. I was just going on to Scotland Yard.

40616. That was Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer?—No, that would be another officer.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) On page 53 you will find the report dealing with this complaint

(Witness.) He complained of being watched, and wanted to know why he was watched. That was the effect of his complaint.

40617. (Chairman.) You made a report on the 23rd June, or rather Sub-divisional Inspector Rolfe made the report, and you submitted it?—Yes.

40618. You say: "I beg to report that on the 14th instant a man called at this station and asked to see the Superintendent. I asked him if his business was of a private nature, and he said, 'Tell the Superintendent my name is Platt, and he will see me.' I acquainted the Superintendent, and was directed to attend to him, and take down in writing any complaint he had to make. I then told Platt I would attend to any business on which he had called, and he then said he was an ex-bookmaker, and had complained to the Commissioner respecting the conduct of a certain P.C of this division, and he objected to the P.C. still being on the same duty. I told him that if he had made a complaint to the Commissioner, as stated, the matter would be full investigated, but that the Commissioner would not allow bookmakers or ex-bookmakers to arrange the duties of police officers. He then left the station, stating that if he got no satisfaction from the Commissioner he would go to the Home Secretary." (To Mr. Platt.) That is the occasion you are referring to when you asked to see the Superintendent.

(Mr. Platt.) Yes, when the officer refused to see me. When I gave two cards to Inspector Rolfe he immediately came out, and his words to me were that I was a madman. As Superintendent Noviss refused to see me, I told him I should go to Scotland Yard the next morning, and I was there at 10.30 the next morning.

(Witness.) The same morning, was it not, Mr. Platt?

40619. (Chairman.) Why did you not see Mr. Platt?—It is not my duty to see people who call with regard to complaints. There are other officers.

40620. I quite follow that, but when Mr. Platt's name was mentioned you probably did recollect the Deed incident and the appeal to Newington Sessions, and knew it was rather a special matter?—The Sub-divisional Inspector came to me and told me that Platt had come to know why he was being followed. That is the occasion on which I told you he was followed on one day, and he was followed on that day.

(Chairman.) What is your next question, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) Since I lodged my complaint in 1903 there were always only police-constables who did this duty, but since I laid my complaint you have put a police-sergeant and a police-constable out?—Yes.

40621. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Had that ever been done before?—No.

40622. What Mr. Platt is putting to you is right to that extent, that since his complaint was made you changed your system by sending a police sergeant and a police-constable out sometimes?—The next year I changed.

(Mr. Platt.) That is in this division.

40623. (Chairman.) When did you make that change?—The following season, about May, 1904.

40624. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The racing season was nearly over at the time these complaints were made?—Yes, there is very little betting done after November.

40625. So it was practically after these complaints were made that you thought it better there should be a police-sergeant going out with a police-constable instead of two police-constables?—I did, because I have always done my best to suppress betting.

40626. (Chairman.) That did not apply to Mr. Platt alone, but it applied to all the other bookmakers?—It applied to everyone throughout the division.

40627. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That meant that they went out in private clothes?—Yes, just the same, only there was an officer—a sergeant—with the constable.

40628. (Mr. Whitmore.) To secure the greater efficiency of the service?—Yes. This allegation was made, and I thought it was my duty, and knew it was my duty, to do what I possibly could, if anything was being done, to have a superior officer out.

40629. (Mr. Dickinson.) They both went out in plain clothes?—Yes.

40630. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) If the sergeant was there he would be able to see if there was any such system prevailing as was suggested?—Just so; and before that I sent the Sub-divisional Inspector out. He was out in plain clothes as well.

40631. (Chairman.) You thought, I gather from that, that the sergeant was more likely to be incorruptible than the police-constable?—I did.

40632. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You say you sent the Sub-divisional Inspector out. Was that Inspector Rolfe?—No, Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer.

40633. On the same date?—Not on the same date, but to keep observation.

40634. (Mr. Dickinson.) In plain clothes?—Yes.

40635. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) To keep observation on whom—on constables and bookmakers?—On constables and bookmakers, to see if there was any collusion with regard to the police and the bookmakers.

40636. You were a little uncomfortable about what you heard?—Well, Sir, I have a conscience, and I have always tried my best to suppress bookmaking, and I have had to resort to a good many means to do it. They all know that.

40637. (Mr. Platt.) Previous to my complaint had Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer been out keeping us men under observation, or the police officers?—Not till after the receipt of your letter dated the 19th November—yes, before that—when you made a general allegation about £3 10s. a week, that is when Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer went out.

40638. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is a month before?—That is a month before, just after Deed was dismissed.

40639. (Mr. Platt.) Can you give any reason why in the L Division there should only be police-constables sent out doing this duty previous to my complaint and in every other division a police-sergeant and a police-constable?—I did not know it was done, and I do not think it has been done. I think I am nearly the only Superintendent who uses a sergeant.

40640. I think the police records will prove different to that. When I was arrested at Bow Street it was by a police-sergeant and a police-constable in plain clothes on plain clothes duty?—I can only speak to my own division and divisions I have been connected with.

40641. But why should you put a police-sergeant and a police-constable together after my complaint when it has always been the general rule in every other division—why should you alter it after my complaint?—I have told the Commissioners why.

40642. Because you thought I was speaking the truth?—No. You made a certain allegation, and I did my best to find out whether your allegations were true or not.

40643. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is it correct to say, as Mr. Platt said just now, that in every other division a police-sergeant and a constable were sent out before his complaint?—I do not think so. I have had a lot to do with other divisions, and I do not know it.

(Mr. Platt.) I have paid fines under them at Bow Street.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You do not complain of being arrested by a police-sergeant instead of by an ordinary constable, do you?

(Mr. Platt.) No, Sir, I am only trying to show what happened.

(The Witness.) We have not always got a sergeant here. We are rather short at times.

40644. (Mr. Platt.) Is it possible for us to have the reports of the officers who made their reports to Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer that caused him to go to the London and South-Western Railway officers?—No reports have been made.

40645. That is why Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer went to the London and South Western Railway, is it?—What do you mean?

40646. You know he went there?—I told you he went there.

40647. What caused him to go there. Where did the report come from?—Because he had information that you were making a book on the station.

40648. Is there a report to that effect?—No.

(Mr. Platt.) It is possible that Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer might be able to tell us who reported the facts to him. It is most essential that I should get that fact.

40649. (Chairman.) Just one or two questions. Deed, I understand, was in 1903 one of the plain clothes men sent out for the special purpose of watching these bookmakers?—He was one of them.

40650. When was Deed sent out. I do not think we have had a statement as to the time when he was first employed at that work?—Before I went to the division.

40651. You were there 18 months before this matter arose?—At the commencement of 1902 I went there.

40652. So Deed had been at that special work for some time before 1903?—Yes.

40653. We have been told pretty fully by P.C. Soer and one or two others as to their method of working. They were on patrol duty—that is the technical term, is it not?—Yes.

40654. They had no particular beat?—No, you could not define a beat unless you directed them to watch a certain bookmaker, and then it was no use. They might have to go round

40655. You had to trust to their discretion to occupy their time properly?—They did not have much time, because they would not go out, generally speaking, much before 12 o'clock.

40656. We know they went out for four hours' plain clothes duty and four hours' uniform duty on the same day?—No, they would not go out for four hours duty if they had an arrest, because that would take them away from their duty, and they would have to go to the police court.

40657. But that would be counted in their duty, their attendance at the police court?—Yes, but it would mean they would not patrol for the four hours.

40658. But they were on duty for four hours on this business?—Yes.

40659. And, of course, if they effected an arrest they would have to go to the police court?—Yes.

40660. Some questions were asked of one or two of the constables as to whether they made any report as to how they occupied their time, and they said they did not make any report as to where they had been or what bookmakers or what places or pitches they had been watching. Is that the case?—That is so.

40661. So that it was quite possible for them to go into public-houses, or go to any street in the division?—It would be possible, but hardly probable.

40662. Without a breach of duty?—It would be possible, but hardly probable.

40663. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) But without a breach of duty—that is the question?—No, it would be a breach of duty.

40664. (Chairman.) But why. They were acting in a certain sense as detectives. A man might be receiving slips in a public-house, for instance. Would it not be their duty to follow him. I am assuming now they are in plain clothes, and disguised as Soer told us, and others told us?—Certainly.

40665. There is no breach of duty in the officer going into a public-house. Supposing, for instance, he saw Mr. Platt going into a public-house, there would be no breach of duty in his following him?—No, and it might be advisable for him to go into a public-house to keep observation if the bookmaker was using it from outside.

40666. You said something, and I see there is something in the report, about Deed being dismissed not simply for making the bet, but for being off his patrol?—Yes.

40667. What is the meaning of that. How was Deed off his patrol?—He was sent to a certain place to keep observation—I think it was Tyer Street, Lambeth. There was a complaint about a bookmaker there, and the officers at Kennington Lane Station could not detect him; they were too well known. I sent Deed there with another officer. He should have kept observation there and when he left there he should have gone and reported off at the station. Instead of that he went past the station to Mr. Platt and made the bet.

40668. That was entirely a special occasion, was it not?—Yes.

40669. In that case Deed's duty had been made an express duty to go and make some particular observation?—On that day.

40670. But for that he seems to have had, like Soer and the others, a discretion to go where he liked? In the sub-division.

40671. Of course I understand that—in the sub-division?—Yes, not the division.

40672. That is what you mean by saying that P.C. Deed was dismissed for improperly leaving his patrol?—Yes.

40673. Did he go out of his sub-division?—Yes, he went from one sub-division to another.

40674. In which division was the public-house in which he made the bet or near which he made the bet?—In the Kennington Road sub-division.

40675. And what was the sub-division to which you told him to go?—The sub-division was Kennington Lane.

Superintendent H. Noviss.

11 April 1907.

40676. I want to get the system in vogue of dealing with the street bookmakers in this division perfectly clear. You do not know what the system was before 1902?—No.

40677. I think before 1902 we have been told it was in the hands of the C.I.D. officers?—No.

40678. When you came there the system was to send out plain clothes men?—No, they were out long before I went there. In my predecessor's time they used them.

40679. That was the system you found in operation when you came—namely, sending out two constables in plain clothes?—Yes.

40680. To do their work in the way that P.C. Soer and Gunn have described to us?—Yes.

40681. And that system was a system which you continued to use until the end of the racing season of 1903?—Yes, the end of the racing season.

40682. And during 1903 had any sergeant been sent out to do this kind of work with a police-constable on any occasion that you recollect?—Only for inside premises.

40683. That means public-houses and the like?—Yes, under the Betting Houses Act.

40684. When did you first order that a sergeant should accompany a police-constable for this kind of work where it was possible?—At the commencement of 1904. That would be, I presume, about April or May, or something like that, when flat racing commenced.

40685. Was your order to the effect that a sergeant in plain clothes should invariably accompany the constable in plain clothes?—Yes.

40686. Invariably?—Invariably.

40687. That was a considerable change of practice, was it not, because the number of sergeants, as you have suggested, is not very great?—That is so, Sir.

40688. What was it that induced you to come to the conclusion that it was necessary to change the system?—I talked over the matter with the Assistant Commissioner, and we came to the conclusion—I do not know whether I suggested it or not—that it would be better when a sergeant could be spared for that duty to send him out.

40689. Am I to understand that it was better because you had found that the number of arrests was not sufficiently great when you simply sent two constables out?—No; they did not increase after.

40690. No. I see that in one of the reports it is specially mentioned that in 1903 these police-constables had been particularly active, and there had been a great number of arrests. We know, in fact, the names of the bookmakers arrested and the number of convictions obtained in 1903?—Yes.

40691. Then I may take it your change of system was not due to any inefficiency on the part of the constables in 1903?—No.

40692. Then why did you make the change?—The allegation had been made, as I have mentioned just now, and as a safeguard I considered it would be better to have an officer out.

40693. You knew, of course, that considerable attention had been drawn to the charge which Mr. Platt had made against Deed and the other constables of receiving bribes from him?—Yes.

40694. And his allegation that when he was arrested it was done simply by collusion with the police?—Or by arrangement.

40695. You knew all that?—Yes.

40696. And it was because of that that you determined you would send a sergeant out by way of a safeguard?—Yes.

40697. Did you think there was anything at all in Mr. Platt's charges?—I did not.

40698. Then I do not see quite why you changed your system if you thought there was nothing in it. Did you think there might be something in it?—I did not think there might be, but I thought it was a far safer course.

40699. But why was it safer if you were perfectly safe before? You have told us that the two-constable system had been efficient enough in the year 1903.

Superintendent H. Norris.
11 April 1907.

You told us that you were induced to make a change in consequences of the charges made by Platt, and I do not quite follow your answer that you thought there might be nothing in the charges at all?—There is a superior officer present with the constable, you see, Sir.

40700. Were you satisfied that Deed had accepted no bribes at all from Platt?—I was quite satisfied that he had not. The statement of his own witness, Turner, disproves that. They do not agree at all. Platt says he went into the public-house, and Turner says he did not go into the public-house.

40701. That is only on one occasion. If I remember rightly, the evidence which Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer gave us, and I think the evidence of your own report, Platt distinctly made a charge of bribery against Deed, not on one occasion only, but on many occasions?—Only on one occasion he made the charge, as far as I know. That is the statement he made on the 20th about the 5s.

40702. That was the only charge as to which he gave particulars to you as to the time and place and amount. But I understood it was common ground between you all that Platt had made what is described as a sweeping charge?—He made a sweeping allegation; but you must remember, gentlemen, that Platt was only there a few months. He had not been betting in the division previously—not until the May previous to this.

40703. But Platt made a definite statement that he was paying £1 a week to these constables?—He did before you, gentlemen, and then he varied it to 10s. He has made various statements. At the Sessions House he said it was £2 or £1, and then he has varied it here to 10s.

40704. Then we are to understand that you feel absolutely certain when you dismissed Deed that he had not been accepting bribes from Platt?—Yes.

40705. And you dismissed him simply and solely because on this one occasion he had disobeyed orders by going into another division, and because he had made a bet?—Making a bet was what he was dismissed for while on duty.

40706. You can hardly say that, because you report that he was dismissed for improperly leaving his patrol and making a bet?—Yes.

40707. "While specially employed keeping observation to detect betting." It is quite true, you say that. That is what you wish us to understand, that you were absolutely convinced that Deed was innocent of taking any bribes from Platt, but that you considered his offence of leaving his patrol, when specially ordered to do something on that patrol, and making a bet, was sufficient cause for dismissal?—Yes.

40708. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Deed was a very trusted officer, was he not?—He was.

40709. He had been specially selected for this duty?—He had.

40710. And he was trusted, I suppose, just in the same way as you trusted Soer, Gunn, and Powell?—Yes.

40711. He had been at this duty for some considerable time?—I think for about two years.

40712. As long as you had been there?—Before I went there.

40713. I need hardly ask you, particularly after what happened, this was a very grave offence of Deed's?—Very.

40714. Did it not occur to you after what Platt had said that Deed was one of the officers who, according to him, had been receiving money for bribes?—No.

40715. You see what Deed had done. The matter with regard to which the complaint was made was not a mere ordinary bet. The complaint was not for making an ordinary bet, was it?—I do not quite follow you, Sir.

40716. I am drawing the distinction between the complaint that was made, or might have been made, to you that Deed had made a bet in the ordinary way, and that the complaint that was, in fact, made, which, as I understand if I caught the expression from you, Platt said Deed had tried to "ramp" him with his bet?—Yes.

40717. That showed a good familiarity with betting, did it not?—Yes.

40718. The way in which he had tried to get this £20 odd from Mr. Platt?—Yes.

40719. The bet in itself, I suppose, if I followed what you said to the Chairman, would be a very serious offence—betting while on duty?—It would be.

40720. Particularly, I suppose, while engaged on this special duty?—That would not make any difference as far as I am concerned.

40721. I rather thought from the report that it was looked upon as a graver offence. Supposing a policeman who is not told off to do this particular duty, but who is on his ordinary duty, were to give half-a-crown to somebody to make a bet for him, and that came to your knowledge, would that policeman be dismissed?—I have no doubt he would. It would be a grave breach of duty.

40722. Are you quite following what I am putting to you? I only want you to be quite clear. I am not suggesting now that he goes and gives it to a bookmaker?—No; he gives it to someone else.

40723. Supposing a policeman while he is on his duty and doing his duty asks a friend to go and put half-a-crown on a horse for him, would the policeman be dismissed if that came to your knowledge?—I should not dismiss him; I should send him forward to the Commissioner. I should think very likely he would be dismissed.

40725. But it does not follow the money was going to be put on with the street bookmaker. I thought you drew a distinction because of the report which you, yourself, make in the sentence to which I called the learned Chairman's attention, because you say Deed was dismissed for improperly leaving his patrol and making a bet with a bookmaker while specially employed keeping observation to detect betting?—Yes, I amplified it in that way, but so far as I am personally concerned, I should look on the one the same as the other. It is quite as bad. I may have strong views, perhaps, upon it.

40726. You mean that the mere fact of a bet being made by a police constable while on his duty is, in your view, a matter that must be rigorously put down, and you would dismiss him, so far as you are concerned, if it rested with you?—Yes.

40727. When these statements were made to you about Deed, did it not occasion you any doubt as to the other officers?—No. The first statement which was made, which is the statement I think you mean, was made on the 20th October.

40728. I thought the first statement was made on the 19th October?—The verbal statement, but it was put in writing on the 20th.

40729. The complaint was made on the 19th?—Yes, but there was no mention of any other officers in it at all.

40730. I do not think you quite follow the question I am putting to you. You had got certain officers who were trusted, and who were told off to do this particular duty, and you have told us you made a change beginning in the next year in consequence of the complaints which were made during November, 1903. You have told us that?—I made it partly through that, no doubt.

40731. What I am putting to you is, did not the fact that Deed had to be dismissed occasion you some doubt as to the other officers?—No, it did not.

40732. Had you any doubt at all about Deed before?—No.

40733. No suspicion of any kind?—None whatever; and I may say that the bet was not made in his own handwriting, and the bet was not for himself.

40734. That you do not know?—There was another man there.

40735. Do you know who the other man was?—No, I do not.

40736. Then I do not quite understand why you say that. You do not know that?—Mr. Platt reported that there was another man with him, and he came round to his house.

40737. But that does not show that the bet was not for Deed?—No, I will not say that.

40738. That is what you said just now, that the bet was not for Deed, it was for somebody else?—It was not made in Deed's handwriting, and Deed said he made the bet for a friend. That is the only ground that I have in my mind for saying that Deed did not make the bet. He made the bet, practically, for the other man.

40739. Just attend, Superintendent. Are you telling us that in your view Deed did not make a bet at all for himself?—Not for himself, but he made a bet.

40740. But do you mean that Deed was dismissed for making a bet for somebody else?—Just so.

40741. And that you do not think he made the bet for himself?—No.

40742. Or had any interest in it?—I will not say "interest."

40743. What do you think about it. Supposing a bet was made by Deed under these circumstances. Come, Superintendent, have you any doubt that Deed had an interest in that bet?—He had no doubt an interest.

40744. We know what he said to Mr. Platt. He purported to make it on behalf of, I think the expression was, "the Governor." That was the statement he made to Mr. Platt, but according to what he told you it was for somebody else—a friend?—He made a bet.

40745. He made a bet, and we can have very little doubt about for whom it was or who was interested in it. Did he ask any of the others whether they had made bets?—No.

40746. Was no question put to any of the officers who were engaged on this work, as to whether they had made bets?—No.

40747. Take Soer, for example. Soer was engaged a good deal with Deed?—Yes.

40748. Did you ask Soer whether he had known Deed to make a bet?—No.

40749. Why not?—There was no need to, because Deed's case was quite clear, and he was dealt with and dismissed within three days.

40750. But Deed's case showed clearly that it was not the first time that he had made a bet, did it not? It showed perfectly plainly that Deed quite understood how to make his bets so that he was sure to win. You did not think that was his first bet, did you?—I did not give it a thought.

40751. Taking that from you, did it not occur to you that it was wise to ask Soer, who had accompanied him on a great many of his duties, the question?—No. He admitted the offence.

40752. But that seems to me all the more reason why you should have spoken to Soer about it. If the offence was admitted, Deed had been accompanying Soer and was a trusted officer, as Soer was. Did not you ask Soer whether he knew anything at all about Deed having made this bet?—No.

40753. You knew at this time that accusations were being made, however vague they were, of payments of £3 10s. a week to the police?—Yes.

40754. If those payments were being made to the police they could only be made to Deed, Soer, Gunn, and Powell, who were the officers who were told off to do this particular duty?—"£3 10s. a week for years," I think, was the statement made.

40755. Yes, quite so. But supposing money was being paid at that time, and assuming that it was true for the moment that money was being paid, it could only be paid to those who were engaged in this occupation of watching the street bookmakers. There was not very much difficulty in ascertaining the names?—No.

40756. Supposing Mr. Platt said he was paying £3 10s. a week in 1903 to the police not to arrest him, that must include men like Deed, Soer, Gunn, and Powell, must it not?—Yes, but he did not say it was paid not to arrest him. The statement was, "£3 10s. a week for years for the police."

40757. What did you think he was paying them for?—He was arrested four times, much more than anyone else.

40758. But if he made a statement that he was paying them £3 10s. a week for years, you understood he was bribing them. That was his statement?—That was his statement, but I did not believe his statement.

40759. But, still, he said it?—He said it, and from inquiries I made I found he was working for another man, and he had no finances at all, but he was practically working for another man at a low wage, and then driving a cab during the winter. I do not know how anyone could have thought his statement could be correct.

Superintendent H. Noviss.

11 April 1907.

40760. That shows you made inquiries to test the truth of his statement. What I am pointing out to you is that if a man makes a statement of that kind, that he was paying £3 10s. a week to the police, he could only mean to the police whose business it was to charge him or to keep an eye upon him as a street bookmaker, could it not?—Just so.

40761. As those men were quite well known to you in 1903, if the statement was true, it could only apply, or would, in the ordinary course, apply, to those men, including Deed, Soer, Gunn, and Powell—if it was true?—Just so.

40762. So, if the statement was made that he was bribing the police in 1903, that must mean that he was bribing, or would in the ordinary course mean, or might mean, that he was bribing these four policemen?—Just so.

40763. Then you see, if he made this general statement, I do not quite follow the difficulty that you were in in knowing who the persons were who were meant by him. It did not matter how general the statement was, if you understood that the man, who was a street bookmaker, was a man bribing the police, or giving them £3 10s. a week, and you know who the police are who are engaged in that particular work—it is simple enough to know who the men are, if it is true?—I did not ask the men.

40764. Did you ask Deed whether he had been bribed?—I did.

40765. You did ask Deed?—Yes, and he denied it, and in his report, too, he denied the 5s.

40766. Did you ask Soer?—No.

40767. Did you not think it was worth while asking the question. It is difficult to follow. You had got Soer and Deed working together a good deal, and Deed who was suspected, and who was dismissed the Force. If Deed was being bribed, in all probability it must apply to Soer also—certainly the accusation applied to him. Why did you not ask him?—I did not see any reason to ask him.

40768. It is not an accusation that is made every day?—No.

40769. Had it been made before?—No.

40770. It was the first time?—The first time that ever I knew the accusation made in all my experience.

40771. Ever since you have been a Superintendent of the division?—Or any other division.

40772. Then I should have thought that it was all the more reason why you should have made the most rigorous inquiry into it?—His statement was he had given him 5s. in the public-house, and the man Turner, who made a statement, said he did not go into a public-house. There was that to be disproved, or there was that point to be considered, and there was also the mis-statement Platt had made with regard to posting a letter which, afterwards, he admitted he did not post, but gave to some one else.

40773. But he was right about Deed?—He was right about Deed making the bet.

40774. Deed was dismissed because of his complaint?—Just so.

40775. The statement of Turner is only as to what took place in the public-house. I quite understand that you say that threw considerable doubt in your mind upon his statement, but his statement as regards Deed and the man had been corroborated by Deed himself?—Just so.

40776. So that you could not afford to treat his statements as absolute invention. That is plain, is it not?—That is plain.

40777. I am puzzled throughout to understand why, as you told me just now, it must be perfectly plain who the persons were who were designated by this vague general statement, no question was ever put to one of these men as to whether they had been receiving bribes or making bets?—It was not till after the letter came in specifying the bribes.

40778. This statement of his to you, that the £3 10s.

Superintendent H. Noviss.

11 April 1907.

had been paid, was treated rather lightly, was it not?—No, it was not, considering that the race was not run that day until 2.27, and the bet was made immediately afterwards.

40779. You are dealing with another matter?—I am only explaining. The bet was not made till that time, and in my opinion the man had no reason for attempting to ramp him. The bet, in my opinion, was made in a legitimate way, and the reason of the complaint was to save his £20.

40780. You think he complained of Deed in order that he should not have to pay this money out on the horse that won, to the amount of £20?—That was my opinion, and so it is now.

(Mr. Platt.) Where is the man who took it off the telephone?

40781. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is the opinion which you formed, I suppose, of Mr. Platt recently, is it, or did you come to that conclusion at once?—I did at once, after the statement of the witness, Turner, came before me.

40782. Of course, this was a matter into which you did not inquire. You have not inquired as to which of them is correct about that—that is to say, as to whether Platt was telling the truth, or Deed was telling the truth, at the time that the bet was made, have you?—No.

40783. As far as I follow you, it did not become necessary, because the moment Deed admitted he had made the bet, that was sufficient?—That was sufficient for me.

40784. And you reported to the Commissioner?—Yes.

40785. This is a shrewd opinion which you have formed about the reason of Mr. Platt's information?—That is my opinion, and I still entertain it.

40786. Did you know that Mr. Platt had been to the Kennington Road Station three times before he saw you on the 19th?—No.

40787. Do you mean you did not know it at the time?—I did not know it until 6 o'clock.

40788. I am not suggesting that you knew it till then, but you are not quite following my question. When you did see him did you know that he had been, or had you been told that he had been, three times before to see you?—I would not be sure about three times, but I think the Inspector told me he had been there once previous to this. That would be on two occasions, I know.

40789. On the 19th. He says he had been there three times before, and the fourth time he went he saw you—that is what he says about it, and that may be correct?—It may be, or the third time.

40790. Then when he saw you he made the statement about the payment of the £3 10s .a week?—The following morning.

40791. Did he not make it at all that night?—No.

40792. He merely made a complaint about it?—Yes, and what transpired with regard to the letter.

40793. Then the statement that he made about the £3 10s. per week and all that took place in Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer's presence, did it?—Yes.

40794. I am not quite sure that I understood what you said at first. Did you first of all see him first alone?—On the 19th.

40795. But on the 20th did you first of all see him when he made this statement about the £3 10s. Was that made in your presence only first, or was it said both in your presence and Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer's?—I think it was in the presence of us both. It must have been.

40796. So that you were present at the interview at which this statement was made by him about the £3 10s. to Spencer?—No, he made it to me. Spencer was present.

40997. Take it that way if you like. You were both present?—Yes.

40798. Were you present, too, when Spencer took down the charge book to see who had arrested Platt?—No, I only saw him at Kennington Lane Station.

40799. He took down the charge book at Kennington Road, but you were not present. Did you know of it afterwards?—No.

40800. You did not hear anything about it till it came out in this Court?—On the last occasion here.

40801. You heard about the 5s. bribe to Deed?—The 5s. Platt had given to him. That was stated in his statement.

40802. Did you know that he also said that he had handed 10s. to two police-constables in the charge room?—No, I did not—only what was said here.

40803. Do you mean you never heard it until it was said here?—I saw it on the paper.

40804. On what paper?—On the Sub-divisional Inspector's report, I think it was of the 23rd November.

40805. The report which I have here?—Yes.

40706. That is the 23rd November?—Yes

40807. You knew it then?—I knew it then.

40808. Did you make any inquiry into that?—No.

40809. The statement there was quite enough—that he handed 10s. to two police-constables in the charge room when charged on the 13th October?—Yes.

40810. There is little doubt as to whom that might refer?—Just so. They were the two officers.

40811. They were the two officers who arrested him?—But he has not said anything about that in his evidence since.

40812. It is not a matter which we need to discuss with you, but you are wrong as to that. He did say something about it. Anyhow, his evidence before us does not matter. What I am asking you about is this statement as to the 10s., handed to the two police-constables. That is the statement I am making—it is in the report that was made by Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer, it comes before you, it is countersigned by you, and then it is sent up, I suppose, to the Commissioner?—Yes.

40813. That is on the 23rd November. So that you see on this date you knew that the statement made by Platt was that he had handed 10s. to two police-constables in the charge room. It does not seem a very great effort of imagination to ascertain who those two police-constables might be, does it?—No.

40814. If you have the two police-constables who arrested him, if you know who they are, you would naturally first of all inquire of those two?—Yes.

40815. That would be the ordinary course, would it not?—Yes; but afterwards you will find a report from the station sergeant, who denies that any such statement was made.

40816. Whose report?—I think you will find a report there. I may have gone on both. I think it is Station Sergeant Dale's report.

40817. That does not answer the question I am putting to you at all. There were the two police-constables, Deed and Soer, who had arrested him. That was known, of course, and their names would appear in the charge sheet?—One charging, and the other arresting him.

40818. I still do not understand why, under those circumstances, no question is put to Soer about it?—His report denies all the allegations one way or the other.

40819. This was a definite statement?—Yes.

40820. In the letter of the 19th November it was made very plain who the four police-constables were, according to Platt's statement?—Yes, or the three remaining ones.

40821. Yes, because Deed had gone?—Yes.

40822. The letter of the 19th November, of course, was before you when you answered it by the letter of the 23rd November?—Yes.

40823. In the letter of the 19th November he says: "I beg to state the complaint I made against the other three P.C.'s" (and then he gives the numbers of Soer, Gunn, and Powell) "which was in the presence of Superintendent Noviss and Inspector Spencer at Kennington Lane, the above officers were in the habit of receiving off me a weekly wage." That was the letter you had before you?—Yes.

40824. Then you had to answer it, and you did answer it by the letter of the 23rd?—Yes.

40825. Then there is your letter of the 23rd, and Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer's letter, which you countersigned?—Yes.

40826. You observe that in that letter which you countersigned (at least, I call your attention to it), Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer says: "The assertion that he had paid a weekly wage to various police-officers was made as stated. You observe that?—Yes.

40827. Did that occur to you as correct? It never struck you that there was anything wrong with the statement? It never struck you that that statement of Inspector Spencer's was wrong?—No.

40828. You would not have countersigned it if it had, I suppose?—No.

40829. The statement that was made, and was definitely before you in the correspondence, was that Platt had made an accusation against the three police-constables?—Yes.

40830. I just want to ask what is your view about reporting by men when they come back when they are sent out on this particular duty. I am not suggesting that there is anything wrong, but would it not be better when the men come back that they should give some account of what they have been doing during the four hours?—No doubt it would, unless there is a superior officer with him.

40831. Then you would trust to the superior officer, to whom a report would be made, if he made a report?—Yes.

40832. What I mean is, if a constable is out with a sergeant you do not think there is any value in the constable reporting then, because the sergeant is with him, to whom the report would be made?—Yes.

40833. But suppose two police-constables are out together, without a sergeant, you agree it would be better if they made a report when they came in of where they had been and what they had done?—I do.

40834. But it has not been the practice to do it?—No.

40835. Not for plain clothes men who are sent out for the purpose of detecting street bookmakers?—Yes, for keeping observation with reference to a summons under the bye-law which is in force—then their report would be initialled by their superior officer when they came back.

40836. If they were keeping watch?—Yes and in case of arresting.

40837. That is a different thing. I understand that a report would be made if he had been keeping watch for the purpose of summoning a man?—Yes.

40838. That report would only be made, I suppose, when it was intended to summon a man?—Yes.

40839. When a watch is kept naturally a report is made by him of what he had seen watching the case day by day?—Yes.

40840. What I am referring to, what I have in my mind, and what I think you follow me in is the case of a man who is told off for this duty who goes and does not detect anything during the four hours?—Yes.

40841. He merely comes back, and, as we know, he reports himself as returning and goes off duty?—Yes.

40842. It is with regard to that state of things that I was putting my question, and I understand you agree with me that it would be better that he should give some report?—Yes.

40843. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you remember when you saw Platt at Kennington Lane Station whether you asked him to repeat to Inspector Spencer what he told you?—Yes.

40844. That is correct?—Yes—the same version that he had given me—that was with regard to Platt.

40845. On that occasion Platt did make what you call "a sweeping allegation against the police generally"?—The following morning in the office. I saw him twice—on Monday night, and on Tuesday morning.

40846. And both times Inspector Spencer was there?—On the first occasion Inspector Spencer was not there. When he came in afterwards, and I told him to repeat the statement, Inspector Spencer was there, and on the following morning Inspector Spencer was present.

40847. When Platt made this sweeping allegation about having the police in his pay Inspector Spencer was present?—Yes.

40848. Did you say anything to indicate that you thought this sort of thing was going on?—Certainly not.

40849. Then that statement is untrue?—Yes.

Superintendent H. Noviss.

40850. When was it that you first made a change for sergeants to go out?—Not until the following year.

11 April 1907.

40851. You made no change between October and November?—No, it was done throughout the winter, but not to any great extent.

40852. But I suppose after October 20th the constables still went out in plain clothes, did they not?—Yes.

40853. You made no change then?—No, I should think it was in about the May following.

40854. When was it that it first occurred to your mind to make that change. Was it a change made on your own part, or after some conversation with some other police officer?—I spoke to the Assistant Commissioner on the subject. It is on the paper; I think it was after November, and we came to the conclusion that it would be better if the sergeants were sent out.

40855. And so far as that matter is concerned you had not thought of it until these letters were sent down to you?—I do not know that ever I thought of it before.

40856. I asked you whether you had thought of it. Had you thought about it?—I did when I was in the R Division.

40857. When was that?—That would be prior to 1902.

40858. Had you done that for any particular reason in the R Division?—No.

40859. Had you always done it in the R Division?—No, not always.

40860. Why did you make a change in the R Division?—I had no reason for doing it.

40861. Surely you must have had some reason for doing it. It was rather an important step to take, was it not, that a sergeant should go out?—It frequently happened in this way. There were betting offences committed under the Betting House Act, and we, of course, should always have authority for a superior officer to go; then I might use it on other occasions for street betting, if there was nothing doing in houses or places.

40862. Then I am bound to ask you why you did not carry on that system in this division?—The system was in vogue before I came into the division.

40863. When did you come to this division?—At the commencement of 1902.

40864. Was Deed already engaged at that time?—Yes.

40865. On the same work?—Yes.

40866. Have you any system whereby you can detect any malpractices on the part of your police-constables?—No, no more than you can detect them in the act, or if any complaint comes in. If it went on, no doubt we should hear of something.

40867. Here there was a complaint, was there not?—Yes.

40868. There was a complaint generally in that part of the police taking money?—Not generally in that part.

40869. But you thought Platt's "sweeping allegations" meant in that division?—No, he had only been there for four or five months; he only took up his post there in April or May.

40870. Do I understand you to say that when he made this sweeping allegation you did not think it had reference to the police in that particular district?—No. If it had, I should have thought he would have given me the numbers.

40871. Just let me read what you put in your report of the 23rd November: "I beg to state that when Platt made his complaint against P.C. 180 L, Deed, who was dismissed on the 23rd October last he made a sweeping allegation against police generally, stating that it cost him £3 10s. per week to pay them all. I invited him to mention any case, which he refused to do. He then said, 'I have notes in my pocket-book.' I asked him to let me see it, which he refused, and stated 'I have no further complaint to make.'" Do you seriously mean that you thought he was referring to the police in other parts of London when he said he had been paying them £3 10s. a week?—I did not think it referred to my division.

Superintendent H. Noviss.

11 April 1907.

40872. You did not think it was even wise to try to find out anything about it?—I did try.

40873. How did you try?—I sent the Sub-Divisional Inspector in plain clothes to keep observation on the police, and to see if they mixed and associated with the betting men.

40874. When did you do that?—After the sweeping allegation.

40875. Then after October and before November you did send an Inspector out in plain clothes to watch the police?—Yes.

40876. I should have thought you would have taken some steps to find out?—I should on any allegation under any circumstances.

40877. However unfounded it was, you would take some steps to find out?—Yes.

40878. What other steps did you take?—I sent round to every station officer who accepted charges to report had any allegation ever been made by any betting man when he had been charged at the station.

40879. Did you get a report?—I might probably have got a written report from the Sub-Divisional Inspector, but my recollection is not quite clear on that point, or whether they came to report it to me verbally.

40880. Did you get any written report from your Inspector who went out on this particular job?—No.

40881. Did you have verbal conversations with him?—Yes.

40882. Did he actually follow the officers Soer and Powell at all?—I think he did; I am sure he did.

40883. Did he speak to you about Soer?—He would report to me, to the best of my recollection, and I feel sure it is so, that he had not seen anything during his patrol, or the observation which he kept.

40884. But he did patrol with the object of seeing what Soer was doing?—And the other man.

40885. Then it was in your mind that it was necessary to watch Soer and Powell?—I should do so on any suggestion of anything wrong.

40886. You did, as a matter of fact, then, have them watched?—Yes.

40887. Was it the result of your watching that convinced you that there was nothing amiss going on?—That is so, and their denial of it.

40888. Why do you not communicate that to your superior officer, because this is the first time we have heard that?—You have to go to the office to communicate with that officer. The division is left in charge of the Superintendent, and he is responsible to the Commissioner. There are a lot of minor matters which arise that the Superintendent does not report to the Commissioner.

40889. But on this occasion, you see, the matter was definitely sent in to be reported upon?—Yes.

40890. And there is nothing in this report to lead us to believe that you had taken any pains to test this?—Yes.

40891. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Have you any report of what had been done?—No.

40892. (Chairman.) Do you say no?—Yes.

40893. A Return was sent in to the Commissioner first, and then it was sent by the Commissioner to us, and from that it appears that there was an inquiry of a complaint against Soer, Powell and Gunn?—There was an inquiry, and we got the papers after November.

40894. (Mr. Dickinson.) I mean in October?—Between October and November, before the letter was written.

40895. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I wanted to know whether there was any record or anything which would enable us to see what was done, and on what day or at what time the Sub-divisional Inspector or anybody went out to watch the various constables who were out?—No; that would be in ordinary patrol.

40896. (Mr. Dickinson.) You have unintentionally mistaken me, at any rate, because I understand at first it never occurred to you that Soer or Powell had done anything until November. It was not until the November letter came down from the office that you were aware at all that these men Soer and Powell were complained of, because you told us you did not have the numbers?—I did not have the numbers, but as there was an allegation made, I took steps to send the Sub-divisional Inspector out to see if anything could be substantiated.

40897. What you say is, that as you had not the numbers or any definite allegation against the men, you would not ask them?—No.

40898. You were evidently concerned about this?—Certainly.

40899. You thought it might be a very serious matter?—Certainly.

40900. Why did you not take more steps to give Platt an opportunity of proving what he wanted to prove?—Perhaps it would have been better under the circumstances.

40901. Why did you not?—As I said just now, I did not believe the statement, and the inquiries I made with regard to his finances did not satisfy me that he was in a position to give anything.

40902. He said to you, or to Inspector Spencer (I think it was to you), that he could give the numbers, because he had an entry in his note-book?—Yes.

40903. Did you ask him then to produce it?—No, certainly not.

40904. Did you ask him afterwards?—I have not spoken to him from that day to this.

40905. Can you give me a reason for not asking him to produce it?—Not more than what I have said—to see how the job got on first.

40906. I suppose you have a responsibility to the public with an enormous number of police-constables?—Yes.

40907. Do you think you have sufficient power to discover and prevent it?—Of course, we have power to prevent it if we can only discover it. The difficulty, of course, is in getting discovery.

40908. Did it not occur to you that as Deed had suffered and been dismissed, it would be as well for you to further investigate the subject of what Deed had done?—No.

40909. (Chairman.) I just want to ask you a few questions as to the Return, because it seems to me to throw some little light upon what has certainly been left a little dark to my mind as to what were the actual inquiries you made in the case of Soer, Gunn and Powell. The entry in the return is this, under the usual column, "P.c. 204 Soer, P.c. 203 Powell, P.c. 209 Gunn." The date of the complaint is the "19/11/03." That is the complaint made in the letter of that date?—Yes.

40910. It is not the complaint that he had made to you in October. The name of the complainant is given as "Alfred Platt." Then comes the complaint—"Its nature—Authenticated." The word "authenticated" there, I understand, means that the name and address of the complainant is given to you in the letter complaining?—Yes.

40911. I see some are put "Anonymous," and some are put "Authenticated"?—Yes.

40912. These are the particulars of the complaint as entered: "Refers to Constable 180 Deed dismissed the service, in consequence of complainant's statement, and alleges the constables are in the habit of receiving a weekly wage from him, but it has come to his knowledge that they have not been punished. Inquiry made. Constable Deed was dismissed the service for improperly leaving his patrol and making a bet with a bookmaker while specially employed to detect betting." Then there is something else which I need not read. The letter appears to be written to intimidate the police from doing their duty, and the allegations against the officers are held to have no foundation. When was the inquiry referred to in this Return made?—After the 19th November. The report is dated the 23rd, I think.

40913. Do I understand that after the letter of November 19th had been written, you called before you Soer, Gunn and Powell, and asked them to make a further report?—I asked them to make a report—not a further report.

40914. They had not made a report so far?—No, not till then.

40915. Did you ask Platt to come and repeat his statement in the presence of those three constables?—No.

40916. Why was that? As I understand it from this Return, you seem to be quite in accord with the view that the letter of the 19th November started what I may call a new complaint, and, according to your view, that was the first complaint that was made against Police-constables Soer, Gunn and Powell?—That is so.

40917. That is your view of it?—That is my view of it.

40918. You had not treated the sweeping allegation which had been referred to as the subject of a real complaint, as I understand?—No.

40919. What I want to know is why you did not ask Platt to come before you again, when you were directed to inquire into this new complaint, or what is called the new complaint?—As I said just now, perhaps it would have been better.

40920. It seems to me that, as you say, when you saw Platt before, you really did not know to what constables this allegation applied, it would have been almost a matter of course for you to ask Platt to come forward and tell you what constables he said he had bribed?—I asked him when he was at my office.

40921. He had not told you?—He had not told me then.

40922. No, but he never seems to have had an opportunity of telling you, and yet you say you made inquiry?—After the 19th, on the receipt of the letter.

40923. I know, but then the inquiry consisted in simply asking Soer, Powell, and Gunn to make reports?—That is so.

40924. The only thing that you knew then, so far as Platt was concerned, was what was contained in his letter, which was sent to you?—That is so.

40925. There is something I should like to ask you on the entries about Deed. The entry in the return about Deed is: "Police-constable 180, Deed," then follows the date, and so on, which I need not trouble you with, and then it says the complainant "alleges the constable made a bet with him while on duty." That is a statement of Platt's complaint. Do you follow me?—That is so.

40926. Is that an accurate statement of his complaint?—I do not know what is put in that book; I did not compile the book. I have not seen the book.

40927. As a matter of fact, however, you are perfectly clear that he did allege that he had paid 5s. to Deed?—Yes, and Deed denied it, and also having the drink.

40928. And as I understand it, you also knew that Deed was one of the constables whom Platt said he had bribed. I do not know whether that is so?—I do not know quite about that, no more than the 5s.

40929. I thought you had admitted to my honorable and learned colleague that you knew that these four men, Deed, Soer, Powell, and Gunn, were men whom Platt alleged he had bribed. Do you really mean to say that on October 20th you did not know that Platt was attacking these four constables?—He was attacking three.

40930. October 20th I am putting to you?—No, I had no knowledge.

40931. And no knowledge of the fact that Platt alleged that he had bribed Deed systematically?—No.

40932. Had Deed admitted to you that he had gone and found Platt, and made a bet with him for somebody else?—Yes.

40933. Did it not strike you as rather suspicious that he knew where to find Platt, and that he knew that Platt was a bookmaker?—No, because he was implicated in his arrest, you will find, two or three times.

40934. You had no suspicion at all that Deed and Platt might be in collusion, the one with the other?—I had not.

40935. (Mr. Dickinson.) I was just looking at your other report, on the 13th December, 1903. There you say: "I have seen the P.C.'s mentioned, and closely interrogated them, and I do not believe Platt's complaint." When did the interrogation take place?—I could not tell you. I presume it would be at the time of the second complaint—on the letter of complaint of the 19th.

40936. At the present moment you have told us all you did was to get reports from them?—I saw them.

40937. That was the time when you first interrogated them about it?—That was the time.

40938. There is one thing I want to understand. This letter of the 19th November. The letter by Platt was sent to the Commissioner of Police. Was that letter sent down to you?—Yes.

Superintendent H. Noviss.

11 April 1907.

40939. With what kind of covering note?—With a docket.

40940. What does that say?—There would probably be the Superintendent's report. Outside there would be the name and address of the complainant, and it would state shortly the fact of the allegation against the police.

(Mr. Dickinson.) Have you that, Mr. Muir?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) We are just looking for it.

40941. (Mr. Dickinson.) With instructions to report?—Yes, for inquiry and report.

40942. Would there be instructions to inquire?—I have no doubt.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That would be between the 20th and the 23rd. We have not got it.

40943. (Mr. Dickinson.) Then as to these other letters that followed on that. Do they also come down to you in the same way?—They may not do. I would not say about the others—most likely.

40944. Would you consider entirely at your own discretion as to what method of inquiry you would hold in a case like this?—Yes.

40945. The head office simply sends an intimation to you, and you do what you think is right?—Yes.

40946. Have you ever known of any cases where suspicion has been cast upon the police?—Not to my knowledge.

40947. Then the word "Inquiry" only means that it is to be at the Superintendent's discretion?—Yes.

40948. In your experience, have you had more formal inquiries of complaints against the police?—Not in this form—not in bribery.

40949. I suppose there must have been occasions in which an inquiry has been conducted by your superior officers?—I do not know of any; there may have been, but I do not know personally.

40950. You have not come across it?—Not to my knowledge.

40951. How long have you been in that division?—A little over five years.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) This is the docket. The green ink is that which relates to this particular matter. (The document was handed to the Commissioners.)

40952. (Mr. Dickinson.) "Mr. A. Platt states that P.C.'s 204, 203, and 209 L were also in the habit of receiving a weekly wage from him, and it has come to his knowledge that these officers have not been punished. Minutes. Refer to Superintendent for inquiry and report.—C. L. Bathurst, chief clerk. Report submitted through Chief-Constable.—H. Noviss, Superintendent." That is your notification, that you have done what you were instructed?—Yes.

40953. And that report submitted is what we have before us?—Yes.

40954. Why do you say, "through Chief Constable"?—We always send it to the Chief Constable.

40955. Is that a matter of form?—All complaints go in that form. I should send the papers to him before they go to the Commissioner.

40956. So that he might have an opportunity of considering it?—Yes. He is the officer between the Superintendent and the Commissioner.

40957. What are the initials, "W. E. G."?—Major Gilbert, Chief Constable.

40958. "I beg perusal of this report. I do not believe the assertions of Platt, and am of opinion that these accusations are made out of spite. The three constables (referred to) have clean defaulter sheets, and have done excellent service.—W. E. G." That is Major Gilbert's version of what you had stated, because it is practically the same?—Yes.

40959. (Mr. Whitmore.) Is that sent to the Commissioner?—Yes.

40960. (Mr. Dickinson.) "Superintendent L. Please speak 25th inst. 24/11/03.—F. W." Who is that?—Major Wodehouse, the Assistant Commissioner.

40961. What is Superintendent L?—That is the Superintendent of the L Division.

Superintendent H. Noviss.

11 April 1907.

40962. That is an intimation for you to come and speak to him, which you did?—Yes.

40963. "Acting-Superintendent seen. No further action. 25/11/03.—F. W."

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That does appear at the end of his report of the 23rd November, 1903.

(Mr. Dickinson.) He saw you.

(Chairman.) That is endorsed on the letter of the 23rd November, as I understand.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is written at the bottom of the letter.

40964. (Mr. Dickinson.) Major Wodehouse saw the Acting-Superintendent. Who was that?—Chief Inspector McIntyre, I think, at that time. I should probably be away on leave.

40965. It states that you had personal knowledge of it?—The Chief Inspector might have had just as much knowledge of it.

40966. When did you speak to Major Wodehouse?—I did not speak to him.

40967. You were summoned to speak to him on the 24th November, and Chief Inspector McIntyre took your place?—I may have been away for a few days.

(40968. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Your letter is dated 23rd November?—I went away on the following morning.

40969. (Mr. Dickinson.) The Acting Superintendent knew nothing about this case?—Yes, he did.

40970. Who was it?—Superintendent McIntyre.

40971. What did he know about it?—I could not tell you. He would be there, and he would see all the papers in the case.

40972. But you held the inquiry?—I did not hold the inquiry. I did hold an inquiry certainly. The statement was made in the presence of the Sub-divisional Inspector. Then the papers came to me, and, of course, I knew what Platt had said to him, from what he told me on the 19th, and on the 20th.

40973. You were told to interrogate the constables?—Yes. I may have given some directions, but I cannot tell you now.

40974. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I wish you would give us your attention particularly to a matter which is, to my mind, still left in some confusion. What we are desirous of knowing is exactly what took place upon Platt's complaint being made, and what steps you took?—On his written complaint?

40975. No. Do keep in your mind what we want to know is not so much on his written complaint, but what took place after the 19th and 20th October, 1903, when he made the statement that he was paying £3 10s. a week to the police. What did you do in consequence of that statement?—I told Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer to go out in plain clothes and keep observation on betting men, and also on the men who were employed on betting.

40976. That, of course, would include these four men; they would be four of the men who were out on this work?—There may have been two of them. I do not think you will find that Powell went out after August, and I do not think you will find that Gunn went out after August. I am not quite sure about Gunn after that time.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Only Soer was out.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Soer certainly was out, but I am not sure about the others, for the moment.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The others were not out.

40977. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) How often did Inspector Spencer go out to watch?—I should think two or three times a week.

40978. Did he make reports to you?—Only verbal reports.

40979. Did you make any entry of what he reported?—No.

40980. No note, or anything of that kind?—No.

40981. From what you have told us now, which we did not know before, you thought it sufficiently important to send the Inspector out to keep a watch, and to see whether it was true or not?—I did.

40982. Between October and the 19th November that, I understand, is what was done?—Yes.

40983. Was it the practice to change the men at all?—Not much.

40984. How often?—At that time there were very few changes, as you will find by the Return.

40985. So I gathered from what we have seen?—I think there were less changes there than there were at the other stations.

40986. There seem to have been comparatively few changes during the year of the men who were engaged on this particular work?—That is so.

40987. Do you approve of that system?—No.

40988. The proper thing would be to change them a good deal, would it not?—Yes.

40989. You change them now?—Yes.

40990-9. How often do you change them now?—We never keep a man out more than a fortnight.

41000. Since when has that change come about?—It might be eighteen months or two years—I cannot be quite sure on that point.

41001. Was it about the same time that you changed the system by sending a sergeant out with a constable?—No.

41002. Do I understand you to say that the same system was allowed to continue during 1904?—No. They were out for a longer period, but there were some changes.

41003. Do you mean in 1904?—Yes. The changes were more frequent.

41004. And in 1905?—Yes.

41005. In 1905 how often were they changed?—I should think in about a fortnight or three weeks, roughly speaking.

41006. Is that usual in that division, or is it a novelty?—No. It was a system of my own. I found I had great difficulty in contending with bookmakers, because the men were so well known, and there were so many touts about during the last two years; I found it absolutely necessary, and that it could not be suppressed unless we made frequent changes.

41007. When did you find that out?—It has been growing gradually during the last four or five years, and more particularly during the last two years. It is nothing unusual for a man to have four or five touts.

41008. Therefore they would know who the men are, and what their disguises are?—Yes.

41009. Had you never done that before? Had you never at any of the divisions at which you had been stationed changed your men more frequently than they were changed in the L Division when you came?—No, there was no necessity in the last few years gone by, because the touts were not in vogue then.

41010. Have they only come up during the last few years?—Yes, particularly during the last four years.

41011. When you were in the R Division you used to employ a sergeant and a policeman?—Yes.

41012. Did you always employ the same men?—No.

41013. You changed them, of course?—Yes.

41014. Pretty frequently?—Yes.

41015. You came at the beginning of 1902, I think?—Yes.

41016. Did you find the system in vogue then of sending the same men out?—Yes.

41017. And you continued it?—Yes.

41018. Did it occur to you as an unsatisfactory system?—It did afterwards.

41019. Apparently, from your experience, the suggestion which has been made that it is necessary to do this in order to catch the men—that is to say, to keep the same men on in order to catch the bookmakers—has no real force?—No, it has not.

41020. Neither had it then if the scout system, as we know, was then in vogue?—Yes, but not to the extent it is at the present day—or I do not say at the present day, but to the extent it was last year. Different neighbourhoods, different systems.

41021. Yes, but I am speaking of the L Division, in this particular neighbourhood, and of the men who were employed there. I had in my mind, and Mr. Dickinson calls my attention to, what Inspector Spencer said about it, which perhaps you do not agree with, that the fact that they ought to have knowledge of the bookmakers does not necessitate your always employing the same men?—No, it does not, but we have to employ men who have an idea of them.

41022. Of course?—And men who are adapted to it.

41023. Now you are referring to their ability?—Yes.

41024. I quite understand that. But after what you have told us that is what you did between October and November?—Yes.

41025. And, as I understand, you came to the conclusion, from what Inspector Spencer told you, that there was no foundation for these charges which had been made against Soer, Powell, and Gunn?—Yes.

41026. I want to be quite clear about this. I thought we had got it clear at one time. If these statements which Platt was making were true the men to whom you would naturally go to for inquiry would be Soer, Gunn, and Powell?—Certainly.

41027. So that if the statement was made that £3 10s. was being paid a week, and that applied to your division, the proper men for you to inquire of, if you made inquiry at all, would have been these very men?—Yes, one or two of them.

41028. Then comes a letter of the 19th November, and the answer which you make. You called for reports. Those we have got?—Yes.

41029. You called for reports from the three constables involved?—Yes.

41030. Then you make a report on the 23rd November to the Commissioner?—Yes.

41031. And apparently he endorses your view, that is to say, the Assistant Commissioner does?—Yes.

41032. Because I see Major Gilbert's words that Mr. Dickinson read out are really your words. You say on the 23rd November "The complaint is undoubtedly made through spite against the three constables, who have done excellent work in respect to street betting, and have clean records." That is the substance of what Major Gilbert says. Now, before you wrote this letter of the 23rd November had you made any inquiry at all of Soer, Powell, and Gunn?—No, unless I saw them before I made my report—I mean the same day that I made my report.

41033. That is the thing we are trying to get from you?—I am not sure on that point, but I should say yes, to the best of my memory.

41034. I want to know what is meant, and what actually took place. You had the letter sent to you on the 20th November, as we know from what we saw just now. Then you call for reports, and you get reports, which are, I think, dated the 21st November?—Yes.

41035. Then you make a report on the 23rd November?—Yes.

41036. What I want to know, and what we are all anxious to understand from you, is whether before you made the report you had made any personal inquiry of Soer, Powell, or Gunn?—Yes, I must have done on the complaint.

Superintendent H. Novis.

41037. And questioned them?—Yes.

41038. Have you any recollection of it?—Yes, I have a recollection—a good recollection—of speaking to them and pressing them.

11 April 1907.

41039. You have a recollection of it now?—Yes.

41040. There is a statement in the letter of the 13th December which you write, in which you say this: "I have seen the P.C.'s mentioned, and closely interrogated them"?—They would be the three men mentioned, Powell, Soer, and Gunn.

41041. To what date are you referring?—I should see them on the first complaint—first on the letter, but probably I did not state it in my first report, and I embodied it in the second report.

41042. You say you "closely interrogated them"; you mean you had closely interrogated them before you sent in your report of the 23rd November?—Yes.

41043. You did not see them again. You did not hold any inquiry after that?—No, not after that.

41044. Is Soer still engaged on this duty?—No.

41045. Has he been engaged at all since?—Yes.

41046. Did you continue to employ him on this duty after that report was made?—I could not tell you that off-hand, but he has been employed since; I could not say for how long.

41047. Did you continue to employ him, or did you cease employing him for a time after this complaint was made?—That would be about the end of the season, November, when we should cease sending anyone out.

41048. There is a report of yours of the 9th June, 1905, in which you say that you "have not used him" (Soer) "for this duty since the former complaint until this occasion." If that is correct he was not on that duty during 1904 at all, and only at this particular period in June, 1905?—It may be so; I cannot say when he was employed; I know he has been employed.

41049. I see in this report made then you say: "He has my confidence and that of his officers. Police are changed weekly for this duty, and P.S. and P.C. work together." Observe what you say there. That is in June, 1905?—Yes.

41050. Is that done now?—Fortnightly, I think it is now for last year, I should say. At that time it was weekly.

41051. As I understand Soer had been the most active officer you had in arresting bookmakers?—Yes. I would not say the most active officer in that division. He has been one of the most active officers.

41052. Do you think there has been anybody who has been more successful?—I should think there have been others quite as successful; but not at Kennington Road Station. I am dealing with the division.

41053. Quite right?—I am only dealing with Kennington Road Station.

Inspector JAMES DALE, sworn.

41054. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you now an Inspector?—Yes.

41055. In which division?—The N Division.

41056. On the 13th October, 1903, were you station sergeant at the Kennington Road Police Station in the L Division?—Yes.

41057. Do you remember Mr. Platt, in the name of Smith, being brought into the station charged with street betting?—Yes.

41058. The officers who brought him in were Police-constables Deed and Soer?—Yes.

41059. Did you see anything of any payment or any motion suggesting payment being made by Platt to those officers?—No.

41060. Or to either of them?—No.

41061. In the charge room?—No, nor anywhere.

41062. We are dealing with the charge room only?—Yes.

41063. When the officers brought the accused in where would you be?—I should be in the office.

41064. Would you then come out and take the charge?—I should come out and investigate the charge and place it on the sheet.

41065. And when you had done that?—I should enter it in the charge book, and send the prisoner into court, providing the court was sitting, which it was on this day.

Inspector J. Dale.

41066. And all the time that Platt was in the charge room would you be in the charge room?—All the time till he went away.

41067. You saw nothing of this suggested payment?—Nothing whatever.

41068. Did Platt make any complaint as to his arrest?—None whatever.

41069. (Mr. Platt.) When you would be taking the charge one officer would be relating the facts of the charge to you?—Before I took it.

41070. When you are entering it up into the book one officer is giving you the information as to that charge?—No, he is not. I am reading it off the charge sheet.

41071. Who enters it into the charge sheet?—I do.

41072. How can you read it off the charge sheet if it has not been told you?—It is entered on the charge sheet, and you simply copy it from the charge sheet into the charge book. No one is needed to read it off the charge sheet.

Inspector J. Dale.

11 April 1907.

41073. (Chairman.) No, but what Mr. Platt is asking you is whether one of the constables speaks to you?—When they bring a prisoner in of course you investigate the charge, and you hear all the facts before you enter it on the charge sheet.

41074. Then the constables do speak to you?—Oh yes.

41075. What Mr. Platt is suggesting to you is that one of the constables also is the constable charging, and that he gives you the particulars?—Yes.

41076. Is that so?—That is so.

41077. You do not enter the names of the two constables making the charge?—No. One prefers the charge and the other is a witness.

(Chairman.) That is exactly what Mr. Platt is asking you.

41078. (Mr. Platt.) So it is possible when that constable was relating the facts of the charge to you that your back was turned to me?—No, my back was not turned to you. I was looking at you.

41079. Where was I sitting?—You were not sitting. You were standing in front of the desk.

41080. Was I not sitting behind you?—No, you were not.

41081. Not when you entered that charge up?—No.

41082. (Mr. Dickinson.) You made a report on the 23rd November, did you not?—Yes.

41083. In which you begin, "Referring to the allegation made by A. Platt, bookmaker, of 7, Bird Street, Lambeth, of having given 10s. to two police-constables in the charge room at this station on the 13th October last I beg to report," and so forth. What was the allegation you were then referring to. You drew up the report on the 23rd November. Where did you see the allegation to which you refer?—I did not see the allegation. I was simply directed to make out a report with reference to the allegation.

41084. What did you know about the allegation?—From my superior officers.

41085. What did your superior officers tell you?—I was told that an allegation had been made by a Mr. Platt that 10s. had been given by him to some officers while the charge was being taken on the 13th October.

41086. Was that Superintendent Noviss or Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer who told you that?—I could not say where it emanated from, but I was directed to make out the report, and I made it out.

41087. You did not see this letter of Mr. Platt's of the 19th November?—No.

41088. You were simply told verbally that he had made this allegation?—Yes.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) This allegation is not in the letter.

(Mr. Dickinson.) It is not only not in the letter, but it is nowhere.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, it is in Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer's report, but this officer had not seen Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer's report. The allegation is merely referred to in Sub-divisional Inspector Spencer's report as being an allegation which was made a month before verbally.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, Sir, but this officer is asked to report upon that allegation. It is the same day.

(Witness.) I think this was about a month after I took the charge.

41089. (Mr. Dickinson.) They did not tell you when he made that allegation?—No.

JOHN FORBES, sworn.

J. Forbes.

41090. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I think that in the year 1903 you were carrying on a street betting business?—Yes.

41091. You were carrying it on under the name of John Forbes?—Yes, that is so.

41092. Was Platt in your employment?—He was at that time.

41093. Do you remember when you first commenced to employ him?—It would be about May or June, 1903.

41094. And at the time you commenced to employ him, what was he doing, do you know?—He was not doing anything at all at the time. He had a cab licence at Waterloo, and used to drive a cab there, but only periodically.

41095. How came you to be introduced to him?—Through another bookmaker.

41096. What were the terms upon which you at first engaged him?—I believe he had 50s. a week to start with.

41097. And where was it that he betted?—At Waterloo, near the public-house called the Hero.

41098. Do you know the name of the street?—I cannot call to mind the name of the street.

41099. Was it Robert Street?—Yes, that would be it.

41100. Mepham Street and Robert Street?—It was the first turning to the left by the Hero of Waterloo, the passage leading to the station.

41101. That is Robert Street?—Yes, that is it.

41102. How long did you continue to employ him?—Only for about three or four months.

41103. At the time you commenced to employ him had he any means of his own?—None whatever that I know of.

41104. And did you pay him anything more than the weekly wage?—Only 50s. a week; that is all.

41105. How often would you see him—every day?—Every day; I used to go there to take the papers from him after he collected them.

41106. Did you take the money from him that he received as well as the papers?—No, we used to settle the same evening—or we should have done.

41107. After you had employed him some little time were his wages increased?—Yes, I think he had £3 afterwards.

41108. During the time that you employed him, did you ever authorise him to pay any moneys to the police, or did you ever give him any money to pay to the police?—No, none whatever. He simply had his wages and no other money.

41109. Did he ever suggest to you that he had paid any money to the police?—He has remarked on a few occasions that he had had to give them money.

41110. Did he ever produce any document showing that he had paid anything?—I never saw any.

41111. You have said that you saw him during the day to take papers from him that he received. What time in the day would that be?—A few minutes before the first race. It would vary according to the time the racing started.

41112. What is the object of taking the papers from him at that time?—To see that I had them in time.

41113. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Before the races are run?—Before the races are run.

41114. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) And then you say that later on you were in the habit of settling up with him?—I used to meet him in the Strand at night for him to pay out.

41115. Did you find that he was regular and punctual in his settling up in the evening?—No, he did not settle up very punctually at all.

41116. Did he account to you for all the money he had received?—No. The papers were made out and the winnings or losings were made out, and I should have to receive whatever was won on the day, and pay out if there had been a loss.

41117. Do you say that you received from him all the moneys you ought to have received?—No, I did not receive it on several occasions.

41118. Did he give any explanation of why you did not receive the full amount?—No. He had several cock and bull stories at the time, but the tale was generally different. He made out that he had not got it, or was short, and could not account for the loss, and all that.

41119. Was it at the same time he was giving you these accounts that he made reference to paying moneys to the police?—That I could not say. That would pass in the usual way of conversation.

41120. Did you eventually part company with him?—I did after three or four months.

41121. And why was that?—Because he was repeatedly short in the takings, and because he monopolised the connection to himself after awhile and refused to give me the papers.

41122. He would not give you the papers, and he was repeatedly short in his takings?—Quite so.

41123. Do you know the amount he owed you at the time you parted company?—Not exactly, but I should say about £20 or £30.

41124. How long had that been accumulating?—During the time he had been working for me, this three or four months.

41125. Had he ever been able to give any satisfactory explanation with regard to that money?—None whatever.

41126. From your dealings with him during this time did you form any opinion as to whether he was a man whose word could be relied upon?——

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) We cannot have that.

41127. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Very well, Sir. I think you did go to the police station and make a complaint about it?—After he left me.

41128. With reference to this money?—Because he had not paid me what was due to me, and he was betting there for himself.

41129. He suggests that during that time he was working for you he was paying the police at least a sum of £3 a week?—That would be impossible, because he did not receive that in wages.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) £3 10s.

41130. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I was not sure whether he actually put it at £3 10s. I think his wages never exceeded £3, and he began with £2 10s.?—Yes.

41131. I think on one occasion you yourself were arrested when you were taking slips from him in the street?—Quite so.

41132. We know the date of that. That was the 9th July, 1903?—Yes, it would be about that time.

41133. How long prior to that had you been employing him?—About a couple of months or so.

41134. And for how long after that date did you continue to employ him?—I think he left me in the early part of August. It is several years ago, and I am rather uncertain as to the dates.

41135. What happened to Platt himself when you were arrested?—He got away somehow or other.

41136. During the time that you were employing him, was any tout employed?—Yes, he had a tout at the corner of the street where he betted.

41137. (Mr. Platt.) Will you look at that card. (Handing card to Witness.) Is that one of your cards?—Yes, it was.

41138. Would that be your correct name?—No. My proper name is not Forbes, but that is the name I have always done betting under.

41139. The same as I have been betting in the name of Smith and have been Platt still. You bet in the name of Forbes and your name is Walters?—Quite so.

41140. Previous to my working for you where were you betting?—At Hornsey.

41141. What amount of fines and summonses had been served on you previous to your engaging me?—I could not tell you, but a good many.

41142. Why? Because you did not pay the police?—Because I betted in High Street, Hornsey, contrary to the rules.

41143. Nowhere else. Since you left Hornsey what division were you betting in when you had summonses previous to meeting me?—At New Cross.

41144. How much in fines did you pay there on summonses yourself?—Do you mean at New Cross, or in all?

41145. At New Cross?—The best part of £100.

41146. Because you gave the police nothing, that is why. You did not give me enough to give them?—You were paid a fair wage.

41147. Why did you engage me to work for you?—Because I thought you could take a fairish amount of money there.

41148. Because you thought I could handle the police?—No, not at all. You were well known in the neighbourhood.

41149. Do you not think it was because you thought I could handle the police?—No, I do not. You did not seem to handle them very well. You kept being fined.

41150. Four times. I did not pay so much in fines as you did. You paid more in three months in fines than I did in six?—I was in a different division.

41151. Any division you have betted in you have always paid more fines than ever I have, because, of course, you never knew how to drop your character?—That is out of the question.

41152. With regard to our disagreement over money matters, was it not because I always asked you to give me more money?—You wanted more money, because you were taking more money.

41153. And you turned round and told me if I was worth £4 or £5 a week, which I asked for, what was your position as employer, and what were you worth?—Quite so.

41154. I increased my takings after I had been with you a month by 100 per cent. Did I, or did I not?—Most probably you did.

41155. You know I did?—I could not swear to the exact figures.

41156. You know I did?—I say you increased them.

41157. When I increased my takings by 100 per cent., and asked you for more money, what did you do?—Paid it to you.

41158. Did you pay?—Yes.

41159. That has always been my disagreement with you. Did you not go and meet a man who brought me £30, £40, and £50 a day, half-way before he could come to me?—He came to me because he preferred to.

41160. Did you do that?—I did not do that.

41161. You know you did it?—I know I did not.

41162. You went away and owed him £90.

41163. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Why did he come to you?—Because he preferred to do business with me direct instead of through an agent.

(Chairman.) What was this customer's name.

(Mr. Platt.) Henderson, or Anderson, I would not be sure which, but I can produce the witness.

41164. (Chairman.) Anderson, or Henderson came to you. Why do you say he came to you?—Because, I presume, he preferred to do business with me direct instead of through an agent.

41165. (Mr. Platt.) You never met him and gave him half a quid, instead of giving me a £2 a week more. You would sooner give him half a sovereign than give me £2?—I do not know what you mean. Are you referring to Anderson?

41166. You know who I am referring to—the man who gave you £30 or £40?—This is four years ago, is it not?

41167. Was that the cause of our disagreement, because you took that man away, and your answer to me was: "You are not taking the money you have been in the habit of taking, and therefore I cannot raise your wages"?—No, the cause of our disagreement was because if ever I won £5 or £6, you had never got it to settle with at night.

41168. When you had occasion to go to Kennington Road Police Station, what amount did you say I kept back from you?—I could not say now, it is so long back.

41169. Try and think?—I have had no reason to remember it.

41170. £20 or £30. You must have told Mr. Muir, because Mr. Muir stated here in open court it was £50?—I did not know he did.

41171. He stated it here?—I cannot remember now.

41172. But you know?—I don't know.

41173. How much would you think I kept back from you?—I say about £20 or £30.

41174. You say?—Yes.

41175. Are you sure?—I cannot be sure. It is nearly four years ago, and I have had no occasion to remember these things.

41176. Would you say it was £20?—Yes.

J. Forbes.

11 April 1907.

41177. You would say it was?—Yes.

41178. You are positive it was £20?—That is what you were owing me at the finish—£20 to £30.

41179. Look at that paper. (Handing paper to witness.) Is that your handwriting?—It is the handwriting of a clerk of mine. It is not mine.

41180. You have the total facts there?—How do you mean? That is a slip you had to pay out.

41181. So if you said I went away and kept £20 of your money, those figures would refute that fact?—Not at all, because you owed money from previous bets when you had not settled.

41182. You say you went to Kennington Road Police Station, and you said that I kept £20 back?—I don't follow you.

41183. Does that paper prove I kept £20 back?—When I went to Kennington Road Police Station I made a complaint that you were owing this money.

41184. Mr. Muir puts it in another way, and says I swindled you. You would not go to the police station saying I was owing you money, but you would take me up to the County Court?—But I did go to the police station, and as I say, roughly, it was £20.

41185. You gave an officer who is in Court money to apprehend me that day?—This is only one day's winnings.

41186. This is the day you are fixing on which you go to the police station, and say I owe you these moneys?—I could not swear this was the day I went to the police station.

41187. That is the day?—I don't know whether it is the day or not.

41188. You don't know, or you won't know. If you look down that card you may tell the Commissioners the names of those men who betted for you?—Perhaps the Commissioners would like to see the card.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I think we have seen it.

41189. (Mr. Platt.) Will you prove that those men were betting for you at Hornsey, who you have got on that card?—Yes, they were for several years.

41190. At that date that you employed me?—Yes, certainly they were.

41191. Under "Alf, Waterloo," and "George." Would you tell the Commissioners who the initial "G" was. What was he?—I could not tell you. I took him on simply on your recommendation.

41192. You knew what he was?—I did not know what he was.

41193. Was he not a pensioned police inspector?—I don't know that he was.

41194. You knew he was?—He would not tell me what he was.

41195. You knew what he was before you engaged him?—I did not know what he was.

41196. Was he ever apprehended?—I don't think so.

41197. You never paid a fine for him?—No.

41198. Why?—I don't know why.

41199. (Chairman.) Who was "G"?—An agent who I used to employ.

41200. (Mr. Platt.) Since you discontinued business relations with me you have betted at St. Pancras?—No, I have not betted there at all. The last place I betted at was New Cross.

41201. You have not betted at St. Pancras?—No.

41202. You did not buy a paper shop that had a connection, for the purpose of betting?—No.

41203. You did not give £200 for the business there?—No, I did not.

41204. Are you betting in it at the present time?—I am not.

41205. Why did you buy the business?—Because I have finished with betting.

41206. Was it because there was a good connection attached to that shop for betting purposes?—Certainly not. There was no betting at all when I went there.

41207. Was there a post office attached to it then?—No.

41208. No robbery there?—No.

41209. Have you been fined in St. Pancras for betting since?—Never.

41210. You have never taken any papers for betting purposes in Judd Street, St. Pancras?—No.

41211. Are you still a member of the Great Northern Club?—No, I am not.

41212. Why?—Because I don't go up there. I am still a member.

41213. Why are you not a member? Do you owe moneys there?—No, I do not.

41214. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I do not quite follow your answer. First you say you are a member, and then you say you are not a member. Which is it? Are you a member of the Great Northern Club?—I have not been up there for twelve months now, and I doubt whether my membership still lasts or not.

41215. You were a member, but you have not resigned?—Yes. I have had other business to take my attention, and I cannot spare the time to go there, because I stop at the shop.

41216. (Mr. Platt.) The cause of our disagreement at Waterloo was because you took from me this man who used to bring to me from £30 to £40 and £50 a day. Did you go away owing him money?—One man I did.

41217. £90?—No, not half that sum.

41218. You admit you went away owing money?—I owed that man some money.

41219. Supposing I were to tell you I could call witnesses in this Court to say what you owe them since you were at Waterloo, is that possible?—You can only call one man who I owed money to.

41220. Would you name him?—Girber.

41221. All the time that I was betting for you did you have anyone ask you for moneys that I never paid? Punters, do you mean?

41222. Yes?—Yes, on one or two occasions.

41223. Tell me when?—At the time you were betting for me.

41224. What time? Would you say the commencement?—After you had been at it a few weeks.

41225. What do you call a few weeks?—Say six weeks or two months.

41226. Would you say two months?—Yes, about that time. Say two months.

41227. It is quite possible that what P.C. Soer says, that he was stopped and told after I had been there a matter of five or six weeks that I earned 26s., would not be to your knowledge. People knew you were my employer. I introduced you to each and every man I betted with, did I not?—Yes, and when you did not settle with them they came to me.

41228. When I did not settle. You are a right sort of "finger" to pay?—That is outside the question.

41229. It is the fact that after you took this man away the cause of our disagreement was practically that you took a man away from me who was bringing me half as much money as I had been in the habit of taking, and you go away owing him money?—You quoted to me one name just now—Anderson. This is not Anderson, this is Girber.

41230. You know who the man was betting for?—No, I do not.

41231. You tried to take him away from the man himself. That man was getting a living off the other man, and bringing it to me, and then you wanted to go behind that man and take him away from him?—No, the man came to me.

41232. Who introduced you to him?—He came down to see me.

41233. Who took his first bet?—He was betting with you first of all.

41234. You cut the ground from under my feet?—No, I did not do so.

41235. Then you grumble about money being kept back—money which I kept back in lieu of wages that you had never given to me?—No. You had an agreed wage, and you had it every week.

41236. You say I had an agreed wage?—Yes, you agreed to work for 50s. a week, and you had the money.

41237. Did I have 50s. a week?—Yes.

41238. Are you sure?—Quite sure.

41239. One of the causes of our disagreement was that after giving these officers the money I say I did, I still went down?—Down where?

41240. Down the "Nick"—down to the police station. Was that one of the causes of our disagreement, that after giving these people the money I did, I went down once a month, and you could not understand that?—I do not quite follow you.

41241. After my giving the money to these men that I did?—Why should you give it to them?

41242. Have you not given any of them money?—I have not given them any.

41243. Not the day they apprehended me, when you stood on the corner with your bike when they came to me, and you wanted me to be taken just after 12 o'clock, when you knew that was my busy time, from 12 to quarter past 2, so that you could nip in on the pitch to take the money?—I was never down there till 2 o'clock.

41244. What time were you in the police station when you made your report?—You had left me then; that was months after.

41245. What time was it when you were in the police station? Do you say you were never there after 12 o'clock?—I could not say now. It is four years ago.

(Mr. Platt.) Would the report show that, Sir?

(Chairman.) We have no such report.

41246. (Mr. Platt.) He went there and complained about me withholding his money. I just wanted to know the time?—I was never in the neighbourhood till 2 o'clock.

41247. You were there in the neighbourhood then, and at other times you were in the neighbourhood. Was not the cause of our disagreement because you never gave me a sufficiency of money to pay myself?—But you did have sufficiency of money; I considered 50s. a fair wage.

41248. I never received 50s. a week?—You had it.

41249. The only money I had from you was £2. I have detained moneys?—You have had as much as £3 apart from what you stuck to when you were short and did not pay out.

41250. You admit you went away owing moneys?—That is another matter altogether.

41251. You went away owing moneys?—You have said that twice.

41252. You admit you have been fined in other divisions more money than you have been fined in the L Division?—I have only been in two.

41253. In the two divisions you have betted in—Hornsey and New Cross?—Yes.

41254. You have paid more money in fines than I have during the time I was betting at Waterloo?—In some districts they give you summonses, and in other districts they take you to the station.

41255. In 1903 was not every division in London worked on that principle—they summoned men instead of apprehending them in the streets?—Not at all.

41256. Were you arrested personally in the streets in 1903?—Yes.

41257. What date?—I could not tell you the date now.

41258. How many summonses did you have served on you in 1903?—I do not know.

41259. You did not pay on any summonses in 1903?—That I cannot say.

41260. Did you pay on any summonses at New Cross?—Certainly I did.

41261. That was in 1903?—I could not tell you.

41262. Just before you engaged me?—While I was engaged at New Cross I did pay on summonses.

41263. I never paid on any summonses?—You were in another division.

41264. Were not every police division using all the exertions they could to summon men at that time?—No.

41265. Where was the biggest fine paid on summonses in the year 1903?—That I cannot tell you.

41266. That was the special year, the special time of these summonses?—I could not tell you.

41267. A witness in court paid the highest fine of any street bookmaker. I believe he had 38 summonses, although I would not be positive of the number. In this year it was a specialty of these officers to summon you in preference to apprehending you. I believe you will find in the records of all the divisions that the L Division was the most slack on that particular point. Do you owe any moneys now?—I do not see what that has to do with the matter at all.

(Mr. Platt.) He is a man of my own profession; he has been betting on his card since 1895, and I want to show as to what Mr. Muir was trying to insinuate as regards my character in the matter of owing money, how it is possible you can be owing money.

(Chairman.) The allegation was not simply of owing money, but that you had been embezzling money or swindling, which is the word you yourself used. That was the suggestion against you.

(Mr. Platt.) The man has been in business as many years as myself. Mr. Muir said I was apprehended as Smith, when my name was Platt.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) He has admitted he owed money. What you are asking is how much.

(Mr. Platt.) I do not ask him any further questions.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Mr. Platt said that I said in open court the complaint was as to £50. I have been looking to see whether I made any such statement, and I cannot find anything in the shorthand notes as to the amount at all. My cross-examination was founded upon a statement of Soer's, in which the amount is said to be £30, and that is the amount I intended to put. If I put £50 I was wrong.

41268. (Chairman.) Had you known Platt, or Smith, for a long time before you engaged him in 1903?—No, only a few weeks.

41269. Where did you make his acquaintance?—Another bookmaker introduced me to him.

41270. Where was that?—At the back of the Gaiety Theatre that was.

41271. Did you engage him at the first interview, or did you see him several times afterwards?—I saw him once or twice, and then afterwards he agreed to start betting for me.

41272. Had you given up betting in the Greenwich Division, or in the Hornsey Division then?—I am not certain whether the New Cross Division was before that or after that. I think it was before that, and I had given it up. It is some four or five years ago now.

41273. When you met Platt behind the Gaiety Theatre you were out of business, so to speak?—Yes. I had one or two men betting for me, but I was not in the business myself.

41274. Why had you given up the business yourself actively?—I found the fines so excessive that it was not worth the candle. I paid so much in fines at Highgate that I turned it up.

41275. There was not a sufficient margin of profit to justify your going on?—Quite so.

41276. Why did you think somebody whom you might employ would do better than you yourself had been doing?—They were in other divisions where the summoning was not carried on to such an extent as it was at Hornsey. I mean in some divisions you might get two summonses, in some divisions one, and in another division you might get six, perhaps.

41277. Still that does not quite answer my question, because, after all, if you found in the L Division the police were more "slack," to use the term that Mr. Platt used himself, you could have gone and done the betting work yourself in the L Division?—I was unknown in the neighbourhood, and Platt, I believe knew a large number of people round there at the station.

41278. Was that the inducement for employing Platt?—Quite so. He had not been there but a little while before he was taking a deal of money, and his connection was very large.

41279. Did you engage him at the first interview?—About the first or second interview.

41280. How many interviews did you have with him before you engaged his services?—I cannot say now, but I should say about a couple.

41281. You have got no diary, or any book by which you can fix the date when he entered your employment?—No. It is four years ago, and I have not had occasion to keep these things.

41282. Did you keep a book then?—Only the man's takings—what he had to pay out, and that.

J. Forbes.
11 April 1907.

41283. You have not got that book?—I have not. I have no books relating to any business.

41284. You say the arrangement was that he was to be paid 50s. a week. On what day was he to be paid the 50s.?—Every Saturday he had his money.

41285. Do you mean you paid him every Saturday?—50s.

41286. Did you take any receipt?—No; it was deducted generally from the winnings, if there were any, or I had to pay him out.

41287. Did you pay him every Saturday until the connection terminated?—Yes; he had it right up to the finish.

41288. As I understand, there was a weekly settlement?—He had 50s. a week every week until he had a rise, and he had £3 then.

41289. As I understand it, on a Saturday, if he owed you money as the result of the week's transactions——?—No, the transactions were settled daily.

41290. Yes, but still you say he owed you money?—He did, because nine days out of ten, or five or six days out of ten, the takings would be short. If he took £20 or £10, and had £5 to pay out, there would be something to come to me, and he would hand me £4 or £5, and he would have a tale for the other, and I should have to wait.

41291. Why did you pay him on the Saturday?—He made out he had nothing to go home with.

41292. Did this kind of conversation take place every Saturday?—We were always at loggerheads on account of his not having settled.

41293. You kept him on your employment for four months. I should like to know what you mean by being "short" in his takings. This is a slip made out by one of your clerks, I think?—Yes.

41294. On the back of it I see: "Take £20 13s. 6d. —pay £5 8s. 8d." On turning over I find that the £5 8s. 8d. is made up for Wednesday, the 15th July, and the slip contains the names of a number of persons, or signs by which the customer is known, and the amount that has to be paid to him?—Yes.

41295. They total up £5 8s. 8d.?—Yes.

41296. I understand what you mean by being "short" is that you did not get the £20 13s. 6d. from him?—No—the balance of £15 odd. When I met him in the evening he should have given me the £15 odd, or whatever it was, to pay out with.

41297. I understood the system was that you took the slips away from him?—That was before the racing, then I took them home and made them up. Then in the evening he gave me the money. I kept the papers, and he would have to give me the balance.

41298. £15 4s. 10d.?—Yes.

41299. Do you say he was almost invariably short?—Yes. If he had to give me £15 he would probably give me £10 ,and say: "I will give you the balance in the morning." When the morning came I did not get it.

41300. You mean if on July 15th he only gave you £10 there was £5 short?—I could not tell you that on that day.

41301. You went on still employing him?—I did do so. He made out that he had not got the money for it.

41302. The figures are not agreed on that date?—They are agreed on paper; a lot of people who were betting had not settled with him till the following day.

41303. Then in fact he had not taken £20 13s. 6d.?—He had taken it on paper, but he had not taken the money for it. He would say: "Brown owes me £3, and Smith owes me £3, I must give you that when I get it off them. I have not seen them to-day."

41304. Is your suggestion that Brown and Smith had paid Platt the money with the slips?—They may have paid him or they may not, but there was always some excuse of that sort put up when the settlement was not forthcoming.

41305. It is not an uncommon practice to bet on the nod, we have been told?—Yes, it is a common practice.

41306. In that case there is no money actually passing at the moment, I understand?—Not between those identical punters.

41307. So that it may be perfectly true that the system under which the business was to your knowledge carried out, was that Platt might have received slips for £20 13s. 6d. in the sense that that was the sum that the moneys mentioned in all the paper slips which you received came to, but that, in fact, he had not had the £20 13s. 6d.?—That was the excuse to me.

41308. You say it was his excuse, but it might be a very proper statement of fact, according to the system which you knew he was carrying on?—Yes. It is quite possible that the people he did business with would meet him on the following morning and give him the money; and I know prety well the bulk of the punters he had there who were betting on the nod, and I knew full well they were men who would eventually pay; if they did not give it to him then, they would in the course of a day or so.

41309. I am putting a specific point. Supposing on this very day in July he said, "Here are £10; the balance is really £15 4s. 10d., but in fact, 'Alf, £3 2s. 6d.,' never paid me up the money; I took the slip, but I did not take the money," that, according to your system of business, was quite a right and proper way to do it?—Yes, but I always found out in the course of a day or two that these punters had paid him, and yet I could not get the money from him; he drew it later and kept it.

41310. That is, he had cheated you?—Quite so.

41311. Made a false statement to you?—Yes.

41312. And yet you paid him 50s. on the following Saturday?—As these accounts went on, sometimes he would pay some of them, and if it was £5 he might reduce it to £3.

41313. Although you found out he had been telling lies to you, you would still pay him £2 10s. on the Saturday?—Yes; I put up with that.

41314. Notwithstanding the short takings?—The business was still showing a profit, and I thought that was one side of the question.

41315. You actually raised his wages to £3, although you knew he was continually making these lying excuses?—It went on until he got to owing me about £20 or £30, and I stood it no longer then.

41316. You say you stood it no longer. You have said you were making a profit out of it, and were content. If we are to believe your story, you had got a servant whom you knew to be cheating you?—There is always a certain amount of that to contend with.

41317. While you were quite content he should cheat you you paid him his wages in full so long as there was a profit?—As to the wages, in nine cases out of ten, it was a case of Hobson's choice—the wages were stopped.

41318. I asked you about the wages specially, and you told me you paid him 50s. every Saturday?—On a Saturday I paid him in that manner. If he had £5 10s. to give me, he would hand me £3 and keep the balance.

41319. On Saturdays you invariably gave him £2 10s.?—In that manner, yes.

41320. Did he at any time allege that he had made payments to the police?—He never said anything to me about it. I was only with him a few minutes each day to take the papers, and at night. He had the business entirely to himself.

41321. Did you keep no book at all in which you entered the transactions with him?—No.—Everything was settled daily, and I used to keep the papers, and the paying-out slips, and the matter was done with. I kept no books whatever. What few books I did keep have been disposed of long ago; it is four years nearly.

41322. You had a clerk?—I had him to do the papers—to work out the betting slips; there are a great many of them each day.

41323. What are these figures in pencil?—They are mine.

41324. I understand that at no time did Platt allege that he had made payments to the police, or deduct sums of money, which were otherwise due to you, on account of bribes to the police?—No, he never deducted any moneys for the police.

41325. Did you think he was more fortunate than other people in regard to his evading arrest or summons?—I did not think he was. He was only there three or four months. He was summoned on one or two occasions.

41326. Summoned?—Charged.

41327. I do not think he was summoned at all. He was arrested four times up to October, but I think he was only arrested once when betting for you?—I thought he had been arrested more than once in the three or four months.

41328. So he was; he was arrested four times?—During the time he was working for me?

41329. You said he ceased to be your servant in August?—But I thought during the time he was betting for me he was arrested on more than one occasion.

41330. (Mr. Rufus. Isaacs.) He was arrested on the 29th May, twice in August, and on the 13th October?—Then it would be about twice during my employ.

41331. (Chairman.) Did it not strike you that he was more fortunate than you had been?—Not particularly. He was arrested twice in three or four months.

41332. Supposing he was still your servant when he was arrested on the 1st August, and he had paid £10 in fines, did he debit you with the fines?—Yes, I paid those.

41333. At any rate, then, he had been in your employment for nearly three months, had he not?—Not in May.

41334. In May, June, July, and August. It was in May, I think, you engaged him, you said?—He was arrested once in May.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The amount of the fine on the first occasion was £1.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) And £5 on the occasion in August.

41335. (Chairman.) You paid the fines?—Yes, quite so.

41336. I thought you suggested that you employed him because you thought he might be more fortunate?—No, I employed him because I thought——

41337. He had a large range of customers?—Yes. He had a cab at Waterloo for some while, I believe, and, of course, he knew a great many people there.

41338. For the few months you carried on business through his agency was it a profitable business?—Quite so.

41339. And the business you carried on at New Cross had not been profitable, I understand, owing to these fines?—Yes, because out there, when we were fined they fined you £5 or £10 at a time, and if you had four or five summones, it would come to £40 or £50 in fines, whereas in other divisions you might get one or two summonses.

41340. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You told the Chairman just now that Platt never said anything to you about payments to the police, and that he never deducted any moneys for the police. You told us that twice?—Yes.

41341. Is that true?—Quite true.

41342. Do you know that you said, when you were giving evidence in answer to Mr. Bankes, that he had told you on a few occasions, and then you said on one or two occasions he had to give the police money?—He never said anything to me about giving the police money.

41343. But you said it to-day?—I did not know I had said it.

41344. You have sworn it before us?—That he had given money to the police? He never asked me to give money to the police.

41345. You are on oath giving evidence to us, and in answer to Mr. Bankes you said: "He remarked"—I think it was—"on a few occasions he had had to give them money," and as I was not quite sure of the words used, I asked you to repeat them, and you repeated them by saying: "He remarked on one or two occasions he had given them money"?—He complained to that effect, yes.

41346. Then what did you mean by telling the Chairman just now that he never said anything to you about payments to the police?—He had never had any money from me for that purpose.

41347. You said to the Chairman he never said anything to you about payments to the police?—He told me he had had to give the police money, but he had never had any money from me for them.

41348. Then why did you tell the Chairman just now that he never said anything to you about payments to the police?—I was confused in the matter. It is difficult to remember all this. It is four years ago.

41349. Now which of the statements is true?—It is impossible for me to remember so far back, is it not?

41350. Is it true what you swore in answer to Mr. Eldon Bankes, that he had told you on one or two occasions that he had had to give the police money?—He used to make those remarks to me.

41351. How often did he make them?—I cannot say now.

41352. On several occasions?—On one or two occasions, yes. You are asking me to remember a conversation four years ago.

41353. I am only asking you to remember what you have sworn to-day before us a few minutes ago, before you made the contradictory statement. Who asked you to give evidence here?—The police.

41354. When?—Right back—about October last.

41355. Did you ask Platt how much he had had to give the police?—No, I did not.

41356. Do you mean to say, when he was accounting to you that he had had to give money to the police on one or two occasionss, or on several occasions that you never asked him how much?—I might have turned round and remarked that his wages would have to pay all expenses, or words to that effect, but I do not know what I said to him now; in fact, I cannot call to mind his passing any remark. He used to complain on one or two occasions of having given the police money, and that is all I can remember.

41357. Just think a moment. Stand up and pull yourself together. Just think what you said. Are you suggesting you told him that if he had had to give the police money on one or two occasions for carrying on your business, he was to deduct it out of his wages. Do you suggest that you ever told him that?—I paid no more money beyond the 50s.

41358. But he gave you less money out of the takings because he deducted it for the police, did he not?—I do not know that he deducted it for that purpose.

41359. Did he not tell you so on some occasions?—He did not give that as his reason for being short.

41360. Did he not tell you on some occasions that he had had to give money, and that accounted for his being short as to part of his takings?—He told me that he had had to give the police money, but he did not say that was why he was short.

41361. But it would follow, would it not?—Not necessarily. That is all according to what he gave them.

41362. The amount that he gave them he would be short in his takings, would he not?—Unless he paid it out of his pocket.

41363. Do you think he did that? Did you ever expect he was going to pay the police out of his £2 10s. a week to carry on the business of bookmaking for you?—I did not know he would have to pay the police.

41364. But he told you he had; and after all, you are not a novice in bookmaking. You have told us yourself you were, I think, fined £100 in one year. All we want you to tell us is the truth about this matter?—I cannot tell you more than I have.

41365. Just follow this: Platt is carrying on business for you at 50s. a week, taking money for you, and accounting to you, or supposed to, every day for the balance of the takings. If he is short in those takings, as shown by the papers, he has to explain to you why he is short. That is your sytem of business every day?—Quite so.

41366. Sometimes he told you a story, as I understand you, about Mr. A or Mr. B, who had made a bet on the nod, owing him £2 or £3?—Yes.

41367. Sometimes he told you he was unfortunate, and that he could not pay to-day, but he would be able to do it to-morrow?—Yes.

41368. And sometimes, he told you he had given money to the police?—Yes.

41369. Now, I want to know, when he told you sometimes that he had given money to the police, and that was why he was short in the takings, did you never ask him how much he was short?—No, it was a matter I left to him; I would not give him any money.

41370. That is what I rather thought?—I agreed to pay his fines while he was engaged betting for me, and that is why I would not give him any money to pay the police. I do not pay bribes myself and pay fines as well.

J. Forbes.

41371. If he was paying the police at the time that would be with the idea of avoiding paying fine money?—But I had to pay the fine money for him.

41372. That is because, apparently, the system did not work completely, if what he says is true?—I take it he should not give money to the police when he got fined.

41373. That is the conclusion you came to?—Yes.

41374. Why did you come to that conclusion?—I do not know why I came to that conclusion, but I did not think he was giving the police money or they would not fine him.

41375. Is that your experience?—I have never parted with any money to the police myself, because I would sooner pay the fine.

41376. Why did you come to that conclusion that if he was being fined he was not paying money to the police. Did you have any conversation with him about it?—No, I did not.

41377. Then it was a view that you arrived at by yourself. Is that right?—Yes.

41378. You came to the conclusion, when you found he was arrested on one or two occasions at most during your employment, that that was because he had not at this time been giving money to the police. That is what you said, is it not?—Yes.

41379. That is what you thought. Can you give any other explanation? This is your own statement?—I really did not think but very little about it. I left him betting there for me, and whatever transactions he had with the police I knew nothing of at all, and did not countenance in any way.

41380. I understand that?—I agreed to pay his fines, which I did, and I let the matter end at that.

41381. And if you thought he was paying the police to avoid being fined, that would be to your interest?—Yes.

41382. You would not have to pay the fine. That is right, is it not?—If it was workable in that way, but then very often a man might be run in and fined just the same.

41383. That might happen. Have you known that happen?—I have known bookmakers to give the police money on several occasions, but they have been fined just the same, and that is why I would never give them money.

41384. You say you have known bookmakers to give money to the police, but your view is that they have been fined just the same?—Just so.

41385. "Just the same." Do you not think it has made a little difference?—It may have done.

41386. Do you not think it did?—In some instances.

41387. I suppose that was why you came to the conclusion that, when Platt was fined this once or twice, that was because he had ceased to pay money to the police?—I did not know that he ever had paid them.

41388. Then why did you tell me just now yourself, that when he was fined once or twice you thought it was because he had not been paying money to the police at the time. Why did you say that?—(No answer.)

41389. Can you tell me?—No, I cannot.

41390. Are we to understand you to say that although Platt told you that he was giving money to the police, he never on any occasion told you how much, and you had no notion whether it was a shilling, a sovereign, or five shillings?—I cannot remember any amount he mentioned at the time, or whether he mentioned any amount.

41391. He may have done?—He may have done.

41392. I suppose as long as you did not think it was an extravagant amount, you had to submit to it?—I do not know that he ever stopped any money for that reason.

41393. You have told us several times that he did?—He did not stop any money for police fines.

41394. But you have told us several times that he did?—I do not think I told you that he stopped moneys from me to give to the police.

41395. Yes, you did. Let me read to you first of all what you said, which I have read to you already, in answer to Mr. Bankes—it is not quite that—and I will call your attention to a question that I put to you afterwards. "He remarked on a few, or on one or two occasions, he had had to give them money"?—He complained to me of having to do it.

41396. I asked you before, when he was accounting to you for the takings and had to give a balance to you, whether he did not account for it in several ways, and, amongst others, whether he had not had to give money to the police, and you said yes?—Those were his complaints, but I take it he did not stop any money for that purpose. The shortages would be what he had not received from the punters. That was the principal reason of the shortage.

41397. He was short in his takings at the time. Sometimes, I understand you, he explained that he was short because punters who had betted on the nod had not paid up?—Yes.

41398. Sometimes he had some other story that he was unfortunate, and he would not be able to pay till to-morrow or the next day, or something of that kind?—Yes.

41399. I put to you before, and sometimes he explained, or complained, if you like, that he had had to give money to the police?—He made that complaint, yes.

41400. As an excuse for not giving to you the full amount of the takings?—Quite so.

41401. That is what I call deducting money on his statement?—Yes, but it was not given from me to him to give to the police.

41402. Nobody has suggested that it was?—Quite so.

41403. I have not suggested to you that you put a sovereign into his hand to go and give it to the police?—No.

41404. What I was suggesting to you was that supposing he had to give you £5 on balance on the day, but said (never mind whether it was true) to you that he could only give you £3, for example, because, amongst other things, he had had to give the police money?—Yes, he would make that remark on one or two occasions.

41405. Then did you ask him how much he was deducting for what he had had to give to the police?—No, I made no remark whatever.

41406. Were you not curious to know how much it was?—I was paying all I expected to pay. I paid him the agreed weekly wage, and I paid his fines, and any other money he wanted had to come out of that. That was his trouble, and not mine. He was on the pitch and not me. I was taking responsibility as regards the business.

41407. And as regards fines?—Yes, and his interviews with the police and all that was his own affair.

41408. Supposing he gave a policeman half a sovereign?—I should say "That is your own trouble."

41409. Supposing the effect of that was to save your paying a fine of £5?—I do not think it would.

41410. Did you say he would have to pay the money just the same whether he was paying it to the police or not?—Any money he gave to the police he did unbeknown to me. He had the pitch there all day.

41411. Then according to you you never had any information of what the amount was?—No.

41412. That was left to him?—Yes. He had a weekly wage. It is not like a man who is paid on commission, or given expenses money, or anything of that.

41413. You have never known him talk of money when he had deducted any for the police?—He never deducted any for the police.

41414. He said he had?—Unless he considered the sum of £20 or £30 that he was short was police money.

41415. You have told me several times that he told you he had deducted money for the police. That is what he said?—Yes, but you cannot arrive at it. It was £20 or £30 short at the finish. You cannot arrive at the exact amount. It might be from half a dozen various reasons that the £20 or £30 which was short was made up.

41416. What I was putting to you was that that was one of the reasons that he gave you, and you agreed. Now I want to know whether at any time you ever asked him to pay that money which he said he had deducted for the police, or kept back, because he had paid it to the police?—I asked him to pay me, but I never got it. I got bits at times, you know.

41417. There was always a balance outstanding?—Quite so.

41418. As I understand what you have told us, you went and informed against him to the police?—Yes. That was after he had finished betting for me.

41419. When he was betting for himself?—Yes. He took the pitch on his own when he left me.

41420. Were you angry with him because he owed you money?—Yes, because he had taken the connection from me.

41421. So you went and told the police so that they could go and arrest him?—Yes.

41422. When was that, do you remember?—That would be about August, I should think.

41423. Was he arrested in consequence?—That I could not say. The police probably could tell you.

41424. Did you not keep an eye on him?—No, I live so far away from there. I went over to Kennington and informed them he was betting there.

41425. Apparently you knew he was going on betting and getting the benefit of the connection?—He did not stop there very long.

41426. Do you mean to say you do not know whether he was arrested in consequence of what you said?—I do not know.

41427. Whom did you see?—I saw the Station Inspector at Kennington Lane, I believe it was, I went to. I had gone to all the bother and expense of keeping the connection there after paying what I considered a fair wage week after week, and then being £20 or £30 short he turns round.

41428. I am not discussing the ethics of street bookmakers, but what I do want to know is this: When you had given this information to the police, I understand you to say, you never knew whether he had been arrested or not. Is that right?—No, I did not know.

41429. You had engaged him (Platt) because of his connection that he had in this district?—The connection he might get. He had not a connection at the time because he was doing nothing. I engaged him really on the recommendation of another bookmaker, who thought, knowing so many people in the neighbourhood, he would take a deal of money.

41430. Do you mean to say he never had a pitch there before?—Not that I know of; he was doing nothing when I first took him on.

41431. After seeing him once or twice you engaged him?—Yes; I arranged for him to start.

41432. How was it you came over to this part of the world to bet?—That was the part where he lived and where the connection was to be.

41433. By this time you had been summoned and fined rather heavily?—In other divisions.

41434. So you came to a division where you thought you would be a little safer?—No, I did not know what division it was. I happened to be talking to this other bookmaker one day, and he introduced Platt to me. I did not know whether he was going to Waterloo or Clapham.

41435. You did not know where he was going to bet?—No.

41436. Or what division he would be in?—No. The other bookmaker thought he could take money there, and I said, "You can bet there for me if you like, and I will find the money."

41437. I only want to know about this person "G," the last one mentioned on the card?—He was apparently known in the neighbourhood under that nom de plume.

41438. "G"?—Yes. He is really a friend of Platt's.

41439. Did you know what his occupation was?—He was doing nothing. When he came to me he had no occupation.

41440. Did you know what he had been?—No.

41441. Did you know whether he had ever been in the police force?—Certainly not.

41442. Either before or since?—I have heard since that he was. I have just heard from Platt.

41443. Is that the first time you have heard it?—To-day is the first time I have heard that he was a police officer, or had been. Platt introduced him to me, and said, "He can do a good bit of business; will you give him a start?" He was only with me a few weeks.

41444. How came it that you were arrested on the 9th July?—I was in the act of taking the papers from Platt, and a detective walked up and asked me for my name and address.

41445. Do you mean you were not betting yourself?—No, I was simply taking the papers off Platt, and they charged me with using the street for the purpose of betting.

41446. (Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose on this slip of paper the £5 8s. 8d. are the expenses which had been incurred by Platt?—No, that is the total of the different people who had to receive money back.

41447. You had to pay out this money?—Yes.

41448. "Alf" had £3 2s. 6d. That was payable to Platt himself?—No, not necessarily; it might have been a punter under the name of "Alf."

41449. I put it to you, was it so?—I should say not. In a bag full of papers one takes on a pitch in a day there might be a dozen papers with "Alf" on them.

41450. Your agent was known as "Alf"?—Yes.

41451. This was your agent's paper?—That is a paying-out slip; the names down there are people who have to receive.

41452. The papers showed that out of the takings £20 13s. 6d., £5 2s. 8d. would be left with him?—Yes.

41453. To pay out?—Yes.

41454. All these were punters, the first being "Alf, £3 2s. 6d." You say that "Alf" is not Platt?—I could not say, but I should say it was a punter, and not him.

41455. He was a punter who would have £3 2s. 6d.?—Yes. A lot of them have a lot more than that at times. A man would usually have 2s. 6d. or 3s. on but this man might have had a sovereign, or it might be long odds.

41456. Do you mean you never allowed your agent "Alf" money out of the takings?—No. The only money I allowed out of the takings were his wages and what he had for himself. I should think that "Alf, £3 2s. 6d." belonged to a punter.

41457. When you went to Kennington Lane Police Station, what did you say to the Inspector?—I complained that Platt was owing me £20 or £30, and was betting up this street, wherever it was—I forget the name of the street now—and that several punters he had not paid.

41458. What redress did you think you would get from the police?—I thought they would stop him from betting there. I did not think he was entitled to the pitch, after the manner he had treated me.

41459. Do you mean to say you thought the police would stop him from betting on a pitch because he had disagreed with you?—No, but if they knew he was betting there they could go and catch him; he had no money or anything.

41460. What did they say to you?—They took particulars, and said they would see into the matter, I believe. I cannot tell you what particulars they took.

41461. Have you been arrested?—Yes, I have been, when I was arrested for having taken the papers.

41462. How did the police come and ask you to give evidence in this case?—I believe Platt posed as being the master-man, the bookmaker, and they sought me out to prove that he was simply an agent working for me.

41463. Who was the policeman who came to you?—I think that gentleman there, in the first row. I do not know his name.

41464. Did you know him at all?—I could not remember him. Police-constable Soer also came and saw me, and asked me to come.

41465. Did you know Police-constable Soer?—I remembered him through being over there.

41466. How did he know you?—He knew me by going over each day to take the papers.

41467. He had arrested you once?—Yes.

41468. Were you acquainted with him?—I was acquainted with him the day he arrested me, but I could not remember him before.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I think it might save trouble if I say I am responsible for the Witness being brought here. I saw the statement of this man's arrest, and of his complaint to the police, and I instructed that he should be summoned.

J. Forbes.

41469. (Mr. Dickinson.) Quite so. I want to know what acquaintance you had with Soer at that time?—I only knew him as a constable.

41470. Had you acquaintance with Deed?—No, I did not know Deed.

41471. Did you know Powell?—No, the only person I remembered out there was Soer, and he was the one who called upon me and asked me to come here.

41472. Had you met him often?—No, I have not seen him since; it is three or four years ago.

41473. When you were there?—No, only once when he came to ask me to come as a witness here. I recognised him as the constable who arrested me there.

FORTY-FOURTH DAY.

Friday, 12th April 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).

RUFUS DANIEL ISAACS, Esq., K.C., M.P.

WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).

CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).

J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Secretary).

J. F. WALEY, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Assistant Secretary).

(Platt's case continued.)

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I propose, now, Sir, to call two officers, Sergeant Hancox and Sergeant Bex, of the V Division, who were mentioned by Platt as persons to whom he had paid bribes.

Sergeant CHARLEY HANCOX, sworn.

Sergeant C. Hancox.

41474. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you now a Detective-sergeant of the E Division?—I am.

41475. Were you formerly stationed at Tooting?—I was.

41476. That is in the V Division?—Yes.

41477. Were you there during the years 1895 and 1896?—Yes, and in 1902.

41478. Did you first go there in 1895?—Yes, twelve years ago this month.

41479. April, 1895—That is so, as a C.I.D. officer.

41480. At that time what rank did you hold—Detective-constable.

41481. When were you promoted to be sergeant?—1902.

41482. So that in this period, 1895 and 1896, you were a detective-constable in the V Division—Yes.

41483. At that time had you to do with the suppression of street bookmaking—In connection with other business. I was not specially told off.

41484. But you had to do with that?—That is so.

41485. Were you specially appointed for that purpose?—No, I went into the C.I.D.

41486. That was merely a branch of your work?—Yes.

41487. (Chairman.) That means, I suppose, that you were primarily responsible to Scotland Yard and not to the Superintendent of the Tooting Division?—I was of course under the Superintendent of the Division, but I was responsible to the C.I.D. or the Assistant Commissioner. All our work is supervised by the Superintendent of the Division.

41488. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I am afraid I did not make my question quite clear. What I was asking you was whether your work in suppressing street bookmakers was merely a branch of your other work—That is so, as opportunity arose.

41489. Did you know Platt at all during that time?—I have never seen the man in my life to the best of my recollection.

41490. Have you ever been in his company at all, as far as you know?—No.

41491. Have you ever received any money in the way of a bribe from him or any other man in connection with your police duties?—No.

(Chairman.) Can you give me the reference to the statement made by Mr. Platt?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) It begins at page 716, question 31,331 of the Thirty-second Day.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask the witness any question, Mr. Platt?

41492. (Mr. Platt.) If you please, Sir. You say you have never seen me before?—No.

41493. You have never been in the Wheatsheaf?—I have been in the Wheatsheaf.

41494. Or the Old King's Head, or the Castle, or the Fountain?—I have been in all those places you mention on business.

41495. Have you ever drunk with me in the Fountain?—Never. I have never seen you.

41496. In the company of the proprietor?—Never.

41497. I believe he was the nephew of the proprietor. The same people owned the Red Lion, in Parliament Street?—That I know nothing about.

41498. You never had any cause to have a dispute over anything with the proprietor?—No.

41499. You have never drunk in any other bookmaker's company?—No. You refer to me?

41500. Yes?—No.

41501. You have never drunk in any other bookmaker's company?—No.

(Mr. Platt.) I should like to have this officer's record, Sir.

(Chairman.) No, I do not think that is necessary.

(Witness.) After 23 years' service it is rather unfair to produce a man's record at the request of Mr. Platt, when the accusation made against me is 12 years ago. I am perfectly willing that it should be shown to him by your direction, Sir, but personally I object.

(Chairman.) It is not a question for you. It is a question addressed to us. You mean the defaulters' sheet, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes, Sir.

(Chairman.) It may of course be a perfectly clean one.

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Chairman.) The Commission will look at it, but I do not think it is necessary for your purpose that you should have it.

(Mr. Platt.) I thought it was a little to my interest for it to be produced.

(Chairman.) I will look at the sheet. (After examining the document.) There is nothing in it that would throw any light on the case whatever, or attacking the credibility of the witness with regard to this matter.

41502. (Mr. Platt.) Has any officer whom you have done duty with at Bow Street within this past two years been presented with a testimonial by bookmakers of the E Division?—Not to my knowledge. I have done no duty. I have worked by myself for the past three years.

41503. No officer that you know, who lived with you, who you were in company with in the morning or at night?—To my knowledge no presentation has been made by bookmakers to any officers that I know.

41504. (Chairman.) Do you know a public-house called the Fountain?—I do.

41505. Did your duty take you to the Fountain at all?—It has on many occasions.

41506. Why on many occasions?—In the course of my inquiries when I was making inquiries into a case of crime and persons suspected of committing it.

41507. Not simply in regard to bookmaking?—No. Always in cases of crime.

41508. Was this public-house then a resort of bookmakers, so far as you know?—Not to my knowledge. If it had been I should have taken other steps.

41509. It appears to have been, however, a place where you went on more than one occasion in the pursuit of your business?—That is so.

41510. Were your visits casual visits, or did you go there because you thought you might find certain people who were wanted there?—They were casual visits in this respect, that after a crime had been committed and if I heard they were anywhere on the ground that I was responsible for as a C.I.D. officer I should go where I thought those persons frequented.

41511. And you had reason for thinking that some of those people might be at this public-house from time to time?—That is so. As a matter of fact, I have arrested three or four persons outside and on one occasion one inside. The district was then all market gardens, and as it began to be developed and built upon we got a lot of strange people in the neighbourhood, and building material and different things were continually being stolen, and that would take me down that neighbourhood after the crime had been committed.

41512. You were in plain clothes for that work?—Yes, a C.I.D. officer.

41513. But very often disguised more or less, because it would not answer your purpose to be known?—No. I might arrest a man to-day and in three months' time after he came out of prison I might want the same man again, and I should have to adopt some system to try and arrest him.

41514. And it would be part of your business to enter into conversation with people and make yourself pleasant, it may be?—That would be so if I had any suspicion that they were concerned in the offence that had been committed.

41515. Possibly if a man offered you a drink you would take the drink?—Not if he was a stranger to me. I should not drink with anyone.

41516. It might be very necessary in order to cement a useful acquaintance?—It is not judicious.

41517. I quite see the danger of a misconstruction being put upon your action, but still I put it to you that it is quite possible that you, in the strict performance of your duty, an adroit performance, let me put it, might take a drink from somebody?—Not as a stranger. If I had occasion to make inquiries I should certainly adopt certain methods under different conditions, and then if I met a man once in the course of my business and asked him to have a drink (it is done every day), probably if he was to return the compliment another time and I thought I could gain some further information that would bear out what you say, Sir.

41518. Your superiors would not think of reflecting on you, because you are obviously a trusted officer, otherwise you would not be sent on this business at all?—That is so, Sir.

41519. The reason I am asking that question is that Mr. Platt suggests that on one occasion, I think it was in 1896, he stood a drink to you, and left the change on the counter for you to pick up?—That is a thing I should not do.

41520. There is not a word of truth in that?—Not a word. It is absolutely a falsehood.

41521. I will just put it to you, although after what you have said it is almost unnecessary, but it is better to put it to you categorically, did you ever, being in company with Mr. Platt, see him change a sovereign, call for some drinks, and leave you to pick up the change?—No, Sir.

41522. He suggests it was at this "Fountain" public-house, Tooting?—No, Sir; it is a falsehood.

41523. It is a long time back. He suggests it was the larger part of a sovereign, between 10s. and 15s.?—Yes, I heard him say that.

41524. You deny that any such transaction took place?—I do, emphatically.

41525. You remember that he did recognise you in court?—It was the first time I had seen the man, to the best of my recollection, in my life that morning.

41526. He also suggests that you and he were drinking in the same saloon bar a matter of five or six months ago, that was from the time he was giving evidence?—Not the saloon bar. I think, if you remember, he said, when Mr. Muir asked him the question why he knew me, that he had seen me in a saloon bar—not drinking with him.

41527. Mr. Muir's question was, "When did you last see Hancox?" and Platt replied, "He was drinking with me in the same saloon bar that I was in, a matter of five or six months ago"?—I understood that I was in there, but not in his company.

41528. You know nothing of it?—No, Sir David; nothing whatever.

41529. (Mr. Dickinson.) When did you go to this particular district?—April, I believe, 1895. I had been at Wandsworth previously to that, and I was shifted to what we call in our Service Wandsworth Common—that is the station—which takes one side of Tooting.

41530. When did you leave it?—January, 1902, when I was promoted to sergeant, and then I went to Bow Street.

41531. During the whole of those seven years were you doing the same work?—C.I.D. work.

41532. And always in the same part of the district?—Yes.

41533. You were not changed?—No. Probably, Sir, you are well acquainted with the district, and you will understand it if I say that the district I was responsible for starts just at the bridge by the prison on to the middle of Wandsworth Common, and we go down past the cemetery right the way to the Wandle at Merton and back to the corner of Balham Hill, and one side of Battersea Rise, and round to the prison again.

41534. That is Division V.?—Yes, the Wandsworth Common section, for which I was responsible.

41535. At that time were you specially charged with discovering betting?—Not specially charged. If I knew there was a bookmaker about we used to arrest him if we saw him committing any offence, and I did arrest a good many.

41536. I do not quite understand what your position there was. You are a C.I.D. officer?—Yes.

41537. Employed directly by Scotland Yard?—Yes, that is so, in a division.

41538. But allocated to a division?—Yes, the V. Division.

41539. How many men of the same description are there in that division?—I think there are nineteen, speaking without the book. There has been an augmentation since I left, but Superintendent Froest would be able to tell you that.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Superintendent Froest says twelve or fourteen.

41540. (Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose you are always in plain clothes?—Always. When you go to the C.I.D. you hand your uniform in to the stores.

Sergeant C. Huncox.

12 April 1907.

41541. You act under the superintendents?—All our work is supervised by the superintendent of the division, and then it is passed on to the Assistant Commissioner of the C.I.D. at Scotland Yard.

41542. Does this discovery of bookmakers and betting form a small or important part of your work?—A small portion, in my opinion, as a C.I.D. officer. It would be in the general duties of the men of the division.

41543. About how many arrests would you have made in the course of a year at that time?—I could not say from memory. Tooting was a very quiet place at that time.

41544. Shall I say a dozen or 50, or 100, or what?—At that time Tooting was a very small place, and to the best of my recollection I think there was only one bookmaker or two at the outside who were about in 1895.

41545. Did you make any arrests?—I did.

41546. I suppose it was your business to know the bookmakers by sight?—If I knew there was a bookmaker about I never lost the opportunity of arresting him on each and every occasion that I caught him committing the offence.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose we can know how many bookmakers were arrested by this officer during that time?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Superintendent Froest doubts whether he can go back as far as that.

41547. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand from you that you would not therefore have had more than two or three bookmakers?—Twelve years ago, as far as I can remember, there was only one, or at the outside, two bookmakers anywhere in the district where I was stationed. It is twelve years ago, a long time, and I have been at Bow Street six years now.

41548. In what part of the district did the bookmakers carry on their work?—All over the place. The man I am thinking of used to walk about. As Mr. Platt says, he had no "pitch." He used to walk about all over the place, and it was very difficult to detect him.

41549. You say, "Mr. Platt says he had no pitch"?—Mr. Platt described where a bookmaker stands as a "pitch."

41550. You said just now, "he had no pitch"?—As Mr. Platt said—"no pitch." The word is new to me. I never heard of a man having a pitch; I only heard Mr. Platt say it here or in the next court. I did not know what he designated as a pitch.

41551. Do you mean to say you, a detective officer, do not know that bookmakers work by having certain pitches?—I know they work in certain streets, but the name is new to me as a pitch. I have been away racing a lot, and when bookmakers go inside a ring I have heard them say, "that is my pitch, and that is my pitch," but as regards the men in the street taking up the pitch, it would convert a street into really a racecourse, which is a thing I never heard.

41552. Surely it is essential for street betting that the clients should know approximately where they can find their bookmakers?—Yes, the clients would know, but it does not say that I should know, or any other police officer should know.

41553. If your business is to stop bookmakers, it seems to me it would be your business to find out where the customary places of resort of the bookmakers were?—That is how I effected the arrests by finding out where they were, and then, if I caught them committing an offence I would arrest them.

41554. Then you do find out the streets?—But not the name "pitch." I never heard it given that name before.

41555. You do find out the particular streets they were frequenting for the purpose of business?—Yes.

41556. Some streets are useless to them?—That I do not know.

41557. I will assume that some streets would be useless to them?—That I could not say.

41558. What were the streets you found out that they were in the habit of using?—I could not tell you from memory, but it was the main roads principally.

41559. You were there seven years, and your business was to stop bookmaking. Do you mean to say you cannot tell me the streets they were in the habit of using?—Balham High Road—there was a bookmaker there; it got rather rife towards the end of 1900 and 1901, and in Balham High Road and Upper Tooting Road—that is the main road that comes from London to Portsmouth.

41560. It was in those roads that they worked?—Yes, and that is where I did arrest them—in the main roads principally.

41561. Where is the Wheatsheaf public-house?—In the main road.

41562. Which main road?—The Upper Tooting Road. It is the corner of Trinity Road and Upper Tooting Road as you go across to Tooting Bec Road to go to Streatham.

41563. Was it near the place of resort of these bookmakers?—I arrested one or two there I believe from memory.

41564. Where is the Castle?—In the main road on the right-hand side as you go down towards Epsom on the main road.

41565. Where is the Fountain?—In Garrett Lane; that is a by-turning—at least it is not a by-turning now because it has been widened, and the County Council trams are running down there, and it is very busy, and the waste land is built on. There is no comparison between the road now and in 1895. It was very quiet then. Tooting was a country village then, and very quiet.

41566. But what was the place where the betting took place?—Within my knowledge I never arrested a man anywhere near the Fountain until 1901, I think.

41567. Then your answer to me is that the men who used to frequent this part were in Balham High Road?—The Balham High Road and the Upper Tooting Road.

41568. That is about a mile away from the Fountain?—A mile and a quarter.

41569. Where is the Red Lion?—That I do not know. Mr. Platt has mentioned the Red Lion, but I do not know it.

41570. You do not know it at all?—No.

Sergeant SIDNEY BEX, sworn.

Sergeant S. Bex.

41570*. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You now hold the rank of sergeant in the C.I.D.?—Yes.

41571. To what station are you attached?—New Scotland Yard.

41572. I think in the year 1895 you were transferred to Tooting?—Yes.

41573. From what division were you transferred?—The C Division.

41574. What is that?—Vine Street.

41575. Do you remember the date of your transfer from Vine Street to Tooting?—I think it was some time in March.

41576. What rank did you then hold?—Police-constable.

41577. How long did you remain in the Tooting Division?—About 18 months.

41578. And then were you transferred to Croydon?—Yes, on promotion.

41579. At the time of your transfer to Tooting were you a complete stranger there?—Yes.

41580. Were you employed on any special class of work in consequence?—Yes, in keeping observation inside betting houses and a night club—an alleged gambling club.

41581. When you say keeping observation inside betting houses, what do you mean by betting houses?—Complaints had been received respecting alleged betting in a public-house, and I had to go there and keep observation.

41582. Were you occupied on that duty for some considerable time?—Yes.

41583. Did that ultimately result in your being able to give information which resulted in the successful prosecution of that house?—Yes.

41584. What was the name of the house?—The Engineer.

41585. What road was that situated in?—Dorset Road, Clapham.

41586. In addition to that were you employed on any special duty in connection with a case which required investigation at the instance of the Belfast police?—Yes, that was a long firm fraud.

41587. Were you engaged on that for some time?—Yes, several weeks. A matter of six weeks or more.

41588. (Mr. Dickinson.) When?—That was during the time I was employed at Tooting.

41589. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You were there 18 months altogether?—Yes.

41590. You say you were five or six weeks over this long firm case?—Yes.

41591. How long were you over the Engineer beer-house case?—Nearly two months.

41592. Then you mentioned also to the Commissioners that you were employed to watch some alleged gaming clubs?—Yes, at nights, at Brixton.

41593. Were you engaged in that work for some time?—Yes.

41594. How long, about?—Three weeks to a month, I should think.

41595. Were you also employed to keep observation on other places and other special addresses?—Yes, where complaints had been received.

41596. You were selected to keep observation because you were a stranger there?—Yes.

41597. And were you mainly occupied on those particular duties during the time you were there?—Yes.

41598. Before you went to Tooting did you know the man Platt?—No.

41599. Did you ever see him, to your knowledge, while you were at Tooting?—No.

41600. Were you aware that he was carrying on betting at Tooting while you were there?—No.

41601. Have you ever made Platt's acquaintance since you left Tooting?—No.

41602. Have you ever spoken to him in your life, so far as you know, or he to you?—No.

41603. Until you saw him giving evidence before the Commission did you know the man by sight?—No.

41604. Have you ever received any money from him?—No, never.

41605. He has said that he bribed you five or six times, about half a sovereign at a time, and that extended over a period of a few months, and that he made payments to you in the Old Castle public-house and in the King's Head or King's Arms. Is there a word of truth in any of those statements?—No.

41606. Do you know the Old Castle public-house?—Yes.

41607. Where is that?—In the High Street, Tooting.

41608. Have you ever been into it to your knowledge?—Yes, on two occasions, when I had an inquiry to make of the proprietor or part proprietor. He had a grocer's shop on my side of the road in the Tooting Division, and I had a case of embezzlement with him there, and I had to see him to arrange about attending the police court.

41609. You remember going there on two occasions, and you remember the business about which you went?—Yes.

41610. Have you ever been there except on those two occasions to see the proprietor with reference to the case of embezzlement?—No.

41611. Now with regard to the King's Head or the King's Arms?—I have never been inside the house.

41612. Is there such a house at Tooting?—Yes.

41613. Where is it situated?—That is in the V Division, Wandsworth.

41614. (Chairman.) What is its true name?—I could not say.

41615. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) It is either one or the other?—Yes. I think it is the King's Head, but I would not be sure.

41616. There is a house, the King's something there?—Yes.

41617. In what part of Tooting?—That is on the W Division, going out into the main road.

41618. Have you ever been in that house in your life?—No.

41619. (Mr. Platt.) You have told the Commission you went into the Old Castle to see the proprietor, Mr. Hawkins?—Yes, but I did not mention any name.

41620. You have told the Commission that the proprietor of the Old Castle kept the grocer's shop?—Yes.

41621. What name was over the shop?—Hawkins, I believe.

41622. What business was Mr. Hawkins—was he a publican or a grocer?—I think he had an interest in the public-house as well as keeping the grocer's shop.

41623. He had the public-house under management?—I could not say.

41624. If you wanted to see Mr. Hawkins on police business you would go to his grocer's shop where he served behind his counter?—I had been there to see him, and I had to go to the Castle to see him because he was down there.

41625. Did you ever know Mr. Hawkins to serve behind the bar at the Castle?—I could not say.

41626. Last January twelvemonth—I believe it was the week of the Election—had you occasion for any police duty to take you towards King's Cross?—I could not say offhand. I should say no, not last January twelvemonth.

41627. Did we play billiards in the Clock House?—Certainly not.

41628. You never went in the Rowton House?—No.

41629. (Chairman.) I suppose it is possible you may have been in King's Cross somewhere in January, 1906?—Yes.

41630. Can you state positively whether you were there or not there?—I could not. I am all over London.

41631. You are positive you did not play billiards with Mr. Platt?—Quite so.

41632. According to your story you had never seen him before, if you saw him then?—No.

41633. But you have no recollection at all of playing billiards there?—No, and I am not a billiard player.

41634. And I understand that until Mr. Platt gave evidence before the Commission you have never seen him?—No.

41635. Did you, in fact, arrest anybody for book-making during the few months you were in Tooting?—Not in Tooting district. I was taken away from Tooting district to other parts of the W Division.

41636. You did make some arrests for street betting?—I did.

41637. Do you remember the names of the men who you arrested?—I could not say; it is so long ago. I think one was named Coe, but I cannot say any other name.

41638. Was one named Smith?—No. He was right away from Tooting altogether. He was at Clapham.

41639. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you know the Clock House at King's Cross?—I would not be positive. I believe it is on the corner of Rosebery Avenue and the post office.

41640. Have you been there?—I could not say.

41641. What is it?—It is a public-house.

41642. You cannot say whether you have ever been there?—No, I could not. I might have been in it when I have been in that district.

41643. What took you into that district?—I may have had an inquiry at Rowton House in respect of somebody living there.

41644. Rowton House?—Yes, that is a common lodging-house.

41645. You have been to Rowton House?—Yes.

41646. Can you say for certain you were not there in January twelvemonth?—I would not say I was not there in January. I might have been, but I have no recollection of being there twelve months ago last January.

Sergeant S. Box.

12 April 1907.

41647. Surely you can recollect whether or not you went on business into Rowton House?—I could not—not twelve months ago. I have had so many inquiries since.

41648. Surely you can remember whether you have ever been there?—I have been there to make inquiries.

41649. How often?—During the last five years do you mean or during the whole of my service?

41650. During the last two years?—I think I have been there two or three times. That would cover the period of three years.

41651. Are you carrying on your work in that district?—No.

41652. You are now at Bow Street?—I am at New Scotland Yard.

41653. Does your duty take you all over London?—Yes.

41654. I think you give the same answer—you cannot say for certain that you have never been in the Clock House?—No. I believe I have been in there.

41655. When was that?—I could not say.

41656. Was it within the last eighteen months?—It might have been.

41657. Cannot you give us any more satisfactory answer than that? Surely you must remember to a certain extent? Your answer "I might have been" means you have some recollection of being there?—I was following a suspected housebreaker, and he was living at Rowton House, and I may have gone into the Clock House to get some refreshments.

41658. But did you?—I believe I did.

41659. When did this case of the burglar come on?—He went away to Germany, and, of course, we ceased our observations when he left the country.

41660. When did he leave the country?—That would be about two years ago.

41661. Can you tell me at all accurately when it was?—I am afraid I cannot.

41662. Was it the beginning of last year?—I think it was longer ago than that.

41663. Platt recognised you in Court the other day?—Yes.

41664. When you were at Tooting, if I understand you rightly, you were not very much concerned with the betting fraternity?—No, not in that district. I was away from that district. The Tooting Sub-division was practically all fields, and there were no bookmakers there on the Tooting section, and that is why I was taken away to other parts of the division, and also being a stranger.

41665. Therefore the bookmakers would not have much to do with you?—Not in that district.

41666. Did you lie in wait for bookmakers at all at that time when you were in Tooting to try and catch them?—There were no bookmakers on the Tooting section.

41667. There were none?—No, it was practically all fields. It has been built upon now.

41668. You mean to say when Platt says he was making books in 1895 and 1896 that that is not true, and that he was not doing that?—Not on the Tooting section.

41669. You think he was not doing it at Tooting?—I am sure he was not.

41670. How can you be sure?—It was practically all fields, and if he had been making a book there I should have known.

41671. The last witness Hancox told us that the Balham High Road was a place where the betting fraternity resorted for the purpose of bookmaking?—That is on the V Division and not on the W Division. The division is divided by the main road, and I was on the Tooting side, and Sergeant Hancox was on the V Division side, or the Wandsworth side.

41672. Do I understand that you had no responsibility for the bookmakers in Balham High Road at all?—Not unless they come on the Tooting section.

41673. Is not half the road in the Tooting section?—Yes.

41674. Then you would have been responsible for them?—If they had come on my side of the road or the Tooting section.

41675. Do you mean to say that you still think that Platt was not carrying on bookmaking in the Balham High Road?—I would not say that—not on the Tooting section.

41676. He told us he was there in 1895?—He has mentioned all places in the Wandsworth Division and not in the W Division.

41677. He has told us he was there in 1895 and 1896, and you have told us you were there in 1895 and 1896?—Yes.

41678. And he clearly recognised you in Court?—Yes.

41679. Can you give me any reason in your own mind which enabled him to recognise you?—I could not say at all. He may have made it his business to try and find out who was there and find me out. I cannot give any other reason.

41680. What were the instructions that were given to the C.I.D. men at that time as regards street betting?—The instructions were laid down in the General Orders. There were no instructions laid down in particular, only the Acts of Parliament. That is what we were guided by.

41681. But we have heard that there has been a change in the system, and the discovery of street betting is now in the hands of the ordinary police, and not in the hands of the C.I.D. That is true, is it not?—That is so.

41682. When was that change made?—That I could not say.

41683. But I suppose it was a change that affected you?—Eight or nine years, I should think.

41684. You have nothing to do with it now?—No, not for the last ten years.

41685. What orders were withdrawn from you?—There were no orders withdrawn. I simply took up all cases of crime. I never troubled about the bookmakers, because there were uniform men out in plain clothes for that purpose.

41686. But there must have been some intimation from Scotland Yard to you intimating to you that you were no longer to concern yourself with street betting?—Simply I was not told off to do any of that sort of work by the local Inspector. If there were cases coming in then we had to investigate them and take them up.

41687. You were simply not made use of for that purpose, but were made use of for other purposes?—That is so.

41688. When you were engaged in that work, can you tell me at all what number of arrests you used to make in the year? Was it half a dozen, or 20 or 30, or more?—I could not say; it is so long ago.

41689. You can give us some idea as to what extent that work was part of your duties?—I practically did all the inside work in public-houses and in effecting raids on betting houses and clubs. As regards street bookmakers, I could not say how many I have arrested in my time.

41690. Surely you can give me some idea. Were you arresting them at the rate of 20 or 30 a year, or simply just occasionally?—Just occasionally, because I was engaged in other duties. My time would not allow me to arrest bookmakers. I had more important inquiries to conduct.

41691. (Chairman.) Can you tell me when you first went to the Tooting Division?—In March, 1895, and I left in October, 1896.

41692. That is about eighteen months?—Yes.

41693. During all that time you did plain clothes work?—Yes.

41694. As an officer of the C.I.D.?—Yes.

41695. I understand you to say that you never saw Platt during that time or talked to him?—No.

41696. And had never seen or talked to him till you saw him here or in the adjoining Court?—That is so.

41697. I suppose that in the discharge of your duty it is your object to conceal the fact that you are an officer, is it not?—Yes.

41698. You would not tell casual people in the tramcar, or in a public-house, or at a railway station, your occupation if you got into conversation with them?—Oh, no, Sir.

41699. Did you generally walk about undisguised in plain clothes something like you are wearing to-day?—

Yes, unless I was going into a public-house, and then I should disguise myself.

41700. It would be therefore rather difficult for a man to be quite certain about your identity or your name, would it not?—Yes, that would be so.

41701. Did you, in going about your business, often give wrong names—I am not suggesting it was wrong of you to do it, but names other than your own?—No, I have never had occasion to.

41702. Supposing I had seen you walking about Tooting, would it have been easy for me to find out who you were?—I daresay you would easily find out amongst the tradespeople; being a small village, everybody would know the local officer there. It would be an easy matter.

41703. They would know the local detective officer?—Yes.

41704. How do you mean?—In the course of making inquiries there you would get known in a small place like Tooting was then. It would be an easy matter for anyone to ascertain the name of the local detective.

41705. (Mr. Whitmore.) What was the population of Tooting at that time?—I could not say, but it was very small.

41706. 5,000, or something like that?—I do not think so many as that.

41707. (Chairman.) Do you mean it would be quite easy for people who were in the habit of betting and going into public-houses, and who did not live there, to know your name and occupation?—They could easily find out. I was the only officer stationed there, and they had only to watch the police station, which is situated in a very quiet road.

41708. (Mr. Whitmore.) Did you live at the police station?—No, I did not live at the police station.

41709. (Chairman.) Did you live at Tooting?—Yes.

41710. Why did they want the services of a detective at Tooting?—Housebreaking.

41711. It is usual to have a detective officer, even in the case of a comparatively small suburban village?—Oh, yes.

41712. The reason that I am asking you these questions is that Mr. Platt, when we asked him to write down the names of the officers he said he had bribed at Tooting, at once wrote down your name and Sergeant Hancox's name?—Yes.

41713. Does it not strike you as rather odd, if you had never spoken to him or had never been in his company, that he should have been able, after that distance of time, to write down your names?—I should think, considering the business he carried on down there, it would be his first business to try and find out who the detective officers were. That is the only reason I could give.

41714. You think that a bookmaker going to carry on his occupation there would inquire of his friends and the people round there who were the police officers in the habit of dealing with that class of case?—Yes.

41715. That is your suggestion?—Yes, I think that would be it, and he has also been friendly along with another officer who might have given him my name and pointed me out here in Court.

41716. Who is the other officer do you think?—An ex-officer.

41717. Have you any particular officer in your mind?—Yes.

41718. What is his name?—Mr. McCarthy.

41719. Where was McCarthy engaged in 1895-96?—I could not say. I am speaking of since the Commission has been on.

41720. Yes, but I understand you to suggest to me that when Platt first went to do this business at Tooting he might have made inquiries of somebody as to who were the detective officers there?—Not of McCarthy.

41721. Is your suggestion that McCarthy may have suggested to Platt that you were at Tooting? Is that the suggestion you are making?—He might have given him my name.

41722. I know he might have given it, but is that a suggestion for which there is any foundation in any fact that you can state?—No, I cannot speak with any authority on that.

41723. You see what is in my mind, do not you, about this?—Yes.

41724. It is rather odd that you being a detective at Tooting for eighteen months in 1895-96, never having seen as far as you know, and certainly never having spoken to Platt, that twelve years afterwards he should have known you were there as an officer of the C.I.D. Your explanation is that Platt made it his business in 1895-96 to find out who were the detectives?—Yes.

41725. And that he recollected your name?—Yes, in the districts where he has frequented.

41726. That is the only explanation you can give?—That is the only suggestion I can make.

41727. He recognised you in Court?—Yes.

41728. How do you account for that?—I cannot say.

41729. He not only recognised you in Court, but he also said that the officer he referred to had been transferred to Scotland Yard. He said "One of the officers whose names I write down"—one was yourself and the other Sergeant Hancox—"was transferred to Bow Street and the other to Scotland Yard." He seems to have followed your career accurately?—Yes, I did not go direct to Scotland Yard. I went to Croydon, and then I went to the D Division.

41730. He does not say that. He says "At the present time one is at Scotland Yard"—that is yourself—"and the other is at Bow Street"?—Transfers like that often come out in the local papers and in the daily papers, and I think it came out in the local papers when I was transferred.

41731. But you were not transferred straight to Scotland Yard?—No, it came out in the local papers.

41732. The Tooting papers?—Yes.

41733. Where were you transferred to first from Tooting?—To Croydon, on promotion.

41734. That I can understand appearing in the local papers, but you mean that it appeared in the Croydon papers?—Yes.

41735. You never had come in contact with Platt in a hostile sense either?—Never.

41736. You deny you had come in contact with him in any friendly way, and you never came across him in a professional manner?—No.

41737. Then why do you suggest he should be so interested in you as to follow your career as described in the local papers?—I could not say at all.

41738. As I understand it the boundary between these two divisions, the Tooting and the Balham divisions—W and V—is the centre-line of the high road?—That is so.

41739. Was that the case in 1895-6?—Yes.

41740. And the Tooting side is not the side which had public-houses in it?—There was one on the Tooting side.

41741. Which was that public-house?—I could not tell you the sign of it.

41742. (Mr. Dickinson.) The Wheatsheaf is on that side, is it not?—No, on the other side.

41743. (Chairman.) The Wheatsheaf appears to be on the Balham side?—On the Wandsworth side.

41744. Wandsworth was not your side?—No.

41745. Can you tell me the name of the public-house on your side of the road?—No, I forget it.

41746. Was that a house frequented by betting men?—No, Sir, it was a very respectable house kept by a very respectable landlord. It was a very quiet house.

41747. Whereabouts is that? How far from the King's Arms or Kings' Head?—It is in High Street, about a quarter of a mile, I should think, from the King's Head.

41748. I understand that the King's Cross case that took you there several times was not last year but three years ago?—About two years ago, I think.

41749. Did you go to the Clock House in connection with that case?—Yes, I believe I had some luncheon there on two or three occasions.

41750. Luncheon?—Yes, I had some refreshment.

41751. It is quite possible that Platt may have seen you there?—I do not think so.

41752. Why? If you were lunching there he might have seen you?—Yes, but we were in a private bar, and no one else came in while we were there.

Sergeant S. Bex.

41753. Before you leave the box I will ask you the general question over again: Have you anything to add by way of explaining how Platt knows so much about you, seeing you were simply a detective officer and not a man going round regular beats in uniform day after day for 18 months?—I have just on 20 years' service, and my name has appeared in the papers on many occasions.

41754. Do not misunderstand my question. You are a detective officer, and you see why I attach some importance to it. It seems to me to have been your duty to have remained as much unknown as possible in Tooting. You were there 18 months, and here is a bookmaker who knows 12 years afterwards not only the year you were there but he has followed your career and he mentions that he saw you at King's Cross in a place where he might have seen you?—I am unable to give any explanation why.

41755. You have given some explanation, but I am only asking you for anything further?—I cannot give any further explanation.

41756. It does seem clear that in a place like Tooting if anybody made it his business to see who were C.I.D. men he could easily discover them?—Yes.

41757. You do not like to preserve your incognito to such an extent that tradesmen and residents do not get to know who you are and what your occupation is?—No.

41758. (Mr. Dickinson.) How many other C.I.D. men are there in Tooting?—I was the only one there.

41759. I understood in the other divisions there were 14, how is that?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Superintendent Froest told me in the V Division there would be about 14.

41760. (Mr. Dickinson.) How is it you were the only one in this division?—I was the only one at the station. Of course, in the division there would be many. I daresay there would be 14 or 15 in the division.

41761. Were you allocated to one station?—Yes.

41762. There is a C.I.D. man allocated to each station?—Yes.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) There was then.

(Chairman.) That I think we have had.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I thought it was in each division.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) There are a certain number in the division, and one man at each station.

41763. (Mr. Dickinson.) And that C.I.D. man lives near the station?—Yes.

41764. What have you been doing since that period? You went to Croydon in 1896?—Yes.

41765. How long were you there?—Three years.

41766. That brings it to 1899. Then after that?—I was two years in the D Division.

41767. That is 1901? And where after that?—Scotland Yard.

41768. That means work all over London?—Yes.

41769. And for the last eight years you have had nothing to do with betting at all?—No.

41770. You have never come in contact with the betting classes?—No.

41771. (Chairman.) Have you at any time heard whether any inquiries were made as to alleged charges of consorting with betting men or taking bribes from betting men against the police at Tooting or elsewhere?—No.

41772. One reason that I ask the question is that a couple of years after you appear to have left Tooting there was a complaint of alleged betting at 51, Trinity Road, Upper Tooting, by William Hubbard, and the note is: "Police stated to take part." You had left then, but did you ever hear of that case?—No, I never heard of it. That was on the Wandsworth side, and not on the Tooting side.

41773. Upper Tooting, Trinity Road?—That would be on the Wandsworth side.

41774. You told us there was no street betting at all at Tooting?—Not on the Tooting section. That was my section.

41775. But the division runs down the centre of the high road?—Yes.

41776. You were on the side on which there was no street betting?—Yes.

41777. You never heard of this case of alleged betting at Upper Tooting. No. I do not think I have been down to Tooting twice since I left. I had not been down there for many years until I went down there some time ago on an inquiry.

41778. Do you mean to tell us that during the whole of the time that you have been in the force as an officer of the C.I.D. you have never heard of any accusation in which it has been stated—falsely it may be—that constables have accepted bribes from street bookmakers?—No.

41779. Is that a matter upon which you might be asked to make inquiry?—No.

41780. Supposing a complaint is made against a police-constable, are you never ordered by the Commissioner or the Assistant Commissioner to take up the case and keep observation on the police-constable involved?—No.

41781. Who does that kind of work?—An Inspector.

41782. But he has to get assistance, has he not?—Yes.

41783. Have you ever been asked by an Inspector to give assistance in such cases?—No.

41784. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) One question with regard to a general matter. The Chairman put to you a question about inquiries into allegations of bribery against the police. I am not speaking now of the division in which you were concerned, either the C.I.D. in particular or any station to which you were attached, but speaking generally with regard to the police you have had a great many years' service?—Yes, nearly 24 years.

41785. During the whole of that time am I to understand from you that you have never heard any complaint that the police were bribed by bookmakers?—No, only what I read in the newspapers about the case of Deed. That is the only accusation I have heard of.

41786. That was a case in 1903?—Yes.

41787. You never heard of any other case before or since?—No.

41788. Or any complaint being made?—No.

41789. I suppose I must take that to mean that you do not know now that there have been complaints made before or since?—No.

41790. Specific complaints into which inquiry has been made?—No, I do not.

41791. You have not seen the return of the Commissioner of Police?—No.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) That was a specially prepared return for this Commission.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes. I thought the witness might have seen it since.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Oh, no, Sir.

41792. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Several constables have given evidence here, but no one seems ever to have heard of these charges that have been made or of the inquiries which were taking place, but we have the return which shows what was actually happening. However, you say you never did hear of it?—No.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Has that return been made public?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Oh, no.

41793. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) It is merely confidential for us. (To the witness.) Did you never suspect that it did take place?—No.

41794. (Chairman.) You brought in the name of one McCarthy. Is he a sergeant or Superintendent?—Ex-Inspector McCarthy.

41795. He was in the force, and is now no longer in the force?—That is so.

41796. Has he been about this court at all?—Yes.

41797. Have you noticed him in conversation with Platt?—I have seen them go away together.

41798. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) With ex-Inspector McCarthy?—Yes.

41799. While this Commission has been sitting?—Yes.

41800. (Chairman.) Then Inspector McCarthy would know all about you and Sergeant Hancox?—Yes.

41801. So he would be able to give any information if Platt asked for any information? If Platt asked for any information about you, ex-Inspector McCarthy would be able to give it?—Yes.

41802. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) How often did you see McCarthy with Platt?—On one occasion.

41803. Do you remember when?—Yes, he was sitting behind him yesterday.

41804. Is that the first time?—I saw them go away the other day—yesterday, I think it was.

41805. Is McCarthy in court now?—Yes.

41806. Where is he?—He is sitting over there (pointing to ex-Inspector McCarthy, who stood forward).

41807. Is that ex-Inspector McCarthy?—Yes.

41808. Is yesterday the first time you saw him with Platt?—Yes, but I know he has been at the Commission before.

41809. How do you know that?—I have seen him here.

41810. You mean you have seen him here, but not in conversation with Platt?—No.

41811. Have you seen him often?—No.

41812. How often have you been in attendance here?—Three or four or five days at different times.

41813. Only in connection with this particular case?—Yes.

41814. You only attended when this case has been on?—That is all.

41815. Have you seen him on each one of those occasions?—No, I do not think on every occasion.

41816. (Chairman.) You told us that your transfers or removals were chronicled in the local papers. Was that a mere supposition on your part, or do you know that in fact your movements were mentioned in the Tooting or Croydon papers?—They were mentioned.

41817. (Mr. Dickinson.) Was the time that you were identified in this court the first time that you were here?—No. I had been here twice before then.

41818. The day that you were identified was Thursday, the 31st January, I think?—I think I had been once before then.

41819. Why had you been here before?—I was told to come over.

41820. You were not in court in October?—No.

41821. When you were in court on those two brief occasions did you see McCarthy there then?—I have seen him when I have been going by the court on other inquiries.

41822. Was he in court when you were identified?—I could not say.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Mr. Muir, could you tell me on what date you first knew the three names that were written down, and which were handed to you? I ask you because I remember their being handed to you and not Mr. Bankes, that is my recollection?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I think I can find it upon the shorthand note; I saw it this morning.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I can fix a date showing you had them at that time. The first note I think that we have in the shorthand note is on he 32nd day, which begins: "You handed in a list to the Commission on the 18th October; will you look at that list?" And then you handed the list to the witness.

(Chairman.) You cross-examined Mr. Platt on the list.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I asked that we should be supplied with the names, and I think the Secretary gave them to Mr. Muskett.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) My recollection is you asked for it, and I think we said we would consider it, and we did consider it, and we gave the names, but it was the date that we gave them that I was rather anxious to get. However, we shall be able to ascertain that a little later.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I believe it was the day after the list was produced.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) No, I think it was very much later.

(Chairman.) You had the names of the constables mentioned in the L Division.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) These were the only ones that were written down as far as my recollection goes. I asked that we might be supplied with them—I remember that—and you said you would consider it, and I was afterwards told that Mr. Leslie, the Secretary, supplied them, but the date we got them I cannot say. We had the names in the L Division.

(Chairman.) The L Division you had got. There were three names written down in respect of the G Division and two in respect of the W Division.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I will try and find that out.

41823. (Mr. Dickinson.) (To the Witness.) You say you were here before the 31st January. We met on the 31st January and that was the day that you were recognised here?—Yes. I had been here once before.

41824. Was that the day before that or some time before that?—Some time before that I came over.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) We must have had the names before that or else we should not have told him to come.

41825. (Mr. Dickinson.) Quite so. I suppose before that you had been asked about whether you knew anything about Platt?—I was called on for a report, and my report will show it.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) If you can give us that report that might supply us with the date.

41826. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The report does not help us because that was much later; that was in February. (To the Witness.) Do you remember how many days it was before the 31st January when you first attended? Do you remember the day when you were identified?—I think it was the second day that I had been over here. I have not come over here on this case, but only to bring a message over.

41827. You had not been asked to attend before that day?—No.

41828. You had merely come to bring a message?—Yes. That was my first, what I may call official attendance.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) My belief is that I saw this document that Mr. Leslie showed me on the 30th January, and it was put to the witness Platt on the 31st.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is my notion of it. It was shown about the day before you resumed your cross-examination.

(Mr. Leslie.) That is also my recollection.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I remember a question being asked of us by Mr. Leslie as to whether he was to show it.

41829. (Mr. Dickinson.) When was the first time that you knew you were implicated in this business?—When I was sent for on the 31st January.

41830. Before the 31st January you did not know that you had been mentioned at all?—No.

41831. Amongst the bookmakers in Tooting did you ever hear of a man named Davis?—No.

41832. Have you ever sent in any reports to Scotland Yard about betting in Tooting at all?—No.

41833. During the time you were engaged in that work?—No.

41834. You never did?—No.

41835. And any information they had about betting in Tooting was not through you?—No.

41836. (Chairman.) Have you ever had any occasion to work in conjunction with ex-Inspector McCarthy?—No, never.

41837. Did you know him personally?—No.

41838. You mean by that that you do not know him to talk to?—I do not believe I have ever exchanged words with ex-Inspector McCarthy.

41839. (Mr. Platt.) May I ask this officer another question?

(Chairman.) Yes.

41840. (Mr. Platt.) The public-house that you have told the Commission was on your side of the road—how far from the Castle would it be?—About 200 yards.

41841. Would it not be almost opposite?—No.

41842. Would it not be a matter of 30 or 40 yards?—No, I should think anything from 150 to 200 yards.

41843. Would you know the sign of the pub. if I were to tell you?—No, I do not think I should

Sergeant S. Bex.

12 April 1907.

41844. Do you know that the proprietor was a quiet man?—Yes.

41845. No betting men congregate there?—No; he was a very careful and very strict man.

41846. They congregated at the Castle?—I do not know that they did.

41847. Do you know the Angel?—I could not say.

41848. I mean opposite the Castle?—It is about 150 to 200 yards, I should think.

41849. Would it be as far to the pub. which was being pulled down at this time—would it be as far as that from the Castle? Would that about represent the distance to the Castle?—I should say it would be from 150 to 200 yards.

(Mr. Platt.) One of the reasons why I am so able to tell these detective officers as to the time such a long time back is that I know almost up to the present time they have been in bookmakers' company that I have been with, and they have lost sight of me, and they did not recognise me.

(Chairman.) You must not give further evidence now.

(Mr. Platt.) That is one of the reasons why I am able to identify them.

(Chairman.) You have put to the witness that he was in your company playing billiards, and he denied it. Is there any other recent occasion on which you say you had been in the company of the witness?

(Mr. Platt.) Not since I was playing billiards.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I was not here when that question was put, but do you suggest when you were playing billiards with him anybody else was present?

(Mr. Platt.) It was in Election week in 1906, and that is why I can fix January. I was doing some canvassing on behalf of the National Sporting League. It was during that week (I could not fix what day) that I met this officer.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes, but what I want to know is, because I did not hear the question put, whether you had suggested that anybody else was present?

41850. (Chairman.) When you were playing billiards?—No.

(Mr. Dickinson.) I should like to know the date of the investigation that this witness has mentioned. He said that about two years ago he was engaged on a burglary case at Rowton House.

41851. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I understood him to say he was following a suspected burglary?—That is so.

41852. (Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose there would be some record of the date?—Yes, there would be some record of it.

41853. (Chairman.) Can the exact date be fixed when you were following a suspected burglar?—Yes.

41854. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Would there always be a record made if you followed a suspected burglar?—Yes.

P.C. Henry Cass, 430 G, sworn.

P.C. H. Cass.

41855. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are a police-constable, 430, of the G Division?—Yes.

41856. You have been in the Force for how long now?—For 13½ years.

41857. Always in the G Division?—Always in the G Division.

41858. Are you well acquainted with the bookmakers in that division?—Yes, fairly well.

41859. During the year 1906 did you do some duty in connection with street betting?—Yes, I believe I did. I would not be quite sure.

41860. I have the dates. I do not suppose you can remember the dates?—I cannot remember any of the dates.

41861. If necessary we can produce the return. From the 11th June till the 8th July—would that be about right?—I believe so; I would not be quite sure.

41862. And from the 1st October till the 28th October, 1906?—Yes, I think that would be about it.

41863. In the same year were you on duty at the police court?—Yes.

41864. From the 15th January till the 19th May?—Yes.

41865. That would be every day?—Every day in charge of the front entrance to the police court.

41866. So you would not do any street duty at all?—No, no street duty at all.

41867. Were you also engaged at the police court as warrant officer from the 23rd July till the 4th August, and from the 9th till the 18th August?—Yes.

41868. And from the 20th till the 29th August?—Yes.

41869. And from the 3rd till the 8th September?—Yes.

41870. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Will William and Robert Fisher stand forward, please? (William and Robert Fisher came forward.)

41871. Do you know those two men?—I do.

41871.* As street bookmakers?—As street bookmakers.

41872. One is called Robert and the other is called William. Do you know which is which?—I do not.

41873. You know them both as street bookmakers?—I know them both.

41874. Sergeant Barton is an officer in your Division?—Yes, he is a warrant officer now.

41875. Did you with Sergeant Barton keep observation on those two men?—We did.

41876. And were summonses taken out against them in November, 1903, at Clerkenwell Police Court for street betting?—Yes.

41877. Upon those summonses were they in January, 1904, convicted and fined?—I think so.

41878. Do you remember what the fine was?—I do not remember what the fine was.

41879. Was street betting then carried on in the neighbourhood of Aylesbury Street, Suffolk Street, and Schoolhouse Yard?—Yes.

41880. Were they arrested?—They were arrested on the last day. We kept observation on them both for a week.

41881. You arrested them without a warrant?—Yes, on the Friday I believe it was.

41882. Since 1903 and 1904 have you had anything at all to do with those two men?—Never.

41883. Have you seen them?—I have seen them.

41884. Have you kept observation upon them?—I have kept observation casually—not stood still.

41885. (Chairman.) In uniform?—No, in plain clothes.

41886. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Have you seen them at the police court when they have been arrested by other officers?—I have seen them at the police court when they have been arrested by other officers.

41887. Have you ever spoken to them at all since 1903 and 1904?—No.

41888. Do you know Platt at all?—No.

41889. Have you ever received any money whatever from the Fishers?—Never—not one penny.

41890. Do you know where the Fishers have carried on their business since 1904?—They have been standing in Sutton Street.

41891. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Where is that?—Clerkenwell.

41892. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) That is a different place to what they were betting in in 1903?—Yes.

41893. Just look at that list will you, please? (Handing.) That is a list of men you have arrested in connection with street bookmaking?—Yes.

41894. The total amount the Revenue has gained by it has been totalled up, but the men have not £305 is the total amount of the fines. That was in 1905 down to October, 1906. I see in addition to that there was a man summoned on your information. It is suggested that you are in the pay of bookmakers not to arrest them?—Never.

41895. Do you know any officer in your Division who has arrested more men that you have?—I do not.

41896. That is your defaulter's sheet, so called, and it contains continuous promotion in pay and some commendations and awards, but nothing else. (The defaulter sheet was handed to the witness.) That is your sheet, is it?—Yes.

41897. You have also got a photograph, have you not?—Yes.

41898. Will you hand it in?—Yes. (Handing.) This is only one of the disguises. We varied it in several ways—sometimes with a silk hat and frock coat.

41899. (Chairman.) That seems to be rather noticeable. You are not the railway porter there, I take it?—No.

41900. You appear in that instance to have actually shaven yourself?—Yes, we had to do so, and to disguise ourselves in many ways.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask this witness any question, Mr. Platt?

41901. (Mr. Platt.) Yes. Mr. Muir told the Commission that you are a very smart officer in this particular business?—I might be.

41902. Can you tell us for how long a period you were out on this duty in 1903?—One week, I believe.

41903. Only one week?—I believe so; I would not be sure.

41904. Was that the week you helped to summon the Fishers?—That was.

41905. That year was noted for the number of summonses that were issued against bookmakers in the different divisions?—I could not say.

41906. The police had always arrested them up to then?—On some occasions.

41907. Had any bookmakers been summoned previous to 1903 for frequenting the streets?—Yes, I believe they had.

41908. For frequenting the streets?—Yes, I believe so.

41909. Can you account for the number of summonses that were served on those men that week?—No, I cannot.

41910. You could not give any explanation why they had never been summoned before?—No.

41911. Nor since?—No.

41912. Can you give any explanation why they kept arresting as they did until 1906?—I cannot.

41913. How many bookmakers would there be in this particular neighbourhood where the Fishers bet?—I could not say for certainty.

41914. You have got a list of some of the arrests you made. In the immediate neighbourhood where these Fishers bet there are several bookmakers?—There are several bookmakers.

41915. Do you mind giving me how many times they were arrested? You know this district well. Tell me how many arrests you made nearest where the Fishers stand?—Barili, in St. John Street, Aylesbury Street, and others.

41916. In the immediate neighbourhood, within 100 yards of where they were betting?—Yes.

41917. They would be apprehended, and not the Fishers?—Yes.

41918. You have got the names of the men there, and they have been arrested, but not the Fishers?—The Fishers have been arrested, but not by me.

41919. Could you tell from memory or from that list how often they were arrested in 1903?—No, I could not.

41920. (Chairman.) I think you said Sergeant Barton and you had arrested the Fishers?—In 1903, but this list is only the apprehensions which I have done myself—not with the other officers I have had out with me.

41921. In 1905 and 1906?—Yes.

41922. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The Fishers do not appear in that list?—No. They have been arrested by other officers, and not by me.

41923. (Chairman.) Were you engaged on this work in plain clothes throughout the whole of 1906?—We used to go out for a month at a time.

41924. Every alternative month?—No, I would go out probably one month, and perhaps two or three months would pass before I should be called out again; other men would go out.

41925. And that was the case in 1905 as well?—Yes.

41926. As I understand it, the practice in that division is not for two police-constables in plain clothes to go out, but a sergeant and a constable?—No, two constables would be appointed to go out for the month.

41927. That means that you go out for four hours in plain clothes and then go out in uniform?—No, we finish our duty in that way; we go out for bookmakers in the daytime and for rowdyism in the evening.

41928. In plain clothes?—In plain clothes.

41929. Has that been the system in your division since you have joined the division?—The rowdyism came about some few years back, but I could not say how long ago. There was so much rowdyism in Clerkenwell that they had two plain clothes men out to suppress it.

41930. They go on patrol?—They patrol the neighbourhood.

41931. The two men who go out in that way are not limited to particular beats?—No.

41932. Are there only two plain clothes men in the whole of the Clerkenwell Division for that special work?—There would be two from our station and probably two from another station of the G Division.

41933. In 1905 and 1906 the same men did the bookmaking special work by day and they did the rowdyism special work by night?—Yes, they would go out in the evening.

41934. When you went out, as you say, in 1906, and left your station in plain clothes in order to observe bookmakers, what was the course you generally adopted?—I might go across to the station dressed up smartly, and as soon as I left the station I would slip back home and put a rough disguise on—rough clothing, cord trousers, or a silk handkerchief round my neck—in that manner.

41935. Did you get to know the pitches of the principal bookmakers in that part?—Yes, fairly well.

41936. And you knew the system under which they carried on their work?—Yes.

41937. Did you get to know the Fishers in that way?—The first time I knew of the Fishers was when I was authorised to go with Sergeant Barton in 1903.

41938. We have heard that, and they were successfully prosecuted in January, 1904. Have you seen the Fishers about at all subsequently to that date?—I have seen them.

41939. You have kept observation upon them?—Yes.

41940. Did you know that they were carrying on this work of street bookmaking either on their own account or as agents for somebody else?—I was under the impression they were carrying on the business, but I never saw them do it—not to enable me to arrest them.

41941. Did you see them at all in 1906?—I saw them at the police court.

41942. Were the Fishers during these years, 1904, 1905, and 1906, carrying on their business, do you think, in your division?—I believe they were.

41943. And they were doing that in 1905 and 1906?—Yes.

41944. You did make a good many arrests in those two years?—Yes.

41945. How was it that you did not come to arrest the Fishers?—Because they stood in a very peculiar place to get at them, and I was so well known to them, and they had some very very smart touts; some used to ride bicycles, and there was a large block of buildings close to where they stood.

41946. Did you see Platt at all?—Never. I never saw him before in my life until I saw him here at the Commission.

41947. You have seen him, of course, to-day, and on other days?—When I saw him down here was the first time I ever saw him in my life.

41948. Do you mean to say you never recognised him as a man you had seen at Clerkenwell?—Never.

41949. Did you ever converse with the Fishers, and talk with them at all in 1905 and 1906?—Never—never spoke to them.

41950. Where was the place they generally took their stand? Where was their pitch?—At the corner of Sutton Street and Bury Street, I believe.

P. C. H. Cass.
12 April 1907.

41951. Which was the nearest public-house?—The Sutton Arms, I think it was.

41952. Why was there any special difficulty about catching them there?—They were difficult to catch.

41953. Why?—Because there were several turnings, and also a block of buildings where they could slip into very sharp, and having so many sharp touts as there were, they caught sight of us before we could get anywhere near them.

41954. Even when you were disguised in a silk hat and frock coat?—Yes. I think I am known about the division almost better than any other man.

41955. If that is the case, if you are so well-known, how have you been able to make so many arrests—I mean you are particularly well known to Fisher and his touts?—Yes, ever since 1903.

41956. But not to the other street bookmakers?—Not so well, because sometimes there bookmakers did not stand in such peculiar places to get at them.

41957. But I understand from you that the Fishers knew you much better than any other bookmakers knew you, and they knew you so well that they and the touts could penetrate through any disguises you might adopt?—They did.

41958. How was that?—I could not say.

41959. You have told us you never spoke to them. You never had anything to do with them, except when you arrested them with Sergeant Barton in 1904?—Yes.

41960. Why should they be able to catch sight of you so much more readily than anybody else?—I could not say that.

41961. Does it not strike you as rather odd that that should be so?—I do not know.

41962. Did you ever arrest any other man twice over?—Yes.

41963. Then I suppose you were able to take him in?—Yes.

41964. You had one disguise on one occasion and another disguise on another occasion?—Yes.

41965. Then the mere fact that you arrested Fishers once three years ago is hardly a sufficient reason for their being so specially adroit in penetrating your disguises. What is the explanation?—I could not say. I have tried on several occasions to arrest the Fishers, but I could never get near them myself, but I have had a comrade who has been out along with me, and I have sent him round, and he has done it.

41966. Who is he?—I could not say for certainty, because I have had different men out with me different months; when I have been out I have had different constables along with me.

41967. Platt says that the Fishers were left alone because they paid you moneys with which they debited him. Is there anything in that?—That is a falsehood.

41968. But it does seem that they were able, without interference from you, to carry on the business for some, I think, three months as agents for Platt. How do you account for that?—I do not know; I cannot say. I could never get near the Fishers.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) You remember the actual dates when he was on duty in 1906; he gave you those.

(Chairman.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) From the 11th June till the 8th July, and from the 1st October to the 28th October.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Platt had to give up bookmaking at the end of July, so that the second period would not affect it.

(Chairman.) That is true. You are quite right.

41969. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) How many men were engaged on this work, attempting to prevent street bookmaking in your division at this time, do you know?—There would be two of us out.

41970. Only two?—Two. I would not be quite certain.

41971. You do not mean only two in your division?—No, two from our station.

41972. My question was from the division?—Probably there would be four out; there would be two from one station, and two from another.

41973. Is Clerkenwell a place where there is a good deal of street betting?—Not on our division, there is not such a great many bookmakers in our sub-division.

41974. Where is your sub-division?—Clerkenwell—King's Cross.

41975. From where to where?—Our division separates through St. John Street—it is straight away from the Angel on the right-hand side of St. John Street, down to the Meat Market.

41976. The Fishers were very well known to you apparently at the end of 1903 and the beginning of 1904?—Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Can you tell me, Mr. Bankes, how many times the Fishers were summoned or arrested after that one you have told us of on the 1st January, 1904? It would be convenient if we knew that.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Robert Fisher was convicted on the 28th November, 1903, on 1st January, 1904, and on 6th October, 1906. William Fisher (he is called William Joseph Fisher) was convicted on 1st January, 1904, and he does not appear to have been convicted afterwards. Thomas Fisher was convicted——

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) We have heard nothing about Thomas Fisher, have we?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, you have not. He was a brother. I can give you his convictions. There were four brothers.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I want to be clear about this. According to the evidence there are two, Robert and William, who were said to act for Platt.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is it alleged that Thomas was acting for Platt.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I do not think he was.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Then it would not help us very much.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) No, except that I believe Thomas Fisher was betting in the immediate neighbourhood.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Give it to us if you think it will help us.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Thomas Fisher was convicted on 26th May, 1903, on 13th August 1903, on 9th September, 1903, on 17th October, 1903, on 1st January, 1904, on 27th September, 1904, on 15th June, 1905, and on 28th July, 1905. Harry Fisher was convicted on 1st January, 1904. They all seem to have been convicted on 1st January, 1904.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) They were all betting apparently in Clerkenwell, because all four men were caught on that occasion.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes.

41977. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Now I want to deal with the two who were betting for Platt; that is, William and Robert Fisher. As I understand you, they were very well known?—Yes.

41978. And we know apparently they were very adroit persons in evading arrest?—They were.

41979. And as I follow what you said, you knew from this arrest and conviction on the 1st January, and during 1905 and 1906, that they were carrying on their occupation of bookmaking in Clerkenwell?—Yes.

41980. And you knew their pitch?—I knew where they used to stand.

41981. I understood you to say that after their conviction on the 1st January, 1904, their pitch was in Sutton Street, Clerkenwell?—In the neighbourhood of Sutton Street.

41982. Can you give us any explanation of why it was if they were such well-known betting men, and their pitch was so well known, that during the whole of the time from the 1st January, 1904, up to the end of the time that they were working for Platt, there was neither arrest nor summons?—I could not say that, because I was not out all the time. I was only out occasionally.

41983. That is quite right, but at the same time you would know, I suppose, what was going on as regards the street bookmakers near your station?—Certainly not.

41984. Do you mean you would not know anything at all about it?—No, because there might be two constables from another station, and if they arrested them I should not hear anything at all about it, because they would be charged at another station.

41985. That is not answering the question I was putting to you, which was confined to your station. I quite understand that you would not know what was happening at another station, and that is why I asked you about your station. I am only asking you about what happened in your own station?—I should not know that always.

41986. Did you make any report to your superior officers that here there were men defying the law whom you could not arrest?—No.

41987. This apparently, according to you, went on, to your knowledge, for two years and a half and more. You see what I am putting to you. Do you understand me?—Yes, I think I do.

41988. I am calling your attention to the fact that from the 1st January, 1904, until the 6th October, 1906, which is three months or so after they had ceased to have any connection with Platt, betting for him, they are never arrested?—I can only answer for myself.

41989. You can only answer for why you did not do it?—That is quite right.

41990. But I am trying to get at the explanation of it. Does it not seem odd to you that here in that division you have got well-known men betting at a well-known pitch, and that they continue to bet to your knowledge for two years and a half and more, and are never either arrested or summoned. Is not that odd?—It seems so.

41991. It seems a very ineffective police check, does it not?—It does seem so.

41992. Did you ever make a report to any of your superiors that you knew that this state of things was going on?—No.

41993. Did you not think it your duty?—Each time that I went round there I honestly say that I never saw the Fishers doing anything—not for me to report them or to arrest them.

41994. Did you see the individuals?—Not every time I went round.

41995. But you used to go round by Sutton Street?—Yes.

41996. And you saw them there?—Occasionally.

41997. They knew you very well?—Yes.

41998. When they saw you they were not betting?—No.

41999. When you had gone you knew they were?—We used to double back sometimes, but I could never honestly see them.

42000. That came to this, did it not, according to your view: as they knew you when they saw you (and they always seem to have seen you in time) they were not betting?—No.

42001. But you knew what they were there for?—We could guess what they were there for.

42002. Did it never occur to you to lay any trap for them?—We have laid traps for them.

42003. What sort of a trap?—Going round in vans occasionally.

42004. In what?—Getting into a railway van sometimes, and going into the street, and trying to arrest them in that way.

42005. Tell me how often you had done that during these two years and a half?—Perhaps on three or four occasions.

42006. Have you any special recollection of its being done?—I have not.

42007. I do not want you to guess at it. I want you to tell me what you really recollect?—I cannot recollect any time.

42008. You cannot recollect any time that you went in a van?—No.

42009. That disposes of the van. Can you tell me any other trap that you laid?—No, I could not say anything else particularly myself.

42010. You were very well known to them you have told us. Why did you not lay any special traps for these men, who always seemed to know when you were coming, and always stopped betting when you were there? Did you exercise your mind at all as to how you could manage to arrest these men who were to your knowledge defying the law?—I tried. All I know is I have tried to catch these men.

42011. I should like to understand what you mean by that. You say you tried—that is to say, you tried by the well-known routine methods?—Yes.

42012. That was your trial?—Yes.

42013. These people, according to your view, were far too smart to be caught by methods of that kind?—They were always too smart for me.

42014. That is what I understand you to say, and therefore you were unable to catch them by any of those methods?—Yes.

42015. But you knew that this betting was going on at this particular pitch?—I knew it was going on.

42016. If that is the case, and if you could not think of any scheme which was simple enough to catch one of the Fishers, why did you not ask one of your superior officers?—I have not arrested them myself, but when I found I could not arrest them during the time I have been out I have got the other constable who has been round with me to do it, or to go round and try, and I believe there is a constable that I have had out along with me who has arrested the Fishers. I will not be quite sure.

42017. I do not think you follow the dates I have put to you. It is because of those dates that I am putting these questions to you. You see, from the 1st January, 1904 (I am not speaking of the arrests you made, because you did not arrest them till after that date), until the end of July, 1906, which is the date we are more particularly concerned with, neither of the two Fishers, Robert or William, is ever arrested, although, according to your story, both of them are betting at a pitch which is well known, and both of them are carrying on this unlawful business for two years and a half to the knowledge of the police—that is to say, they carry on the business, you know they are carrying it on, and nothing is done apparently to prevent it except this routine method, which you knew was quite ineffectual. That is right, is it not? Correct that if it is wrong. That is how I understand your evidence. (No answer.)

42018. Is not that right?—Yes.

42019. Can you account for that?—No, I cannot account for it.

42020. When you look back upon it now, does it not strike you as a very odd thing? You were there to prevent these occurrences, to prevent street betting, and if you could not succeed yourself was it not your duty to mention it to a superior officer?—I have done that, and other men have been out.

42021. I thought you told me a little while ago that you had not mentioned it to a superior officer?—Not made a report of it.

42022. You draw that distinction. Tell me the superior officer you mentioned it to?—I believe it would be the Sub-divisional Inspector.

42023. Do not guess. You say you believe it would be. You are giving evidence on oath. If you do not recollect, say that you do not recollect; if you do recollect, say that you recollect that it was so and so; but do not try to guess at it? Who was it?—I cannot recollect honestly who it was.

42024. You cannot recollect who it was. Can you recollect when it was?—No, I cannot.

42025. Can you recollect whether anyone else was there?—No.

42026. Can you recollect what was said?—I believe the words I said were the Fishers were very smart, or too smart, or something to that effect. I will not be certain of the words.

42027. Where did you say that?—I believe it has been said in the police station.

42028. I am asking you about the superior officer?—I will not be sure.

42029. You will not be sure that you ever said anything about it to your superior officer?—I would not swear to who the superior officer was.

42030. Will you be sure that you ever said a word about it to a superior officer?—Yes.

42031. If you say you are sure you must know. Who was the superior officer to whom you said something about it?—I cannot say.

42032. How can you be sure if you recollect nothing at all about the officer? Who was the officer to whom you would make this statement?—It would be to the Sub-divisional Inspector.

P.C. H. Cass.
12 April 1907.

42033. Who would that be?—Mr. Briggs.

42034. During the whole of the time?—Yes.

42035. Can you recollect ever saying one word to him about it?—No, I cannot say that I do.

42036. Do you recollect his ever asking you a question about the Fishers?—No.

42037. Does it not occur to you now that if this was going on to your knowledge, as you have told us, it was your duty to have mentioned it to your superior officer?—Probably I ought to have done so if I did not.

42038. Who would tell you to go out on this plain clothes duty? Would it be Subdivisional Inspector Briggs?—Yes.

42039. You went out during 1904, 1905, and 1906. Those are the dates we have had?

(Mr Rufus Isaacs.) I am not sure, Mr. Bankes, whether we had any dates in 1904 when this witness went out.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have not got those.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You gave us 1905 and 1906.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Yes. I have not got the dates for 1904. We have the actual details of the duty for 1906, and we gave the average arrests for 1905 and 1906.

42040. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is right. With whom did you go out on this duty during that time? Who was your mate?—The different constables.

42041. Yes?—I could not say for certain now who the different constables were. I know the constables' numbers, but I could not say which month the constables were out along with me.

42042. Some of the people whom you arrested were pretty hardened offenders, were they not? I suggest that because I see that some of them were arrested several times during these years 1905 and 1906. For example, I find a name here "Christopher Briggs." He was arrested in April, 1905, and he was arrested also in May, 1905. Did you know him at all before?—Before when?

42043. Before you arrested him? Did you know him as a bookmaker before you arrested him, or did you merely find him bookmaking?—I found him bookmaking.

42044. You did not know him before?—No. That man used to stand very openly on the public path—right openly in the main thoroughfare.

42045. Often?—Yes.

42046. He was not afraid?—He was not.

42047. He does not seem to have been caught very often?—I think I caught him very often.

42048. You caught him twice in 1905 and 1906. Apparently he used to do it without any attempt to evade the police; he used to stand in the open street and take slips. I think I am right—I only find he was arrested twice, on the dates I gave you just now?—Yes, but he has been arrested more times than that by other constables.

42049. That is quite right. These are only the arrests by you. He may have been arrested more often by others?—He has been arrested a number of times, I know, by other constables that I have had along with me.

42050. Were you in court when Platt was asked to pick you out?—Yes.

42051. It does strike you, looking back at it, does it not, that the Fishers seem to have had rather a remarkable immunity from either summons or arrest?—They were very fortunate undoubtedly, and they were very smart.

42052. I am not quite sure that I understand in what this smartness consists. What was that smartness?—They were very smart themselves, and they had some very smart touts.

42053. What was that smartness? You do not mean in their dress? What do you mean by saying they were very smart?—With regard to detecting anybody coming along. If a person came along and they thought he was a constable they were out of the way quick.

42054. I thought special means were taken so that they should not know that the person who was coming was a constable?—I have seen on several occasions a private individual going along, and they thought he was a constable, and they have slipped away quick.

42055. And then they would come back again?—Yes, after some considerable time probably—I could not say.

42056. One of the reasons, if I understood you correctly, why they seem to have been able to defy the law and the police for two years and a half, according to you, was that there was some particular spot which they chose which was particularly favourable to their getting away?—That was so.

42057. That is right?—Yes.

42058. Did it never occur to the police under these circumstances that it might be a spot where it would be very desirable to have someone constantly there?—Undoubtedly if they did they would be discovered.

42059. They would not have been able to go on for two years and a half bookmaking in the streets because there was this special place which was so favourable to them?—Not at that particular spot.

42060. They would have had to find another spot which would not be so favourable. I rather understood you to say one of the reasons why you could not arrest them was because they had been fortunate enough to find this most favourable spot. Is not that right?—Yes, they had a very peculiar spot there to get at them.

42061. You might have stopped that very peculiar spot, might you not?—If we had stopped them they would have gone elsewhere.

42062. But if they had gone elsewhere the spot might not have been so favourable to them?—At that place where they are it is very difficult to get at them.

42063. Why?—There are so many turnings, and so many streets and courts, at that particular place.

42064. Does not that seem to be all the more reason why you should have somebody at that particular place? Let me put it to you in this way. Supposing I wanted to stop street bookmaking, and I knew that a man had a particularly favourable pitch, and that he was betting there, and that he could always manage to get away from there if I came upon him unawares, if I stationed myself there do you think that would have the effect of preventing his betting in that particular place?—Yes; but, on the other hand, if we did that we should be allowing the other bookmakers to carry on their business about the neighbourhood—we should be stopping one man and allowing perhaps 12 or 15 other bookmakers to do their business.

42065. That is your reason for not doing it, is it?—If we could not arrest these men we used to slip round to other places and try to arrest them. We had the division to work.

42066. How many men do you think there were betting in the street in this division and defying the law to your knowledge? You have told us of the two Fishers. How many others?—In the G Division altogether?

42067. In any division. You were not engaged in the whole of the G Division, were you?—Yes, we used to go round the whole of the division from King's Cross to Shoreditch; it is a very large district.

42068. How many of them were there who had this complete immunity?—I could not say for certain, but I should think without exaggerating there were 50 to 60—undoubtedly there were.

42069. Who went on in this way to your knowledge?—Bookmakers. I did not know them all.

42070. You are not really attending to the question I am putting to you. What I want to know is how many there were who were in the same position as the Fishers as regards yourself. You knew the Fishers?—Yes.

42071. You knew their pitch?—Yes.

42072. And you knew they were betting in the streets and breaking the law?—Yes.

42073. What I want to know is how many more there were whom you knew who were breaking the law to your knowledge, and whom you could not arrest during these two years and a half—I mean breaking the law in this way by street-betting?—There was one bookmaker there, but I do not think that ever I caught him—he was standing but a very short distance from Fisher.

42074. You might have killed two birds with one stone if you had been stationed there?—He was in another street; I am not going to say that he was in the same street; there would be a block or two of houses to separate them.

42075. This man you are speaking of has not been summoned at all, has he?—He has been arrested by other constables, and he has also been summoned.

42076. I am not sure now that you are answering the question I am putting to you. I am dealing with the case of men who to your knowledge had been betting, and were betting in the street on a pitch which you knew for a period of something like two years and a half. What I want to know is, was there anybody else who occupied such a favourable position in the streets bookmaking?—I do not know that; I could not say that.

42077. To your knowledge?—Not to my knowledge.

42078. So that it does come to this, if that is the case, that the Fishers were the only people who to your knowledge were carrying on this street bookmaking at a pitch which you knew, and for a long period, without being either summoned or arrested? Is that right?—Yes. P.C. H. Cass. 12 April 1907.

42079. And the only reason you can suggest for that is that they had this specially favourable position?—Yes.

42080. And during the whole of this time, although you knew it was going on, I understand, it never seems to have occurred to you, or to anybody else, to dislodge them from this favourable position?—I cannot answer for what others have done, but I can only speak for myself, and for what I have done. Other constables have been out, and what they have done I cannot answer for.

42081. Quite right. We know the fact from the Return that they were not arrested or summoned for two years and nine months?—I could not say whether they had been arrested by others or not.

Sergeant SIDNEY BEX, recalled.

42082. (Chairman.) Have you got that information now?—Yes.

42083. (Mr. Dickinson.) Can you tell us exactly when it was?—In November, 1905. For seven days I was following this burglar and safe-blower. Sergeant S. Bex.

42084. (Chairman.) 1905?—Yes.

42085. (Mr. Dickinson.) What evidence have you got of that? What have you looked up?—There is the report. (Handing document to the Commissioners.)

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) These are the witness' books and the books of the officer who accompanied him at the same time. He was making inquiries in company with another officer, and the note books of both officers are here (producing books).

(The Witness.) I was observing this man for six days continuous observation, and then he went away to Germany.

42086. (Mr. Dickinson.) It was on that occasion that you say you think you lunched at the Clock House?—That is the only place where we can get anything in the vicinity, and Rowton House is quite opposite.

42087. You have not been there since?—No.

42088. That you are sure of?—Positive.

(Mr. Platt.) I was fixing it by the Election time. I started myself in Islington in November, and I was rather fixing January, as I was more positive in my own mind of the date of the Election. During that time I would be canvassing the district, and I should be there from November to the 14th January, which was polling day in West Islington, and I was there from November up to and including that date.

(Chairman.) Then I understand your suggestion is that this meeting may have taken place in November?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) You mean you may have been canvassing in November.

(Mr. Platt.) I was canvassing in November.

(Chairman.) You put to this witness, I think, that you had met him and played billiards with him.

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Chairman.) During the General Election?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Chairman.) The General Election was in January?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Chairman.) But you say this meeting when you played billiards may have taken place in November?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

42089. (Chairman.) (To the Witness.) Is that so?—No, because I was on observation following this man, and the diary will show that.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) I understand from you, Mr. Platt, that if it took place in November, you say you were canvassing?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes, Sir.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Are you sure of that?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) In November?

(Mr. Platt.) Yes. Perhaps in that particular month I might have been doing some business for the Tariff Reform—open-air meetings in the immediate neighbourhood.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The Sporting League it was last time?

(Mr. Platt.) And the Sporting League, too, I did some business for.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) The last statement on this was that you mere canvassing for the Sporting League in January?

(Mr. Platt.) I was connected with both of them.

P.C. HENRY CASS, 430 G, recalled.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Have you the defaulters' sheet of this witness? P.C. H. Cass.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, Sir. (Handing in same.)

42090. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) According to this there is nothing against you at all?—None.

42091. You seem to have received an advance of pay from 1894 every year till 1901. Has your pay been advanced since that?—Not after the eight years when I completed my eight years' service and I was a first-class constable.

42092. When you get to 33s. 6d. that is the maximum?—Yes.

42093. That you got to in 1901, and that you have held ever since?—Yes.

42094. There are various notes of commendation of your services by the Commissioner, and you have been rewarded for promptitude and courage twice in stopping runaway horses, and on the 30th January, 1904, you were commended by the Commissioner for activity in the discharge of your duty in the case of betting in the street?—Yes.

42095. I understand you never remember seeing Platt at all?—I never saw Platt before in my life till I saw him here in Court.

42096. It is only right to you to say that Platt does not say he ever gave you money, but all he says is that Fisher told him he had given you money?—I never received a penny.

42097. That is the evidence as it stands before us?—Yes, Sir.

42098. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do I understand from what you have told Mr. Rufus Isaacs that these Fishers were carrying on their street betting in Sutton Street for a couple of years?—I would not say whether they were for two years or not. I would not swear to that.

42099. It was more than a year; it was from 1904 to 1906?—I would not answer for that, because I was practically in the streets but very little one year. I was down at the police court. I could not answer for whether they were then or not.

P.C. H. Cass.
12 April 1907.

42100. When you were in the streets, did you see them?—Yes, the latter part of the time when I was out in the streets I saw them.

42101. You saw them in Sutton Street?—The corner of Sutton Street and Bury Street.

42102. What was the particular convenience that Sutton Street possessed for the bookmakers?—There is a large block of buildings there where they could run into.

42103. What kind of buildings?—Private dwellings.

42104. Tenement dwellings?—Tenement dwellings.

42105. Did they always stand close to those buildings?—Pretty close there.

42106. When you came round the corner, were you in the habit of seeing them run into the buildings?—I have seen them run into the buildings.

42107. Is that near the Sutton Arms?—Pretty close to the Sutton Arms.

42108. Is there any convenience for the bookmakers to be near the Sutton Arms?—There is a court that leads round the back of a brewery out to another street.

42109. Do you know that telegrams are sent to the Sutton Arms for the bookmakers?—I do not know that.

42110. You know we have seen the telegram that was sent to these bookmakers?—I do not know that. I never knew it.

42111. You have no idea that that process is carried on?—No.

42112. What do you require to see in order to arrest these men?—You must see two other persons with the bookmaker at the same time.

42113. And what else?—You must see him receiving slips and money.

42114. And provided you can give evidence to that extent, you can secure a conviction?—Yes.

42115. You always go about on that business in plain clothes?—Yes.

42116. What would prevent you going into one of these houses and watching?—Which houses?

42117. The houses as I understand from you that they stand in front of—these model dwellings. It would be very convenient for them to run out of the street into these places. Is there anything to prevent you going into these houses and watching?—Undoubtedly. The people inside would not allow us in.

42118. I suppose it is common knowledge to the people inside those houses that betting is going on in this street day after day?—Undoubtedly.

42119. And it is common knowledge to yourself, too. You have practically told us that?—Oh, yes.

42120. Have you ever had any conversation with your superior officers as to planning a raid upon these people?—In some instances we have had a van out when there have been five or six or seven of us out.

42121. I think you told us about a van, but you were not able to give particulars of it?—That was only on my own special occasion when we have been out, when probably we might give the van driver a drink for letting us ride on the back of his van, or for getting inside his van, but when we have engaged a van for four or six of us, it has been paid for by the police. When we are sent out, we are sent out to arrest these bookmakers as far as we possibly can, and we, to the best of our ability, do so.

42122. Of course the Fishers you knew well, and you knew their address?—No, I did not know their address.

42123. They had been convicted?—They had been convicted.

42124. Why do not you ever try to proceed against them by summons? You do summons some of them?—Some of them have been summoned.

42125. Why could you not proceed against the Fishers by summons?—I have never seen them, or seen anything to justify me in doing so.

42126. I thought you said just now you have seen them run away when you came round?—I have seen them run away, but of course they would run away from me any time, whether they were doing anything or not; they would always run.

42127. In your division, do the police-constables go on this work two and two?—No, we would both be sent out, and probably I would go to one district and my colleague would go to another district. Not on very many occasions did we work side by side.

42128. Have they ever had the system that we have heard of in another division, of a sergeant and a constable going together often?—Not many times in our division. We have when we have had a van out which has been hired. The sergeant has then been with us.

42129. That is some particular attempt to catch the bookmakers?—Yes.

42130. But in the ordinary way you go alone?—Yes.

42131. Do you have to give any report about your day's work?—No.

42132. I suppose you would be allowed to go in plain clothes anywhere you liked?—Anywhere you liked on the division.

42133. When you are out on this work, are you engaged day by day on the same business?—Yes.

42134. Always on the same business?—Yes.

42135. Who else was engaged on that same business as well as yourself?—I have had different constables out with me each time I have been out.

42136. They only went occasionally?—No, there has been two of us out for the month.

42137. Who is the other one?—Sometimes I have had P.C. 348 G (Cole), and sometimes I have been out with 194 G (Gardener), and I have been out with 225 G (Newsted), and 220 G, I think.

42138. What is his name?—Wakefield.

42139. Both of you in plain clothes?—Yes. This is 194 with me in the photograph.

42140. After a day of that work, do you give a report to your superior officers about it?—We give no report. We hand in a weekly return to our Sub-divisional Inspector at the end of every week of what we have done during the week.

42141. What does that weekly return state?—It just states the number of arrests and the men's names. I have got one old return here that I handed in at the end of the week. (Handing document to the Commissioners.)

24142. "Return of persons apprehended by P.C. 194 Gardener and P.C. 430 Cass, specially employed re street ruffianism, etc." Then you give no report?—We give no report; we only give a return in that manner at the end of the week.

24143. I see on the 22nd you seem to have apprehended five, and three were for gambling. When you use the word "gambling," does that mean betting?—No, that is gambling with cards.

24144. On the 23rd you apprehended three for gambling, and on the 25th one for betting, and on the 26th you seem to have arrested seven, most of them women. There are some cases of betting and insulting and indecent behaviour and soliciting. Then on the 27th one, and on the 28th seven. Then you do not report to your officers what you have been doing in the day and where you have been to?—No.

42145. You take your own course and go exactly where you like?—Yes.

42146. In the expectation of catching somebody at something?—Yes.

42147. You never report that you have seen suspicious circumstances and suspicious meetings and gatherings in the streets?—No.

42148. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did the Fishers have many scouts?—They did.

42149. Smart scouts?—They did.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) And he says some were on bicycles.

42150. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes. How often were the men changed who were out on this duty?—I might be sent out this month, and there would be two more selected for the next month, and two more for the next month, and probably I might go on for two or three months before I would be called again.

42151. Then when you are called you would only be on that duty for about a month?—A month at a time.

42152. Has there been any change in the system during the last few years?—No, I do not think so, only just of late they have had a van out and the serjeant has been out with five or six men.

Sergeant JAMES LAING, sworn.

42153. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Are you attached to the G Division of the Metropolitan Force?—Yes.

42154. Are you a sergeant in the C.I.D.?—Yes.

42155. How many years have you been in the Force?—Sixteen years and eleven months to-day.

42156. I think you have been a detective-sergeant for seven years?—Since August, 1899.

42157. And the whole of your time have you been attached to the G Division?—Yes.

42158. I think your record is quite clean?—You have the sheet before you, Sir.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Yes, I think it is annexed to the one that I was dealing with just now.

42159. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) During the years 1905 and 1906 did you have anything to do with keeping observation upon street bookmakers as a part of your general duty?—Generally we always do; if we are out and about in the streets and see a bookmaker commit himself we would arrest him, but I was not specially employed, with the exception of one or two occasions for one day.

42160. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is it only one day that you were engaged specially on this duty?—Only on one or two occasions. For one day in 1906.

42161. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) What duty were you engaged upon on that particular day in 1906?—That was sometime in November, 1906, in consequence of complaints reaching the Commissioner as to street bookmakers in the neighbourhood of Hoxton and St. Luke's. I was sent out with several other officers to try and effect some arrests.

42162. How did you go out?—I went out with other officers in charge of a van.

42163. Was a van hired, and did you go out in the van for the purpose of trying to make arrests in that way?—That is so.

42164. With that single exception were you specially employed in connection with bookmakers during the year 1906?—That was the only occasion.

42165. Do you know William and Robert Fisher?—I do.

42166. How long have you know them?—I got to know them first through their being prosecuted at the end of 1903, when summonses were taken out against them.

42167. They were taken out in November, and they were convicted in January, 1904?—That was the occasion when I got to hear of them first. I heard of them in the course of my business in the Division.

42168. Have you ever spoken to them?—No, I never spoke to either of them; in fact, I have only spoken to one of them, and that was Robert, on the 20th October, I think it was, last year.

42169. That is since this Commission began to sit?—Yes.

42170. Until that occasion had you ever spoken to either of the Fishers?—Neither of them.

42171. Had you ever kept any special observation upon either of them?—No.

42172. Had you ever seen either of them actually engaged in betting?—No, or else I should have done my best to arrest them. I knew they were bookmakers, and I have seen them at different times in various streets in Clerkenwell as I have been going about my other inquiries.

42173. But have you ever seen them actually engaged in betting?—No.

42174. Have you ever seen Platt at all to your knowledge before the Commission sat?—Not to my knowledge until I saw him in the witness-box in the other Court here about two months ago.

42175. Had you any knowledge that the Fishers were betting for Platt?—Not the slightest.

42176. Is it true that the Fishers have ever given you money?—It is untrue.

42177. You were in Court on one occasion when Platt was asked if he could identify you?—I was.

42178. I think he failed to do so, did he not? He did not pick you out?—He picked out another man.

42179. He picked out somebody else as being you?—Yes.

42180. I have no doubt the incident is fresh in the recollection of the Commissioners with regard to the two men standing up. Have you received anything from either of the Fishers or from Platt either directly or indirectly?—Neither directly or indirectly.

42181. You mentioned that since the Commission has been sitting one of the Fishers did speak to you?—Yes.

42182. When was that?—I think it was on the 20th October. I think after Platt had given his evidence before the Commission to the effect that he had handed in some names of detective officers who had been bribed in Clerkenwell.

42183. (Chairman.) Was it Robert Fisher who spoke to you?—Yes, Robert.

42184. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Where was that?—That was on the City Road bridge.

42185. Were any other officers with you?—Yes, Sergeant Wright and Sergeant Leach.

42186. Were you on duty then or not?—Yes, we were on duty.

42187. What did Fisher come and say?—Sergeant Leach told me that he had received a message that Fisher wanted to see either him or Sergeant Wright on the City Road bridge at 12 o'clock. It was just before that that he told me, and I went there, I think. When we met him he said "I want to see about that evidence that that Platt has given at the Royal Commission; it is all a lot of falsehoods about him having bribed the police in Clerkenwell," and as to the names he handed up, he said, he thought it might be possible that the two names he handed up might be Sergeants Wright and Leach, because one day while he (Platt) was with Fisher in Sutton Street, Wright and Leach passed through the street, when one of the touts ran up to them—that is, ran up to Platt and Fisher—and said, "Look out, there is Wright and Leach." He thought that was the possible way that he might have got hold of some names.

42188. Did he say nothing else?—He also said that as regards the money that Platt said he had been paying to the police in Clerkenwell that that money he was keeping for himself, and saying that he was giving out to the police, and at the same time he was doing the man who was employing him, and was accounting for the money by saying he had paid it away to the police.

42189. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) That is what Fisher told you?—That is what Fisher told me.

42190. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did he say that he (Fisher) was keeping or that Platt was keeping?—That Platt was.

42191. Just say it again, because I do not think you have made plain what you meant?—He said that this money that Platt said he was paying away to the police, that Platt was keeping that money himself from the person who was financing him and accounting for the money, or the deficiency, it might be, to his employer by saying he paid the money away to the police.

42191*. (Mr. Dickinson.) Did he say who the employer was?—I think he used the words "the man who was financing him."

42192. (Mr. Whitmore.) Did he use the word "employer"?—No, I think it was "the man who was financing him."

42193. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Did he say anything else, or is that all?—I cannot remember that he said anything else.

42194. Then what did you do upon that, or what was done?—I went and reported it to my Inspector—Inspector Kidd.

42195. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Was that in writing or verbally?—Verbally. I believe he submitted a report in writing.

(Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Have you that report?

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) I have not seen it, Sir.

(Report produced and handed to the Commissioners.)

42196. (Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Is that the only occasion

Sergeant J. Laing.

12 April 1907.

on which you have spoken to either of the Fishers?—That is so.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask any questions, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) No, Sir.

42197. (Chairman.) Were you in court before us when Mr. Platt gave his evidence in October?—No; the first time I was in court was this year after you resumed.

42198. January 31st?—I do not know the date.

42199. Or Wednesday, the 30th January?—The first time I was here was the day upon which the identification took place.

42200. That is the first time?—I think that was the first time.

42201. That appears to have been on the 30th January, when you and another officer stood up?—He picked out one man first, and then I was requested to stand up.

42202. With regard to this conversation with Robert Fisher, you said something about walking with Sergeant Wright and Sergeant Leach. Where were you walking then?—Sergeant Leach had had a communication from some person to say that Fisher wanted to see him and Sergeant Wright, and they told me that and I went with them.

42203. Where did you go?—To the City Road Bridge.

42204. Then this conversation took place in the open air?—In the open street on the bridge.

42205. Sergeant Leach was present, and Sergeant Wright and yourself?—Yes.

42206. Who else?—And Fisher.

42207. That was all?—Yes, that was all.

42208. Did you put any note in your notebook?—No.

42209. Did Leach?—I do not think so.

42210. Or Wright?—I do not think so.

42211. Then I understand that you all went to the police station?—No, we came from the police station to the City Road Bridge, and after Fisher told us what he had to tell us he went away on his business and we went away on ours.

42212. Did that take you back to the police station?—I cannot say that it did. I may have had some other inquiries and gone somewhere.

42213. Then you were on your ordinary duty?—Yes.

42214. You and the other sergeants were on your ordinary duty?—Yes.

42215. I suppose you had to go and meet the constables on your section?—No, we do not do that.

42216. Does Leach belong to the C.I.D.?—Yes.

42217. And Sergeant Wright?—Yes. We go and look after our own respective inquiries.

42218. Then you three were together at the police station when you heard about this message asking one of you to go and speak to Fisher?—About 9 o'clock in the morning, when we went to the office, we heard of the message. I understood there was some person at the station waiting to see Sergeant Wright or Sergeant Leach. He delivered that message, and the message was that Fisher wanted to see either one of those two on the City Road Bridge at 12 o'clock. They told me, and I made it my business to go with them.

42219. What exactly was the message?—That Fisher wanted to see either Sergeant Leach or Sergeant Wright on the City Road Bridge at 12 o'clock. That was the message as it was told to me.

42220. That Robert Fisher wanted to see you?—I cannot say that the name Robert was given. It was Robert we saw.

42221. You are not sure that the name Robert was given?—No, it was simply "one of the Fishers."

42222. You knew at once what Fishers were meant then?—Yes, I concluded what it referred to and what it meant.

42223. They were known to you all as bookmakers?—Yes, we gained that knowledge being in the division all these years.

42224. And the message was that either Fisher or Robert Fisher, or one of the Fishers, wishes to see either Sergeant Wright or Sergeant Leach?—Yes; and then he explained why it was he wanted to see them, because they passed through there one day while Platt was with Fisher where Fisher bets about Sutton Street.

42225. You are all three sergeants?—Yes; they are third-class sergeants and I am a second-class sergeant.

42226. Did you attach any importance at all to the message?—Yes, I wished to go and see what it was that he wanted to see them about.

42227. Why did you not suggest that Fisher should come to the police station?—Of course the messenger had gone when I was told about it.

42228. To whom was the message spoken?—The message, I believe, was spoken to Sergeant Leach, and he told me then later on.

42229. Then it was Leach at 9 o'clock who told you that somebody had been there?—It was about 9 o'clock when the messenger arrived at the station and saw Sergeant Leach, and then later on Sergeant Leach told me.

42230. And Wright?—And Wright.

42231. Were you all together when Leach mentioned this message?—We would be in the office together doing our work.

42232. Did you not think it was rather an unusual thing for a bookmaker to ask two sergeants to step over at midday and see him on a bridge?—We get that sort of communication to go and see people away from the station. People will not come to the station and see us. We often get very valuable information by going and seeing people away from the station. They will not come near the station.

42233. You thought that Fisher had something valuable to communicate to you?—Certainly, we thought he had something to communicate to us; what it was we did not know.

42234. You all three went?—Yes, I went with them.

42235. Why?—To know what he had got to say.

42236. Did Leach suggest to you any reason why it was important for you all three to go and talk to this bookmaker or one of this family of bookmakers?—We thought it advisable that more than one should be there. We never knew what it might lead to. Only two days before the three of us went together and raided a receiver's place. It often necessitates two or three going together, and sometimes three or four or five or even six if we could have them sometimes.

42237. You did not then think, when you were going to see this man Fisher on that day, that he had any communication to make to you about one of yourselves?—I did not know what he was going to communicate; I had not the least idea. It was not till then that I knew he was in any way connected with Platt. That was when I knew it.

42238. How do you fix the date? You put it, I think, as the 20th October?—It was on a Saturday, I think.

42239. And it was on the 18th that you think Platt gave his evidence before this Commission?—I believe that is so. He referred to that. He said he had also been, before seeing us, to the solicitors and made a statement there.

42240. Who had said that?—Fisher. He told us that also.

(Mr. Eldon Bankes.) Messrs. Wontners, he means.

42241. (Chairman.) That was at the interview he told you that?—Yes, he told us before seeing us that he had been to the solicitors and also told them.

42242. You told me before that you did not know in the least why Fisher wanted to see you?—No, we receive all sorts of communications to go and see people.

42243. But Platt's evidence had been published in the newspapers?—Quite so.

42244. Had you read his evidence?—I read the newspapers.

42245. Then you knew he had attacked the police in your division?—Yes, I did. I knew that by reading it in the papers, but I did not know then he was in any way connected with Fisher.

42246. No, but you knew, I gather from what you have said, that you knew the Fishers had something to do with Platt?—Fisher told me then.

42247. Was that the first time you knew that Fisher had any connection with Platt?—Yes. In fact, only that morning my Inspector inquired of me if I knew at all who this Platt could be referring to and who this Platt was.

42248. Your Inspector that morning had already asked you for information about Platt?—Yes, as to who this Platt was, and I said I did not know who he was; I had not the remotest idea.

42249. And when you heard that a bookmaker wanted to see you at 12 o'clock no suspicion entered your mind?—I did not know what he wished to see them for. I went with the others to see what it was he wished to see about.

42250. When you had this interview with Fisher I think you said you made a report?—I did verbally to my Inspector.

42251. Who is your Inspector?—Inspector Kidd.

42252. Did you all three go back to the Inspector?—No. I believe I went there myself.

42253. At once?—No, I believe it would be later in the evening, because he would not be at his office then until the evening.

42254. You told me that after the interview each of you had gone about his ordinary business or the business of the day?—Yes.

42255. Then you did not go back straight to the police station?—No, I do not think I did, but I am not positively sure about that. Mr. Kidd's office is not at the same station where I am.

42256. Which office is he at?—King's Cross Road. That is the Divisional office. I am attached to the City Road police station.

42257. Why did you go and report to that Inspector?—Because he is the Inspector under whom I work. I am responsible to him. He is the Detective-inspector of the division.

42258. He is not the Station Inspector?—No he is a Detective-inspector under whom we work. We have nothing to do with the uniform branch at all. We work under a Detective-inspector.

42259. You made a verbal report to him that evening?—Yes, I told him exactly what had taken place as between Fisher and us.

42260. Was Leach present when you made the verbal report?—I do not think he was.

42261. Was Wright present?—I do not think he was.

42262. Did you subsequently make a written report?—No, I had made no report at all in the matter.

42263. I understand that you have been acting as detective in the section in which the Sutton Arms is?—I have been in that district all my life.

42264. Do you as a Detective officer have a section or half a division or a whole division as the sphere of your operations?—We are posted to a sub-division, but our inquiries may take us all over the metropolis.

42265. Which sub-division were you posted to?—I am attached to the City Road sub-division.

42266. Is that the division in which the Sutton Arms is?—That includes the division in which the Sutton Arms is.

42267. Then primarily your duty was to act as a Detective officer in that sub-division?—That is so.

42268. And part of your duty would be to keep observation upon street betting?—Not unless we were specially detailed to go and do so. We have plenty to do looking after thieves. There are men put out specially to look after the bookmakers.

42269. But not in the C.I.D. They are plain clothes men, who are simply ordinary police constables?—Yes. Years ago the detective patrol used to do it. I have done it myself years ago—about 1897.

42270. But in 1906 you did not consider it your special duty in any way to keep a lookout upon the bookmaking fraternity?—Not unless specially detailed to do so. On one occasion I was told off to take two or three officers with me, and I went and hired a van, and we got into the van and arrested two or three. That was in the neighbourhood of Hoxton, in St. Luke's, where we had several complaints.

42271. But I suppose in going about your sub-division you get to know a great many people, do you not, by sight, at any rate?—Yes.

42272. You would know most of the bookmakers by sight?—A good many of them. We gain that knowledge by getting about.

42273. Are there a good many bookmakers in that sub-division?—I suppose about a dozen.

42274. You think you know them all by sight?—No, I do not say that I do, but I know a good many of them.

42275. Do you know a dozen by sight?—Yes, I think I could name a dozen.

42276. Have you ever spoken to any of them?—Yes.

42277. I mean when they are not betting or doing anything in particular, but when you have come across them?—Yes, I have spoken to them. I have had occasion to speak to them in connection with other matters.

42278. Have you met any of them in public-houses, for instance?—Yes, I have met them in public-houses.

42279. Did you know the Sutton Arms as a place in which a good many bookmakers or some bookmakers and many betting men went?—I know that the Sutton Arms is close to where the Fishers are, but as to whether there are many bookmakers who go there or not I do not know.

42280. A good many betting men?—That I do not know.

42281. Have you ever been in the Sutton Arms?—Yes, I had an inquiry there about six years ago, and I arrested a man for stealing jewellery there. Since then I have not been in.

42282. Never been in?—No.

42283. Not once?—No.

42284. I understand, however, that you did know the Fishers as bookmakers in the sub-division?—I knew that. I gained that knowledge in the ordinary course by being so long in the division.

42285. You have never been concerned in arresting any of them?—Never.

42286. Did you have a conversation with any one of the Fishers during the year 1906, do you think?—Not till this conversation I have just mentioned.

42287. You know, I suppose, most of the tradespeople in your sub-division?—Very well.

42288. I suppose you also know a good many of the loafers and disorderly people?—A good many of them. I have had a good many of them through my hands.

42289. Do you know anyone who is either a respectable tradesman or carrying on business in some respectable capacity by the same name as yourself in that sub-division?—I believe there is a warehouse in Golden Lane, close by there, by the name of Lang. I do not know of any person named Laing.

42290. How do you spell your name?—Laing. I know of no person in London who spells his name like that. I have never met with one spelt like that.

42291. But there is a Laing?—Yes, I know some people who have a warehouse in Golden Lane of the name of Lang.

42292. What is their business?—I do not know them personally at all, only I have seen the name up on the front of the warehouse.

42293. Do you know anybody else of the name of Lang, or Laing, in that sub-division?—I know a policeman who used to be there—Lang. He is out of the Service now.

42294. Was he in the G Division?—Yes, he was in the G Division.

42295. How did he come to leave the division?—He was dismissed the Service.

42296. How long ago?—Five or six years, I think. He is still about, though; I see him occasionally.

42297. In this very sub-division?—Yes, knocking about the ground.

42298. What is he doing now?—I do not know.

42299. You told me you knew that the Fishers, or some of them, in 1906 in the summer time, were carrying on the business of bookmaking?—Yes, I knew they were arrested. I got to know that.

42300. You have heard now that Platt says he employed them, and that they were working for him?—I know that now.

42301. I should like to call your attention to this book. You will find there an entry, "Lang, 10s."?—Yes.

42302. You have never seen that entry before, of course. We know that?—Never.

42303. Can you give any explanation of why Fisher,

Sergeant J. Laing.

12 April 1907.

making up his account with Platt, should enter the name, "Lang, 10s." there?—No, I cannot offer any explanation.

42304. I only thought I ought to ask you the question. You see the difficulty, do you not? There is an undoubted book which was used by the Fishers, and Platt in regard to these transactions, and our attention is called to the fact that there is this entry, "Lang, 10s." in it?—It has got nothing to do with me.

42305. You must understand I am not suggesting that you know anything about that entry of "Lang, 10s." in the entry which is in Fisher's handwriting?—I know nothing at all about it.

42306. There is another entry in Fisher's handwriting, "10s.," and that refers apparently to the same case?—It has nothing to do with me. I know nothing at all about it.

42307. You have been about this division, and you know the business these men were doing. What explanation can you suggest?—I have no explanation to suggest at all. I say it has nothing to do with me at all.

42308. You never received 10s. from the Fishers. You told us you never knew Platt, and never spoke to him. You never received any money from the Fishers at all?—No, certainly not. I never spoke to either of the Fishers until the 20th October, let alone receive money from them.

42309. I suppose there was nothing to prevent the Fishers from knowing you by sight as a detective officer?—No, I am very well known indeed by sight in the neighbourhood.

42310. As I understand it, on days when there is no particular object in view, you go about without being disguised?—I go about just the same as I am now.

42311. So that anybody at the police station can see you coming in and going out of the police station?—Certainly.

42312. It is only when it is necessary, or when you conceive it to be necessary, that you disguise yourself?—That is so.

42313. That does not seem a very effective way, does it, of carrying on business?—You cannot always go about dirty and rough. I have to go and interview all sorts of people.

42314. Yes, but it seems to me anybody might know you, just as you say everybody at Tooting seemed to know Sergeant Bex; he was well known?—We do get known, but we cannot help that; we cannot avoid that.

42315. I am suggesting that it is quite possible for Platt to have known you as Sergeant Laing, or for the Fishers to have known you as Sergeant Laing, without your knowing either of them?—Quite so. Of course, it is possible.

42316. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) They would have their eye on you?—If they like to make it their business to find out, they can easily get to know me.

42317. (Mr. Dickinson.) I do not quite understand from your evidence how long you have been in the G Division?—I have been in the G Division the whole of my service—16 years and 11 months.

42318. Have you all that time been in that particular district?—Until I was advanced to the Criminal Investigation Department I was stationed at King's Cross Road Police Station, when I was in uniform. Then I was advanced into the Criminal Investigation Department.

42319. When was that?—That was in January, 1897, and I have been in that division ever since.

42320. For ten years you have been in the Criminal Investigation Department?—That is so.

42321. Allocated to this particular division?—To this particular sub-division. I was promoted in August, 1899, to sergeant. Then, of course, my duties were different.

42322. You were promoted in 1899 to detective-sergeant?—Yes.

42323. I suppose in 1906, when these allegations were made against you, if you had come across men betting in the streets, you would have arrested them?—Certainly, if I got close enough to see them committing the offence, unless I was otherwise engaged. Of course, I might be otherwise engaged following some suspected person, or something of that sort, or suspected servants employed by various firms. We get a lot of those cases.

42324. The betting fraternity would look upon you as their enemy?—To a certain degree they would, of course. They know us perfectly well, and they would very soon get out of the way if they saw us; but if I was on something else, I would not hang about to see what I could see; I would go about whatever inquiry I was on.

42325. There would be a reason for their neglecting their business if they saw you, because you would be one of the people who would be as likely as anyone else to haul them up to the police court?—Any policeman can, of course, if he sees them committing the offence.

42326. But you are there really for the purpose of detecting illegal acts?—Yes, but more particularly in crime, at least of recent years. I was employed on that particular work ten years ago, when I joined the department first, and then, as I was promoted, I had other duties to take up.

42327. How many of these persons, if any, did you apprehend, say, last year?—None.

42328. None at all?—None last year.

42329. Did you the year before?—I cannot say I did. I do not believe I did.

42330. Have you had to deal with betting men when they have been apprehended?—No, nothing at all to do with them, only I would know. Being in the police station I have seen these men out on the job bringing them in; I might be in the police station at the time when they were brought in; of course, I would see them, but it was nothing to do with me at all.

42331. You knew the Fishers?—Yes, I knew they were about, because I got to know when they were prosecuted in 1903. That was when I got to know and hear of them. I heard about their being summoned.

42332. You would know them by sight?—I got to know them by sight by seeing them about the streets.

42333. I suppose you had seen them in the streets?—Yes, I had seen them in the streets.

42334. Constantly?—No, I might go months and never see them. I might see them once or twice one week, and I might go months and never see them. It would depend upon whether I was in the particular district in which they were.

42335. Did you know the street they frequented?—Yes.

42336. That was Sutton Street?—Sutton Street, Clerkenwell, yes.

42337. Did you know that they used to resort to Sutton Street particularly?—I knew that when they were arrested and brought in.

42338. In 1903?—No. In 1903 they were not in Sutton Street. I think they were in a street off Aylesbury Street, Clerkenwell, in another sub-division.

42339. When did you know that they resorted to Sutton Street?—That I cannot say; it may have been some time last year, or it may have been even the year before that; I really did not know where they were.

42340. Last year you were acquainted with the fact that they were carrying on their business in Sutton Street?—I did not know that they were particularly in Sutton Street; I knew that they were about the neighbourhood somewhere, but I did not know where, and I did not make it my business to know.

42341. Why did you not make it your business to know?—I had other duties to perform.

42342. But you are a sergeant? I suppose you are the principal man connected with the detection of crime in that particular district?—Yes.

42343. Then why was it not your business to inform yourself about men who were known by the police to be constantly breaking the law?—Because that was a matter that was in the hands of another officer. The Sub-divisional Inspector had charge of the men who were out specially on it. I was detailed off to make inquiries into burglaries and house-breaking. That is what I was attending to. I would not trouble myself at all about where bookmakers were unless I saw one committing the offence myself, and then, of course, I would act.

42344. I only wanted to know what your position was. You say as far as you were concerned it was not your business?—No.

42345. It was somebody else's business, if it was anybody's business, to see that the Fishers did not go on carrying on their trade?—That is right. The Sub-divisional Inspector had the control of sending out men to detect bookmakers. I was detailed off for other inquiries.

42346. Have you ever done any betting yourself?—No, not recently. I have years ago, but I cannot afford it now.

42347. When you speak of the number of bookmakers in the district, what district do you refer to?—I am referring to the district of St. Luke's; that is the district where I am.

42348. That is part of the division?—That is part of the sub-division.

42349. You have heard that bookmakers in the district, men whom you did not know, have been caught betting?—There may be some I do not know of. New ones spring up now and again. When these men have been out catching bookmakers I have heard of them catching one in some street and I did not know there was one there.

42350. Have you had conversations with other officers of police as to the methods to be adopted to stop this street betting?—No, not recently; I used to take an interest in it when I was employed on it.

42351. There was one instance you told us when you went with other men to arrest them?—Yes, there was one they got to know of.

42352. Was that after some conversation?—That was in consequence of directions from my Inspector. The Superintendent had received complaints of bookmakers in certain districts, and the Superintendent would give orders to the Inspector to send out some of his men to see if they could catch some of them, and I got instructions to take men with me, and I went out with a van.

42353. That was in November last year?—Yes.

42354. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) The Commission was sitting then?—Yes.

42355. (Mr. Dickinson.) I suppose the Inspector would probably consult you about any bookmakers?—He would give me instructions to go and do it, and I should have to apply myself the best way I could, and to adopt whatever means I could. A Detective-Inspector, as a rule, interests himself more in the detection of crime; we consult one another more on that point.

42356. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Is your special work confined to this district?—Yes, to take up inquiries in that district.

42357. Are there any others under you?—Yes, there are five.

42358. Ordinary men of the C.I.D.?—Two third-class sergeants, and three C.I.D. Detectives.

42359. They would be the Detectives in that district?—That is so, to take up all matters arising in the district working under the directions of the Detective-Inspector.

42360. Are they employed in this work at all, I mean the work of detecting street betting?—No, unless, as I say ——

42361. Unless told off specially?—Yes, such as on the occasion I have just mentioned.

42362. Otherwise their work, like yours, I suppose, is confined to the detection of crime?—That is so. The police constables assist the sergeants in keeping observation, or following persons, or whatever is required.

42363. The only detectives who would be, I suppose, in the district looking after street betting would be men under you, would they?—If we were specially told off.

42364. Suppose, in fact (I do not say whether it is right or wrong), payments were made to detectives to prevent arrest for street betting, would that be to any other detectives than those that were under you?—There are only the detectives under me who are there; they have the same power to arrest a street bookmaker as I have, or any other policeman.

42365. It is possible that the men who go about in plain clothes might be referred to as detectives?—They might. The public might refer to them as detectives.

42366. There are a number of entries in this book of payment to "Tecs."?—Yes.

42367. There is not much doubt as to what that means?—No.

42368. If it is a correct entry it means payments were made to detectives?—That is no doubt what it means.

42369. If it means payments to detectives, there is not much doubt why the entry was made if it was made in fact?—No.

42370. Have you ever been told to keep an eye upon the officers who were told off on this work to see whether they received bribes?—No, I have never been told to do that.

42371. Have you ever heard that complaints were made that the police were bribed?—Yes, I have heard it; in fact, officers have been dismissed the service for it, I believe.

42372. But it has not come within your working?—I know of no individual case.

42373. You have never been consulted about it?—No.

42374. If there were complaints made it is possible you might have been instructed to keep an eye upon the officers while the police were at work on this duty?—I never have.

42375. What was Lang, the policeman you referred to just now, dismissed for, do you remember?—I believe it was for drunkenness. He used to be Warrant Officer, or Assistant Warrant Officer at Worship Street Police Court. I believe it was drunkenness, but that I could not be certain of.

42376. Was this about five or six years ago?—About that.

42377. You were telling us about this meeting on the bridge. Did Leach give you any indication of why it was you were to go to the bridge?—Simply that he had received a message that Fisher wished to see either him or us.

42378. Then why were you to go too?—I went with him just to see what it was. Only two days before, as I say, we had been together, and we went together; we did not know whether he had any information he wished to give us; we get information from all sources.

42379. Leach and Wright were there?—Yes.

42380. They were both sergeants, were they not?—Yes.

42381. Was not that enough? Did it require three sergeants of the Detective Force to go and meet one man on a bridge at noon?—It was not required, but three of us went.

42382. Why did you go?—Because we did not know what information he was going to give us, or what he was going to tell us.

42383. Three do not go if there is information to be given to you, do you?—Sometimes we do.

42384. If one man wants to see an officer to give him information, and if he wanted to see Leach, and Wright and Leach go, is not that enough?—We often go single-handed.

42385. Would anybody give you instructions to go? Who would determine who should go?—We should use our own discretion.

42386. You could go if you liked?—Yes.

42387. Did you know at this time that Platt had made a charge against you?—Against me individually?

42388. Yes?—No, I did not.

42389. You had no notion of it?—No, I had not.

42390. You had no idea that you were being implicated in any way in this matter?—No, not in the least.

42391. You had no idea that Fisher wanted to see you about this matter of Platt?—When?

42392. When Leach told you that Fisher had said that he wanted to see Wright or Leach at the City Road bridge at noon, and you were to go?—No.

42393. Had you no notion that that had any reference to this Commission?—I had no idea what he wanted to see us for at all, whether it was about the Commission or what it was about. As soon as ever he saw us he said, "I want to see you about the Commission."

42394. I want to get at what you thought at that time. You knew Fisher was a bookmaker?—Yes.

42395. Do you tell us it never entered your mind

Sergeant J. Laing.

12 April 1907.

that it might be in reference to the Commission that Fisher wanted to see you?—It did not.

42396. It never occurred to you?—It did not.

42397. Or to Leach?—So far as I know it did not.

42398. Or to Wright?—So far as I know it did not.

42399. Neither of you mentioned it?—No.

42400. You knew Fisher's occupation you have told me?—Yes.

42401. You knew what Platt had said?—Yes, I had seen what I had read in the papers.

42402. And that Platt had handed up names?—Yes, had handed up names; and that is what Fisher said he particularly wanted to see Wright and Leach about.

42403. When did he say that?—He said that when we saw him on the bridge.

42404. Do you mean to say that to you, as a detective of many years standing, it never occurred to you that Fisher, the bookmaker, wanted to see you about this evidence which had been given?—No, it never occurred to me. I had no idea what he wanted to see us about. As I say, we have all sorts of people who leave messages that they want to meet us away from the station. We had no idea what he wanted to see us for till we saw him.

42405. You knew, did you not, that Platt said he had paid moneys to officers of the C.I.D.?—Yes, that appeared in the papers.

42406. And of the G Division?—Yes.

42407. You were an officer of the C.I.D.?—Yes.

42408. And of the G Division?—Yes.

42409. Leach was an officer of the C.I.D.?—Yes.

42410. And of the G Division?—Yes.

42411. And so was Wright?—Yes.

42412. Do you mean to tell us it never occurred to you that Fisher's communication had any reference to what had been said at the Commission?—It did not. I had no idea what he wanted to see us about. It did not occur to me what he wanted to see us about.

42413. You knew three names had been written down?—I did not know what names they were.

42414. You knew some names had been given?—Some names had been handed up.

42415. Could you give us any reason why Leach should have asked you to accompany him?—I do not know that he asked me to accompany him. I went with him.

42416. I do not quite follow. What was first said to you as to your going with Leach?—I was sitting in the office doing my work when Leach came in, and he said he had just seen a chap outside the station who told him that Fisher wanted to see him and Wright on the bridge at 12 o'clock.

42417. He had seen a chap outside the station. Do you know who that was?—No, I did not see him.

42418. He said Fisher had sent him a message that he wanted to see him?—Yes.

42419. Was Wright there?—Yes, very likely he was.

42420. Who else was there?—Practically all the staff was there.

42421. How many would that be?—Six.

42422. You and the other two sergeants, Leach and Wright?—Yes, and probably the three P.C.'s.

42423. All the police-sergeants went?—Yes. After that I went to King's Cross, and then I had occasion to go to the Sessions House, where I met Sergeants Leach and Wright just about 12 o'clock, and I was going towards City Road bridge, and I went that way with them.

42424. (Mr. Whitmore.) I thought you went from the station?—No, we did not.

42425. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When this message was brought in to Leach and he told you this, what happened next?—We went about our business, and I had occasion to go to King's Cross.

42426. But before you went out of the station was anything said as to who was going?—No. Very likely Wright and Leach said they would go, no doubt; but at that time I had no intention of going. I had occasion to go to King's Cross, to the police court there, and from there I went to the Sessions House at Clerkenwell Green, and there I met Sergeants Wright and Leach.

42427. Then do I understand that it was a mere coincidence that you met them?—That I met them at the Sessions House, or very likely I should not have been at the bridge with them, only I was going that way then, and I went that way with them.

42428. Are we to understand that nobody asked you to go?—No.

42429. You volunteered to go?—Yes, going that way.

42430. Where were you going?—I could not say. Perhaps I might have been going ——

42431. Do not tell me where "perhaps" you were going?—I should be going towards the station.

42432. Towards what station?—The City Road Station from the Sessions House.

42433. What were you going to do there?—To see if there were any inquiries to take if I was going to the station. I cannot remember whether I was.

42434. I want you, if you can, to tell me definitely if you were going there, what was taking you there at that time. You had been to the Sessions House?—Yes.

42435. You had been to the police court?—Yes.

42436. In the ordinary course, where would you go from the Sessions House?—It depends on what inquiries I had. I cannot remember what inquiries I had. Very likely I was going back to the police station then to see if any inquiries had come in.

42437. Would you go across the City Road bridge for that?—Yes, that would be on my way.

42438. Then you reported to the Inspector when you returned, did you?—When I saw him in the evening. I had to go to King's Cross in the evening, and I saw him then and told him.

42439. I do not quite see why you should have reported. It was not your business at all?—I was the superior officer.

42440. You mean when the other two were with you you were the superior, and therefore you had to report?—Yes.

42441. Did you know that inquiries were being made at the time about the matter to which Platt had directed attention by his evidence?—What inquiries?

42442. You knew Platt's evidence, if true, implicated several members of the C.I.D. and the police?—Yes.

42443. Did you know that inquiries were being made with reference to Platt, as to whether anything was known as to him?—I was asked if I knew him that morning.

42444. Only that morning?—Yes, my Inspector asked me if I knew him, and I told him I did not.

42445. How long was that before the message came round from Fisher?—It was after the message came round from Fisher. That was after I left the station and went to King's Cross and saw the Inspector.

42446. About what time would it be when this conversation took place about Platt?—With whom?

42447. With your Inspector, when he asked you the question?—That would be about perhaps half-past ten o'clock to eleven.

42448. (Chairman.) In the morning?—Yes.

42449. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) Did he ask you if you knew whether Fisher had acted as his agent?—No, he asked me if I knew who Platt was, and who it was he was acting in conjunction with, or where he had been making a book, or who was making a book for him.

42450. Do you know how it was that he sent for Leach or Wright?—Only what he said.

42451. What you have told us about the reason why he thought so from the name?—Yes.

42452. How long did you say you had been in the Force?—Sixteen years and eleven months.

42453. You have a very fine record, according to the sheet?—Yes; and I have always done my best to maintain it.

42454. As far as I can find, there is nothing at all against you?—No, absolutely nothing.

42455. Your pay was advanced until you got the maximum?—Yes.

42456. And as far as we have had the sheets before us you have by a very long way the largest number of commendations and awards?—About sixty, I think.

42457. Yes; there are certainly many pages of them —both from Judges and the Commissioners?—Yes and Magistrates.

42458. It is a record of which, I think, you are entitled to be proud?—Thank you.

Sergeant J. Laing.
12 April 1907.

FORTY-FIFTH DAY.

Wednesday, 17th April 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir DAVID BRYNMOR JONES, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).
WILLOUGHBY HYETT DICKINSON, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).
CHARLES ALGERNON WHITMORE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).
J. W. ST. LAWRANCE LESLIE, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law), (Secretary).
J. F. WALEY, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Assistant Secretary).

(Platt's case continued.)

Detective-Sergeant LEACH, sworn.

42459. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) How long have you been in the police force?—Five years and eleven months.

42460. I have your defaulter sheet before me, and there is nothing at all against you, but you have a large number of rewards and recommendations. Where are you stationed?—At Shepherdess Walk.

42461. Is that the same station as Sergeant Laing?—Yes.

42462. Have you been in the G Division for about three years?—Yes.

42463. And a sergeant for over a year?—Just on two years.

42464. Were you engaged at all in connection with street bookmakers specially?—No, only on one occasion.

42465. When was that?—That was with Sergeant Laing and other officers in November.

42466. Which year?—Last year, 1906.

42467. Have you arrested any bookmakers at all?—One.

42468. Only one?—That is all.

42469. How did you come to arrest him?—I was just walking round, and in the course of my inquiries I came upon him. He was surrounded by two or three other men, and they were handing slips to him, so I arrested him, and took him to the station.

42470. When was that?—That would be about fifteen months ago, I think.

42471. That would be the early part of 1906?—Yes, about that time.

42472. Those are the only two occasions that you have been brought into contact with street bookmakers at all?—To the best of my recollection.

42473. Do you know the brothers Fisher?—I know there are two Fishers.

42474. Have you seen them?—I have seen them.

42475. Did you know what they were?—Yes.

42476. What were they?—Bookmakers.

42477. Street bookmakers?—Yes.

42478. Have you seen them plying their calling?—No, or else I should have arrested them.

42479. Have you ever spoken to either of them?—No—only on one occasion.

42480. When was that?—That was on the 20th October.

42481. Which year?—Last year. I spoke to Robert Fisher.

42482. That was when you were with Sergeant Laing?—Yes.

42483. When he made the appointment to see you or Sergeant Wright?—That is so.

42484. And you kept that appointment?—Yes.

42485. Can you tell us how he would know that you were a sergeant in that division?—I understood, from what he said in the conversation we had with him, that on one occasion, when we were walking down Sutton Street, one of the lookouts ran up and said, "Look out, here is Wright and Leach coming." Then there are many ways in which they might get to know us.

Detective-Sergeant Leach.

42486. That is quite enough for our present purpose. Have you ever received money from either of the Fishers?—Never.

42487. Or from any street bookmaker at all?—Never.

42488. Platt has said that he actually saw you receive 10s. from Robert Fisher?—It is a deliberate falsehood.

42489. Are you the only Leach in the G Division?—Yes.

42490. Are there other Leach's in the police force?—Oh, yes.

42491. Your father is one of them?—Yes.

42492. What is he?—Superintendent at New Scotland Yard.

42493. And there are other Leach's, you say, in the force?—Yes, I think there are about two others. One is a constable and the other is a detective-sergeant.

42494. Where are they stationed?—One is in C Division, but with regard to the constable I am not sure. I think he is in the K Division.

42495. But none others in the G Division of the name of Leach?—No.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask this witness any question, Mr. Platt?

42496. (Mr. Platt.) Yes, Sir. You have never taken money from Robert Fisher in Clerkenwell Road?—Never in my life.

42497. Not outside the jeweller's shop?—What jeweller's shop?

42498. Long, I believe, is the name?—There are so many jewellers' shops in Clerkenwell.

42499. Yes, there are, but this is a particularly noted shop?—I have never taken any money off any bookmaker in my life.

42500. You told us that in company with Wright and Laing you went to the City Road bridge, and met Robert Fisher?—Yes.

42501. Is it not a fact, after you saw my evidence in the papers, that same evening you went to him on his pitch?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) May I interpose, Sir? Really, it is not necessary or proper that a witness before this Commission should be shouted at in that manner.

Detective-Sergeant Leach.

17 April 1907.

(Chairman.) Great allowance must be made for a party who is not represented by counsel. Counsel can be calm, but the party whose integrity is at stake must be allowed considerable latitude. Still, Mr. Platt, there is no reason for your shouting at the witness.

42502. (Mr. Platt.) I will try and be quiet, Sir. Is it not a fact that you went the same evening as my evidence appeared in the evening papers, and asked Robert Fisher if you were implicated or not?—I did not.

42503. You did not go on that pitch?—No.

42504. (Chairman.) You said, I think, that you came into the force about six years ago?—On the 20th May, 1901.

42505. What age were you then?—20.

42506. Mr. Muir has pointed out you have a clean sheet?—Yes.

42507. But, still, your advancement has been very rapid, has it not?—It has.

42508. And I take it, from that, that your superior officers have thought you an officer of merit above the ordinary?—I take it so, Sir.

42509. Where were you on the morning of the 20th October, when you first heard that one of the Fishers wanted to see you or Sergeant Laing?—I was going to the office, and just outside the office a man accosted me and he told me that a man named Fisher wished to see me or Wright at 12 o'clock on the City Road bridge. I said, "Fisher—who do you mean?" and he said, "Fisher, the bookmaker." He then left me and I went into the office. The other officers were there at the time, and mentioned to Wright what had taken place, and subsequently we kept the appointment.

42510. You had not been at the office that morning?—No, this was outside the office.

42511. About what time was it?—This was about 9 o'clock.

42512. Had you actually arrived at the station?—No.

42513. You were walking in the street?—Yes.

42514. Did you know the person who "accosted" you, to use your own word?—I did not know him.

42515. What kind of person was he?—As far as I recollect he was attired as one of the labouring classes—rough.

42516. An adult, and not a child?—Oh, no, an adult.

42517. Had you ever seen the person before?—Never in my life.

42518. I suppose it is not unusual for people to come and address you in that way in the street?—Oh, no, it is quite a usual thing.

42519. Upon police matters?—Yes, they wish to give us information.

42520. You must be pretty well known?—Very well known.

42521. Were you in plain clothes at the time?—I am always in plain clothes.

42522. You belong then to the C.I.D.?—Yes.

42523. How comes it that you are so well known? I daresay you may think it is a very foolish question, but it does strike me as odd that you and Sergeant Laing and others in the C.I. Department should apparently be well known to people who look like street loafers?—I will try and explain. In the course of our duties we may have to deal during the course of the year with perhaps quite 150 to 200 thieves in the matter of arrests—not directly arresting them ourselves, but perhaps our average number of arrests would be fifty, but there are our inquiries in connection with thieves who we should deal with in the ordinary course of business. When we take a thief to the police court we are in the police court, which is open for the public, and there may be at least twenty or thirty of the prisoner's confederates, and they would all have an opportunity of seeing us. Then, again, in the course of our inquiries, as you know, some of these thieves are in gangs of considerable number, and as we walk along the street it is their obligation one to another to point us out. As I walk along the street one would say: "There goes Leech," and that is future knowledge for them.

42524. Quite so. I see that you give an explanation for a good many people getting to know your form and your features, but do you arrest thieves or other persons who commit, or who are supposed to commit, offences against the law in plain clothes very often?—Always in plain clothes. I am permanently in plain clothes.

42525. Do you call in the aid of a constable in uniform?—It greatly depends. As a rule, we generally work two or three together. It depends on what sort of a job we are going on. If I had to arrest a man I might take another officer with me, but always members of the C.I.D. go together. If we were not strong enough, then we should call in the aid of uniform men.

42526. But supposing you thought that I had been guilty of some breach of the law, and you came up dressed as you are, do not you think it would be reasonable for me to say: "I shall not go with you at all"?—Of course, we judge our man.

42527. Have you nothing on your person that you could produce to show to me that you are a constable duly authorised within the meaning of the statute?—Oh, yes; we have our warrant card.

42528. Do you always carry it with you?—Unfortunately, you have caught me at a disadvantage, because I have not got it with me this morning, but I always do carry it.

42529. You always do carry it when you are on duty that might lead you to arrest a person?—Yes; that is our authority.

42530. Am I to understand that you had never seen the person who came up to speak to you at all before?—Never.

42531. Of course if a large number of people get to know you I suppose you also get to know a large number of people?—Unfortunately, I do not know everybody who knows me.

42532. I think that is quite probable.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) This is the form of card, Sir (handing card to the Chairman).

42533. (Chairman.) Is that one of the cards that you carry?—Yes; I have a similar card to that.

42534. I was rather asking you about that card for this reason, which has some direct bearing upon our Inquiry. I can understand that for the detection and arrest of misdemeanants, like thieves, and so forth, it is very expedient that there should be plain clothes officers exercising the powers of constables, but I understand that you, about fifteen months ago, were walking about, and no doubt quite properly walking about, in the discharge of your duties, and you found a man betting?—I did.

42535. And you arrested him?—I did.

42536. Supposing you saw a man drunk and disorderly, would you arrest him?—I do not think so, unless he assaulted me.

42537. But why not? You are a constable, as I understand, and when you see a man betting you were not out for that particular purpose to keep observation on street bookmakers; but though you were in plain clothes, you arrested him?—Quite so; but I am not instructed to arrest people like that.

42538. Why did you do it?—I arrested a street bookmaker, but my instructions are not to arrest street bookmakers. My instructions are to deal with crime generally, but the more serious crime. With regard to disorder in the streets and disorderly people, we are not supposed to arrest those people, unless, of course, special circumstances arise, such as a man insulting you. A man might assault me, or a man might follow me up, and become abusive, knowing who I am, as does occur.

42539. I suppose the reason for the distinction is this, that if plain-clothes men were, as a rule, instructed to arrest persons who were, or supposed by them to be, drunk and disorderly, that might of itself lead to a breach of the peace, because you would not have a uniform, and there might be a tendency to resist you in the execution of your duty?—That may be so.

42540. Is that the reason of the distinction?—I do not know. I simply have my orders, and I work up to them.

42541. The only evidence, then, of your position as a constable that you can carry with you is the card that has been produced by Mr. Muir, and which I handed to you?—Yes, unless we arrest a man on a warrant; then we have the warrant with us.

42542. It seems to me that if I saw a man dressed as you are with another man by your side, and you were arresting him, that it would rather attract my attention as being a little unusual, and my sympathy might go to the other man, because he might deny that you were a constable. I am on the question of method now?—I quite follow you, Sir.

42543. Then the card is not under the sign manual of anybody. It seems to me to be a lithograph or a reproduced handwriting?—In some cases where we effect arrests you have not got time to show your warrant card. It is a case of touch and go.

42544. I know; but when a man is in uniform everybody looking on, every impartial observer, sees there is a constable, a public officer, arresting a man, and the inclination then of every law-abiding citizen is to be on the side of the constable; but if you see a man in plain clothes arresting another I do not know that then one would take the same view. It would look like an ordinary quarrel between two people?—A constable in uniform cannot watch pickpockets or burglars, or people like that, because immediately a burglar or anyone saw him they would run away.

42545. The distinction appears to be this, that the plain-clothes men deal with more serious crimes?—Yes; that is what we deal with.

42546. Then, according to the view you have formed of your orders, you do not think that when you are in plain clothes you are bound to arrest people who are drunk and disorderly?—I do not.

42547. I only take as an example of a street offence?—Quite so.

42548. I was asking you about the person who accosted you on the way to the station on this 20th October. You went on, I understand, to the station?—Yes; I was practically outside the station, or within a few yards of it.

42549. Did the person who accosted you say he had been to the station?—No.

42550. But it was quite near the station?—Yes.

42551. To whom did you mention the matter when you got to the station?—To Sergeant Wright.

42552. Was Sergeant Laing there then?—Yes.

42553. When you first came in?—Yes, but I spoke to the men across the table, so that all the other officers would hear, and of course we discuss matters openly with one another.

42554. What did you say?—I told Wright that a man had accosted me outside the station, and that he said that Fisher, the bookmaker, wished to see us on the City Road Bridge at 12 o'clock.

42555. Did the name "Fisher" suggest anything to you except that he was a bookmaker?—No, because I did not know who it was. I asked him who it was.

42556. And he said "'A bookmaker"?—Yes; he said "A bookmaker."

42557. And that suggested nothing to your mind?—Nothing whatever.

42558. When you got to the station you did not know in the least what was the purpose of Fisher asking you to keep this appointment?—I had not the slightest idea.

42559. Had you heard nothing about Platt's evidence before this Commission?—Oh, yes; I read it in the evening papers.

42560. Do you mean that when you heard that Fisher, the bookmaker, wished to see you and others that no connection suggested itself to your mind between that and the evidence of Platt?—Nothing whatever.

42561. You had no idea at all what the bookmaker wanted to see you about?—No.

42562. What did Laing or Wright, or either of them, say when you mentioned the matter at the table?—I cannot recollect exactly what took place. We discuss so many matters of a morning—people wanted, and one thing and another, and our own different inquiries.

42563. Was not the evidence of Platt about the G Division mentioned at all on that morning?—I think it was just mentioned, but nobody took much notice of it.

42564. Did not Wright or Laing think that Fisher wanting to see you had something to do with it?—No. I did not. I am speaking for myself.

42565. They did not tell you that they thought so?—No.

42566. I am not quite certain whether you said that you were asked to go to meet Fisher as well as the others?—Yes, he asked for Leach and Wright.

42567. He did not ask Laing to go?—No.

42568. Laing's name was not mentioned by the casual person?—No.

42569. Then I understand you determined to go?—Yes.

42570. Did you go by arrangement with the other two sergeants?—Wright and I agreed to go together.

42571. Did Laing?—No, we met Laing quite casually afterwards at the North London Sessions House, and as he was walking that way home to the station he accompanied us. We never know what these matters may lead to.

42572. Did Laing volunteer to come with you, or did you ask him to come?—No, he simply accompanied us. He was going that way back to the station.

42573. When you got to the bridge you all three stopped and talked to Fisher?—Yes.

42574. What did Fisher say?—I could not recall word for word, but it was to the effect about these allegations made by a man named Platt about bribing the police in the neighbourhood of Clerkenwell, and he thought it might possibly refer to either Wright or me, because on one occasion we were walking down Little Sutton Street, where he carries on business, and one of the scouts ran down saying, "Look out, here is Wright and Leach," and that is how Platt might have got hold of the names, and he heard the names had been handed up, and our names might have been included amongst them. He also went on further something about that Platt had been making out that he (Platt) had been paying moneys to the police, and showing names in the book, but of course robbing the man who had been financing him. I cannot exactly recall the words.

42575. You knew, of course, that Platt had been making that allegation?—Only what I read in the papers.

42576. You knew what he was alleging?—I said so previously to you—that I had read the papers, and I knew that allegations had been made.

42577. So when Fisher said that, that was nothing new to you?—Of course not, if I had read it in the papers.

42578. Did you not think it was rather a surprising thing that a bookmaker should take so much interest in you and Wright as to come forward in that way to give information about Platt, who was also a bookmaker?—No, it did not strike me at all that way.

42579. But I suppose you generally find people who come and pick you out in that kind of way have some object in doing it?—Everyone has an object when they pick a person out.

42580. That is a broad, but I have very little doubt, a perfectly true generalisation. Then what was Fisher's object, may I ask?—As far as I can see one object was that he did not wish to see anybody suffer—an innocent person. That is what I think it was.

42581. Fisher's object was purely benevolence?—I should say so.

42582. He was so concerned about the reputation of two sergeants of the Criminal Investigation Department that he felt bound to take action at once against his former employer, Platt?—He told us that before he had seen us he had been to the office of the solicitors to the Royal Commission and made a statement, I did not mention that.

42583. He did say that?—Yes.

42584. To the solicitors to the Royal Commission?—The police solicitors I mean.

42585. This was 12 o'clock on the 20th. Did he tell you that he had then been to Messrs. Wontners, the police solicitors?—Yes.

42586. How long did the meeting at the bridge last?—A matter of about a quarter of an hour, I should think. No longer.

Detective-Sergeant Leach.

17 April 1907.

42587. Did you take down any notes in your note-book of what took place?—No.

42588. Did you take Fisher's address?—No, Sergeant Laing did that. He was the senior officer present. He subsequently saw Local Inspector Kidd on the matter.

42589. Did you make any report to your superior officer with reference to this interview?—No.

42590. Did you not attach much importance to it then?—No—just in the ordinary course of business.

42591. Was it the ordinary course of business? I do not quite follow that. You knew that Platt had been making allegations against officers of the G Division?—He said "The police in Clerkenwell," as far as I remember.

42592. That is the same thing—that he had made allegations against the police in Clerkenwell?—Yes.

42593. And then you find that the local bookmaker Fisher, whom you knew by name, voluntarily comes forward—at least he sends someone to you asking for an interview. Then he tells you "I have sent for you because I recollect that on one occasion somebody went up to Platt and said 'There is Wright and Leach coming'"?—Yes.

42594. Was all that in the ordinary course of business. I should have thought it was quite unusual that a charge of that kind should be made against the police?—What I meant to say was that there was a senior officer present, and in that case I had nothing whatever further to do with it. Sergeant Laing would report the matter and deal with it further. I was his subordinate really.

42595. What was Wright's position?—He is a third-class sergeant, the same as myself.

42596. It is not his duty to make any report?—No.

42597. You have already told Mr. Muir that it is not true that you have received 10s.?—It is not true.

42598. You know nothing, of course, of the entry in this book, but I should like to show it to you. (Handing book to witness.) You see an entry there on the upper page?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Is that Exhibit A.P. 6?

(Chairman.) It is A.P. 7, I think.

(The Witness.) I see a name.

42599. Do you know of anybody else named Leach who might have been a punter of the Fisher's?—I cannot say that I do.

42600. You know of no Leach in Clerkenwell?—There are one or two Leach's, I believe, but I cannot call them to mind.

42601. I daresay there are, but do you know them. Among the class you are brought into contact with is there any person—I will not say thieves, but people who consort with thieves and hangers on in public-houses—is there any man called Leach that you know of?—Yes, there is a Leach that I know. I arrested his wife once for warehouse breaking. His name is spelt the same as my own.

42602. Does he live in Clerkenwell?—Yes.

42603. What part of Clerkenwell?—He was living in Ironmonger's Row, I believe.

42604. Is he often about the street?—I have not seen him lately.

42605. Was he in the summer of last year?—Oh yes, I think he was; about the time I arrested his wife on suspicion of warehouse breaking.

42606. Then you know nothing at all about this entry?—Nothing whatever.

(Chairman.) The book that I have shown to the witness is Exhibit A.P. 7.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I have before me the cross-examination with regard to Exhibit A.P. 6, in which the question of spelling arose. It is on page 1,279.

42607. (Chairman.) How do you spell your name?—L-e-a-c-h.

42608. Then there is another entry, in which the name is spelt L-e-e-c-h, 10s., and then follows the words, "Police, 4s." Do you know anything about that. (Handing book to the witness.) It is not likely that you would?—Nothing whatever.

42609. Do you know anybody who spells his name L-e-e-c-h in Clerkenwell?—I cannot say that I do.

42610. (Mr. Dickinson.) I want you to tell me a little more in detail what happened when you went to the police station. First of all, what was the time you got there—talking of the 20th October?—It would be a few minutes after 9 o'clock, as near as possible—about 9.

42611. You had seen this man outside?—Yes, outside.

42612. Was he waiting outside?—I take it he must have been.

42613. Had he spoken to anybody in the police station before he spoke to you?—Not that I know of.

42614. What was the first thing that you did when you went into the police station?—I reported myself to the Inspector on duty. I was marked on duty in the duty book, to show that I had arrived.

42615. What next?—Then I go into the C.I.D. office, and I sit down with my colleagues there.

42616. Who were there on that occasion?—I am sure I cannot tell you who were there, but probably all of them. There are six of us altogether. There is Sergeant Wright, Sergeant Laing, and three other detective police-constables.

42617. Sergeant Laing being the superior officer?—He is the superior officer there.

42618. I want you to cast your mind back to this. Who did you speak to?—I spoke across the table to Sergeant Wright; he sits right opposite me, the same as I may be facing you now.

42619. What did you tell him?—I told him that a man had accosted me outside, and said Fisher the bookmaker wished to see us at 12 o'clock on the City Road bridge.

42620. What did he say?—I cannot remember what he said.

42621. Try and remember it?—I suppose he passed some remark like this, "Oh, does he," and we might have passed one or two words, and we kept the appointment.

42622. Do not say "You might have." You must turn your mind back to this. Was that all that passed?—As far as I know, that was all that passed.

42623. A conversation between yourself and Laing?—Wright.

42624. Where was Wright sitting?—Opposite me.

42625. Where was Laing sitting?—To the right of me. He sits at the head of the table. It is an oblong table.

42626. Were they doing work?—Oh, yes.

42627. Writing?—Yes, some writing and some conversing.

42628. You said to Laing and Wright that a man wanted to see—what?—I said that to Wright, just as we might be talking to one another now. Laing was sitting to the right of you, and the left of me, and to the right and left of us are the other officers.

42629. Do you say that was all that passed—he said, "Very well, we will go"?—As far as I know that is all that passed.

42630. He did not ask you any questions as to what the man wanted?—Not that I remember.

42631. What was your business on that day? What were your duties?—I was engaged that morning at the office reporting upon correspondence and writing the diary, and seeing the Inspector on duty about various things till half-past 10, and then I went to the North London Sessions, where I saw another officer. I had an inquiry on with regard to a bank-note robbery. I was engaged then till 11.45. Then I went to the City Road bridge with Wright and Laing, and I was engaged there, I suppose, another quarter of an hour, and then I had an inquiry on in a case of warehouse breaking.

42632. That will do. Then I suppose you had to adjust your engagement that day to this engagement on the City Road bridge. It was a new proposal that you should meet somebody on the City Road bridge at 12 o'clock?—Of course, I had to adjust my business to meet him there.

42633. Did you mention anything to Wright about engagements?—No, not that I am aware of.

42634. You did not meet him till you got to the Clerkenwell Sessions House?—But he had to go to the Clerkenwell Sessions House.

42635. Then did you say to him that you would meet at the Clerkenwell Sessions House?—No, because we went there together.

42636. You went to the Clerkenwell Sessions House together?—Yes.

42637. Having arranged to leave the Clerkenwell Sessions House and go to the City Road bridge at 12 o'clock?—We left together. Of course, we arranged to go there at 12 o'clock—that is so.

42638. How was the arrangement made with Sergeant Laing?—No arrangement was made with him whatever.

42639. About the time to meet?—He simply met us casually. It was quite an accidental meeting on the part of Sergeant Laing.

42640. He met you casually at the Sessions House?—Yes, outside the Sessions House.

42641. When he met you casually outside the Sessions House what did you say to him, or he say to you about this?—I do not think we passed any particular remark. It was just in the ordinary course of business—"Hulloa, where are you going to?" or "What have you got on? I am going your way. All right, I am walking through."

42642. Then up to that moment you had not fixed to meet Laing at the bridge at all?—No, it was quite an accidental meeting with regard to Laing.

42643. The casual meeting at the Sessions House?—Yes.

42644. Tell us exactly where that casual meeting took place?—Outside the Sessions House.

42645. What had you been doing at the Sessions House?—I had not been in the Sessions House at all. I met another officer from the D Division, with whom I had an inquiry respecting a bank-note robbery, and I wished to see him, as we had practically got to know who the thief was, with regard to making arrangements to arrest the thief. He had business at the Clerkenwell Sessions House, and he arranged to meet me outside there.

42646. When was that arrangement made?—I cannot recall that. I suppose it would be made a night or two before. I should telephone him up, and ask him where we could meet, and he would say, "I have got business at the Sessions House, and I will meet you outside there."

42647. You had that engagement to go to the Sessions House before 12 o'clock that day, then, and I understand you had arranged to meet Wright?—Wright went with me. While I was talking to the officer outside he was inside the Sessions House.

42648. There was no arrangement to meet Laing in the Sessions House?—None whatever.

42649. Was it after you had done your business at the Sessions House that you met Laing outside?—I was engaged with the officer at the time outside the Sessions House when Laing came up, and Wright came down the steps at the time.

42650. You were engaged with your business outside the Sessions House?—Yes, I had to meet him to confer with him.

42651. You had a meeting with this officer in the street, and Sergeant Laing came up?—Yes.

42652. When Sergeant Laing came up to you, tell us exactly what took place then?—We all walked away together.

42653. What is the first thing that was said?—I cannot recollect.

42654. Why did Laing go with you?—Because he was going back that way towards the station. That was the quickest way back to the station, and, naturally, he would walk along with us.

42655. He did not walk along with you in order to go to the City Road bridge?—No.

42656. You had said something to him about it?—Yes, I had in the morning. He heard the conversation across the table, as I have explained to you.

42657. Then his meeting you at the Sessions House was casual, and his going with you to the bridge was, so far as you are aware, the result of no arrangement?—Quite so—no previous arrangement whatever.

42658. Then let us go back to what you had said to him at the police station. What was the first thing that Laing said when you had told Wright of this, and Wright had arranged with you to go to the City Road bridge. What was the first thing that Laing had said?—I am sure I do not remember.

42659. How did that come into the conversation?—I do not know how that did come into the conversation.

42660. You told me just now you had spoken to him about it?—No, I do not.

42661. Yes, you did?—I said when we were at the office together we were all conversing one with another, and we conversed on so many matters. It is very hard to remember every individual matter we converse about, and who joins in and who does not. There are six persons there, and a general conversation takes place. I cannot remember every word that is spoken.

42662. I quite understand that; but is it your recollection that it was merely a general conversation that led Laing to come to you at the Clerkenwell Sessions House and go to the bridge?—As far as I know, nothing led Laing to go to the Sessions House. He was passing there, and he saw us, as I have explained to you before. There was no arrangement whatever.

42663. I must press you a bit about this general conversation, as you say. What kind of general conversation in the police station led Laing to talk to you about this engagement?—I do not know that any general conversation led Laing to talk to us at all. As I have tried to explain to you, there are six officers, and perhaps each of us has a different inquiry on. We assist one another as far as possible, and perhaps one officer might want a certain man, and he would say: "Have you seen so-and-so about lately?" or if he is not sure of his ground in a case, he would ask his superior officer for advice, and so on. There might be perhaps twenty matters or thirty matters discussed, all about our work. That is done, of course, every morning. We always confer together.

42664. On this occasion you had come into the office and said that somebody wanted to see Wright and yourself, and you had not said anything to Laing about it directly?—No, I had not.

42665. Then does Laing intervene in the conversation?—He might have done, as far as I know. I cannot recollect.

42666. Laing told us: "About 9 o'clock in the morning, when I went to the office, I heard the message. I understood there was some person waiting at the station to see Sergeant Wright or Sergeant Leach. He delivered that message, and the message was that Fisher wanted to see either one of those two at the City Road bridge at 12 o'clock. They told me, and I made it my business to go with them." Then he says that he understood there was some person waiting to see Sergeant Wright or Sergeant Leach. Do you remember his saying that to you?—No, I do not. As far as I know, no one was waiting inside the station at all. I was accosted outside the station, as I have already told you.

42667. When you were accosted and brought in this news that there was someone outside do you mean to say, in view of what Sergeant Laing said, that that was the first intimation that had reached any of the officers in that station, that somebody wanted to see Sergeant Wright and Sergeant Leach?—As far as I know. If anybody had been waiting in the station the reserve man would have told me—the man on the door—and he would have been sent into the waiting-room. There is a special waiting-room for anybody who wishes to see a police officer and who calls at the station.

42668. Then when Sergeant Laing says when this message was delivered he made it his business to go with you, what did he say about that?—I cannot remember.

42669. You must remember something. If he made it his business to go with you there must have been some arrangement made of that kind?—I told you already there was no arrangement made with Sergeant Laing. I cannot say any more. I can simply tell you that. There was no arrangement whatever.

42670. You did not expect to see Sergeant Laing at the Clerkenwell Sessions House?—No, I did not.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I think that must be a mistake in Question 42218, "Waiting to see"—I think the word was "Wanting to see."

(Mr. Dickinson.) It does not make much difference, because if it was somebody wanting to see these two sergeants they had not then arrived.

Detective-Sergeant Leach.

17 April 1907.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Except that they were neither of them there. If I recollect the evidence, a message had been left merely giving the appointment for Fisher to meet either of those sergeants—not that somebody was waiting there, as it appears in the shorthand note.

42671. (Mr. Dickinson.) You say that you had no knowledge that Sergeant Laing was going to meet you on the bridge, or to be with you on the bridge?—No.

42672. (Chairman.) You did not know that Laing was going to meet you on the bridge?—No.

42673. (Mr. Dickinson.) You say that when you left the police office you expected Sergeant Wright to go with you?—He did go with me.

42674. You expected him to go, and he did go with you?—Yes.

42675. But you did not expect to see Sergeant Laing at all?—Not when I left the office, no. I met him, as I say, at the Clerkenwell Sessions House.

42676. Were you at all astonished at his meeting you for this?—For what?

42677. For this purpose of going to the City Road bridge?—I did not know that he met us for any purpose at all. It was quite a casual meeting.

42678. You say that as far as you were concerned, you expected to go with Wright to meet this man Fisher, and that you did not expect to see Laing there at all?—No, I did not. I simply went with Wright.

42679. I am pressing you about this, of course, because we have had Sergeant Laing's version of this affair, and I want exactly to understand what the truth is. Sergeant Laing was asked this: "You were telling us about this meeting on the bridge. Did Leach give you any indication of why it was you were to go to the bridge?" and his answer was "Simply that he had received a message that Fisher wished to see either him or us." Now did you say to Sergeant Laing that you had received a message that Fisher wished to see either you or them?—As I have explained before, Laing would hear our conversation. I would not directly address myself to Laing. We do not speak in whispers there; we speak openly, and of course Laing would hear about it at the office.

42680. Then when Laing says that you gave him a message that Fisher wished to see "either him or us" he must have been under the impression that somebody must have wanted to see him if he says "either him or us"—is not that ordinary English?—No; Laing's name was not mentioned in connection with it at all.

42681. No, I do not know that Laing's name was mentioned, but I want to know what the conversation between you and Laing and the other officers at that time was. He told us that he understood you gave a message that Fisher wished to see either him—that is you, Leach—"or us," and so must include himself?—I do not know about that. I have already explained it to you, and I cannot explain more accurately than what I have already told you.

42682. We want to understand what brought Sergeant Laing to this place. According to him there was some intimation that he was wanted?—Quite so. I cannot tell you any more. I can only tell you the truth.

42683. Now I want to ask you a little more about what took place when you came on to the bridge. You three, going from Clerkenwell Sessions House, approached the bridge. Where did you see Fisher?—On the bridge.

42684. Who recognised Fisher?—That I do not know.

42685. Did you recognise him?—Yes, I recognised him. I was the one who recognised him.

42686. Did you find him waiting there?—Oh, yes, he was waiting there.

42687. Which Fisher was it?—I believe it was Robert.

42688. When you say you believe it was Robert, do you mean to say you were not certain it was Robert?—I was not certain.

42689. But you recognised him?—Yes, I recognised him as a man Fisher.

42690. Do you mean to say you, a detective there, do not know the various Fishers apart?—I can tell you honestly there as a detective or as a man that I did not know which was which of the Fishers.

42691. But you recognised one as Fisher?—Yes.

42692. (Mr. Whitmore.) You did not know who was named Robert?—No, I did not.

42693. (Mr. Dickinson.) But you knew the brothers Fisher?—I knew there were two Fishers.

42694. And you knew this was one of them?—Yes.

42695. Then you recognised him. Did the other officers recognise him?—Oh, yes.

42696. You all recognised him?—Yes.

42697. You all knew him by sight?—Oh yes.

42698. Who spoke first?—As far as I know Fisher spoke first.

42699. Who did he speak to?—He would speak to all three of us generally.

42700. You say he spoke to all three of you?—If you mean did he address either of us directly, no, he did not address either one of us individually by name.

42701. He had asked to see you?—Or Wright.

42702. And he addressed all three?—Yes.

42703. Knowing that all three were detectives?—Yes, quite so.

42704. Now tell me exactly what he did say, because we have had rather a vague statement of what he said?—I cannot tell exactly what he did say. I have not a memory good enough to remember exactly what he did say. I can only tell you as I have told the Chairman to the best of my knowledge what he said. I have made no note of it whatever.

42705. If I understood you right he said he wanted to speak to you about statements that Platt had been making?—As I have explained he made a general statement.

42706. At that moment I suppose you must have understood what he referred to?—I do not quite understand you.

42707. You said before when the message was sent to you you could not imagine what he wished to see you for?—No, I did not know.

42708. I suppose the moment he said he wished to speak to you about statements that Platt had been making before the Royal Commission you then knew what he was referring to?—With regard to bribing the police at Clerkenwell. I had read the papers.

42709. You knew he had made statements?—Yes.

42710. What exactly did you know then at that time?—All I knew was what I read in the papers.

42711. What was that?—About a bookmaker making allegations before the Royal Commission to the effect that he had bribed the police in the neighbourhood of Clerkenwell.

42712. No more?—No more.

42713. Did you know anything about the entries in the books?—No, nothing.

42714. When did you first hear of that?—I am sure I could not tell you. I think it was up here.

42715. Did not Fisher, when he saw you, say that there was something about entries in books?—No, not that I know of. I do not remember.

42716. Then he said to you the names were mentioned?—I did not understand him to say that our names were mentioned.

42717. He must have, because he gave the explanation of it?—He said our names might be the names that were mentioned.

42718. Knowing that names had been given he said your names might be the names?—Yes, and then, of course, he explained to us how it might take place.

42719. Because of that one occasion?—That is how he explained it.

42720. Were you and Wright in the habit of going through Sutton Street?—Yes, I have been through there on one or two occasions. I have had several inquiries down there. I believe that about October I had a case of warehouse breaking there and several cases of larceny, and I had a case of forgery there.

42721. You knew, I suppose, that the Fishers were in the habit of carrying on their betting in Sutton Street?—I heard there was a bookmaker there.

42722. You only heard it?—Yes.

42723. Had you ever seen these men running away when you came near them?—No, I cannot say exactly that I have. Of course I know there has been something up, because I have noticed a sort of disturbance in the air.

42724. Did nothing more pass on this bridge than what you have told us?—No.

42725. For the first time, to your knowledge, a statement was made that you were implicated in this bribery?—I did not know at all that I was implicated in the bribery.

42726. But I understood this man Fisher said that your name was one of the names which had been handed in to us?—No, he said my name was one of the names that might be. I was not aware that I had been implicated.

42727. That you were concerned. That was the first time when what might be a very serious charge was suddenly made against you?—Yes.

42728. Did you say anything yourself to Fisher?—I might have made some remark, but what it was I am sure I could not tell you.

42729. You say you might have made some remark. Surely this announcement must have had some effect on your mind. You knew that this Commission was making the inquiry into the bribery of police amongst other things. You knew that Platt had said that he had actually bribed the police in your division?—Yes.

42730. For the first time you tell us this morning this man comes and says that one of the names which Platt had handed in might have been yours?—Yes.

42731. Do you mean to say that you said nothing on that assertion?—I never said I said nothing. I might have made a remark.

42732. What did you say?—I am sure I cannot remember.

42733. It must have been a very important event for you?—Not that I am aware of.

42734. You can see now?—I had an open mind. I knew it was perfectly untrue what had been said about me.

42735. I will accept that.

42736. (Chairman.) But nothing had been said?—No. I am talking of since my name has come out.

42737. (Mr. Dickinson.) For the first time you were faced with this fact that you were brought into this inquiry personally by a man who knew Fisher. I want to know what sort of answer you made to him. What did you say to your fellow constables who were with you?—I am sure I cannot say. I have told you already I had so many conversations with one and another that I cannot remember every conversation I had. As I say, I might have made a few remarks. I might have said something to them; I know I did say something, and I must have said something to them in the course of conversation, but what it was I do not know.

42738. (Chairman.) But Mr. Dickinson is asking you as to your state of mind at the time?—Whether I was upset?

42739. You had read the newspapers?—I had.

42740. You told me you knew that Platt had been making allegations of bribery against constables in the G Division?—Yes.

42741. I did not ask you further about it then, but I ask you now, did you in the newspaper reports see that certain names had been written down by Platt privately and handed to the Commission?—I believe I did.

42742. Then the state of your information at the time at which Mr. Dickinson is examining you about was this, that you knew that allegations of bribery had been made against the police of the G Division?—Yes.

42743. I understand you knew nothing of Platt before that?—No.

42744. You also knew that a man called Platt had written down some names of constables who he alleged to have been bribed, and that the list was handed to us on the Bench here. Do you know that?—I had heard that names had been mentioned.

42745. The names had not been mentioned—that is what I was saying before?—Through the medium of the newspapers. I believe I read it in the newspapers, but I cannot say for certain. That is what I told you.

42746. I am not seeking to cross-examine you, or to get admissions in any way unfairly from you, but I was following the questions that Mr. Dickinson was putting to you. Now, I will tell you what the exact state of circumstances was. On the 18th the Commissioners and Mr. Platt alone knew what names of constables of the G Division had been written down by Mr. Platt?—Yes.

42747. Not even Mr. Muir knew, so that at that time the only thing that you knew was that allegations of bribery had been made against some constables of the G Division?—As far as I knew by reading the papers. I cannot recall exactly when it was I saw that names had been handed up—whether it was the 18th or 19th or 20th October.

42748. (Mr. Dickinson.) But you did know that some names had been sent in?—As far as I know, I was under the impression that I read it in the newspapers that names had been handed up.

42749. You knew that allegations had been made of a very serious character against officers in the G Division. That you knew in your own division?—Yes.

42750. You knew that the man who had made the allegations had written down certain names, which had been handed up to us?—I believe I was under that impression at the time.

42751. You must have seen that in the papers?—Quite so.

42752. No names at that time had been given to anybody—yourself or anybody else (that I tell you for your information) excepting us?—Quite so.

42753. Then on this occasion, which is the morning but one after that, Fisher meets you and tells you that your name might have been one of those that was sent in?—That is so.

42754. Now, I am trying to find out what was your frame of mind at that moment. Do you mean to say you were not astonished at it?—You can use that term "astonished." I might have been.

42755. Did you ask him any further questions as to why it should be?—To the best of my recollection, no.

42756. How long did this conversation last?—About a quarter of an hour.

42757. Did Laing take any part in it?—He was there with us.

42758. I know he was there with you, but I ask you whether he took any part in it?—As far as I know, I suppose he would ask one or two questions. I cannot remember what he asked.

42759. Please try and remember, because, surely, if the position of affairs is this, that for the first time you had become aware that your name was likely to be brought into this inquiry, you must have looked upon it as a serious matter, and you must be able to recollect what went on. You say you were speaking for about a quarter of an hour, and all we know at the present moment is what Laing and you have said—that he gave you this sort of explanation, that your names might be brought in, because on one occasion a scout had run up and said, "There is Wright and Leach"?—Yes.

42760. That would not take a quarter of an hour to talk about?—That and other things might. I am not saying that we did not say anything more. I do not want you to understand that at all.

42761. I quite understand that. You said the conversation lasted a quarter of an hour, and Laing joined in, who at that moment was not concerned, as far as you were aware?—What questions Laing put I am sure I could not tell you.

42762. Did you put any questions?—Not that I am aware of.

42763. Did Wright put any questions?—Not that I am aware of.

42764. Then the conversation must have been between Laing and this man?—Yes, we might have said something in between.

42765. Surely! Remember you are with a man there who you told us you knew by sight, and who you did not know very much of, as I understand from you, and two of you are sent to meet him, and three go to meet him, and you have this very important matter suddenly brought before you. I must say I should expect you to be able to give us a little fuller account of what the conversation was than this one assertion of his?—I am sure I cannot.

Detective-Sergeant Leach.

17 April 1907.

42766. Did you after this communicate with any of your superior officers?—I did not. Sergeant Laing was my superior officer present, and he communicated with the local Inspector later on.

42767. Did he tell you he was going to communicate with the local Inspector?—Yes.

42768. Have you had any conversations with your superior officers since then?—Oh, yes.

42769. Of your own motion or have they sent for you?—The conversation I had with my superior officer would be when I meet him. I meet him for instructions with regard to certain duties weekly, and that is when I met him. That is, all the officers of the division meet him weekly.

42770. When did you meet him first and discuss this matter with him?—That I could not say for certain. Wednesday night is the general night when we see him. Sunday we might see him, and on other occasions, when necessary.

42771. Do you remember what day of the week it was that you had this interview?—No, I could not say.

42772. It was on the 20th, which would have been a Saturday. How soon after that was it that you spoke to your superior officer about it?—It might have been on Sunday, or it might have been Wednesday.

42773. It was soon after?—It was soon after. I could not tell you the exact day.

42774. Was that at your own request. Did you speak to him or he speak to you?—No, he spoke to me.

42775. Having heard from Sergeant Laing?—Yes.

42776. I suppose he wanted to know anything that you knew about this?—Yes.

42777. I presume you told him what you have told us?—I did, and he made a report, I believe.

42778. When you say that you have only once taken up a man for street betting, you tell us that it was not your duty to do that?—No, there were men specially employed for street bookmaking—uniform men.

42779. I understand that. On this particular occasion why was it that you went out of your way?—I did not go out of my way.

42780. I understood you to say it was not your duty or your primary duty?—It was not my first duty to arrest street bookmakers. I came across this man committing the offence.

42781. Where was it?—At Charterhouse Square, I believe.

42782. What was his name?—His name was Harman.

42783. You came across him in plain clothes?—Yes.

42784. And you at once arrested him?—I saw him receive slips of paper with money, and when I arrested him he actually had slips of paper in his hand with the money.

42785. When you arrested him, I suppose he did not recognise you were a police officer?—I told him I was a police officer, and I should arrest him for street betting.

42786. I do not quite understand how it came about that this only happened once, because it was your business, if you saw anyone, to arrest them?—Yes.

42787. Do you mean to say in all these years—you have been five years there, have you not?—I have only practically been engaged as an outdoor detective for just on two years. I have been on various duties.

42788. In two years' time, in your various duties, do you mean to say you did not come across any street betting?—I have never caught anyone, bar that man, absolutely committing it, or else I should have arrested him, except on the occasion when we went out for general observation in a van, when we were directed to do so.

42789. That was a raid?—You cannot call it a raid.

42790. A kind of trap?—We drove all over the place. I think we arrested four on that occasion, but I am not sure—taking our sub-division and other sub-divisions as well.

42791. You say that you cannot arrest them because they are too clever for you—they get away?—Yes, they are in a sense too clever.

42792. It goes on a great deal, does it not?—Yes.

42793. It is constantly going on in that division, is it not?—Yes.

42794. And by their system of scouts, you say, they are able to evade you?—Yes, especially when a great number of the scouts are thieves, and perhaps some of them may have passed through our hands.

42795. (Chairman.) Correct me if I am wrong, but the impression left upon my mind is that you thought Laing's presence at the interview on the bridge was a mere accident?—Yes, the meeting was an accident.

42795. (Mr. Whitmore.) And at the Sessions House?—Yes, quite an accident.

42797. (Chairman.) When you began the business of the day after the conversation at the station a little after 9 o'clock you did not understand that Laing was to be present at the interview?—I did not; I did not know when Laing left the station where he was going to. I think he went to King's Cross.

42798. Then so far as you were concerned, the arrangement was that you and Wright were to meet this man Fisher on the bridge?—Yes, that was so.

42799. Were you present when Sergeant Laing was examined?—Part of the time, yes.

42800. His account of it is given at Question 42218: "About 9 o'clock in the morning, when we went to the office, we heard of the message. I understood there was some person at the station waiting to see Sergeant Wright or Sergeant Leach"?—Yes; I have already explained to you how that must be, that Laing was there. I have explained how he would hear the conversation and what was going to take place at 12 o'clock that day.

42801. Quite. That is common ground. I am reading the answer which Sergeant Laing gave to the question. He does not say anything about, as far as I can see, and as far as I recollect, your coming in and saying that you had met some person outside who wanted to meet you at the bridge?—I do not quite follow you.

42802. I will finish the answer. This is what Sergeant Laing said: "I understood there was some person at the station waiting to see Sergeant Wright or Sergeant Leach"?—No, that is not so. I was met outside the station.

42803. But Sergeant Laing said that is what he understood?—Quite so.

42804. He delivered that message, and the message was that Fisher wanted to see either one of those two on the City Road bridge at 12 o'clock?—Of course Sergeant Laing would know of that message subsequently.

42805. With that I agree. Then Sergeant Laing goes on to say: "They told me" (that is you and Wright told him), "and I made it my business to go with them"?—Of course I told him. He would know at 11.45, when we were at the Sessions House, where we were going to when he met us.

42806. No; that is not how I understood the answer which Sergeant Laing gave?—That is my explanation, and that, I think, is the right one.

42807. Sergeant Laing was your superior officer?—Yes, he was.

42808. Sergeant Laing told us that he also heard from the newspapers what evidence Platt had been giving against officers of the G Division, and Sergeant Laing, by his answers, led me to understand that he took charge of the interview, and that he thought it was important to go there. Later on he told me: "It was about 9 o'clock when the messenger arrived at the station and saw Sergeant Leach, and then, later on, Sergeant Leach told me. (Q.) And Wright? (A.) And Wright."

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The answer goes on.

(Chairman.) Then Sergeant Laing gave quite a probable explanation, namely, that people do not like to come to the station?—That is very true.

42809. And that was why Fisher wanted to have an interview with him on the bridge. That is what I understood. Is that so?—I may mention that informants who come to give us information do not like, as a rule, to be seen at the station, because they are afraid lest any of their confederates should see them go into the station, and of being maltreated.

42810. Sergeant Laing led me to understand that earlier in the day it was at once arranged that he was to be present, or, at any rate, that he was present.

(Mr. Whitmore.) Sergeant Laing's story is that he met Sergeant Leach and Sergeant Wright at the Sessions House accidentally, and that, as he was going that way, he went with them to the bridge.

42811. (Chairman.) Everybody agrees that Sergeant Laing met them at the Sessions House accidentally, but Sergeant Laing certainly led me to understand that earlier in the day he was present at the interview. I then asked Sergeant Laing: "You thought Fisher had something valuable to communicate to you," that is to him, Sergeant Laing. "(A.) Certainly, we thought he had something to communicate to us; what it was we did not know. (Q.) You all three went. (A.) Yes, I went with them. (Q.) Why. (A.) To know what he had got to say"?—Quite so.

42812. I am putting to you that when Sergeant Laing heard that Fisher wanted to see you and Wright he himself determined to be at the interview, and that you knew he was going to be at the interview?—I did not.

42813. Then Sergeant Laing is not right when he uses that expression?—I do not know; I was not aware when I left the station that he was going to be present.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Question 42423 is, I think, what you have in your mind: "All the police sergeants went? (A.) Yes. After that I went to King's Cross, and then I had occasion to go to the Sessions House, where I met Sergeants Leach and Wright just about 12 o'clock, and I was going towards City Road bridge, and I went that way with them."

42814. (Chairman.) That exactly shows that my impression as to what Sergeant Laing meant is quite right: "And I went that way with them." He had intended to be at the interview at the City Road bridge all the time?—No.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) I think if you go on you will find it is not so: "(Mr. Whitmore.) I thought you went from the station? (A.) No, we did not. (Mr. Rufus Isaacs.) When this message was brought in to Leach and he told you this, what happened next? (A.) We went about our business, and I had occasion to go to King's Cross. (Q.) But before you went out of the station was anything said as to who was going? (A.) No. Very likely Wright and Leach said they would go, no doubt; but at that time I had no intention of going. I had occasion to go to King's Cross to the police court there, and from there I went to the Sessions House at Clerkenwell Green, and there I met Sergeants Wright and Leach."

(Chairman.) Yes, but Sergeant Laing's account is inconsistent with the account previously given. Of course, language is ambiguous.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The next question is explanatory of it, I think: "Then do I understand that it was a mere coincidence that you met them? (A.) That I met them at the Sessions House, or very likely I should not have been at the bridge with them, only I was going that way then, and I went that way with them."

42815. (Chairman.) Yes, I know Sergeant Laing certainly gave that account then, but the account that he first gave when he was asked about the matter is certainly open to quite a different interpretation. However, I think we have the exact facts now. I still do not understand why you took this step?—I do not quite follow you.

42816. I see that you do not. Let me tell you how the whole thing presents itself to my mind. On the 18th October Platt gave evidence here. He had sent in no proof to us, but in the course of his evidence he said he had given bribes to officers in the G Division, as well as in the L Division. He had been giving evidence about the L Division. Then, in the course of cross-examination, he wrote on a sheet of paper, at my request, the names of constables in the G Division whom he had bribed?—Quite so.

42817. We did not publish those names at the time, and not even Mr. Muir knew what names had been written down; the only people in the world who knew of the names Platt had written down were we ourselves on this Bench, Mr. Leslie, the Secretary, and Platt himself?—Quite so.

42818. That is the state of facts. Two days after that three sergeants, yourself and two others, met Fisher, the agent of Platt, through whom he said he had bribed the police on the City Road bridge, at mid-day?—Yes.

42819. Does it not strike you, as a detective, as rather an odd circumstance that the three sergeants who met Platt's agent at the City Road bridge on Saturday should have been, two of them, men whose names he had written down on that sheet of paper?—No; we are used to very odd circumstances in our profession. Detective-Sergeant Leach. 17 April 1907.

42820. I quite agree; but it is an odd circumstance, is it not?—It presents itself as an odd circumstance to an outsider—outside the profession.

42821. Fisher may have read the evidence that Platt had given before us. I do not know whether Fisher was in court or not. He had undoubtedly been employed by Platt?—Yes, I quite follow what you mean.

42822. Then Fisher reads in the papers the evidence that Platt had given in the names of two constables, and he might wish to warn them. That is a possible construction, is it not?—I do not know what you mean by "warn them."

42823. If, as Platt says, it is true that Fisher did give you 10s., and Fisher sees that Platt has been handing in names, and he recollects that he had given you 10s., then it is not an unnatural thing for Fisher to come to warn you?—I have told you I never received any money whatever.

42824. Under those circumstances, if Fisher had given a constable money, and Fisher heard that Platt had given information about it, it is very possible, is it not, that Fisher would go and tell that constable for his protection?—I do not see how he would protect himself; that is what I cannot see.

42825. I can suggest a lot of ways. However, I thought it was right to put the facts as they are, and suggest it to you, so that you might have an opportunity of giving an explanation. There it is. That is what Platt wrote on the paper which was secret on the 20th October. Am I to understand that so far as you know, no reports were asked for from your police station after Platt's evidence had been given, and after you had the interview with Fisher?—No; the only report I know of that was made was a report of Local Inspector Kidd.

42826. He did make a report, did he?—I think he did.

42827. You have explained that Sergeant Laing was your superior, and he reported the interview with Fisher?—Yes.

(Mr. Platt.) Detective-sergeant Laing, in the course of his evidence, said that the City Road bridge would be on his way to the station, and that he was going towards the station. Might I ask this officer which is the nearest to the North London Sessions—Shepherdess Walk, or the City Road Bridge.

42828. (Chairman.) It does not seem to me to be very important. You met Sergeant Laing at the Sessions House, I think, did you not?—Yes, I did.

42829. Which is the shortest way from Clerkenwell Sessions House to the station?—I should think towards City Road bridge; it is an object you might make for in a good many directions.

(Mr. Platt.) Could you get to the station quicker by the City Road bridge.

(Chairman.) You have already cross-examined. What is the point?

(Mr. Platt.) The point is that these three officers got the result of information, and there is evidence given by a detective of 23 years' standing who told the Commission that he had worked for three years on his own, and not with any other officer.

(Chairman.) I do not see that any question can be founded upon that.

(Mr. Platt.) I know it is not natural for an officer to work on his own, but at the same time he studies promotion in that respect.

(Chairman.) We cannot take that. You have given your evidence.

42830. (Mr. Dickinson.) Am I to understand, when you had this interview, that Sergeant Laing was going to report about it?—Yes.

42831. He had said so himself?—Yes.

Sub-Divisional Inspector WILLIAM BRIGGS, sworn.

Sub-Divisional Inspector W. Briggs.

17 April 1907.

42832. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) You are Sub-Divisional Inspector of the G Division stationed at King's Cross Road Station?—Yes.

42833. P.C. Cass is under you at that station?—Yes.

42834. You have a record of the duties upon which he has been engaged since 1904?—Yes.

42835. In 1904 Cass was not engaged with regard to street bookmakers?—No.

42836. And in fact made no arrests of street bookmakers in 1904?—No, not specially.

42837. He made no arrests at all?—No.

42838. In 1905 was he engaged to suppress street rowdyism and street book-making?—Yes.

42839. And was he engaged upon that duty between those dates, the 27th March and the 23rd April?—From the 2nd January, 1905, to the 29th January, 1905. That is the first month.

(Chairman.) Some document with regard to the police-constable's arrests was handed in last time.

42840. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Yes, but it did not give the precise dates during which he was employed. From the 2nd January, 1905, till the 29th January, 1905?—That is so.

42841. Can you tell me whether he made any arrests during that period?—No, not then.

42842. He did not make any arrests?—No, not at that time.

42843. There would not be much betting going on, I suppose?—No. That would be January, and there was no racing then.

42844. The next time he was engaged upon that duty of street bookmakers was from the 27th March to the 23rd April?—Yes.

42845. During that period did he make any arrests?—Yes, he made fourteen arrests.

42846. Was the next period from the 15th May to the 11th June?—Yes.

42847. During that time how many arrests did he make?—Seventeen.

42848. He was next engaged on that duty on the 16th June, a single day?—Yes—one arrest.

42849. He was next engaged on that duty between the 17th July and the 15th August?—Yes.

42850. How many arrests?—Fourteen.

42851. Then he was engaged on a single day, the 15th August?—Yes—one arrest.

42852. Then he was engaged between the 18th August and the 15th October, and no arrest?—The 18th September, I think.

42853. Look again, will you?—Yes, the 18th September.

42854. No arrest?—No arrest.

42855. And between the 11th December, 1905, and the 7th January, 1906, and no arrests?—No arrests.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask the Inspector anything, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) No, Sir.

42856. (Chairman.) You are the Inspector at what police station?—At King's Cross Road.

42857. And you were the Inspector there on the 20th October, were you?—No, from the evidence I have heard that would be at the City Road Station, and not at the King's Cross Road Station.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) The two men, Robert and William Joseph Fisher are here, and the Commission have their statement.

(Chairman.) Yes. Have you any further police evidence?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No.

(Chairman.) Not Sergeant Wright?

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) No, we have not taken a statement from him.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) You mentioned the name of Sergeant Wright, Sir, before the adjournment, and we have telephoned for him, and he is here. We have taken no statement from him, but if the Commission wish to examine him he can be called.

(Chairman.) He had better be called.

Detective-Sergeant GEORGE WRIGHT, sworn.

Detective-Sergeant G. Wright.

42858. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Are you a detective-sergeant of the G Division, stationed at City Road Police Station?—Yes.

42859. How long have you been in the police force? Thirteen years last January.

42860. How long have you been a sergeant?—Five years.

42861. How long have you been in the G Division?—Nine years.

(Chairman.) Do you wish to ask Sergeant Wright any questions, Mr. Platt?

(Mr. Platt.) No, Sir.

42862. (Chairman.) As Mr. Muir says, I did mention your name before the adjournment, and I asked Mr. Muir whether he wanted to call you. The matter on which I wish to ask you a question or two was concerned with Mr. Platt's charges against the police of the G Division. You have heard, I daresay, that he has made charges that some constables in the G Division have been bribed by him or by his agents?—Yes.

42863. Do you remember on the 20th October, two days after Mr. Platt was giving evidence here, being at the police station shortly after nine o'clock?—Yes, I am there every morning at nine o'clock.

42864. And as a result of what took place then you went to City Road bridge at mid-day?—Yes, about mid-day.

42865. With Sergeant Laing?—Yes, and Sergeant Leach.

42866. How did the matter come up at 9 o'clock, or a little after 9 o'clock, according to your recollection?—As far as I recollect, Sergeant Leach came into the office shortly after 9 and said that a man had stopped him, and said a man named Fisher wished to see him or me at the City Road bridge about mid-day—about 12 o'clock, I think was the time.

42867. To see you or him?—Yes, as far as I remember.

42868. Was Sergeant Laing present?—Yes, we are all in the office at that time.

42869. And what took place further?—As far as my recollection goes, I had my inquiries to do; I was in the office engaged till about 11 o'clock, and some time after that I went with Leach to the North London Sessions. I think we went to see Sergeant Tomlin, from the D Division, respecting the theft of some bank-notes that Leach had in hand, and while Leach was talking to Tomlin I stood some little way away, and I saw Laing come up, and he went in with some indictment. We stood talking together till Leach had finished his conversation with Tomlin, and Laing was going back to the City Road Station, and we were going to meet this man Fisher, to see what his business was, and Laing accompanied us back there.

42870. You and Sergeant Leach had agreed that you would together see this man Fisher?—Yes, I think we had, as far as I remember. We were working together at that time. Others work together, and we were working in conjunction with one another on different jobs we had in hand.

42871. The intention was, when you left the station, that you and Sergeant Leach were to interview this man Fisher?—Yes.

42872. Then you say you met Laing at the Clerkenwell Sessions?—At the Sessions House.

42873. Did either you or Leach ask Laing to go with you to the City Road bridge?—I do not think we did. I think he was going back our way, and I said to him, "We are going to the City Road; we are going to meet that Fisher," and he came back that way, and we went there, and, as a matter of fact, if I remember rightly, Laing spoke to Fisher. He waited, thinking we might have to come down to the station when we had done with him, and I called him over, when he commenced the conversation that he did, which was a very great surprise to me.

42874. You mean that Laing was not near you when the conversation commenced?—Not when it commenced.

42875. And you signalled or called out to him?—He was really going to walk on, as far as I can remember, and he stopped for a minute to see if it was of any importance, because, had it been anything important, no doubt Sergeant Laing would have come with us, if it was the information we expected it might be.

42876. What information did you expect?—We expected some information relating to a receiver, or something of that sort. That is generally the sort of information that people want to give us when we are asked to see them in connection with our duties—crimes.

42877. Was it because of the information which you expected to receive that you asked Laing to stop, or you signalled to him?—No, Laing stopped, and when Fisher began to speak of the information that he had, I said, "Jim, you had better come and listen to this," and called him over.

42878. How far off was he then?—Within a few yards—ten or twelve.

42879. Then your impression is, and your recollection is, that when you and Sergeant Leach first of all met Fisher, Laing did not intend to take any part in the conversation?—No, I do not think he did. We have a certain amount of honour as regards that sort of thing. If an informant comes to see me I should not like another officer to come and listen to what the informer was telling me, unless I invited him to.

42880. I quite understand that?—I think that was the impression that Laing must have had at the time, as far as I remember.

42881. But Laing was your superior officer?—But, still, in that respect, my informant is my informant.

42882. But in this case you called Laing back?—Yes, I called him back. It was rather an important thing he was speaking about.

42883. I should think so. Being important, will you tell us exactly what it was that arrested your attention. What was it that Fisher said?—I remember when Fisher commenced the conversation he said that he had asked for Leach and myself, as he thought it was only right; that he had been to the police solicitors in respect of the information that had been given by Platt before the Royal Commission, that he had seen something in the papers regarding Platt and officers of the G Division, and that he had worked for Platt, or he and Platt had been connected at some time or another, and whatever Platt had said in connection with our officers, or whatever names he had handed in, was entirely untrue, and I think he said something about it was quite possible that the names of Leach and myself might be mentioned, as on one occasion we were somewhere in the vicinity of where he betted, and his tout came running up at the time that Platt was with him, and said, "Look out"—I do not know whether it was Wright or Leach, but he may have mentioned our names—"Wright and Leach are about," and it was quite possible he said that Platt may have handed in the two names that he remembered hearing. He said at the time that Platt was very much interested as to who Wright and Leach were, and I believe he said he walked away as though he was trying to find out where we had gone to. That was the sort of story he told us.

42884. Did it not strike you as rather odd that a bookmaker should come and warn the police in that way?—No, it did not strike me as odd at all. I heard his story, and it seemed to me that his idea was that he was doing the right thing; that if our names were mentioned in any shape or form, that we need not worry ourselves, as possibly if you are accused of things that you have not done, you might do.

42885. That he, Fisher, would stand by you?—There was no suggestion of that. He simply said that was the case, and he had been to the solicitors for the police. That was all that was said. I treated it practically with contempt eventually. I think I put some question to him, and I said to him, "What has that to do with us—what have you come here for."

42886. Then you did think it was a somewhat odd circumstance that he should have come to you?—At first, naturally, it struck me in that way, but when he told me what it was, of course, I did not think it odd then, when he gave his reason.

42887. What was his motive?—I think his object was that he wanted to give this information because he thought it was possible that the police in the district might be vindictive towards him if it got to our knowledge that he was a man who had been connected with Platt, and knowing, of course, that the thing was an entire fabrication. That is what occurred to me.

42888. You mean that the police would be more lenient to him if he came and said, "I will come and say that what Platt says is a fabrication"?—No. I think that he thought the police might probably be after him more, and endeavour to arrest him more.

42889. Then it was not that the police would be more lenient, but that they would be more active?—That is the sort of thing that was conveyed to my mind. I may be wrong, but that is what occurred to me. I cannot see what other object he could have in coming.

42890. You never thought of suggesting that his real motive was to render a public service?—I think that was a public service that he intended to render when he went to the solicitors. I fully think he thought that.

42891. Was it a single-minded desire for the public service?—Yes; I do believe that—I firmly believe that.

42892. Did you know Fisher before?—Well, I knew him by sight. I do not know that I could distinguish one from the other as regards their names, but I have known them by sight for two or three years. I know most of the bookmakers in the sub-division where I am. On one occasion I assisted to arrest one of them.

42893. How long ago was that?—I should think about 1904 or 1903. I know I did assist.

42894. That is over three or five years ago?—It might be four years ago. At that time officers were not out specially for bookmakers.

42895. Had you ever spoken to this Robert Fisher before?—No, I have not spoken but very few words to him in my life.

42896. You have never arrested him?—No. Detective Hearne, at the time I went to assist him, arrested a Fisher, whichever one it was.

42897. You were not present?—Yes, I went down one street to drive him up to Hearne, and then he arrested him, and he was fined £5 at the Clerkenwell Police Court.

42898. What time was that?—Some time in 1904; I am not sure. It is some time ago.

42899. (Mr. Dickinson.) Do you remember exactly what the first intimation to you was when you were in the police station that this man wanted to see you?—Yes. Sergeant Leach came in and he said that a man had stopped him outside and said that one of the Fishers, or a Fisher, wanted to see him or me on the City Road bridge at 12 noon.

42900. And did he say that to you or anybody else?—He spoke to me, but it would be in the hearing of the other officers who were there.

42901. Do you remember where you were sitting then?—Yes; I always sit in one place just by the window.

42902. Where was he?—He just came in, and was taking off his coat to hang it up.

42903. What did you say to him?—I said: "Well, what does he want? What is it about? What is it?"

42904. That is quite natural?—And he said: "I don't know."

42905. Then, what did you say then?—I do not think I said anything more except "Very well, if I can manage it; I do not think I have anything particular on, and I think I can be there." I treated it as I do an ordinary informant. If I cannot go I might say to Leach: "You pop up and see what it is, and you know where to find me at a certain time," according to the inquiry I have in hand.

42906. The message was that he wanted to see either you or Leach?—Yes, I think that is it, as far as I can remember it. I understood it to be so.

42907. What was the reason that you should both go?—Because we were both working together, as officers do work together, and if it was good information I should be there to assist in whatever was going to take place. We got off to meet the informant, because it might be something very important, and it would want more than one to attend to it, and we would both assist in it.

Detective-Sergeant G. Wright.

17 April 1907.

42908. What did you think was the reason you were wanted?—I did not give it a thought.

42909. Did you at that moment know who it was that wanted to see you?—Yes, I guessed. I do not know any other Fishers than these two, and I guessed it must be one of them. We get very good information sometimes from bookmakers.

42910. Had they ever given you any information before?—No, I do not remember ever speaking to them except on this occasion.

42911. I do not quite understand why it was necessary for both of you to go if he asked to see either you or Leach. Why should not one of you be quite sufficient?—Because at the time I went with him to the North London Sessions to assist him in the case of the stealing of the bank notes when he went to see the other officer who had some other information about it, and if we had not gone there we should have gone to Whitecross Street to see the crowds that gather there in the dinner-time, and try and detect larcenies.

42912. Had you not settled to go and meet him when you had this message in the morning?—Yes, we had agreed to go, as far as I remember.

42913. Did you know that Sergeant Laing was going?—No; it was quite by accident that Sergeant Laing met me and Leach at the Sessions.

42914. Did Sergeant Laing join in the conversation at the station?—No, I do not think he did, as far as I remember.

42915. So far as you remember?—No, I do not think he said anything about it.

42916. You had no idea that he would be with you?—No, not the slightest, and I never expected to see him after I left the station in the morning, because I knew he went off somewhere.

42917. Do I understand that when you were going towards the City Road you did not think that he would stop at the same time as you and interview this man?—I did not think he would have done. He might have stopped for a moment to see if there was anything good going on, and I believe he would have gone on.

42918. You said, as far as I understand, that you said to this man Fisher, "What had that to do with you"?—As far as I remember it, I think I said, "What has that to do with us?"

42919. A very natural question. Was that the first remark that was made by either of the sergeants then? Were you the first person to speak to Fisher. Tell us exactly what happened when you came up to him?—He commenced to tell us that he had seen this report in the papers, and that Platt—of course at that time I did not know Platt, and I had never heard of the man that I know of except I had seen it in the papers—that Platt had made these allegations against police officers in the district. He began in that strain, and that is the time when I said: "What has that to do with us?" "Well," he said, "it might affect you and it might affect Sergeant Wright, for one thing." I said: "What do you mean?" He said: "He has handed in some names, and I have been working for him," and he went on to say that on one occasion Platt was on this pitch and that Leach and I were in the district, and the tout came running up to him shouting, and said: "Look out, there is Wright and Leach about." If I had nothing else on, and I saw him betting, I should arrest him. With that Platt became somewhat interested as to who Wright and Leach were. I think at that time we had some inquiry that way over some things that had been stolen from a doorway in Great Sutton Street, and that would upset them a great deal, and if Platt could have seen either me or Leach he would have had a good try to.

42920. Did he tell you about this?—He said that Platt was on the pitch, and it might possibly be the names of myself or Leach that were handed in. He then went on to say that he had been to the solicitors and given in that information there.

42921. Is that all?—He went on to say that there was no truth in the statement that he had ever given any officer anything, and that Platt had arranged with him to keep certain moneys for themselves, and that they should divide it, or something like that, and then say they had given it to the police. That was the sort of story he told us.

42922. I want to get that quite clear from you—that Platt had arranged with Fisher?—To keep certain moneys back.

42923. That he should keep certain moneys back?—Between them. I understood from him that Platt was not a bookmaker, but that he was somehow an agent of somebody else's and that they should, practically speaking, defraud some other person of certain moneys, and that they were to keep them for themselves, and were to say the police had had it—put it down and book it to the police.

42924. You understood that Platt had told the Fishers to book this to the police?—Yes, and keep it themselves. Of course, on that Sergeant Laing said, when we left him: "I shall report it to the Inspector."

42925. That, I suppose, was what transpired after you said to him: "What has that to do with us?" I want to know when did Sergeant Laing intervene in the conversation, because you called him back, you say. He had gone on?—I think he spoke to Fisher as he was talking about the matter. I do not remember exactly what Laing would say. We allowed him to do practically all the conversation, because we were anxious to hear all about this.

42926. You did not make any notes of this at all?—No; of course we knew we should report it, so it never occurred to us to make a note of it.

42927. You were not coming to give evidence here to-day?—No. I just received a message to come on here at once; so I came on at once.

42928. Did you know what evidence Sergeant Laing had given before us at our last sitting?—No, I have not been here. I have had conversations with Laing about how he got on at the Commission, but I do not remember him saying anything particularly about the evidence.

42929. You have not had any knowledge of what was said?—No, none at all.

42930. Have you had any conversation with Leach?—No. I was told directly I got into Court here that I had better keep away from the officers who have given evidence, and I have not spoken to them. I arrived here at 5 minutes to 2.

42931. (Chairman.) I do not think that I asked you whether you yourself had read in the newspapers the account of what Platt had said before this Commission?—Oh, yes, I read it.

42932. So that when Fisher mentioned Platt you at once knew to what kind of matter he was referring?—Oh, yes, I knew that.

42933. Did you recollect that some names had been written down, or did Fisher tell you that Platt had written down some names before us?—I think that Fisher said he read about the names being handed in, and whatever names were handed in, it was all an untruth.

42934. Then when you were listening to Robert Fisher on the bridge, you did not know what the fact was that Laing's name and Leach's name had been written down by Platt?—No, I knew nothing about that.

42935. Does it strike you as rather a coincidence that Fisher should have sent to one of the men whose names had been written down by Platt, though Fisher did not know?—No. I should have thought it rather strange perhaps, but bear in mind that I asked him what it had to do with us, and he gave a very reasonable explanation, to my mind, that Leach and I had been in the district, and that Platt happened to be there one day when the tout came running up, and I should think Platt must be a stranger round there, because I have never seen him in my life, and it is quite possible a man might be anxious to know who Wright and Leach are.

42936. You can give no better reason for Fisher communicating with the police than what you have already suggested?—No, I cannot.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Then the next witness, Sir, is Robert Fisher. Would the Commission desire to examine him?

(Chairman.) I think we will go on and take his evidence-in-chief, at any rate.

(Mr. R. D. Muir.) Would you wish to examine him yourselves, or would you prefer that I should examine him?

(Chairman.) You had better examine him.

CHRISTOPHER ROBERT FISHER, sworn.

42937. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) Is your full name Christopher Robert Fisher?—Yes.

42938. Are you commonly known as Robert Fisher?—Yes.

42939. Where do you live?—At 14, Northampton Buildings, Clerkenwell.

42940. What is your occupation?—A bookmaker's agent.

42941. Does that mean that you take betting slips in the street?—I used to.

42942. That is what you used to do?—Yes.

42943. There are no such persons now I understand?—I do not know whether there are or are not.

42944. It is a dead calling?—It would be now.

42945. You were carrying on that business. You took slips in the street, did you?—Yes.

42946. You did not run the book yourself?—I used to. My brother and I used to, and, of course, like everybody else, we had our bad times and failed, but we never ran away from the book. We stood our ground, and ran our book paying our way, as it were, and getting a living.

42947. You said you were a bookmaker's agent?—That is only recently.

42948. You said you were a bookmaker's agent, and that you took betting slips in the street?—Yes.

42949. Did you run the book yourself?—Not as agent. I would not be an agent if I was running the book myself.

42950. Who was your principal?—We were our own principals. I would be the principal.

42951. When you were an agent who was your principal?—Mr. Platt and his brother-in-law, of course.

42952. What is the brother-in-law's name?—I would rather not mention the name because he is in a good position.

(Chairman.) I think we have had his name mentioned.

(Mr. Platt.) Yes.

(Witness.) I do not want to mention his name.

42953. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) It has been mentioned already. It is McCarthy, is it not?—I will ask the Commissioners whether I shall mention the name.

42954. (Chairman.) Yes, I think you must mention it?—That is right.

42955. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) I just want to find out how it was you came to give evidence before this Commission at all?—How I came to give evidence at all, or was interested in the case was this way: It was pointed out to me: "This is all right for you people," by a client of mine. We call them clients or punters. I said: "Why, what is that?" He said: "You read this." I read it, and I said "Platt, Platt." The name was three or four times in my mind. "Platt must be the man that was with me." I have a knowledge of the bookmakers of the district, and I found it could not be anybody but Platt and that that must be the man. I said: "Now what am I to do? I know that this is false."

42956. What did you do?—I will tell you what I did. First I went home and I thought to myself I will write a letter to the Commissioners. Then I thought that would not be the proper way of doing it. Then I thought over that, and I thought will that do. Then I thought, I know what I will do, and I went and found one of my scouts, as I call them, and I said to him: "Here, do you know Leach or Wright in this district?" He said: "Yes," and I said: "You go and tell them I want to see them at 12 o'clock to-morrow." He said: "All right." As a matter of fact, I could not tell you whether he had seen them or not. I was not positive he had seen them, although I meant to keep the appointment. Then after I had done that I turned round, and I went up to Clerkenwell Police Court, outside the station. That is a different station to Shepherdess Walk. I stayed outside five minutes considering as to whether I should go in or not. I thought, no, I do not want to go in there. I have been in there enough times. I waited outside, and saw an officer, as I thought—I anticipated he was an officer—and I said to him: "Are you a police officer?" He said: "How do you know I am a police officer?" I said: "I anticipate you are." He said: "What do you want with me?" I said "I am a bookmaker." "Oh," he said, I said "Yes, sir. There is a man giving evidence before the Commission which I know is false, and I want to know what is the best thing to do." He said: "You must please yourself what you do." I thought: "Well, I will go and see the Commissioners, or the solicitor, that will be best." So with that I went off and came down to see not the solicitor but the counsel. I found out, I think it was Mr. Bankes, or Mr. Muir's address, and I went down to see them, and they treated me in an off-hand manner. They told me the best thing I could do was to go and see the Commissioners. Then I think I wrote a letter to the Commission.

C. R. Fisher.
17 April 1907.

42957. Did you write a letter to the Commissioners first of all?—No, to the solicitor.

42958. Is that the letter. (Handing)?—That is it.

42959. You will acquit me of personally having treated you in an off-hand manner?—I think it was the other gentleman I saw.

42960. You did not see me?—No, I do not think I did.

42961. This is the letter you wrote, and it is addressed to Messrs. Wontner and Sons. It is dated Friday, October 19, 1906: "Sirs,—In reference to the evidence given before the Commission yesterday by Platt, I am in a position to rebut a great deal of it, as I know, as far as I am concerned, that it is absolutely false, also that he absconded with £27 entrusted to me by my customers. Likewise that he has not got one agent in this Division—that is the G Division. Also I doubt whether he has got one in any part of London. I have also evidence of him absconding with another man's money from Lincoln's Inn district. If it is possible to have an interview with you this afternoon, I think it will be doing a public service. I am employed as a betting agent by Mr. Henry Jones, of 151, Gray's Inn Road.—Yours sincerely, R. Fisher." Did you get a reply to that letter?—I think I did.

42962. Have you kept it?—I may have kept it, I could not say. I have two little youngsters, and they may have destroyed it. I might have it.

42963. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) We have copies of all the letters which have been supplied by Messrs. Wontner and Sons, and perhaps I had better read them.

(Chairman.) Yes.

42964. (Mr. R. D. Muir.) The reply is on the 19th October: "Sir,—We are in receipt of your letter of this day's date in relation to the evidence given yesterday before the Royal Commission by Mr. Platt. With regard to the statements made by this Witness as to the betting transactions carried on on his behalf in the district of the 'G' Division of Police, and as to the general allegations made by him against officers of that Division at the time of writing the names of the officers who it is suggested received money from Platt have not yet been made public, and we are not therefore in a position on behalf of the police authorities to investigate in detail the truth or otherwise of these charges, but no doubt the Royal Commission will give the necessary opportunity for this purpose, and it may probably be, when we have more material to hand, that we shall ask you to come and see us. We understand, however, from what you said to our Mr. Muskett this morning at Mr. Muir's chambers, that you have already placed yourself in touch with the Secretary to the Royal Commissioners which appears to us—if we may say so—to have been the correct thing to do under the circumstances." Was Mr. Muskett one of the persons who treated you in an off-hand manner?—Yes, at your chambers, or at Mr. Bankes' chambers.

42965. Did you see Mr. Muskett, or somebody at his office, on the 22nd October?—Yes.

42966. Inspector Spencer was there also. Was he there at the same time?—There was an Inspector there; I do not know who it was.

42967. Did you get another letter from Messrs. Wontner and Sons on October 23rd: "Dear Sir,—We shall be obliged if you would make it convenient to call here to-morrow morning at 10.30 for a few minutes, so that we may go through the statement we took from you last evening." That would be October 22nd?—Yes.

C. R. Fisher. 17 April 1907

42968. Did you attend at Mr. Muskett's office on the 24th, the following day, to go through your statement?—Yes.

42969. Did you get a telegram on the 25th from Messrs. Wontner, saying: "Can you see us at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, for a few minutes?" Did you go and see Messrs. Wontner?—Yes.

42970. On November 5th did you get another letter from them, saying: "We should be glad if you could conveniently see us, with your brother, who acted with you when engaged with Platt, at five o'clock to-morrow (Tuesday) afternoon. We want to see you both as to the evidence given by Platt last Friday week"?—Yes.

42971. Did you attend on November 6th with your brother?—We did.

42972. Were your statements taken?—Yes.

42973. On November 13th did you get this letter from Messrs. Wontner: "We have now had an opportunity of inspecting the five books and the slip of paper produced by the witness Platt to the Royal Commission, and have taken certain extracts therefrom. We should be glad to see you and your brother William, to go into the matter further, at 4.15 to-morrow (Wednesday)"?—Yes.

42974. Did you attend at Messrs. Wontner's office on November 14th, and at the offices of the Royal Commission on November 15th and 16th?—Yes.

42975. But you were not able to see the books on either of those occasions?—No.

42976. On the 16th the books were produced?—Yes.

42977. On November 22nd did you get a telegram from Messrs. Wontner, saying: "Please meet our clerk at 31, Great George Street at 11 o'clock to-morrow to inspect the books?—Yes.

42978. Did you go and inspect the books?—Yes, with a clerk.

42979. On January 13th, 1907, did you get this letter from Messrs. Wontner, saying: "Although we have no official notification at the moment of the fact, we are led to understand that Platt's case will be taken shortly after the Royal Commissioners resume their sittings, which we think will be on or very soon after the 21st inst. We think that we ought, in order to be fully prepared, to take a statement from your brother, William Fisher, and if you could bring him here to-morrow (Friday) morning at half-past 10 we shall be obliged. We will not detain you long"?—Yes.

42980. Did you upon that attend on January 4th with your brother?—Yes.

42981. Was your brother's statement taken?—Yes.

42982. On January 7th did you get another letter from Messrs. Wontner, saying: "I now send you draft of your further statement, and also draft of your brother's statement. I should be glad if you would go through your own statement very carefully, and make any necessary alterations, and perhaps you would ask your brother to go through his with the same object. Kindly let me have the documents back when you have been through them"?—Yes.

42983. Then there is a letter on January 15th from Messrs. Wontner: "We shall be glad to receive the draft supplemental statement back as soon as convenient." You sent the statement back?—Yes; and I do not think I made any alterations.

42984. Is it one of the duties of an agent for a bookmaker to be arrested when necessary, instead of his principal?—There cannot be any arrangement. You have to take it as it comes.

42985. It is the agent generally who is arrested?—If he is betting.

42986. If you are convicted you are fined?—Yes.

42987. Generally £5?—Yes.

42988. Who pays the fine?—The principal does.

42989. How long had you been doing street bookmaking in Clerkenwell?—I think since 1903.

42990. When did you first know Platt?—I fancy it was about May. I can fix the date by my brother's conviction on the previous Saturday. That is how I am positive of that date.

42991. What name was he convicted in?—In the name of Grove.

42992. That is not among the convictions given of the Fishers by the witness Cass, because he did not know of the convictions in another name. You have given the date in your statement?—Yes.

42993. The date you have given is May 7th, 1906?—That is right.

42994. You business lasted with him up to what date?—July.

42995. Saturday, June 30. Is that right?—Yes; that would be it, to fix it exactly.

42996. When you made the acquaintance of Platt on May 7th what was your financial position?—I think we were in debt to about £28. Our liabilities were about £28 or £30, speaking off-hand.

42997. What arrangement, if any, did you make with Platt as to that?—The arrangement was this: He said he would take over the stand, and as such, of course, we naturally thought he was going to pay the liabilities attached to it. My brother was the first one who got in contact with Platt. My brother brought him up and said, "I have found a new governor." That, as a matter of fact, was the first I knew of it. I said, "Oh." Of course I was pleased, knowing we were not in an exact position to hold out—our financial position was not so good as it might be—and we were glad to get a man with money, as we thought.

42998. What did he undertake to do?—He undertook to take over the pitch and its liabilities, and to take the papers away at the different times of the races, which he did; and at the end of the week we were talking about salary, and he arranged to pay me £2 10s. a week, and my brother £2, which we did not get—not that week, at any rate.

42999. At the end of the day did you settle with Platt each day?—Yes. He took the papers every race, and the money at the end of the day.

43000. What happened if you had lost on the day?—We would make up the balance, and if he had won he would have the money. He used to pay out at night.

43001. Try and give your answers as shortly as you can?—I did not do the paying out, only the following day. I used to pay out a certain number at night, and what was left the balance would be paid over in the daytime.

43002. Platt himself having collected the necessary money from you, if there was enough he paid out the punters as far as he could that night?—He would pay them out. He would have moneys to pay them out.

43003. I am speaking of the punters?—Yes.

43004. He would pay them out, and if there were any left that did not come for their money he would hand it to you?—Yes.

43005. Did you employ any scouts?—Yes.

43006. How many?—About three.

43007. Who paid their wages?—I used to.

43008. Did you deduct it from what you paid to Platt or not?—Yes, he gave it to me to pay them.

43009. Platt did?—Yes. Of course there were two ways of paying them—one was to give them so much in the day time; when we leave the pitch we give them so much; they had a few shillings a day; and the other would be made up at the end of the week, so that they would have had some of it before the Saturday.

43010. Did Platt ever say anything to you about the police?—He did on the first occasion in a casual way. He said, "How do you get on with the police?" I said, "They do not seem to have troubled us." I said, "We paid a heavy penalty in the other division, but I do not think they have found us out yet."

43011. What division was that in which you had paid a heavy penalty?—In what we call the King's Cross Division.

43012. What division did you shift to?—To Shepherdess Walk Division.

43013. That is the division where the police stations are?—Yes.

43014. Was anything more said by either of you as to the police?—No—nothing mentioned.

43015. Did Platt say whether he would keep this book on his own account, or whether he had anyone with him?—That is what I understood.

43016. With whom?—With his brother-in-law.

43017. The man named McCarthy?—Yes.

43018. Did you ever see McCarthy?—Yes.

43019. Did the partnership between Platt and McCarthy continue all the time you were with Platt?—As far as I can understand, until a week before Platt severed his connection with me.

43020. That would be Saturday, the 23rd June?—Yes.

43021. How did you know the partnership had ended then?—I think Platt told me.

43022. What happened on the 30th June, which was the last Saturday you had any business relations with him?—We started betting in the usual way; Platt gave me the money and the book to pay out the clients, and I went on with the business in the usual way; he took the papers at each race and he went away, and as we were going along when we had stopped betting he said, "How are you getting on?" I said, "I think we shall have a bad day." I thought a man had £1 each way on a horse, but I found it was on another horse. Platt said, "How much shall we lose—£50?" I said I could not say. He said, "I will go and wire for £50," and he went into a post office—a grocer's and post office combined opposite to what used to be the old prison in Farringdon Road—with the intention, as I thought, of wiring for this money. We waited a little while. He came out; we went and we found out by the papers that we had not had such a bad day, in fact we had won on the day, and he was quite pleased that he had not lost. He said, "I must go and see McCarthy; I have wired for the money, and I must go and get the money." Of course, I did not leave him. I went with him, and my brother too, and we went as far as a place called Red Lion Street.

43023. Who had the takings?—Platt. I handed him over the money. He had all the money. We went as far as Red Lion Street. We went down there, I think, about five minutes to seven. We were due to pay out at half-past seven. It came to half-past seven, and I had not seen him; at quarter to eight I had not seen him; eight o'clock struck and I had not seen him. At ten minutes past eight he came up in a hurry and said, "I am sorry to keep you waiting, but here is the money; there is more than you require there." When he said, "There is more than you require there," I understood it was £50. He gave me four bags, and he said "Jump into a cab," which I did, and off I went. As I was going along I opened the bags to see where the gold was. I could not see the gold. I thought it must be at the bottom of the bags. When I got to the place where I had to pay out, when I turned my bags out I could not find any gold. I thought to myself he must have made a mistake. He said he would follow on immediately. I could not find any gold, and there were my clients waiting, so I was in a predicament, and I went and borrowed some money.

43024. How much did you have to pay out that night?—Either £46 or £47; I could not say which.

43025. How much was there in the bags which you got from Platt?—£20.

43026. Did Platt come?—No. My brother went to try and find him, but he missed him by about three minutes, so I understood.

43027. Did you have any wages that week?—No.

43028. What did you do about the punters?—I went and borrowed some money from different sources, and I met my liabilities without anybody knowing it except a select few, which I asked to wait till Monday. I asked one or two to wait. Then I went to find Mr. Platt.

43029. Where did you go?—I found out his brother-in-law's address, and I went there and asked if they could tell me where Platt was. I did not tell them my business. They gave me his address in Bird Street. I went over there, but he was not in; he had been out a long time I understood. I went back to the brother-in-law again, and the brother-in-law had not arrived. Then I went back to see whether he came down with the money to see me. I still had a little confidence left. I came down to try and find Mr. Platt, thinking perhaps he had come down, but no, he had not—in fact, I went again to his address, and he was not in. From there I went to the brother-in-law's again, and he was not in. I came back again, and then I went back again, and I could not find him.

43030. Were you ever able to find him?—No.

43031. Then did you find a new "guv'nor"?—Yes, on the brother-in-law's recommendation.

43032. That is on McCarthy's recommendation?—Yes.

43033. Did that new guv'nor take over the liabilities?—He did, and he could to any amount.

43034. Did you have anything more to do with Platt at all after that?—No.

43035. Did you ever pay any money to the police?—No.

43036. You have seen the books which were produced by Platt?—Yes.

43037. I am only going to ask you generally about them, because I have not got them before me.—I have seen them once.

43038. Did you see the names of Leach and Lang?—I did not see the name of Leach; the name of Lang I did not see at all; I saw the name of "L——g."

43039. Do you know who that is?—I have a good idea.

43040. Who is it?—It is a punter, which I can prove.

43041. What is his name?—I think his name is Larry, or Long. I can prove it by the book. There were two punters—Larry or Larey, and Long.

43042. Is it in your hand-writing, do you remember?—Yes.

43043. Do you know why you wrote out in that way "L——g?"—Yes, I have a good recollection; I will tell you how it was. A punter came to me and I paid him 10s. at night. When Platt interrogated me on the subject I could not remember the exact name of the man; I said I knew it was one of the two, and I said, "You will have to look up the paper; I will put in L——g, and you will know what that means." I do not know whether he put it down on his paper; I could not say whether he did or not.

43044. There are also entries in those books of "Police" and "Tecs"?—Yes.

43045. Have you any explanation to offer with regard to that?—Yes. Sometimes when I got my day's takings, money to pay out to my punters, I did not get it all—I might be left £1 short, or I might be left 10s. short, and when at night time I had to render an account of my day's working the brother-in-law would be present, and Platt would say to me, "You have to account for that." I would say, "All right." He would say, "Put it down anything you like," which I did. As you understand, I was afraid of my position; it was my living. I was afraid of him, and I acted under him.

43046. That is your explanation?—Yes. In other instances there is the word "Coppers." I can give you an explanation of that. That would mean the actual coppers taken during the day. When I turned out my money I turned out all the silver on the table and we counted it up. I used to hold the coppers. He would not take coppers from me. When a man came up with 3s. 3d. I would take the 3d. and Platt would take the 3s. I had to hold the coppers. He would say to me, "How much coppers?" It might be 1s., it might be 5s., or it might be 4s. My average used to be 4s., I used to spend 6d., 1s., or 2s. during the day.

43047. Have you ever, in fact, paid money to the police yourself?—No.

(Chairman.) Do you, Mr. Platt, wish to ask Mr. Fisher any questions?

(Mr. Platt.) Not at the present moment. I would rather prefer that all the Commissioners should be here.

(Chairman.) You must not be certain that we shall allow you to ask any questions if you do not ask them now. I think you must follow the course you have hitherto followed. After Mr. Muir has examined a witness I have generally asked you, "Do you wish to cross-examine this witness," and you have generally done so. I now inform you that it is open for you to do so, but if you do not do it you must not rely upon being allowed to do it afterwards. What we have done hitherto has been this. If you have wanted to put any supplemental question you have generally told us what it is, and we have put it from the Bench. You understand that, Mr. Platt, do you?

C. R. Fisher. 17 April 1907.

(Mr. Platt.) Might I be allowed to ask any questions afterwards?

(Chairman.) You have your opportunity now.

(Mr. Platt.) Shall I have another opportunity?

(Chairman.) No, that is exactly what I am telling you. You cannot rely upon it; I do not mean to say that you may never be allowed to ask another question, but if you are going to cross-examine, now is your time for doing it.

43048. (Mr. Platt.) You told the Commission that you started in 1903?—I think that is the date.

43049. How much at times have you paid in fines?—I should say between £150 and £200.

43050. How much of that would the amount be for street arrests?—I should think about £80; I was only summoned once, and it cost me £45; the others were all street arrests.

43051. Have you never been summoned since 1903?—No, but the man who took my place was summoned and got three summonses.

43052. You yourself have never been summoned, or your brother, since 1903?—Quite so.

43053. And you have still carried on an extensive business?—No, not extensive after the summons—a very small business.

43054. What do you call a large business?—A large business would be a man who takes between £100 and £150 a day.

43055. What were your average takings for the past three years?—We call it a good day if we take £30; of course, on a Saturday we might take more.

43056. Have you not generally doubled your takings on a Saturday?—It might be about £20 to £40, or more—it might be £50 on a Saturday, perhaps.

43057. The officers who have been examined here before the Commission have told us that your tale to them when you met them on the 20th October at 12 noon was that I had inspired you?—Certainly you had. You know you had.

43058. Was it not easier for me, if what you insinuate is true, to ask you to enter the sums of money down in a punter's name than it was in the way you have entered them?—Certainly not.

43059. Why not?—I will tell you if you ask me—because your brother-in-law would be present; he would see the paper where the punter had made his bet, and he would know no difference.

43060. He would be present when you put down the entries "Coppers 4s., copper 1s"?—Yes.

43061. You admit he has been present?—Sometimes, but not always.

43062. Would you say he was there the first week?—No, he was not there at all; the papers were not made up in my presence.

43063. They were not made up in your presence—not the first week?—No.

43064. The books will prove. The entries are in my handwriting the first week. What do you say to the second week?—Yes, I daresay he would be.

43065. And continued ever since?—Until he finished.

43066. Until you say you were told he was not in partnership any longer he was present up to the 23rd of June or July?—He may have been; I will not say he was there every day; I would not swear to that.

43067. But he would be present. How do you account that in the books there are lists of money taken by you, or your brother, and another man. Why should the entries be made out under the list of expenses instead of being where the takings are?—They are your expenses.

43068. Why should the money that you are accounting to me for be under expenses. You have just told the Commission that the word "Coppers" would be 4s. worth of coppers?—Sometimes it would be more than that.

43069. Why was not the copper money included with the other money?—Look here, you know, Mr. Platt, when you asked me to give an account of your money I used to take out my money in silver and gold, and there was a note given to you. You totalled up the money. I say this (I do not know whether it prejudices me or not?—I used to keep the coppers if the money totalled right. Sometimes, perhaps, a punter's total would be 9s. 6d., and he would ask me for 7s. 6d. It might be his fault, or our fault, but we never did hand that over.

43070. (Chairman.) Am I to understand that if you owed a punter 9s. 6d., and he only asked you for 7s. 6d. you would pay him 7s. 6d.?—I would not always look at my book. Suppose a man came to me and said, "I have 7s. 6d. to come," and he has 9s. 6d. down in the book, and he asks for 7s. 6d., I would pay him 7s. 6d., and after he had gone I would knock it off as if he had 9s. 6d.

43071. Then in accounting to Platt you would be 2s. to the good?—Yes, that is right.

43072. That was for purposes of your own?—Yes. Sometimes a man might leave me 2s. short, then I would have to account for it; then when my coppers would be raked out I would say, "I have so much coppers; I will see how much I have got," and I would have a look and guess at what I had in coppers.

43073. (Mr. Platt.) After your attention was called to the evidence that I gave here in October, is it not a fact that Laing and Leach came to you on your pitch?—It is a deliberate falsehood to say that they ever in any shape or form came to me in any capacity whatever to speak to me. I was the first one to send an intimation to them; I was the first to approach the police; I knew them, but I did not know whether they knew me, and I was the first one to speak to them.

43074. When you first knew me did you not wish to introduce them to me?—Certainly not, you did not wish to be introduced to any detectives.

43075. That was my answer to you?—You came to me in this way. You said, "Do you know any detectives?" I remember it well. I said "No, I do not." You said, "Because I do not want to be introduced to any." You said, "I would rather be away from them than near them."

43076. When I asked you how you got on with the police in that division you wished to introduce me to them?—That is your opinion. You may say that, I never mentioned it—not a word. There was no argument between us on that. You never allowed me anything for police in any shape or form.

43077. When we were walking away from the Sessions House, and Leach was coming down Clerkenwell Road, you said to me: "Alf, there is Leach; it is time he had his 10s.; whilst I have been doing very bad myself on the book I have not given them so much as I have been in the habit of giving them"?—I never uttered those words, neither did such a thing occur.

43078. And I gave you 10s. which you gave him three or four yards from me, while you looked in a jeweller's shop?—When was that? Can you fix the date?

43079. I cannot?—Was it in the morning or evening?

43080. Just before we started business?—You know as a rule you used to come down with a tale that you had delirium tremens at night, or that you suffered from insomnia, and mostly as you are aware, you came down the worse for drink.

43081. I was never locked up for being drunk, was I?—Never mind, that is a fact.

43082. We might have different views upon that, being a total abstainer yourself?—Quite right.

43083. However, I did not make many mistakes?—Yes, a great many.

43084. I put it to you that it was that interview with Laing and Leach that caused you to communicate with the Solicitors to the police?—How could it? It was this way. I did not know that Laing or Leach or Wright was going to see me. I sent a messenger and I had not seen the messenger up to the time I came and saw the Solicitors and communicated with them. I did not know when I went to the bridge that they would keep the appointment.

43084.* You gave a different explanation of those entries in that book to what the detective officers have told this Commission that you told them on the morning of the 20th?—I do not know that I have.

43085. Those officers have stated here that I had caused you to make those entries about the police?—You had. You told me: "Put it down to anything you like—put it down to Tec.'s." You know you said that when you had the money for King Charles, when you told me to back it.

43086. There is an entry to show where you had 40s. for King Charles?—I do not know whether the entry is 40s.

43087. Can you account for 40s. in the list of expenses under that item?—I do not know whether it was 40s., or what the exact amount was. I know you will find there are entries to cover that expense.

43088. It is a fact that the first day we took your papers you did not tell us how much you owed?—I gave you the approximate amount.

43089. You mentioned no figure whatever?—I could not mention it. It was an impossibility to give you the exact amount.

43090. You did not know?—I nearly knew.

43091. That was not your pitch that I took over?—It was our pitch.

43092. Did you work it?—Yes, for a long time—for many years, or for a long time.

43093. You just told the Commission you knew nothing about it until your brother brought me to you?—About your connection with me.

43094. So that you were not taking the papers the first day?—I was taking them the first day when you came up.

43095. How much did I pay over and above the day's takings?—You never paid me any money at all. If you remember you made the arrangement this way: that if a man was owed 10s. and he wanted to have a 5s. bet he could pay half-a-crown, and the other half-a-crown could come off what he was owing. You never gave me any actual money to pay anybody.

(Mr. Platt.) The Commissioners have a book there which I should like to see. I do not know what number it is, but if I saw it I should know it.

(The Witness.) You never gave me any money for a punter.

43096. (Mr. Platt.) It is a book with a cardboard cover. (The book was handed to Mr. Platt.) I think it was the 8th May, 1906, when I first took your papers?—Yes, it may have been; I am not certain of the date.

43097. We lost that day a matter of a few shillings, but as it had been noised about that you had got a new employer you had got a great crowd there?—Not one came up for money that had been owing that night.

43098. Was it not then that I was introduced to you, and I asked you how much was owing on that pitch?—At night?

43099. Yes?—In the daytime you were introduced to me. You took my papers.

43100. But at night when I knew the moneys we were paying out?—You got the introduction in the daytime.

43101. But when at night I knew we were paying the money which we had lost then I asked you how you were financially situated on that pitch?—Then I told you.

43102. You could not tell me; and you told me your brother had been working the pitch—he had been doing your work?—We had two pitches.

43103. One you had already turned up?—One we only turned up three or four days, and we had both come to work together.

43104. You turned it up three or four days previous to meeting me?—Yes.

43105. So that that would be the cause of the crowd being there the first night?—No, certainly not.

43106. They had been told there was a new employer?—No; three or four days previous to that I was betting with my brother at his pitch.

43107. When I asked you how you stood financially on that pitch, when I took the papers over, you told me you could not tell me?—Not exactly.

43108. Did you make out a list?—Of what was owing?

43109. Yes?—Yes.

43110. Or on the pitch at White Horse Alley?—I told you what was owing at both pitches. Nobody was paid direct; it would have to be worked off.

43111. It was half paid and half worked off?—Yes, but nobody received any actual money from you.

43112. Those are the actual moneys we paid?—But you did not pay them. Did you pay them with ready money?

43113. Yes, half when they came and had a bet and did not lay out any money. If they won we paid it?—If they won!

43114. But if they lost they never paid us?—Because they had worked it off.

43115. And we were that money out of pocket?—No. You never gave any money out of pocket.

43116. But if they won we paid them?—Then they paid so much towards the winnings.

43117. We were financially helping you there?—In a certain sense you were, but nothing out of pocket.

43118. Has anyone of your name been arrested?—Has that anything to do with it?—

43119. (Chairman.) You must answer the question?—Yes.

43120. (Mr. Platt.) Have you been arrested since I have been before this Commission?—I have.

43121. When was your last summons previous to being arrested since I came before this Commission?—This is how it happened. My brother Thomas, I think bore the brunt of the battle because he was mostly betting. He was the one who was doing the betting, and not my brother and I. We were like principals—we did not bet. My brother bet and stood the convictions, and his name will appear.

43122. Since when?—1903.

43123. Were there any convictions in 1906?—Me?

43124. Your brothers?—I think we were all convicted in 1906.

43125. How many of you?—The three of us; I think we got five convictions in 1906.

43126. (Chairman.) Do you mean you were all three convicted five times?—No. Between the three of us we got about five convictions.

43127. In 1906?—Yes, I think there were about five convictions between the three of us.

43128. (Mr. Platt.) You would not say it was less?—I could not say it was less; it might be more.

43129. Was your brother Thomas ever arrested in the name of Fisher?—He might be arrested in the name of Fisher. He might give the name of Fisher. You know it is not policy between us men that we should give our right names. As a rule, we do not.

43130. But you have done so?—I have.

43131. You have been summoned in the name of Fisher?—Yes.

43132. So was Thomas?—Thomas would not give his right name that day. They made him in the end. They kept him in till he did.

43133. You have all been summoned, and have all given your correct names?—Quite right.

43134. Does it not strike you as rather strange that after October 18th you visited the solicitors on the 19th, and then saw these officers on the 20th?—I will tell you how it struck me. I thought how strange it was for you who ran away with my money to come up here as a moralist. That is how it actually struck me. I thought you were not a man whose integrity was to be relied on, and were not a man fit to give evidence here. My name has been clear. I am a bookmaker, I admit.

43135. At the present time you are still betting in the same street?—I am not.

43136. You are in the immediate neighbourhood?—I would not be here if I was betting.

43137. Not at the present time?—Then I cannot be betting.

43138. But you are conducting business yourself personally in the neighbourhood?—If that is a way of getting an admission from me that I am betting in the streets, I am not betting in the streets.

43139. You are not working on commission?—I am not betting in the streets on commission or otherwise.

43140. (Chairman.) You said you were a bookmaker. Of course you may be making a book not in the streets?—I am a bookmaker's agent on commission.

43141. (Mr. Platt.) You were saying "I admit I am

C. R. Fisher.
17 April 1907.

a bookmaker," but then you went on to say you were perfectly straight and honest?—That is quite true. I have not run away from my district. I started betting there, and if I was allowed by the law I should be betting there to-day, because my name stands as a man of integrity. I say it myself.

43142. Was your brother who was arrested looking out as a scout for you?—No.

43143. Who for?—My brother who was arrested?

43144. Yes?—He would be arrested, if arrested, for street betting.

43145. Then it is possible while you are walking round that he might be in the same street taking bets in your place?—He might be somewhere near there. He might be in the same street. Goodness knows where he goes.

43146. Might I have the telegram that Mr. Muir referred to in the cross-examination? (The telegram was handed to Mr. Platt.) You know who that man is who sent that message?—Very well.

43147. A punter?—Yes; of course, it was not sent to me, as you are aware.

43148. But you know the man well?—I absolutely know him well.

43149. He had been a punter?—Yes.

43150. Did you say I was not financially strong enough to take his bet?—No. We could not understand why you should take the bets from this gentleman, and we wanted to know. We never received the bets from you. We were anxious that you should not poach on a client which we had. We were still holding our position. We still acknowledged we were bookmakers, and you were the financier. This man Russell was a client of ours; we never owed him a penny; he always had his money. I suppose it was a bet he sent; he wanted to back these three horses. Of course, he would not send any money at all. This man would say, "Put me so much on, and I will give it to you when I see you," and the man who sent that telegram would be responsible to us—not this man individually, but the man who received it would be responsible to us for the money. If you remember you said this man said he would not give us any money, and if you remember my brother was rather upset over it, because he was a great friend of this man, and he said he would interrogate him on the subject. You said this man said he would not give anything to us, and you interrogated him not to say anything to him, and it was all right.

43151. Why not send the telegram to you instead of to the proprietor of the public-house?—I never received telegrams. This man was at Brighton on his holidays, and he sent this telegram asking to back these three horses, and this man, naturally, being a friend, did so.

43152. (Chairman.) You say as far as you are concerned the punter was the man who brought the telegram to you?—Yes.

43153. He was the man you had to deal with?—He was responsible to me for this money, and not this man.

43154. (Mr. Platt.) Have you ever been reported at the police station for betting in the streets that you bet in?—Not that I know of.

43155. Have there been any officers secreted in a building who would be able to watch if you were betting?—If I was in a certain position and I had punters who happened to be working in the place, and some suspicious characters came in I should soon be out of that.

43156. Have there been complaints sent to the police station, and have officers been secreted in one particular building?—Not that I know of.

43157. Was there no neighbour where you betted who reported you?—Not that I know of.

43158. And who gave permission for these officers to be on his premises to watch you?—Not that I know of.

43159. Now about the coppers. How many punters came to you, do you say, in the course of the day?—About 200.

43160. Then there would be a number of people entering the street in a number of ways?—It is a busy thoroughfare. During the dinner time there are various people standing there. There would always be a number of people standing and walking to and fro.

43161. We have been told about the police watching bookmakers. Of course, one of the objects of giving them money is that during the busy time we get in our business they should not come and molest us at that particular time?—I never gave anything to policemen, and as far as I know I did not know you to give anything; but, of course, if you say you gave it——

43162. I do not say I gave it, but I say you gave it?—I say you do not want to ask me any such questions. You know absolutely you never gave me anything. It is wasting your time to ask me any such questions. I say you did not, and you know it. You ask me to admit a thing which you know absolutely to be false.

43163. When I have been in your presence when you gave Leach that money outside the jeweller's shop in Clerkenwell Road?—That is a falsehood.

43164. When you tried to make it up at night?—It is a falsehood.

43165. When I told you "I do not wish to be introduced to them, because you can do it so nimbly"?—That is a falsehood.

43166. Your present employer would have been willing to give £5 a day if he could have betted with the same freedom as you bet?—My present employer is a man who I believe if he thought he could stand to bet in the streets would not give the Police a penny. My present employer when I went to see him said: "Have you any connection with the Police?" I said, "No, sir, I have not." He said, "Then I will take you on." He said, "I have paid £5 a week practically to bet in the streets, sometimes twice, and sometimes three times a week, and I have never given them a halfpenny, neither do I intend to," and he is not the man to give them a halfpenny. That is my present employer.

43167. (Chairman.) We have heard of him before?—That is right.

43168. He has given it up because it is so expensive?—No, he is still betting.

43169. What is his name?—Mr. Henry Jones, 151, Gray's Inn Road.

43170. (Mr. Platt.) How many years have you known my brother-in-law?—I fancy we went to school together.

43171. A matter of 20 years?—It might be.

43172. That was really one of the reasons why he took you over after we found you?—I do not think that was the reason. I think the reason was you thought we had a good connection, and that you might be able to get something out of it, because you told me that you were a man worth a lot of money, and that you had £600, and when I thought that was the case I thought "He is a good man; I need not be afraid to take any bet that comes to me."

43173. You say you were not afraid to take any bet that came to you?—Yes.

43174. Is it not a fact that I told you I did not want certain people when you told me the extent of their betting?—I told you there were one or two who were rather hot.

43175. Did your money beat them?—Yes, many a time.

43176. Then how was it you were broke?—It happened to be over a certain horse. It is common knowledge that there was a horse called "Victor Wild" that broke nearly every bookmaker, and there was a horse called "Wet Paint," which broke us. We were men enough to meet our punters, and pay them out to the last farthing, and they were good enough to stand by us, although they knew we were financially broke. They said, "Better times and we will perhaps get over it."

43177. Is it not a fact that you were working and paying a little bit off?—I worked day and night to pay my way.

43178. I think you have never settled with them all?—Yes, there is not a man I owe a halfpenny to.

43179. You have had assistance?—Yes.

43180. Other people have paid them for you?—No, not exactly that; they have been paid out of our hard work we call it. We had a connection together, and if we had the connection they knew they must get it back in the long run, so I think it was our labours after all.

43181. Did not our partnership clear you out?—No. How could you clear us out when you ran away with £27? One man I owed money to over a horse called "Hammerkop," but I do not owe it now because I paid him some and he would not take the rest.

43182. That was a thing you did not bring under our notice?—Yes, I did; I brought everything under your notice.

43183. Did you put that down?—I do not suppose I put it down in writing.

43184. Can you account, if you gave no money to the police, for keeping so free from them?—It is like this: we did our business in a quiet manner.

43185. With all these numbers of people coming to you?—Yes. We had what we call our scouts, and if there was any suspicious individual, even if he was a client that they did not know, we went for a walk, and as you know when Mr. Cass came along we used to turn up business and go for a walk. You know that well. C. R. Fisher. 17 April 1907.

43186. How far did you walk?—We used to go round the houses.

43187. Into a passage?—No.

43188. Have you or your brothers been taken out of a passage?—No, not that I know of.

43189. Out of a room?—Not that I know of? We may have been. I am speaking for myself.

43190. You would not say you know for sure that not one of your brothers has been taken out of a room?—What do you mean—a betting room?

(Chairman.) This is getting rather remote now, and it does not seem to go to the credit of this witness or to be relevant to any topic that we are discussing.

FORTY-SIXTH DAY.

Friday, 19*th April* 1907.

PRESENT:

Sir David Brynmor Jones, K.C., M.P. (Chairman).

Rufus Daniel Isaacs, Esq., K.C., M.P.

Willoughby Hyett Dickinson, Esq., M.P. (Barrister-at-Law).

Charles Algernon Whitmore, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law).

J. W. St. Lawrance Leslie, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Secretary).

J. F. Waley, Esq. (Barrister-at-Law) (Assistant-Secretary).

(Platt's case continued.)

Christopher Robert Fisher, recalled.

43191. (Chairman.) How many brothers have you got?—Four besides myself.

43192. Give me their names?—William Joseph, Thomas and Daniel. Daniel has never been convicted for betting, and never had anything to do with it.

43193. Are you the eldest of the five?—No, I am the youngest but one.

43194. Who is the eldest?—Thomas.

43195. Have you all been brought up in London?—No, we were born in Ireland.

43196. All of you?—Yes.

43197. When did the family come over to England?—I should say in 1883. The first thing I can remember was a man named Brady being hanged for the Phœnix Park murder. That was on the Easter Monday as we came over. I do not know what year that would be. I have not got the exact date.

43198. That would be, according to my recollection, 1882?—1882 or 1883, I could not say which.

43199. What is your father's name?—Robert.

43200. What was his occupation before he came to London?—He was a compositor. He is dead.

43201. What trade did he carry on when he came to London with his young family—because I take it you were all young then?—Yes. He was still a compositor.

43202. Where did you and your brothers go to school, if you went to school?—The Italian school, Hatton Garden—my younger brother and myself. The other brothers were educated in Ireland.

43203. After you left school were you apprenticed to a trade?—Yes.

43204. What trade?—Compositor.

43205. Was that the case with all your brothers?—No, there was only another one beside myself, and the others were not apprenticed to any trade.

43206. Who were not apprenticed to any trade?—Only Daniel and myself were apprenticed.

43207. And the other three were your elder brothers?—No, there were two older and one younger.

43208. You and Daniel were apprenticed?—Yes. C. R. Fisher. 19 April 1907.

43209. And the others were not apprenticed to any trade?—Quite true.

43210. How did they begin to earn their living?—In various ways. One went as a clerk, and another went as a machine hand, and the other made his way as a porter.

43211. Is your father still alive?—No, he is dead, and my mother, too.

43212. After the death of your father I suppose the home was broken up then, so far as it still existed?—Yes. We are all married.

43213. Are you all living in Clerkenwell?—No.

43214. Are you living in London?—We are all about London, in the vicinity of Clerkenwell.

43215. When did you take to street bookmaking?—1903.

43216. Up to that time you had been a compositor?—Yes.

43217. Had you been in regular employment?—Yes.

43218. How came you to take to this street bookmaking?—I thought it would be a means of making some money.

43219. Had you fallen on to bad times as a compositor?—No, it was like a speculation. People have various ways of speculating their money. Some men might speculate on the Stock Exchange, and others would speculate in business, but I speculated in bookmaking.

43220. Then you gave up earning your living as a compositor in 1903 to enter upon this highly speculative business?—It is very hard work, but it is earning a living.

43221. Very likely, but it is highly speculative?—Yes.

43222. Had you got any capital when you commenced?—Oh, yes, I saved my capital.

43223. How much had you saved?—And won some as well. Between my brother and me we had got I should think a couple of hundred pounds or more.

C. R. Fisher.
19 April 1907.

43224. That was your brother William?—Yes.

43225. Was it William or William Joseph?—William Joseph.

43226. You have a brother named William alone, have you not?—No—William Joseph. There is no William alone. My brothers' names are William Joseph, Daniel and Thomas.

43227. You started this business together then in 1903?—Yes.

43228. In which district did you commence your vocation?—Clerkenwell.

43229. That is the police division G?—Yes.

43230. Have you carried on the business in any other division?—Yes.

43231. Which division?—I do not know whether it is Clerkenwell or not, but it would be off Saffron Hill or the outskirts. I do not know exactly what division it is to tell the truth, but I know you go to the same station if you are convicted. I carried on business in another division too—I suppose it is the City.

43232. Where was your pitch in the City?—Fetter Lane, but I was only there a few weeks.

43233. What month in 1903 did you commence the business?—I suppose the beginning—January.

43234. Were you acquainted with any other bookmakers at that time?—No. I knew several bookmakers at that time by repute, but not to have any connection with them. I may have had a bet with them occasionally.

43235. You never betted for them?—I was not in contact with them. I have had a bet with them on my own part.

43236. You have not been friendly with any of them?—No, not in that way.

43237. What was the way?—If I had a bet in the ordinary course.

43238. Except that you had punted, you knew nothing of any other bookmakers in the G Division?—No.

43239. You had never acted as agent for anyone of them?—No.

43240. And before January, 1903, you had never tried your hand at it at all?—No.

43241. Then you and your brother in 1903 commenced. Where was your pitch first of all?—Aylesbury Street.

43242. Why did you settle on that particular spot?—It was within a few yards of where we lived, and we thought where we were known would be the best place to start. There was no other particular reason.

43243. You know a good many people, I suppose?—Yes, and there was another man in the district that there were complaints about, that he was not what they call straight, and did not conduct his business in a straight manner, and we thought that would be a good place for a straight man to start.

43244. How did you get rid of him?—We never got rid of him.

43245. You took his pitch?—No, we did not take his pitch. We went in opposition to him.

43246. Where was his pitch?—Adjacent. He would be in Aylesbury Street as well.

43247. You set up without any communication with any other bookmaker?—Yes.

43248. And knowing nothing of them except that you had occasionally punted?—That is all.

43249. And you knew the business was rather a speculative business?—It is in a sense. It has its good times and its bad times.

43250. But besides the risks incident to the trade there is also the risk of arrest and fine?—Yes.

43251. Did you understand the business?—I understood all that was necessary for it.

43252. How had you learnt it?—By having a bet myself. I knew what was expected, that if a man had a bet and he won he expected his money, and if a man lost you kept his money.

43253. That is a very elementary amount of knowledge. Had you not more knowledge than that?—No.

43254. Did you not issue a card?—Oh, yes.

43255. Will you produce one of the cards for me?—Now, do you mean?

43256. Yes?—I could not now.

43257. Had you got any printed rules?—Yes, I took those from somebody else, I expect.

43258. You wish me to understand you had been carrying on the honest vocation of a compositor, and that you knew nothing of any bookmakers except the fact that you originally punted with them when you started with a capital of £200 in this business?—Yes, about £200, or it might be a bit more.

43259. Does one of your cards exist?—One of my cards I had then—I could not say.

43260. Was it a card something like that (handing card to witness)?—Yes, one on the same lines.

43261. Similar rules. Just read it?—No, not similar rules. We gave a larger limit than this. We had what we call no limit.

43262. At any rate, the rules were such as to form a connected system of betting on which you could carry on the business?—Yes.

43263. Where did you get the knowledge which enabled you to draw up the rules?—I had a book from another bookmaker. He may have given me a book and I accepted his rules so far.

43264. He may have done so, but did he do so?—There is no question about it. If I had a bet with him I should have had his rules.

43265. You told me a few moments ago you had not any contact with a bookmaker for any purpose except that of punting?—Then I would have his card. If I went to a bookmaker and made a bet, he would give me a card with his rules, and I would see his rules, and if I was going to start business for myself I could copy his rules so far as I thought fit.

43266. Then you and your brother made up the rules between you and got them printed?—Yes.

43267. On cards something like that?—Something similar.

43268. What name did you put outside to identify you and your brother?—I think we called it "With W. and R. F.'s compliments" or "R. and W. F.'s compliments"—I cannot exactly say what we put on now.

43269. You do not remember what initials you put on your card?—It may be "B. and W.'s compliments" or "B. and W. F.'s compliments," or "W. F. and B.'s compliments."

43270. It might be "X. Y. Z.'s compliments." Which was it?—I cannot tell exactly which it was and who had his name first—whether it was B. F. or B. and W. F.'s compliments, or W. F. and W. F. and B. F.'s compliments. That would mean William Fisher or Robert Fisher. We had the names on it.

43271. You cannot say which it was?—We had our names on the cards.

43272. Your full names?—No, only initials.

43273. You cannot remember in what order the initials were on the card?—No, I could not.

43274. When did you cease bookmaking on your own account?—Last year.

43275. Had you a card which you were handing round up to last year?—Oh, yes.

43276. And now you cannot be positive as to what the initials were?—B. F.'s and W. F.'s compliments. I can remember now.

43277. Why B. F.?—Bob—I am known as Bob.

43278. Up to what date in last year did you carry on this business?—I should say some time in March.

43279. And then you ceased bookmaking?—On my own account, yes.

43280. Did you act as agent afterwards?—Yes.

43281. I will not trouble to ask you for whom?—I would rather you did not—not that it is any discredit to me, but he is a business man, and it would do him no good.

43282. At present I will not ask you, but up to what time did you actually go on the pitch in 1906?—Always—right up to the end of the year.

43283. Why did you stop at the end of the year?—Flat racing had ceased and frost had set in and caused a postponement, and the new Act was passed, and then that stopped me from the street.

24384. You said at the end of the year; that was in the month of December when racing for the time being ceased?—Yes.

43285. Then you took to it again this year, acting as agent?—Yes, I am acting as agent in a different way.

43286. Not in the street?—No, I am not taking bets in the street.

43287. Had you any communication with anybody as to the change in your occupation?—How do you mean, Sir?

43288. You have given up street bookmaking. I suppose it is just commencing now?—It is in full swing as regards betting—I do not mean street bookmaking. What do you mean by any communication?

43289. Why did you not go on with the old business you referred to? You appeared to find it fairly satisfactory—at any rate, it was so satisfactory that instead of going back to your compositor's business you carried it on up to December of last year. What made you change your method of betting?—Myself, individually, do you mean?

43290. Yes?—I had what we call a bad time. I was practically run to the end of my resources.

43291. Last year?—Yes. And when I got like that I did not feel justified in continuing in that way, and I wanted to find a man who was financially in a position to finance me.

43292. That was the real reason, then, for the change of occupation?—Yes; not this year—that is from my own ownership to be an agent.

43293. I am talking of the second change?—Up to the end of last year.

43294. What made you change from the street bookmaking?—My employer was a bookmaker in the street himself, and he gave up street bookmaking, and he said he intended to give up all street bookmaking.

43295. Practically because of the new Act?—Yes, he would not allow me to personally bet in the street.

43296. Is that the sole cause of your change of occupation, or, rather, change of method of earning your money?—Yes, personally.

43297. The sole cause?—Yes, personally.

43298. You had been in contact a good deal with the police and Messrs. Wontner and Sons, had you not, since October?—Yes—only communications which I had received.

43299. Had your action with regard to Platt's evidence and your interview with the police had anything at all to do with your decision to give up street bookmaking?—It is in this way: I continued in the street; it was my living till I was stopped, and so long as he paid my fines I should have betted in the street. When he said he would pay no fines for me, then I stopped.

43300. Is that the case with your brother?—Which one—William Fisher?

43301. The only one who I understand is a bookmaker?—There were four of us bookmakers; we were all of us what you may call bookmakers. Two of them acted as agents for the younger brother and me. Four of us used to take papers.

43302. Then in 1903 four out of the five of you commenced this business?—Yes.

43303. You and your brother William as principals and the other two as your agents?—Yes.

43304. Then you have a fifth brother?—Yes.

43305. Is he concerned with this business at all?—No. And the younger one of course took no active part whatever in the business in 1903—only the financial part. I was the active partner. The other brother Thomas used to act as agent. He received a wage from us the same as I might receive from my present guv'nor.

43306. Had your brother William given up betting in the streets?—Entirely, and has no connection with it whatever. He is a clerk with the same guv'nor as I am, but he does his indoor work.

43307. He keeps the books, I suppose?—Yes, quite true.

43308. And it was William who was acting with you as principal in 1903, and who acted with you as agent after your misfortune in 1905?—Yes, that is quite true.

43309. He was agent with you for Platt?—Quite true—Platt and his brother-in-law.

43310. It was your brother who kept the books?—There was only one who had anything to do with the books, and that was myself. My brother was never allowed to have anything whatever to do with the books. If he was going to pay out, a slip of paper would be given to him for the amount to be paid out. The only contact my brother had with the books was this. At the end of the day when the papers were reckoned up they would be put in a pile; my brother was a better writer than I am, so he would write out the names of the clients who had to have anything to come. Mr. Platt would take the papers out and say for instance, "Jones, so much," and he would write it down, or "Brown, so much," and he would write it down. That is the only contact he would have with the books. He would have no control over them whatever, or handle them.

43311. But did he write in the books?—Yes, in his own handwriting—only the names of the clients.

43312. Would the writing down in the book take place in Platt's presence?—Yes.

43313. And in your presence?—Yes.

43314. Just tell me a little more about that. Platt, as I understand, used to come into Clerkenwell—that is to say, near the "Sutton Arms" where your pitch was—of a morning, say about 10 or 11 o'clock?—No.

43315. What time would he come?—The earliest would be about 12 and sometimes as late as a quarter to one.

43316. Then when did you generally on a racing day commence going upon your pitch and taking slips?—As a rule about ten minutes to 12.

43317. But I suppose you would take a slip at any time if you met one of the men you knew—say at 10 o'clock in the morning?—It is not customary. I would say "Wait till I get on my pitch," because we were liable to arrest, and if I had nobody there a detective might come behind me as I was taking the slip.

43318. I quite see it would be imprudent for you to begin except on your pitch, and with the precautions that you took at the pitch, but supposing you were in a man's house you would take a bet from him, would you not?—Without the money. If a man was to turn round and say, "I am going to have 5s. on so-and-so," I would say "All right, give me the paper and I will go outside and take your money."

43319. Would you not take the money wherever you were?—No.

43320. Not even in your own house?—No.

43321. Why not?—Supposing at the very time I was taking money there was any suspicion that I was betting, a man might come in and catch me red-handed, and I should be liable to heavy penalties for doing such a thing as that. That would be "a place."

43322. Then at any rate you thought it was better in carrying on business to take the money always when you were on your pitch?—Yes.

43323. What time did you get to your pitch generally?—About 10 to 12, or a quarter to 12.

43324. And then you began operations?—Yes, invariably when I got there. If I had what I call a heavy book, that is a lot to pay out, I would try and get the book and the money before I started business, but if Mr. Platt was rather late I would have to start business without him.

43325. But you did not know what the day would bring forth when you started at 12 o'clock, slipless?—Oh, yes, I would know. I would know what I had to pay out for the previous day. A man will come up for his money because if he has not come up overnight he would want it the next day.

43326. That I quite understand, but you are rather anticipating. Then I will take you back to the first time when you acted as agent for Mr. Platt. At that time you did owe a certain amount of money to various punters?—Quite true.

43327. That was not exactly the beginning—it was starting as far as Mr. Platt was concerned, but it was not starting as far as you were concerned, because it was understood by your customers that they were still to be paid?—Quite true, but the men were owed from the Saturday before.

43328. I think you began on a Monday for Mr. Platt?—Yes.

C. R. Fisher.

19 April 1907.

43329. And money was owed to punters for the Saturday's operations?—Yes.

43330. It was not therefore quite a new start, was it?—No. It was a new start as far as the new governor was concerned.

43331. I want you to drop from your mind for a moment any question of money coming in order to discharge the debts due for Saturday. I want you to deal with the operations of the Monday. At 12 o'clock you began?—Yes.

43332. And men handed you slips with the money?—Yes.

43333. The bet noted on the slip was made by reference to your own rules, of course?—Quite true.

43334. What did the punter generally write on the slip?—Supposing he wanted 2s. Victor Wild, for instance, he would put down "2s. Victor Wild to win," or perhaps he would sometimes only put down "2s. Victor Wild," and his name at the bottom.

43335. "2s. Victor Wild" signed let us say "Chandler"?—Yes, and he might have "Stakes on" something else. They bet in various ways.

43336. Take an ordinary slip, it would be "2s. Victor Wild"?—And "stakes on" something else; as a general rule they like two chances for their money.

43337. Stakes on horse "X," shall we say?—Yes.

43338. "2s. Victor Wild, stakes on X—Chandler"?—"Stakes on X," and then his name would be put—Chandler.

43339. Then he would hand you the 2s. and the slip at the same time?—Yes, but not always. Sometimes he would write out the slip for a client; sometimes a man would not have paper or pencil, and he might say to me, "I am going to have so much; put me down 5s. on so-and-so." Say he was going to have 5s. on Victor Wild. We would make out that—"Victor Wild, 5s."

43340. Have you a book to enter that in?—No. Sometimes we would tear out a slip, or sometimes we would put it on the back of another man's paper, as occasion might arise.

43341. If he had not got paper you would offer him paper, and either he would write on it or you would?—And if we had not got paper sometimes we would write it on another man's bet, but we would put his name on it.

43342. At any rate the transaction involved first a slip in some form or other and the handing of money to you?—There would be clients who might lay out a bet and would not pay.

43343. That was betting on the nod, according to one of your phrases?—Yes, but you would not let people bet on the nod without you knew that they were going to pay you. Of course, you could not know exactly, but as a rule you do not find many bad clients in that way.

43344. That is a phrase that has been used—betting on the nod?—Yes, I understand what you mean.

43345. That really meant that the man came and told you "2s. Victor Wild," and goes away, and then you would enter it for him?—Yes, or he might give his 2s. or he might not. If he did not give me the money it would be betting on the nod, but he might come up and make a bet and give me the money.

43346. Betting on the nod really means giving credit to the punter?—Quite right.

43347. Just explain this slip a little more—"2s. Victor Wild." That means that the punter backs Victor Wild for 2s.?—Yes.

43348. If the same horse is entered for two races on the same day, which sometimes occurs, does he specify the race on the slip?—If he did not time the race he would be on the first race the horse runs in.

43349. Sometimes on the slips the race was mentioned, and the time?—Yes.

43350. A very careful punter would write it more carefully?—No, he would not do that; as a general rule they never time their papers—not 99 out of 100.

43351. So much for the words "2s. Victor Wild." What does "Stake on X" mean?—If Victor Wild wins, his 2s. will go on the next horse. Supposing Victor Wild was to win, he would still have 2s. in hand besides his winnings, and that would go on X, so that if X lost he would lose his 2s.

43352. Give me the name of another horse instead of X?—Say "King Charles."

43353. Then we will take the slip—"2s. Victor Wild, stake on King Charles," and the signature of the punter?—Yes.

43354. And if you get the 2s. as well the transaction would be complete, and in a given event you would have to pay?—Yes.

43355. Now about the odds against Victor Wild. This backing for 2s. means, of course, that you are giving odds against the horse?—Yes, but according to the card you showed me if a horse won at 20 to 1 you would only get 16 to 1, according to that card, if it was what they call a small race. It says on that card "16 to 1 minor races."

43356. "Ordinary races 16 to 1 and 4 to 1 for a place"?—If it was an ordinary race and Victor Wild was to win at 20 to 1 you would only get 16 to 1. That would be the limit you would get for your money, so that you would get 32s. for your 2s.

43357. If Victor Wild won the race, where do you get your 20 to 1 from?—Supposing the horse wins at 20 to 1, the odds are returned. There is such a thing as a return in the sporting papers, and they return the odds the different horses start at, which are quoted by Tattersall's, and those are the recognised prices.

43358. Let us go back for a moment, because you know all about this, and my knowledge is somewhat scrappy with regard to it. The slip I have given you says, "2s. Victor Wild; stake on King Charles." You have suggested the odds may be 20 to 1?—Yes.

43359. Where do you get those odds? Are those the odds offered at the meeting?—Yes.

43360. How do you in Clerkenwell at 12 o'clock know what is going on?—We do not know until night.

43361. (Mr. Whitmore.) Those are not the odds that are quoted in the morning papers?—Oh, no. In the case of a few big races the odds are quoted—the Derby and other big races—but the other odds would be quoted in the evening papers.

43362. (Chairman.) It is what is called the starting price that determines the odds, by reference to which the slip becomes intelligible?—That is quite true.

43363. Then you may read it in this way: "2s. Victor Wild at starting price; stake on King Charles at starting price"?—That would be accurate.

43364. Then the starting price is only determined, as you say, later in the day?—Before the race is run, if you are on the racecourse, they lay the odds against the horses, and at the fall of the flag the prices quoted against those different horses are the starting prices.

43365. That I think everybody understands, but what I do not quite follow yet is how you settle the matter?—It is easily settled. In the return of the prices at night they quote the horses just as they would stocks and shares. Supposing you were in a stockbroker's office or on the Stock Exchange, and you see the different prices quoted against the different stocks at the end of the day you would know they would be the prices at which they were standing.

43366. Then you look at the prices?—Quite true.

43367. Supposing the punter says, "I will not go by that, because that is incorrect"?—But you go by certain papers. Some men go by the "Evening Standard," and some by the "Sportsman," and some by the "Sporting Life."

43368. Then in your rules you had a rule like this: "The 'Sportsman' shall be accepted as a true and just record"?—Quite true.

43369. Then, following out your day, at 12 o'clock, before you began, would you have expected to see Mr. Platt at all?—Yes, if he had not given me the money overnight.

43370. You do not want any money for starting?—Oh, yes, we do.

43371. I have asked you to drop the case when you began for Mr. Platt, because you owed money for the Saturday?—I am dropping that altogether. When Mr. Platt came on the scene on that Monday I was already betting when I saw Mr. Platt.

43372. Then take the Tuesday?—I would start betting on my pitch if Mr. Platt was not down to time. I should have the money to receive off him.

43373. Then take you yourself, beginning on the first day you started business. You have your money in your pocket—your capital in your pocket?—I quite understand what you mean, but it was not necessary.

43374. In order to begin this business to-morrow, I need not have a penny in my pocket when I go on my pitch at 12 o'clock?—Quite true.

43375. Then we will suppose you begin without any money in your pocket, except what is in it for your own purposes for the day. Then you receive a large number of slips—it may be 100 or 200 slips?—You would not do that at the start; that would be when you have been at it for some time.

43376. The more punters there are the better for you?—Yes.

43377. The larger the business done, the greater the chances of profit for you?—Yes.

43378. Otherwise you would not carry on business?—Quite so.

43379. It would not pay you to make 10 bets every day?—It might or it might not; it is all chance.

43380. That would hardly be a business, then?—No.

43381. What time did you leave your pitch?—Sometimes about half-past three or sometimes four o'clock. Business is done, say, at two o'clock.

43382. Was anything said in your card as to the time and place of payment of successful punters in whose favour the balance was?—No.

43383. Supposing I had come up to you and given you the slip which I have mentioned, "2s. Victor Wild; stake on King Charles," and supposing Victor Wild had won, how should I find you?—As a rule, they would say, "Where do you pay out?" because you do not put it on your paper, and you would say, "I pay out So-and-so," and they would find you there; they would come there and get the money.

43384. When would the punter have a right to come, according to the usual dealing?—At night time if you paid out at night time; some bookmakers do not pay out at night time, but pay out the next day.

43385. There is an understanding, expressed or implied, between the bookmaker and the punter as to the time and place at which he is to be paid?—Yes.

43386. And that may be either the same evening on which the race is run or it may be the next day?—Quite true

43387. What was the arrangement between you and Mr. Platt and your punters?—To pay out the same night.

43388. I will take what I call a typical day. You begin at 12, and knock off at half-past three or four, and you are to pay the same night?—Yes.

43389. Of course, that meant a good deal of work for you if you had 200 bets?—Yes.

43390. You had 200 slips to go over and to make up, and you had to see as to each what the account between you and the punter was?—Yes.

43391. For that purpose you get the evening papers, whichever you relied on?—Yes.

43392. All that work could not be done in the street?—No, it was never done in the street.

43393. Where did you go?—The first week Mr. Platt took the papers away.

43394. I am not talking of the present moment, but what was your usual custom?—Our homes.

43395. That was quite near your pitch?—Yes.
